TO THE READER OF NETS

The use of the term “Septuagint” in the title of A New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS) requires some justification. According to legend¹ it was seventy(-two) Jerusalem elders who at the behest of King Ptolemy II (285–246 BCE) and with the consent of High Priest Eleazaros translated the Scriptures of Egyptian Jewry into Greek from a Jerusalem manuscript inscribed in gold. The event is said to have occurred on the island of Pharos in the Mediterranean Sea off the coast of Alexandria and to have taken seventy-two days. “Scripture,” however, comprised only the so-called five books of Moses, also known as the Pentateuch. Other books were translated in subsequent centuries and also in other locations. In time the entire anthology became popularly known as “the translation of the seventy,” irrespective of the precise origin of individual books.

Not surprisingly then, though the various parts of “the translation of the seventy” have many features in common, it is also true that, as modern scholarship has increasingly shown, there is wide-ranging diversity and heterogeneity within the collection—to the point that some scholars now question the continued use of the term “Septuagint,” which to the unwary reader might suggest a greater degree of uniformity than can be demonstrated. Though “Old Greek” would undoubtedly be a more suitable term to refer, in the case of each individual book or unit of translation, to the earliest rendition into Greek, NETS has bowed to the weight of tradition and has thus continued the use of the term “Septuagint.”

WHY A NEW ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE SEPTUAGINT?

Only two English translations of the entire Septuagint, albeit in modified form, have ever been published. The first was by the American businessman-scholar Charles Thomson and published together with his translation of the New Testament in 1808 and the second by the British cleric Sir Lancelot Charles Lee Brenton.² Thomson’s rendition excludes the so-called deuterocanonical books, but does feature Ps 151. The order of books is that of the Hebrew canon. His translation was based indirectly—via J. Field’s edition of 1665 and the Sixtine edition of 1587—on a single manuscript, namely, the well-known fourth century CE manuscript Codex Vaticanus (B). No preface or notes of any kind were appended.

Brenton’s work, though it appeared some thirty-five years later than Thomson’s, acknowledges only cursory and indirect acquaintance with it. As the title indicates, it too is (indirectly) based on Codex Vaticanus. In the Preface (xi) Brenton gives the Valpy edition of 1819 as his immediate source, which in turn was based on the Sixtine edition. Like Thomson, Brenton translated only the books of the Hebrew canon, plus Psalm 151, and ordered them accordingly. For Esther, however, he did not excise the Additions, as Thomson had done. Notes of various kinds, embedded in the text, include variants from the fifth century Codex Alexandrinus (A), as well as comments on the Hebrew and Greek texts.

Of the two translations, Brenton’s has easily been the more influential and, though not originally published with facing Greek and English texts, has long been made available as a diglot with both versions in parallel columns.

Since the publication of these two translations, now more than one hundred and fifty years ago, significant advances have been made in Greek lexicography, numerous ancient manuscripts have come to light, and important steps have been taken in recovering the pristine text of each Septuagint book. By way of comparison it may be noted that whereas both Thomson and Brenton were based on (essentially) diplomatic editions of a single manuscript, the critical edition of the Göttingen Septuagint for the book of Genesis rests on a foundation of some one hundred and forty manuscripts (nine pre-dating the fourth century CE), ten daughter-versions, plus biblical citations in Greek literature. A new translation of the Septuagint into English is, consequently, not only much needed for biblical studies but is in fact long overdue.

NETS AND THE NEW REVISED STANDARD VERSION

Ancient texts, including biblical texts, have been translated from time immemorial, and the need for such work continues. What is often less clear is the precise reading-public a translation should target. Because of its widely varied audience, this is perhaps especially true for biblical literature. Writing specifically on the topic of Bible translations, Nida and Taber³ envisaged no fewer than three such audiences.

It is usually necessary to have three types of Scriptures: (1) a translation which will reflect the traditional usage and be used in the churches, largely for liturgical purposes (this may be called an "ecclesiastical translation"), (2) a translation in the present-day literary language, so as to communicate to the well-educated constituency, and (3) a translation in the "common" or "popular" language, which is known to and used by the common people, and which is at the same time acceptable as a standard for published materials.

NETS is aimed primarily at the reading public identified in Nida and Taber's second grouping, namely, a biblically well-educated audience, on the assumption that it is most probably this audience that has a more than passing interest in traditions of biblical literature other than their own. Since NETS has been based, however, on the New Revised Standard Version (1989), its character can be said to derive, in part at least, from the NRSV.

That an existing English translation of the Hebrew Bible should have been used as a base for NETS perhaps needs some justification. Why not, it might be suggested, simply translate the Septuagint in the tradition of Thomson or Brenton, without any overt dependence on an English translation of the Hebrew? The answer to this question is based, in the editors' view, on considerations of both principle and practicality. First, the considerations of principle.

While it is obvious that the so-called Septuagint in time achieved its independence from its Semitic parent, and that it at some stage in its reception history sheds its subservience to its source, it is equally true that it was, at its stage of production, a Greek translation of a Hebrew (or Aramaic) original. That is to say, the Greek had a dependent and subservient linguistic relationship to its Semitic parent. Or again, although the Septuagint was a translation of the Bible, it did not thereby automatically become a biblical translation. More particularly, for the vast majority of books the linguistic relationship of the Greek to its Semitic parent can best be conceptualized as a Greek interlinear translation of a Hebrew original within a Hebrew-Greek diglot. Be it noted immediately, however, that the terms "interlinear" and "diglot" are intended to be nothing more than (or less than) visual aids to help the reader conceptualize the linguistic relationship that is deemed to exist between the Hebrew original and the Greek translation. In other words, "interlinear" is a metaphor, and as such it points not to the surface meaning of its own components but to a deeper, less visual, linguistic relationship of dependence and subservience. As Max Black aptly states, a memorable metaphor has the power to bring two separate domains into cognitive and emotional relation by using language directly appropriate for the one as a lens for seeing the other . . .⁴

Be it noted further that the deeper linguistic reality, which the metaphor attempts to make more tangible, is in no way contingent on the existence of a physical, interlinear entity at any point during the third to the first centuries BCE. What precise physical format the translation took we may never know. A variety of possibilities is not difficult to imagine.

Looked at from a different perspective, NETS is presupposing a Greek translation which aimed at bringing the Greek reader to the Hebrew original rather than bringing the Hebrew original to the Greek reader.⁵ Consequently, the Greek's subservience to the Hebrew may be seen as indicative of its aim.

NETS has been based on the interlinear paradigm for essentially three reasons. First, the concept of interlinearity has superior explanatory power for the "translationese" character of Septuagint Greek, with its strict, often rigid, quantitative equivalence to the Hebrew. As Conybeare and Stock⁶ (and others) noted nearly a century ago, Septuagintal Greek is at times "hardly Greek at all, but rather Hebrew in disguise,"

⁵ Cf. S. P. Brock, "The Phenomenon of the Septuagint," OTS 17 (1972) 17.

especially in its syntax and word order. Secondly, interlinearity not only legitimates the use of the Hebrew parent as arbiter of established meanings in the target language but as well absolves the reader of positing new meanings derived solely from translation equivalency. Differently put, the interlinear paradigm recognizes that unintelligibility of the Greek text qua text is one of its inherent characteristics. Thirdly, and perhaps paradoxically, the interlinear paradigm safeguards the Greekness of the Septuagint by emphasizing that its linguistic strangeness, rather than reflecting a form of the living language at odds with its Hellenistic environment, was made to serve a specific (possibly pedagogical) purpose.

Thus whatever else one might consider the LXX to be—a repository of textual variants to the Masoretic Text, the oldest “commentary” on the Hebrew Bible, Holy Writ for Egyptian Jewry (at least from the time of Aristeeas) and, later, for Christianity—the Committee decided to focus on the most original character of this collection, namely, that of interlinearity with and dependence on the Hebrew, or, from a slightly different angle, the Septuagint as produced rather than as received. Or yet again, NETS aims to focus on the translated corpus in its Hebrew-Greek context.

Once the aim and focus of NETS had been decided upon, a methodological directive seemed compelling. If NETS was to render into English the Greek half of a Hebrew-Greek interlinear diglot posited as paradigm, its English text might then be made “interlinear to” a modern English translation of the current Hebrew text. Put another way, since NETS was to echo the original dependent relationship of the Greek upon the Hebrew, one could seemingly do no better than to base NETS on an existing English translation of the Hebrew and to modify that base as dictated by the Greek.

But if the linguistic makeup of the Septuagint can best be conceptualized in terms of interlinearity, it follows that, characteristically for interlinears, one should read the Septuagint as produced with one eye on the parent member of the diglot, namely, the Hebrew. Thus what this Septuagint says, and how it says it, can only be understood in its entirety with the help of the Hebrew. This interlinearity with and dependence on the Hebrew may be termed the constitutive character of the Septuagint, in contradistinction to its history of interpretation, or better, its reception history. From the NETS perspective these two aspects of the Septuagint are not only distinct but might in fact be termed the apples and oranges of its history.

In the light of what has been argued, it is thus appropriate to think of NETS along the lines of the Göttingen Septuagint: as the Göttingen editors attempt to establish the original form of the Greek text and in so doing draw on the Hebrew for text-critical leverage, so NETS has availed itself of what leverage the Hebrew can provide in arbitrating between competing meanings of the Greek. Moreover, just as the form of the original text differed from its later textual descendants, so what the original translator thought his text to mean differed from what later interpreters thought the text to mean.

But in addition to the dictum of principle, there emerged also an intensely practical consideration for basing NETS on an existing English translation of the Hebrew. In the Committee’s view, important to the raison d’être of a new translation of the (original) Septuagint—i.e., a translation of a translation—is its synoptic potential. That is to say, users of such a translation, especially in light of the diglot paradigm, should be able to utilize it to the greatest degree achievable (within set parameters) in a comparative study of the Hebrew and Greek texts, albeit in English translation. This aim could best be realized, the Committee believed, if English translations of the Hebrew and the Greek were as closely interrelated as the two texts themselves dictate or warrant, both quantitatively and qualitatively. In other words, ideally the user of NETS would be able to determine not only matters of longer or shorter text and major transpositions of material, but also questions of more detailed textual, interpretational, and stylistic difference. Needless to say, the Committee harbors no illusions about this goal having been fully reached.

Given the above decision, essentially two options were open: (1) one could first translate the MT into English and then use this translation as the point of departure for an English translation of the Greek, or (2) one could use an existing English translation of the MT as base. Clearly the latter route recommended itself as being the more practical and economical one. It was, furthermore, difficult for the Committee to see how the work of the committees of scholars that have produced the major English translations of the Hebrew could be greatly improved upon even though they are admittedly translations of a presumed original rather than being translations of a translation, like NETS.

NETS AS MODIFIED NRSV

Two considerations have guided the Committee in choosing an English version as the base text for NETS: (1) general compatibility of translational approach with that of the LXX itself and (2) widespread use among readers of the Bible. The New Revised Standard Version, based as it is on the maxim “as literal as possible, as free as necessary” (Preface), was thought to be reasonably well suited to NETS’ purposes on both counts. Consequently, throughout those Septuagint books which have extant counterparts in Hebrew (or Aramaic), NETS translators have sought to retain the NRSV to the extent that the Greek text, in their understanding of it, directs or permits. NETS' synoptic aim, however, has not been allowed to interfere with faithfulness to the Greek text.

When NETS differs from the NRSV, the reason is typically one of the following: (1) the lexical choice of the NRSV to represent the Hebrew differs significantly from that of the Greek translator's, even though either rendering, independently, might be regarded as an adequate translation of the same Hebrew; (2) differences in translational approach between the translators of the NRSV and the ancient Greek translators has occasioned noteworthy differences between the two versions (for example, in any given passage, the Greek might be hyper-literalistic, where the NRSV is not, or again it might be very free, which the NRSV is not); (3) an attempt to reflect linguistic features in the Greek, such as word echoes or paratactic style, at times has required that the NRSV wording be modified; (4) the Greek translator has apparently rendered a text at variance with MT, due to textual difference; (5) the NRSV has opted for gender-inclusive or explicit language, eschewed by NETS; (6) the NRSV has not translated MT, but opted instead for some other reading. Naturally, where, in such instances, the NRSV has adopted the reading of the Septuagint, NETS and NRSV agree. As a rule such cases have been annotated in the NRSV, but the reader should not take for granted that the precise English word used by the NRSV has been adopted by NETS.

The Committee's desire to enable the reader to make use of NETS in synoptic manner with the NRSV has been second only to its commitment to giving a faithful rendering of the Greek original. In fact, NETS may be said to have two competing aims: (1) to give as faithful a translation of the Greek as is possible, both in terms of its meaning and in terms of its mode of expression and (2) to create a tool in English for the synoptic study of the Hebrew and Greek texts of the Bible. Since these are competing aims, the translator often, especially on the expression side, has been called upon to do a balancing act.

TRANSLATING A TRANSLATION

Translating an ancient text can only be described as a profoundly difficult undertaking. Not only do translators have to contend with the natural gulf that exists between languages and with the absence of the authors who wrote the pieces in question, but they also suffer from the lack of native speakers of the ancient languages, who might be cajoled into giving some much needed help. Consequently, what the modern translator of an ancient text is trying to do is something like starting up a one-way conversation, or a monologue that passes for a dialogue. Translation, as someone has aptly noted, is an act of hubris.

The difficulties of the undertaking are certainly not decreased when one attempts to translate an ancient translation into a modern language. If translating is an act of interpreting, as linguists suggest it is, rather than a simple transfer of meaning, a Greek interpretation of a Hebrew original can be expected to reflect what the translator understood the Hebrew text to mean. The end result is therefore inevitably to some degree a commentary written at a specific historical time and place by an individual person, whose understanding of the Hebrew will often have been at variance with our own, though at times perhaps equally viable.

But as has already been suggested by the interlinear paradigm, much of the Septuagint is a translation of a special kind. Thus whereas a translation that replaces the original can be counted on to "solve" the problems of the original, in an interlinear rendition these may simply be passed on to the reader. In fact new problems might often be created because of its inherent preoccupation with representing as much of the linguistic detail of the original as possible. All of this is not to say that the interlinear type of translators of the LXX had no concern for making sense, but simply that the interlinear language-game of the ancient translator has added an extra dimension to the problems faced by the modern translator. The notion of constitutive character, introduced earlier, comprises inter alia certain realities of the source language, Hebrew (or Aramaic). Just as inappropriate as accusing the interlinear translator of lacking concern for making sense would be to saddle him with inadequate knowledge of Greek, since his use of Greek is determined by the aim he wishes to achieve, whatever that be.

The paradigm of the Septuagint as an interlinear text within a Hebrew-Greek diglot, in contradistinction to the Septuagint as a free-standing, independent text now calls for a further distinction alluded to earlier, namely, that between the text as produced, on the one hand, and the text as received, on the other. The distinction is important because it demarcates two distinct approaches to the Greek text. That is to say, one can either seek to uncover the meaning of the Greek text in terms of its interlinear dependence on the Hebrew, or one can aim at rendering the meaning of the text from the perspective of its reception history, i.e., in terms of its autonomy. The difference between the two may be simply illustrated. Though the entire Greek language community of third to the first centuries BCE would agree that Greek δύναιμι sometimes means "host/army" but at other times means "power/might," which component of meaning was right for which context might well be a matter of dispute. From the perspective of the Septuagint text as an independent, self-sufficient entity, context is recognized as the sole arbiter of meaning. That is to say, should the context speak of military might, δύναμις would be translated by “army,” but if the (Greek) context be about bodily might instead, δύναμις would be rendered by “power/might.” On the other hand, from the perspective of the Septuagint as a dependent, subservient entity, one could not agree that context is the sole arbiter of meaning. What if context should admit either reading and thus fail to steer the reader into one direction or the other? In that case, based on our diglot model, the Hebrew parent text would be the arbiter in the dispute. Should the underlying Hebrew have אָרְמִיָּה (“army, war, warfare”), Greek δύναμις should be understood as “host/army,” but if the Hebrew be יָצַח (“strength, might”) instead, δύναμις would have to be understood as meaning “might/strength.” An even simpler example is the distinction between the Greek pronouns “us” and “you”(pl) (e.g., ἡμῶν and ὑμῶν) which, due to their identical pronunciation in post-Classical Greek, are frequently confused in Greek manuscripts. Which of the two is to be regarded as original LXX can often be determined only by using the Hebrew as arbiter. The latter example underscores the analogy between NETS and the Göttingen Septuagint.

Perhaps the most obvious examples of Septuagintal dependence (as opposed to independence) are cases in which, due to the ambiguity inherent in Greek grammar, only the syntactic relationships (e.g., subject or object role) of the Hebrew can guide the English translator to what the Greek text means. Thus a sentence such as τὸ παιδίον εἶδεν might mean either “the child saw” or “(s)he saw the child.”

The distinction between the text as an independent entity or the text as a dependent entity is, therefore, not only a valid one in terms of the NETS paradigm, but in the Committee’s view, it is an important methodological stance for translators of the Septuagint as produced, with frequent practical consequences for NETS. Differently put, one can either treat the LXX as though it were an original (as Charles Thomson did) or one can treat it as a translation of an original in a non-Greek language. Though both are worthy undertakings in their own right, NETS perceives them as fundamentally different.

Constitutive character or Sitz im Leben is a figure for socio-linguistic realities. As such it includes not only what, judging from the language used, the text overtly means but also what at times resulted covertly from the model that informed the translator’s work. Again, inherent in the model of the LXX as an interlinear rendition is the word-by-word method of translating, including the so-called structural words (articles, prepositions, conjunctions). Also to be expected from an interlinear perspective are standard and stereotypical equations between Hebrew and Greek words, again often including structural words. For these reasons and more, though the LXX is in Greek, there is also much that is decidedly un-Greek. “The voice is Iakob’s, but the hands are Esau’s” (Gen 27.22) is a statement aptly applied to much of the Septuagint.

HOW NETS DETERMINES WHAT THE GREEK MEANS

Simply put NETS has been governed by five lexical guidelines, which can be made to apply as well, mutatis mutandis, to the grammar of Septuagint Greek, and all of them are implicit in or concordant with the interlinear paradigm: (1) Greek words in the LXX normally mean what they meant in the Greek of that period (statistically the vast majority of the lexical stock belongs here); (2) the precise nuance of Greek words is sometimes arbitrated by the Hebrew parent text (see the δύναμις and ἡμῶν/ὑμῶν illustrations above); (3) some Greek words, when they are used rigidly as uniform renderings of the corresponding Hebrew words, fit poorly into some of the contexts in which they stand—these may be dubbed stereotypes (see e.g., “will” [θέλημα] for NRSV’s “desire” in Ps 1.2); (4) some Greek words in the LXX have been selected by the translator solely because of their perceived connection with (a) Hebrew morpheme(s)—these may be called isolates (see e.g., כֹּחַ [oh please!] = ἐν ἐμοί = “in/with me” in 1Rgns 1.26 et al.); (5) some Greek words in the LXX have Hebrew meanings, i.e., the chief meaning of the Hebrew counterpart has been transferred to the Greek, which has then become part of the living language—these may be labeled calques (see e.g., בְּרִית = διαθήκη = “covenant” throughout the LXX, but “will, testament” in extra-biblical Greek). Calques may be expected to predate the Septuagint. Graphically these guidelines may be represented as follows:

The vertical line on the scale represents a semantic demarcation, since words or lexemes placed to the left are governed by their normal Greek semantic range, while those to the right may in part be governed by their Hebrew counterparts, though, when such is the case, not by their full semantic range. NETS translators have ordered the linguistic information of the Greek in terms of this scale and have translated accordingly.

Though the full extent of the scale may be represented in all books or units of translation of the Septuagint, not all may show the same translation profile. Two factors that may have exercised a direct influence on a given book's profile are its degree of literalness and its relative chronological placement within the corpus. By literalness is here understood the degree of consistency of Hebrew-Greek verbal equations, as well as the relative number of such one-to-one equations a given book or translation unit features. Potentially a book's chronological place within the corpus determines the number of calques it contains. That is to say, the later the book the more calques may have been part of its translator's everyday, living lexicon.

Even though, in deference to long-standing usage, the title of the NETS project speaks of the literature as a body, namely, the Septuagint, it has already been noted that the members of this anthology show considerable diversity, the interlinear model notwithstanding. Thus, Greek translations within it range all the way from highly literal to very free. Moreover, on a scale extending from what might be called the prototypical translator, who acts as a mere conduit for his author, to the prototypical author, who composes everything from scratch, Septuagintal writers would be seen scattered along most of its baseline. One finds not only full-fledged authors (e.g., 2 Makkabees and Wisdom of Salomon) who composed their works in Greek, but also bona fide translators who in varying degrees attempted to approximate our prototypical translator. Thus one might note, for example, Ecclesiast (Qoheleth) as the most prototypical translator (being very literal) and Job as the least prototypical (being very free). Needless to say, a Lohan translator must be labeled part author. NETS introductions to individual books or units are designed to give some detail on the nature of individual translations.

What has been noted in the preceding paragraph draws attention to a number of facts. First, though the paradigm basic to NETS is that of the Septuagint as an interlinear text, it does not follow that all interlinear texts are equally literalistic. Second, there are within the translated corpus exceptions that prove the rule, such as Job, Proverbs, Esaias (?) and Esther in part. Third, those books originally composed in Greek, such as 2–4 Makkabees and Wisdom of Salomon, by virtue of not being translations are not governed by the NETS paradigm.

NETS: ITS CHARACTER AND EXTENT

Though NETS is based on the NRSV, it is not intended to be the-NRSV-once-over-lightly but rather a genuine representation of the Greek, reflecting not only its perceived meaning but also, to the extent possible in an English translation, its literary nuggets as well as its infelicities, pleonasms, problems and conundra.

One scarcely expects literary beauty and rhetorical flourish from an interlinear text, since that was clearly not its purpose. In fact, it would make little sense to accuse an interlinear translator of lack of literary sense. When literary beauty occurs it is the exception that proves the rule. Consequently, NETS readers would be remiss in expecting literary elegance in the English. That would have required, from the NETS perspective, a different Greek. Since the Septuagint, with a few exceptions, was not originally composed in Greek and often used unidiomatic Greek, a fully idiomatic translation into English can scarcely be justified. Consequently NETS is perforce more a translation of formal correspondence than one of dynamic equivalence. All in all, what readers can expect is a reasonable facsimile of the (original) Septuagint such as it is, including many of its warts. For commentary, one may consult the forthcoming series, the Society of Biblical Literature Commentary on the Septuagint (SBLCS).

The reason for the NETS approach is integral to the NETS aim: that of reflecting the Septuagint's constitutive character and of attempting to capture the incipit of the history of interpretation of what in time became the Greek Bible. Implicit in this aim has been a concerted effort not to make the Greek text say more than is strictly warranted, but to leave such elaboration to later stages of exegesis or eisegesis, as the case may be.

Names have been treated in essentially two ways: (1) as translations of Hebrew (or Aramaic), i.e., names in general use in the Hellenistic world apart from the LXX, and (2) as transcriptions of Hebrew (or Aramaic), i.e., names produced de novo from the source language. The former have been given their standard equivalent in English (e.g., Egypt and Syria), while the latter appear in English transcription (e.g., David and Salomon).

Since the Septuagint collection includes translations from extant Hebrew (Aramaic) sources and translations of lost Semitic works, as well as books originally composed in Greek, the Committee has decided to be inclusive. To cite the NETS Statement of Principles (art. 3): "For the purposes of NETS, the term

'Septuagint' is understood to be exemplified by, but not in all respects . . . congruent with, Alfred Rahlfs' Septuaginta (1935)."

One "book" not included in NETS, however, is Odes since it has dubious integrity as a literary unit, and, in any case, almost all of the individual Septuagint odes have already been included in their native setting in other books. The sole exception is Ode 12 in Rahlfs' edition, the Prayer of Manasses, which for that reason has been separately appended to the Psalter.

The one major addition to Rahlfs has been the so-called Alpha-Text of Esther. Here and elsewhere the Committee has been guided by the Göttingen Septuagint, which has presented two Greek texts of Esther in parallel. While it is true that in Esther and in certain other books (Judges and Tobit, for example) it is most unlikely that both texts, qua texts, can lay equal claim to originality, the texts that have been transmitted clearly defy conflation. Furthermore, even though the Committee aims to present the original Septuagint or Old Greek in English translation, here too it has not been oblivious to the weight of tradition. Thus, though in Job the Septuagint has been presented as the main text of NETS, the asterisked materials, sanctioned solely by ecclesiastical usage, have been included, albeit conspicuously marked off. For the same reason, the so-called Greek II text of Sirach, added in small print in Ziegler's edition, has been included. Similar procedures have been followed in other books (see Introductions to individual books). A special effort has been made in the case of books with parallel Greek texts to reflect their interrelationships in English.

Clearly where no parent texts are extant, whether because they have been lost or because they never existed, no comparison can be attempted between (Semitic) original and (Greek) translation. Thus, whether a book has been composed originally in Greek or is based on a lost original, it has been treated as an original, even though an effort has been made to reflect its style. Similarly, since the synoptic aim of NETS is not applicable in these cases, the NRSV has functioned only optionally as the base text for the NETS translator, though certain basic NETS practices and procedures have been carried through, especially in terms of translation style and names.

GREEK TEXT

Since NETS claims to be a translation of the Greek text as it left the hands of its respective translators—or a "Göttingen Septuagint in English form"—it stands to reason that NETS has been based on the best available critical editions. That is to say, where available, NETS has used the Göttingen Septuagint, and Rahlfs' manual edition has been used for the remainder of the books. In the event that new and improved critical editions appear during the life of the project, the Committee is committed to using these, if at all possible. But since no edition, no matter how carefully and judiciously executed, can lay claim to being the definitive text of the Greek translator, NETS translators have from time to time sought to improve on their respective base texts. Just how much will have been changed varies with the quality of the edition used. All such deviations, however, have been meticulously noted.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

Since NETS has used the NRSV as its base text, it stands to reason that some of the latter's editorial policy has been continued.

More specifically the NRSV for its so-called Old Testament segment has maintained the traditional distinction between shall (should) and will (would), and NETS has followed suit.

Though the NRSV adopted the practice of distinguishing between the Hebrew divine names Yahweh and Adonai by means of printing "LORD" and "Lord" as respective equivalents, NETS has felt committed to this practice only where it can be shown that the Greek translator made a comparable distinction between Yahweh and Adonai. Otherwise Greek κύριος has been routinely represented by English "Lord."

The footnoting of the NRSV has been largely followed in NETS, though the specific content is often of a different kind. In NETS footnotes are generally of five kinds: (1) deviations from the Greek text used as base; (2) linguistic items in the English but lacking in the Greek; (3) graded (in terms of preference) alternative translations to the lemma text; (4) elucidations of various kind; (5) indications of a very obscure Greek text.

Deviations from the Greek text have been further divided into additions, omissions and transpositions. All three kinds of deviations from the Greek edition used are followed by an equal sign (=) in order to indicate the source of the variation without implying exact equivalence. Substitutions for obvious reasons have not been tagged as such.

Items in the English that are explicitly lacking in the Greek have been included when the information is judged to be implicit. When, however, added items may have some possible bearing on the interpretation of the text, they have been tagged. Hence the employment of this category is one of several ways in which NETS has sought to present the reader with the maximum of interpretational openness the Greek translator's text offers.

The category of other translations comprises alternative renderings of the Greek that are deemed to have varying degrees of warrant in the Greek. These degrees, in descending order of acceptability, have been marked as (a) alternative rendering (to the NETS text) marked by "or," (b) alternative rendering preceded by "possibly," (c) alternative rendering preceded by "perhaps." Again, the intent here is to present translation options supported by the Greek.

Clarifications are intended to communicate useful information to the reader. They are preceded by "i.e." or are phrased more explicitly.

The flagging of uncertainty in the Greek text has been a measure of last resort and has been used very sparingly, since it is of very limited help to the reader. Items so marked are typically clear from a textual point of view but very obscure as to their coherent sense.

Chapter and verse numbers in NETS follow those of the particular Greek text edition that has been used as base. The numbering of the NRSV, which often though not always follows MT, has been supplied in parentheses when different.

Since the NT regularly cites the Septuagint and synoptic use of the Bible is an important aim of NETS, translators have made an effort to align NETS and the NRSV NT in such cases, using similar principles to those outlined above.

GENESIS

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS) version of the book of Genesis is based on the standard critical edition prepared by John William Wevers (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Göttingensis editum 1: Genesis [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1974]). In addition, I have incorporated changes to the critical text proposed by the editor in his Notes on the Greek Text of Genesis (SBLSCS 35; Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1993) wherever alteration of the Septuaginta edition has implications for the English translation. In such cases, the difference between the edition and the emended text of Notes is duly recorded in the NETS footnotes. For example, in Gen 17.3 ^bface down^b represents the changed text of Wevers' Notes (We^N) while ^{bon his face} = We^{ed} in the footnote reflects the text of the critical edition.

General Character

The overall assessment of Greek Genesis is that, lexically and syntactically, it is a strict, quantitative representation of its source text. Thus the concept proposed in NETS discussions of the Septuagint (LXX) as an interlinear translation is an apt metaphor for this book because of the significant degree of dependence on the Hebrew that it exhibits. However, this general characterization of LXX Genesis as being slavishly subservient to the Hebrew needs to be nuanced somewhat in the light of the Greek translator's periodic departures from his typical patterns to produce renderings that reflect Greek usage rather than Hebrew idiom, or that, in one way or another, contextualize a given passage for the benefit of the Greek reader.

Semantic Leveling

Several observations can be made about the set of Hebrew-Greek equivalences that exist in the book of Genesis. For example, a Greek term often will serve as the counterpart to several different Hebrew terms throughout the book, a practice called semantic leveling. There are more than 75 cases in Genesis of one Greek word being used to gloss three or more Hebrew words. Some of these, like ἀδικέω "be wronged, do injustice, injure" (שָׁקַר, עָשָׂק, חָמַס) and ἀδικία "wrongdoing, injustice" (עָשָׂק, עוֹן, חָמַס), are cognates. Others belong to the same semantic domain, like the preceding, but are not cognates: e.g., γῆ "earth, land, ground, country, world" (אֲדָמָה, אֶרֶץ, אֶרֶץ) and χώρα "country, territory" (אֶרֶץ, שָׂדֵה, אֶרֶץ).

Where possible this leveling has been reproduced in the NETS translation. One does not, of course, automatically translate a Greek term the same way each time it appears, because any lexeme typically has a range of denotations. Yet the likelihood of translation uniformity in English is increased when a single Greek term is used to render several Hebrew ones. In such cases, the NRSV often has a different English term for each Hebrew one. Consequently the NRSV rendering may well have been altered for NETS to reflect the semantic leveling that occurs in the Greek vis-à-vis the Hebrew. A case in point involves γῆ as the equivalent for several terms in the standard Hebrew Masoretic Text (MT).

Genesis	MT	NRSV	LXX	NETS
1.25	אֶרֶץ	earth	γῆ	earth
	אֲדָמָה	ground	γῆ	earth
3.19	אֲדָמָה	ground	γῆ	earth
	עָפָר	dust	γῆ	earth
	עָפָר	dust	γῆ	earth
47.23	אֲדָמָה	land	γῆ	land
47.24	שָׂדֵה	field	γῆ	land

In the preceding examples, decisions as to which English terms to use for NETS are based on factors such as their suitability in context as equivalents for γῆ, and the way in which, in a given chapter or pericope, those terms reflect the Greek translator's uniformity of word choice in rendering a variety of Hebrew terms.

Semantic Differentiation

Although there is a good deal of evidence for semantic leveling in LXX Genesis, a significant amount of semantic differentiation also takes place. Such situations often showcase the translator's skill or creativity in employing a variety of Greek equivalents for individual Hebrew terms or expressions in accordance with the demands of each context.

Hebrew verbs tend to generate greater numbers of Greek counterparts than nouns or adjectives do. One such verb is גָּלַל , which occurs 113 times in the Qal stem, and for which the LXX translator has used sixteen verbal roots as well as the adverbial forms $\delta\epsilon\upsilon\pi\omicron$ (3) "come" and $\delta\epsilon\upsilon\tau\epsilon$ (2) "come." In the majority of cases (58%), $\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon\upsilon\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (61) "go, proceed, walk, walk on, journey, travel" and its compound forms $\pi\omicron\rho\omicron\rho\epsilon\upsilon\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (2) "go on, go on before," and $\sigma\upsilon\mu\pi\omicron\rho\epsilon\upsilon\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (3) "journey together, go along" serve as equivalents. $\epsilon\grave{\rho}\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (3) "go, come" and its compounds $\acute{\alpha}\pi\epsilon\rho\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (21) "go away, go off, depart," $\delta\iota\epsilon\rho\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (1) "go through" and $\epsilon\grave{\xi}\epsilon\rho\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (1) "go forth" account for another 23%. The other Greek verbal roots that have been selected to render the Qal of גָּלַל are: $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\delta\iota\delta\rho\acute{\sigma}\kappa\omega$ (1) "escape," $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\iota\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (2) "depart," $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\lambda\upsilon\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (1) "go away," $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\tau\rho\acute{\epsilon}\chi\omega$ (2) "hurry off, leave quickly," $\beta\alpha\delta\iota\acute{\zeta}\omega$ (1) "go," $\epsilon\pi\iota\phi\acute{\epsilon}\rho\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (1) "be carried along," $\sigma\iota\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (3) "leave, go away," and $\pi\rho\omicron\beta\alpha\iota\acute{\nu}\omega$ (1) . . . $\gamma\acute{\iota}\nu\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ (1) "keep getting (greater)." The three remaining cases of Qal גָּלַל are not represented quantitatively in the Greek. Three additional Greek verbal roots serve as counterparts to the Hithpael stem of גָּלַל in the eight places that it occurs in Genesis: $\delta\iota\omicron\delta\epsilon\upsilon\acute{\omega}$ (1) "pass through," $\epsilon\upsilon\acute{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\sigma\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ "be well pleasing (to / before God)" (6) in a dynamic equivalent rendering of $\text{לִפְנֵי / אֶת־ הַהוֹדֵל־ךָ}$ "walk (with / before God)" and $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\pi\alpha\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ (1) "walk about."

The Hebrew noun נַפְשׁ can serve as a representative example of non-verbal forms that exhibit semantic differentiation. In 41 of the 43 contexts in which it is found (95%), the LXX translator's equivalent is $\psi\upsilon\chi\acute{\eta}$ "animating force, creature, being, soul, life, heart, person." In the remaining cases, however, the translator has chosen the plural of $\acute{\alpha}\nu\eta\rho$, "men," to describe the ones whom Abram rescued from the coalition of kings who had invaded the cities of the plain (14.21) and the plural of $\sigma\omega\mu\acute{\alpha}$ "slaves" to depict members of Esau's household (36.6).

Neologisms

The LXX of Genesis features approximately 50 terms that do not appear in extant Greek literature that dates prior to the creation of this translation. Most of these, of course, are based on existing stems, and so some whose cognates do pre-date, or are contemporaneous with, the LXX may well already have been in use. The fact that they are previously unattested is no doubt accidental. Examples of this sort include compounds with the $\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\iota$ - prefix, a good number of which apparently made their first appearance in the Hellenistic period. Thus in Genesis one encounters forms like $\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\iota\delta\epsilon\sigma\mu\omicron\phi\upsilon\lambda\alpha\grave{\xi}$ / $\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\iota\delta\epsilon\sigma\mu\acute{\omega}\tau\eta\varsigma$ "chief jailer," $\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\iota\mu\acute{\alpha}\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\varsigma$ "chief butcher," and $\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\iota\sigma\iota\tau\omicron\pi\omicron\iota\omicron\varsigma$ "chief baker," whose unprefixed forms $\delta\epsilon\sigma\mu\omicron\phi\upsilon\lambda\alpha\grave{\xi}$ / $\delta\epsilon\sigma\mu\acute{\omega}\tau\eta\varsigma$ "jailer," $\mu\acute{\alpha}\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\varsigma$ "butcher," and $\sigma\iota\tau\omicron\pi\omicron\iota\omicron\varsigma$ "baker" are attested by the time of the translation of the Pentateuch into Greek. Similarly, terms like $\delta\iota\sigma\alpha\phi\eta\rho\iota\varsigma$ "explanation" and $\omicron\rho\theta\rho\iota\acute{\zeta}\omega$ "rise/start early" are likely to have been in use, since cognates (e.g., $\delta\iota\alpha\sigma\alpha\phi\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ "make quite clear," $\omicron\rho\theta\rho\omicron\varsigma$ "dawn") were well known.

The Genesis translator follows various conventions of word formation. A term like $\beta\alpha\rho\upsilon\omega\pi\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ "be heavy-sighted" (48.10), for example, combines the adjective $\beta\alpha\rho\upsilon\varsigma$ "heavy" with the noun $\acute{\omega}\psi$ "eye," and to the resulting compound is attached the verbal suffix $-\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ which typically denotes either a condition or an activity (in this case it is the former). For $\gamma\alpha\mu\beta\rho\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, the translator has begun with the noun $\gamma\alpha\mu\beta\rho\acute{\omicron}\varsigma$, whose semantic domain has to do with a connection by marriage and which, in a given context, can be applied to any one of a number of different kinds of male in-laws and has added the verbal suffix $-\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, which has the force of "acting the part of," hence, "act the part of a brother-in-law" (38.8). The noun $\acute{\epsilon}\nu\tau\alpha\phi\iota\omicron\upsilon$ "shroud, winding-sheet" is the basis for $\acute{\epsilon}\nu\tau\alpha\phi\iota\acute{\alpha}\acute{\zeta}\omega$, the form that the LXX translator creates by adding the verbal suffix $-\acute{\alpha}\acute{\zeta}\omega$ denoting action, i.e., "prepare for burial" (50.2). The new cognate noun $\acute{\epsilon}\nu\tau\alpha\phi\iota\alpha\sigma\tau\acute{\eta}\varsigma$ "undertaker," which appears in the same verse, exhibits the nominal suffix $-\tau\eta\varsigma$ signifying the agent or doer of an action. The technical term $\theta\upsilon\sigma\iota\alpha\sigma\tau\acute{\eta}\rho\iota\omicron\upsilon$ "altar" is the product of the addition of the suffix $-\tau\eta\tau\eta\omicron\upsilon$, signifying place, to $\theta\upsilon\sigma\iota\alpha$ (noun) / $\theta\upsilon\sigma\iota\acute{\alpha}\zeta\omega$ (verb) "sacrifice." A puzzling development is the Genesis translator's invention of the term $\acute{\alpha}\kappa\rho\omicron\beta\upsilon\sigma\tau\iota\alpha$ "foreskin" (17.11 passim), given that $\acute{\alpha}\kappa\rho\omicron\pi\omicron\sigma\theta\iota\acute{\alpha}$ "tip of the foreskin" (cf. $\pi\omicron\sigma\theta\iota\acute{\alpha}$ "foreskin") was already in use. Some have speculated that the translator combined ἀκρός “at the farthest point/end” with a Semitic root signifying pudenda (bšt), but whatever the process it seems likely that ἀκροβυστία is derived from ἀκροποσθία.

Stereotypes

While the translation style of the LXX of Genesis is literalistic in nature, the meanings of the Greek words are usually ones that are attested in other non-translation Greek literature. This is true even in situations when rigid adherence to an established Hebrew-Greek equivalence gives rise to a reading that is in tension with its context. Examples of such stereotypes in Genesis include αὐξάνω “to increase” (for the Hebrew counterpart פָּרַח signifying “to be fruitful”), εὐρίσκω “to find” (note especially 26.12 where Hebrew מִצֵּץ connotes “reap,” as the NRSV indicates), θάλασσα “sea” (particularly in the places where Δ signifies the westward direction), ὄρος “mountain” (where הַר refers generally to hill country), χεῖλος “lip, edge” (where שֶׁפֶּה denotes “language”).

Calques

A number of calques (see “TO THE READER OF NETS”) make their appearance in the Greek Genesis. They include terms such as διαθήκη “covenant” = בְּרִית, εὐλογέω “to bless” = בָּרַךְ Piel, κιβωτός “ark” = תֵּבַת, κύριος “(the) LORD” = הוָה, παρακαλέω “to comfort / be comforted” = נָחַם Piel/Niphal/Hithpael, παροικέω “to reside as an alien” = גָּוַר, παροίκησις “living as an alien” = מְגוֹר, and στερέωμα “firmament” = עֲקִיָּם.

Isolates

Examples of isolates (see “TO THE READER OF NETS”) may be found in LXX Gen 7.4 and 7.23, where the use of ἐξανάστασις “a rising up” and ἀνάστημα “something that rises” as equivalents for יָקוּם “living thing” (NRSV) is apparently occasioned by the desire to reflect the root קוּם “arise, stand up, stand” by means of cognates of its Greek semantic counterpart, ἵστημι. Similarly, the rationale for περατής “emigrant” in Gen 14.13 as a rendering of עֵבֶר “Hebrew” in reference to Abram would undoubtedly be that both have etymological links to verbs denoting “to traverse” and cognates connoting “on the other side.”

Loan Words and Transcriptions

The most literal of translation strategies in the LXX involves simply the transcription of the letters of a Hebrew word into Greek characters. This happens frequently when it comes to the rendering of names in Genesis, though other terms are handled in the same fashion. χερουβίμ “cheroubim” (3.24) is the transcription of כְּרֻבִּים, an equivalence that obtains throughout the LXX. As Jews conversant with the Hebrew Bible, LXX translators must have had some familiarity with the traditions concerning the identity of these creatures, though they apparently knew of no Greek counterparts that could serve as suitable equivalents. In another case involving σαβέκ = סַבֵּךְ (22.13), however, the transcription seems to have come about because the Genesis translator was not sure about the meaning of the Hebrew term. That the translator understood it was some kind of plant is evident from the fact that it is paired attributively with φυτόν, i.e., “a sabek plant.” A term like ἀραβών “pledge” (Hebrew עֵרַבֹּן [Gen 38.17, 18, 20]), on the other hand, is not just a transcription but a true loan word, derived from a Semitic root, that was in use already in pre-LXX Greek.

Hebraisms

The Genesis translator’s dependence on the underlying Hebrew text is exemplified not only by recurring semantic equivalences in the book but also by the number of cases of rigid adherence to Hebrew idiom resulting in quantitative equivalences. The latter can be divided into two broad categories: (1) Hebrew idiomatic constructions that have no precedent in Greek and (2) constructions in Greek for which there is some precedent in pre-LXX literature but which are attested in the LXX much more frequently than they are elsewhere.

In Genesis, examples of the first category include constructions that are reproduced as literalistically in NETS as they have been in the LXX (English translations of the Hebrew are taken from the NRSV).

4.2: καὶ προσέθηκεν τεκεῖν “And she proceeded to bear” = וְהָרָה לָלֶדֶת “Next she bore”

4.8: καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ καὶ ἀνέστη Κάιν “And it came about when they were in the plain, that then Cain rose up” = וַיְהִי בְהֵיוֹתָם בַּשָּׂדֶה וַיִּקָּם קַיִן “And when they were in the field, Cain rose up”

9.5: ἐκ χειρὸς πάντων τῶν θηρίων “from the hand of all the animals” = מִיַּד כָּל חַיָּה “from every animal”

- 11.10: υἱὸς ἑκατὸν ἔτων “a son of one hundred years” = בן מאה שנה = “one hundred years old”
 12.19: καὶ ἔλαβον αὐτὴν ἑμαυτῷ εἰς γυναῖκα “And I took her to myself for a wife” =
 וָאֶקַח אֶתָּהּ לִי לְאִשָּׁה “so that I took her for my wife”
 24.12: καὶ ποιήσον ἔλεος μετὰ τοῦ κυρίου μου “and do mercy with my lord” = וְעָשָׂה עִם אֲדֹנָי “and show steadfast love to my master” 33.19: τὴν μερίδα τοῦ ἀγροῦ, οὗ ἔστησεν ἐκεῖ τὴν σκηνὴν αὐτοῦ “the portion of the field, there where he had set up his tent” = אֵת חֶלְקַת הַשָּׂדֶה אֲשֶׁר נָטָה שָׁם אֹהֶלָו “the plot of land on which he had pitched his tent”

Constructions of the second category (those for which there is some pre-LXX precedent though not with the frequency attested in the LXX) are translated for NETS with varying degrees of literalness, depending on the degree to which they reflect standard Greek idiom and meet the NETS requirement for grammatical English. A case in point involves the use of the particle εἰ in questions. In addition to its interjectional and conditional uses, εἰ is employed in pre-LXX Greek in indirect and alternative questions, but in LXX Genesis it can appear as a counterpart to the Hebrew conditional/interrogative particle אִם in direct questions: e.g., εἰ [= אִם] Σάρρα ἐνεθήκοντα ἑτῶν οὕσα τέξεται; “shall Sarra who is ninety years of age give birth?” (17.17). The use of the ἐν τῶ + infinitive construction (= ב + infinitive construct) in circumstantial clauses likewise predates the LXX, though the frequency of its occurrence in Genesis and elsewhere in the biblical corpus is greater. One of the 18 examples of this equivalence in Genesis is found in 34.22: ἐν τῶ περιτέμνεσθαι ἡμῶν πᾶν ἀρσενικόν “when every male of ours is circumcised”; בְּהַמּוֹל לְנוּ כָל זָכָר “that every male among us be circumcised” (NRSV).

The Greek default for the ubiquitous Hebrew conjunction ו is καί. Its usual NETS equivalent when Hebrew parataxis is replicated is “and,” though this may mean departure from the NRSV when the latter glosses with inferential, adversative or other kinds of counterparts. Alternatives to “and” in NETS include “with” and “along with.” “Then” is sometimes employed when καί marks continuing narrative sequence and the subject of the conjoined clauses/sentences remains the same: e.g., “And when Abraam looked up with his eyes he saw the place far away. Then Abraam said . . .” (22.4–5). Typically “that then” is the NETS gloss when the LXX reproduces Hebrew idiom by introducing apodictic clauses by means of καί (= ו): e.g., ἐγένετο δὲ ἡνίκα ἐξηγαγέν με ὁ θεὸς ἐκ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ πατρὸς μου, καὶ εἶπα “Now it came about when God brought me forth from my father’s house, that then I said . . .” (20.13). Wherever possible, the presence in the LXX of something other than the default rendering of the Hebrew ו conjunction (δέ for example) is indicated in NETS by modification of the NRSV: e.g., Ῥεβέκκα δὲ ἠγάπα τὸν Ἰακώβ “Rebekka, however, loved Iakob”; וּרְבֵקָה אָהַבְתָּ אֶת יַעֲקֹב “but Rebekah loved Jacob” (NRSV [25.28]).

Other Translation Issues

In the matter of tense-aspect equations, the Genesis translator’s default for Hebrew preterites and perfects is the aorist and for imperfects it is the future indicative. Thus where these patterns are not maintained, I endeavor to indicate that with modifications to the NRSV.

- 7.19: “The waters swelled (Hebrew perfect) so mightily on the earth that all the high mountains under the whole heaven were covered (Hebrew preterite) . . .”; “So the water was prevailing (Greek imperfect) very greatly on the earth, and it covered (Greek aorist) all the high mountains that were under heaven . . .”
 31.39: “That which was torn by wild beasts I did not bring (Hebrew perfect) to you; I bore the loss of it myself (Hebrew prefix conjugation / imperfect); of my hand you required it, whether stolen by day or stolen by night.” “ . . . that which was caught by wild beasts I have not brought back (Greek perfect) to you; I would exact (Greek imperfect) from myself what was stolen by day and what was stolen by night . . .”
 38.23: “ . . . you see, I sent (Hebrew perfect) this kid, and you could not find (Hebrew perfect) her.” “I, for my part, have sent (Greek perfect) this kid, whereas you have not found (Greek perfect) her.”
 42.38: “My son shall not go down (Hebrew imperfect) with you, for his brother is dead (Hebrew perfect), and he alone is left (Hebrew participle). If harm should come (Hebrew perfect) to him on the journey that you are to make (Hebrew imperfect), you would bring down (Hebrew perfect) my gray hairs with sorrow to Sheol.” “My son shall not go down (Greek future) with you, because his brother died (Greek aorist) and he alone has been left (Greek perfect). And it will turn out (Greek future) that he becomes sick (Greek aorist infinitive) on the journey that you travel (Greek present), and you will bring down (Greek future) my old age with sorrow to Hades.”

45.8: “So it was not you who sent (Hebrew perfect) me here, but God; he has made (Hebrew preterite) me a father to Pharaoh . . .”; “Now therefore it is not you who have sent (Greek perfect) me here, but rather God, and he made (Greek aorist) me as a father to Pharaoh . . .”

With regard to word order, where the MT and the LXX agree, I try to follow the NRSV in order to preserve the synoptic value of NETS vis-à-vis the NRSV. For example, NRSV Genesis typically reverses the Hebrew sequence of name with attributive phrase, and in NETS I follow suit. In Genesis 4.1, the NRSV has, “Now the man knew his wife Eve” (וַיֵּדַע אָדָם אֶת חַוָּה אִשְׁתּוֹ), and NETS reads, “Now Adam knew his wife Heua” (Ἦδὰμ δὲ ἔγνω Εὐῖαν τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ). Another pattern exhibited in the NRSV is the reversal of the sequence of Hebrew first person and second or third person pronouns—especially following the preposition בֵּין “between”—when the antecedent of the first person is human, but the retention of the Hebrew sequence when the first person is divine. Thus in 9.15, where (the LORD) God speaks, both the NRSV and NETS read, “I will remember my covenant that is between me and you,” following the order of the pronouns in both the MT and the LXX. In 13.8, however, Abram expresses his wish to Lot that there not be strife “between you and me” (NRSV, NETS), though in both the MT and the LXX the pronouns are reversed.

NETS follows the gender language policy adopted by the NRSV in reference to human beings. Departures from the NRSV in this regard take place when it is evident that the LXX translator has deliberately chosen to move in the direction of either greater specificity or inclusivity in comparison to what the Hebrew has. LXX Gen14.21 provides an example of the former progression, inasmuch as the king of Sodoma demands the return of “the men” (τοὺς ἄνδρας) whom Abram has rescued from the invading kings, whereas in the MT he wants אנשי, which the NRSV renders as “the persons.” In 24.13, the LXX translator has ensured that the Hebrew phrase אֲנָשֵׁי הָעִיר “men/people of the city” is not construed in a gender-specific fashion by rendering it as τῶν οἰκούντων τὴν πόλιν “those who live in the city.” The NRSV’s “townspeople” likewise preserves the gender-neutral sense inherent in the Hebrew term for “people,” though, unlike the LXX, without venturing beyond its normal semantic domain.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

With respect to punctuation, I have attempted to conform where possible to Wevers’ edition, though I have felt free to depart from it (without acknowledging it in the notes) when that seems warranted. I have sometimes consulted the edition of Alfred Rahlfs (1935) in this regard. The following comparison of punctuation patterns in Gen 2.4–7 provides an indication of the kinds of variations that are possible.

NRSV:

4 These are the generations of the heavens and the earth when they were created.

In the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens, ⁵when no plant of the field was yet in the earth and no herb of the field had yet sprung up—for the LORD God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was no one to till the ground; ⁶but a stream would rise from the earth, and water the whole face of the ground—⁷then the LORD God formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and the man became a living being.

My translation of Wevers’ edition:

4 This is the book of the origin of heaven and earth, when it originated. On the day that God made the heaven and the earth, ⁵and all verdure of the field before it came to be upon the earth and all herbage of the field before it sprang up; for God had not sent rain upon the earth, and there was not a human to till the earth, ⁶yet a spring was rising from the earth and watering the whole face of the earth. ⁷And God formed man dust from the earth and breathed into his face the breath of life, and the man became a living being.

4 This is the book of the origin of heaven and earth, when it originated, on the day that God made the heaven and the earth ⁵and all verdure of the field before it came to be upon the earth and all herbage of the field before it sprang up, for God had not sent rain upon the earth, and there was not a human to till the earth, ⁶yet a spring would rise from the earth and water the whole face of the earth. ⁷And God formed man, dust from the earth, and breathed into his face a breath of life, and the man became a living being.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

It goes without saying that the standard Greek and Hebrew lexica and grammars have been my constant companions in the preparation of this translation. Another indispensable research tool has been the Accordance Software for Biblical Studies program (OakTree Software, Inc.). I have already made reference to my use of Wevers' critical edition and his Notes on the Greek Text of Genesis, as well as the edition by Rahlfs. My consultation of other translations of the LXX of Genesis, though their modi operandi differ significantly from those of NETS, has been fruitful. In this connection I mention the English translations of Thomson and Brenton, and the French of Marguerite Harl, La Genèse, 2nd ed. (1994) BA. Several lexicographical publications have also been of benefit to me, including John A. L. Lee, A Lexical Study of the Septuagint Version of the Pentateuch (SBLSCS 14; Chico: Scholars Press, 1983); Robert Kraft, ed., Septuagintal Lexicography (SBLSCS 1; Missoula: Scholars Press, 1972); Takamitsu Muraoka, ed., Melbourne Symposium on Septuagintal Lexicography (SBLSCS 28; Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1990); and various articles and chapters that have appeared over the years in the BIOSCS and the Congress volumes of the IOSCS. I have gained much, as well, from interactions with other NETS translators, whether in person or via the internet. The single most important resource person for this project, however, has been Albert Pieterma, co-editor (with Benjamin Wright) of NETS. He has blazed the trail for me and other NETS translators with his publication of The Psalms and has provided us with invaluable guidance, both via the NETS Manual and his detailed communications with us throughout the various stages of our work.

ROBERT J. V. HIEBERT

1 In the beginning God made the heaven and the earth. ²Yet the earth was invisible and unformed, and darkness was over the abyss, and a divine wind was being carried along over the water. ³And God said, "Let light come into being." And light came into being. ⁴And God saw the light, that it was good. And God separated between the light and between the darkness. ⁵And God called the light Day and the darkness he called Night. And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, day one.

6 And God said, "Let a firmament come into being in the midst of the water, and let it be a separator between water and water." And it became so. ⁷And God made the firmament, and God separated between the water that was under the firmament and between the water that was above the firmament. ⁸And God called the firmament Sky. And God saw that it was good. And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, a second day.

9 And God said, "Let the water that is under the sky be gathered into one gathering, and let the dry land appear." And it became so. And the water that was under the sky was gathered into their gatherings, and the dry land appeared. ¹⁰And God called the dry land Earth, and the systems of the waters he called Seas. And God saw that it was good. ¹¹Then God said, "Let the earth put forth pasture land vegetation, seed propagating according to kind and according to likeness, and fruit-bearing tree producing fruit of which the seed is in it according to kind, on the earth." And it became so. ¹²And the earth brought forth pasture land vegetation, seed propagating according to kind and according to likeness, and fruit-bearing tree producing fruit of which the seed is in it according to kind, on the earth. And God saw that it was good. ¹³And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, a third day.

14 And God said, "Let luminaries come into being in the firmament of the sky for illumination of the earth, to separate between the day and between the night, and let them be for signs and for seasons and for days and for years, ¹⁵and let them be for illumination in the firmament of the sky so as to give light upon the earth." And it became so. ¹⁶And God made the two great luminaries, the great luminary for rulership of the day and the lesser luminary for rulership of the night, and the stars. ¹⁷And God set them in the firmament of the sky so as to give light upon the earth ¹⁸and to rule the day and the night and to separate between the light and between the darkness. And God saw that it was good. ¹⁹And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, a fourth day.

20 And God said, "Let the waters bring forth creeping things among living creatures and birds flying on the earth against the firmament of the sky." And it became so. ²¹And God made the great sea monsters and every creature among creeping animals, which the waters brought forth according to their kinds, and every winged bird according to kind. And God saw that they were good. ²²And God blessed them, saying, "Increase, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let birds multiply on the earth." ²³And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, a fifth day.

24 And God said, "Let the earth bring forth the living creature according to kind: quadrupeds and creeping things and wild animals of the earth according to kind." And it became so. ²⁵And God made the wild animals of the earth according to kind and the cattle according to kind and all the creeping things of the earth according to their kind. And God saw that they were good.

26 Then God said, "Let us make humankind according to our image and according to likeness, and let them rule the fish of the sea and the birds of the sky and the cattle and all the earth and all the creeping things that creep upon the earth."

27 And God made humankind; according to divine image he made it; male and female he made them.

28 And God blessed them, saying, "Increase, and multiply, and fill the earth, and subdue it, and rule the fish of the sea and the birds of the sky and all the cattle and all the earth and all the creeping things that creep upon the earth." 29 And God said, "See, I have given to you all sowable herbage, propagating seed that is atop the whole earth, and every tree that has in itself fruit of sowable seed—you shall have it^a for food, 30 and to all the wild animals of the earth and to all the birds of the sky and to every creeping thing that creeps on the earth that has in itself the animating force of life, even all green herbage for food." And it became so. 31 And God saw all the things that he had made, and see, they were exceedingly good. And it came to be evening, and it came to be morning, a sixth day.

2 And the heaven and the earth were finished, and all their arrangement. 2 And on the sixth day God finished his works that he had made, and he left off on the seventh day from all his works that he had made. 3 And God blessed the seventh day and hallowed it, because on it he left off from all his works that God had begun to make.

4 This is the book of the origin of heaven and earth, when it originated, on the day that God made the heaven and the earth 5 and all verdure of the field before it came to be upon the earth and all herbage of the field before it sprang up, for God had not sent rain upon the earth, and there was not a human to till the earth, 6 yet a spring would rise from the earth and water the whole face of the earth. 7 And God formed man, dust from the earth, and breathed into his face a breath of life, and the man became a living being. 8 And the Lord God planted an orchard in Edem toward the east, and there he put the man whom he had formed. 9 And out of the earth God furthermore made to grow every tree that is beautiful to the sight and good for food, the tree of life also in the orchard's midst and the tree for knowing what is knowable of good and evil.

10 Now a river goes out of Edem to water the orchard; from there it divides into four sources. 11 The name of the one is Phison; it is the one that encircles the whole land of Heuilat, there where the gold is; 12 now the gold of that land is good, and carbuncle and light green stone are there. 13 And the second river's name is Geon; it is the one that encircles the whole land of Ethiopia. 14 And the third river is the Tigris; it is the one that goes over against the Assyrians. As for the fourth river, it is the Euphrates.

15 And the Lord God took the man whom he had formed and put him in the orchard to till and keep it. 16 And the Lord God commanded Adam, saying, "You shall eat for food of every tree that is in the orchard, 17 but of the tree for knowing good and evil, of it you shall not eat; on the day that you eat of it, you shall die by death."

18 Then the Lord God said, "It is not good that the man is alone; let us make him a helper corresponding to him." 19 And out of the earth God furthermore formed all the animals of the field and all the birds of the sky and brought them to Adam to see what he would call them, and anything, whatever Adam called it as living creature, this was its name. 20 And Adam gave names to all the cattle and to all the birds of the sky and to all the animals of the field, but for Adam there was not found a helper like him. 21 And God cast a trance upon Adam, and he slept, and he took one of his ribs and filled up flesh in its place. 22 And the rib that he had taken from Adam the Lord God fashioned into a woman and brought her to Adam. 23 And Adam said,

"This now is bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh; this one shall be called Woman, for out of her husband she was taken."

24 Therefore a man will leave his father and mother and will be joined to his wife, and the two will become one flesh.

3 (2.25) And the two were naked, both Adam and his wife, and were not ashamed.

(3.1) Now the snake was the most sagacious of all the wild animals that were upon the earth, which^b the Lord God had made. And the snake said to the woman, "Why is it that God said, 'You shall not eat from any tree that is in the orchard?'" 2 And the woman said to the snake, "We shall eat of the fruit of the tree of the orchard, 3 but of the fruit of the tree that is in the middle of the orchard, God said, 'You shall not eat of it nor shall you even touch it, lest you die.'" 4 And the snake said to the woman, "You will not die by death, 5 for God knew that on the day you eat of it, your eyes would be opened, and you would be like gods knowing good and evil." 6 And the woman saw that the tree was good for food and that it was pleasing for the eyes to look at and it was beautiful to contemplate, and when she had taken of its fruit she ate, and she also gave some to her husband with her, and they ate. 7 And the eyes of the two were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig leaves together and made loin cloths for themselves.

8 And they heard the sound of the Lord God walking about in the orchard in the evening, and both Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God in the midst of the timber of the orchard. 9 And the Lord God called Adam and said to him, "Adam, where are you?" 10 And he said to him, "I heard the sound of you walking about in the orchard, and I was afraid, because I am naked, and I hid myself." 11 And he said to him, "Who told you that you are naked, unless you have eaten from the tree of which I commanded you, of this one alone, not to eat from it?" 12 And Adam said, "The woman, whom you gave to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I ate." 13 And God said to the woman, "What is this you have done?" And the woman said, "The snake tricked me, and I ate." ¹⁴And the Lord God said to the snake,

"Because you have done this, cursed are you from all the domestic animals and from all the wild animals of the earth;
 upon your chest and belly you shall go,
 and earth you shall eat
 all the days of your life.

¹⁵ And I will put enmity between you and between the woman and between your offspring and between her offspring;
 he will watch your head, and you will watch his heel."

¹⁶And to the woman he said,
 "I will increasingly increase your pains and your groaning;
 with pains you will bring forth children.
 And your recourse^a will be to your husband, and he will dominate you."

¹⁷Then to Adam he said,
 "Because you have listened to the voice of your wife and have eaten from the tree of which I commanded you,
 of this one alone, not to eat from it, cursed is the earth in your labors;
 with pains you will eat it all the days of your life;

¹⁸ thorns and thistles it shall cause to grow up for you, and you will eat the herbage of the field.

¹⁹ By the sweat of your face you will eat your bread until you return to the earth from which you were taken, for you are earth and to earth you will depart."

²⁰ And Adam called the name of his wife Life, because she is the mother of all the living. ²¹And the Lord God made leather tunics for Adam and for his wife and clothed them.

²² Then God said, "See, Adam has become like one of us, knowing good and evil, and now perhaps he might reach out his hand and take of the tree of life and eat, and he will live forever." ²³And the Lord God sent him forth from the orchard of delight to till the earth from which he was taken. ²⁴And he drove Adam out and caused him to dwell opposite the orchard of delight, and he stationed the cheroubim and the flaming sword that turns, to guard the way of the tree of life.

4 Now Adam knew his wife Heua, and after she had conceived she bore Kain and said, "I have acquired a man through God." ²And she proceeded to bear his brother Habel. And Habel became a herder of sheep, but Kain was tilling the earth. ³And it came about after some days that Kain brought to the Lord an offering of the fruits of the earth, ⁴and Habel, he also brought of the firstlings of his sheep and of their fat portions. And God looked upon Habel and upon his gifts, ⁵but on Kain and on his offerings he was not intent. And it distressed Kain exceedingly, and he collapsed in countenance. ⁶And the Lord God said to Kain, "Why have you become deeply grieved, and why has your countenance collapsed? ⁷If you offer correctly but do not divide correctly, have you not sinned? Be still; his^b recourse^a is to you, and you will^c rule over him^d."

⁸ And Kain said to his brother Habel, "Let us go through into the plain." And it came about when they were in the plain, that then Kain rose up against his brother Habel and killed him. ⁹And God said to Kain, "Where is your brother Habel?" And he said, "I do not know; surely I am not my brother's keeper?" ¹⁰And God said, "What have you done? The voice of your brother's blood is crying out to me from the earth! ¹¹And now you are cursed from the earth, which has opened wide its mouth to receive your brother's blood from your hand. ¹²For you will till the earth, and it will not continue to yield its strength to you; you will be groaning and trembling on the earth." ¹³And Kain said to the Lord, "My guilt is too great for me to be forgiven! ¹⁴If today you are driving me out from off the earth and I shall be hidden from your face, then I shall be groaning and trembling on the earth, and it will be that anyone who finds me will kill me." ¹⁵And the Lord God said to him, "Not so! Anyone who kills Kain will let loose seven acts of vengeance." And the Lord God allocated a sign to Kain so that no one who found him would do away with him. ¹⁶Then Kain went away from the presence of God and lived in the land of Naid over against Edem.

¹⁷ And Kain knew his wife, and after she had conceived she bore Henoah, and he was building a city and named the city after the name of his son Henoah. ¹⁸Then to Henoah was born Gaidad, and Gaidad was the father of Maiel, and Maiel the father of Mathousala, and Mathousala the father of Lamech. ¹⁹And Lamech took for himself two wives; the name of the one was Ada, and the name of the second was Sella. ²⁰And Ada bore Iobel; he was the ancestor of cattle-raisers living in tents. ²¹And his brother's name was Ioubal; he was the one who introduced the harp and lyre. ²²As for Sella, she also bore Thobel, and he was a smith, a forger of bronze and iron, and the sister of Thobel was Noema.

²³ Now Lamech said to his own wives:

"Ada and Sella, hear my voice;
 you wives of Lamech, listen to my words, because I have killed a man for a wound to me,

²⁴ and^e a young man for a welt to me, because seven times vengeance has been exacted by Kain, but by Lamech seventy times seven."

²⁵ Now Adam knew his wife Heua, and after she had conceived she bore a son and named his name Seth, saying, "For God has raised up for me another offspring instead of Habel, whom Cain killed." ²⁶And to Seth a son was born, and he named his name Enos. He hoped to invoke the name of the Lord God.

5 This is the book of the origin of human beings. On the day that God made Adam, he made him according to divine image; ²male and female he made them, and he blessed them. And he named their name "Adam" on the day that he made them.

³ Now Adam lived two hundred thirty years and became a father, according to his form and according to his image and named his name Seth. ⁴And the days of Adam after he became the father of Seth amounted to seven hundred years, and he had sons and daughters. ⁵And all the days of Adam, that he lived, amounted to nine hundred thirty years, and he died.

⁶ Now Seth lived two hundred five years and became the father of Enos. ⁷And Seth lived after he became the father of Enos seven hundred seven years and had sons and daughters. ⁸And all the days of Seth amounted to nine hundred twelve years, and he died.

⁹ And Enos lived one hundred ninety years and became the father of Kainan. ¹⁰And Enos lived after he became the father of Kainan seven hundred fifteen years and had sons and daughters. ¹¹And all the days of Enos amounted to nine hundred five years, and he died.

¹² And Kainan lived one hundred seventy years and became the father of Maleleel. ¹³And Kainan lived after he became the father of Maleleel seven hundred forty years and had sons and daughters. ¹⁴And all the days of Kainan amounted to nine hundred ten years, and he died.

¹⁵ And Maleleel lived one hundred sixty-five years and became the father of Jared. ¹⁶And Maleleel lived after he became the father of Jared seven hundred thirty years and had sons and daughters. ¹⁷And all the days of Maleleel amounted to eight hundred ninety-five years, and he died.

¹⁸ And Jared lived one hundred sixty-two years and became the father of Henoch. ¹⁹And Jared lived after he became the father of Henoch eight hundred years and had sons and daughters. ²⁰And all the days of Jared amounted to nine hundred sixty-two years, and he died.

²¹ And Henoch lived one hundred sixty-five years and became the father of Mathousala. ²²Now Henoch was well pleasing to God after he became the father of Mathousala, for two hundred years, and had sons and daughters. ²³And all the days of Henoch amounted to three hundred sixty-five years. ²⁴And Henoch was well pleasing to God, and he was not found, because God transferred him.

²⁵ And Mathousala lived one hundred sixty-seven years and became the father of Lamech. ²⁶And Mathousala lived after he became the father of Lamech eight hundred two years and had sons and daughters. ²⁷And all the days of Mathousala, which he lived, amounted to nine hundred sixty-nine years, and he died.

²⁸ And Lamech lived one hundred eighty-eight years and became the father of a son ²⁹and named his name Noe, saying, "This one shall give us respite from our labors and from the pains of our hands and from the earth that the Lord God has cursed." ³⁰And Lamech lived after he became the father of Noe five hundred sixty-five years and had sons and daughters. ³¹And all the days of Lamech amounted to seven hundred fifty-three years, and he died.

6 ^(5.32)And Noe was five hundred years of age, and Noe became the father of three sons: Sem, Cham, Iapheth.

(6.1) And it came about when humans began to become numerous on the earth, that daughters also were born to them. ²Now when the sons of God saw the daughters of humans, that they were fair, they took wives for themselves of all that they chose. ³And the Lord God said, "My spirit shall not abide in these humans forever, because they are flesh, but their days shall be one hundred twenty years." ⁴Now the giants were on the earth in those days and afterward. When the sons of God used to go in to the daughters of humans, then they produced offspring for themselves. Those were the giants that were of old, the renowned humans.

⁵ And when the Lord God saw that the wicked deeds of humans were multiplied on the earth and that^a all think attentively in their hearts on evil things all the days, ⁶then God considered that he had made humankind on the earth, and he thought it over. ⁷And God said, "I will wipe out from off the earth humankind which I have made, from human to domestic animal and from creeping things to birds of the sky, for I have become angry that I have made them." ⁸Yet Noe found favor before the Lord God.

¹¹ Now the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was full of wrongdoing. ¹²And the Lord God saw the earth, and it was ruined, for all flesh had ruined his way upon the earth. ¹³And God said to Noe, "The time of all humankind has come before me, for the earth has become full of wrongdoing by reason of them, and see, I am going to ruin them and the earth. ¹⁴Therefore make yourself an ark of squared lumber; you shall make the ark with nests and shall bituminize it within and without with bitumen. ¹⁵And thus you shall make the ark: the length of the ark three hundred cubits and the width fifty cubits and its height thirty cubits. ¹⁶You shall make the ark, bringing it together, and shall finish it to a cubit above, and the door you shall make in the side; you shall make it with ground floor, second story and third story chambers. ¹⁷And for my part, look, I am going to bring the flood, water on the earth, to destroy under heaven all flesh in which is a spirit of life, and as many as there are on the earth shall perish. ¹⁸And I will establish my covenant with you, and you shall come into the ark, you and your sons and your wife and your sons' wives together with you. ¹⁹And of all the domestic animals and of all the creeping things and of all the wild animals and of all flesh, you shall bring some of them all two by two into the ark in order to sustain them together with yourself; they shall be male and female. ²⁰Of all the winged birds according to kind and of all the domestic animals according to kind and of all the creeping things that creep upon the ground according to their kind, two by two some of them all shall come in to you, to be sustained together with you, male and female. ²¹And you shall take for yourself some of all the provisions, which you will eat, and shall gather them to yourself, and they shall be for you and for them to eat." ²²And Noe did all things that the Lord God commanded him; so he did.

7 And the Lord God said to Noe, "Go into the ark, you and all your household, for I have seen you as righteous before me in this generation. ²And bring in to you seven by seven some of the clean domestic animals, male and female, but two by two some of the domestic animals that are not clean, male and female, ³and seven by seven some of the clean birds of the sky, male and female, and two by two some of the birds that are not clean, male and female, to sustain offspring upon all the earth. ⁴For within seven more days I am going to bring rain on the earth for forty days and forty nights, and every thing that rises up, which I have made, I will wipe out from the face of the earth." ⁵And Noe did all that the Lord God had commanded him.

¹¹ In the six hundredth year in Noe's life, the second month, on the twenty-seventh of the month, on this day all the fountains of the abyss burst forth, and the cataracts of heaven were opened, ¹²and the rain came on the earth for forty days and forty nights. ¹³On this day Noe, Sem, Cham, Iapheth, Noe's sons, and Noe's wife and the three wives of his sons with him, entered into the ark. ¹⁴And all the wild animals according to kind and all the domestic animals according to kind and every creeping thing that moves on the earth according to kind and every bird according to kind ¹⁵entered into the ark to Noe, two by two of all flesh in which there is a spirit of life. ¹⁶And those that were coming in, male and female of all flesh, entered as God had commanded Noe. And the Lord God closed the ark apart from him^a.

¹⁷ And the flood came for forty days and forty nights on the earth, and the water increased and bore up the ark, and it was raised up from the earth. ¹⁸And the water was prevailing and increasing greatly on the earth, and the ark was being carried along over the water. ¹⁹So the water was prevailing very greatly on the earth, and it covered all the high mountains that were under heaven; ²⁰the water was raised up fifteen cubits above, and it covered all the high mountains. ²¹And all flesh that moves on the earth—of birds and of domestic animals and of wild animals—died, and every creeping thing that moves on the earth and every human being. ²²And all things that have a breath of life, and everyone who was on the dry land, died. ²³And he wiped out every thing that rises, which was on the face of the whole earth, from human being to domestic animal and creeping things and the birds of the sky, and they were wiped out from the earth. And only Noe was left, and those with him in the ark. ²⁴And the water was raised up on the earth one hundred fifty days.

8 And God remembered Noe and all the wild animals and all the domestic animals and all the birds and all the creeping things that were with him in the ark, and God brought a wind upon the earth, and the water subsided, ²and the fountains of the abyss and the cataracts of heaven were covered over, and the rain from heaven was restrained. ³And the water, as it was proceeding from the earth, was giving way; after fifty and one hundred days the water was giving way and diminishing. ⁴And in the seventh month, on the twenty-seventh of the month, the ark settled on the mountains of Ararat. ⁵Now the water, as it was proceeding, was diminishing until the tenth month; then in the eleventh month, on the first of the month, the tops of the mountains appeared.

⁶ And it came about after forty days that Noe opened the window of the ark that he had made ⁷and sent out the raven to see if the water had subsided, and after it had gone out it did not return until the water was dried up from the earth. ⁸And he sent out the dove after it to see if the water had subsided from the face of the earth. ⁹And the dove, because it could not find a resting place for its feet, returned to him into the ark, for water was on the whole face of the whole earth, and extending his hand he took it and brought it into the ark to himself. ¹⁰And when he had waited yet another seven days, again he sent forth the dove from the ark, ¹¹and the dove went back to him toward evening, and it had an olive leaf, a dry twig, in its mouth, and Noe knew that the water had subsided from the earth. ¹²And when he had waited yet another seven days, again he sent forth the dove, and it did not continue to turn back to him any more.

¹³ And it came about in the six hundred first year in the life of Noe, the first month, on the first of the month, that the water disappeared from the earth, and Noe uncovered the roof of the ark that he had made, and he saw that the water had disappeared from the face of the earth. ¹⁴Then in the second month, on the twenty-seventh of the month, the earth was dry. ¹⁵And the Lord God spoke to Noe, saying, ¹⁶“Go out of the ark, you and your wife and your sons and your sons’ wives with you, ¹⁷and bring out with yourself all the wild animals that are with you, and all flesh from birds to domestic animals and every creeping thing that moves on the earth, and increase, and multiply on the earth.” ¹⁸And Noe went out, and his wife and his sons and his sons’ wives with him, ¹⁹and all the wild animals and all the domestic animals and every bird and every creeping thing that moves on the earth went out of the ark according to their kind.

20 And Noe built an altar to God and took of all the clean domestic animals and of all the clean birds and offered whole burnt offerings on the altar. ²¹And the Lord God smelled an odor of fragrance, and the Lord God, when he had given it thought, said, “I will not proceed hereafter to curse the earth because of the deeds of humans, for the mind of humankind applies itself attentively to evil things from youth; so I will not proceed hereafter to smite all living flesh, as I have done.

9 And God blessed Noe and his sons and said to them, “Increase, and multiply, and fill the earth, and subdue it. ²And the trembling and fear of you shall be on all the animals of the earth and on all the birds of the sky and on all the things that move on the earth and on all the fish of the sea; I have given them under authority to you. ³And every creeping thing that is alive you shall have for food; like the pasture land herbs, I have given you all things. ⁴Only you shall not eat meat with the blood of life. ⁵For truly, your blood of your lives I will seek out: from the hand of all the animals I will seek it out, and from the hand of a fellow human I will seek out the life of the human.

⁷But you, increase, and multiply, and fill the earth, and multiply on it.”

8 And God spoke to Noe and to his sons with him, saying, ⁹“As for me, see, I am instituting my covenant for you and your offspring after you ¹⁰and for every creature that lives with you, from birds and from domestic animals, and for all the animals of the earth, from all those that came out of the ark. ¹¹And I will establish my covenant with you, and no more shall all flesh die by the water of the flood, and no more shall there be a flood of water to destroy all the earth.” ¹²And the Lord God said to Noe, “This is the sign of the covenant, which^b I give, between me and you and between every living creature that is with you, for everlasting generations: ¹³I set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a covenant sign between me and the earth. ¹⁴And it shall be that when I gather clouds over the earth, my bow shall be seen in the cloud, ¹⁵and I will remember my covenant that is between me and you and between every living creature among all flesh, and the water shall no more become a flood so as to wipe out all flesh. ¹⁶And the bow shall be in the cloud, and I will see it to remember the everlasting covenant between me and between every living creature among all flesh that is on the earth.” ¹⁷And God said to Noe, “This is the sign of the covenant that I have made between me and between all flesh that is on the earth.”

18 Now the sons of Noe who went out of the ark were Sem, Cham, Iapheth; Cham was the father of Chanaan. ¹⁹These three are the sons of Noe; from these they^c were scattered abroad over the whole earth.

20 And Noe was the first soil-tilling person, and he planted a vineyard. ²¹And he drank some of the wine and became drunk, and he was stripped naked in his house. ²²And Cham, the father of Chanaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and after he had gone out he told his two brothers outside. ²³And Sem and Iapheth, when they had taken the garment, laid it on their two backs and walked backward and covered the nakedness of their father, and their face was looking backward, and they did not see their father’s nakedness. ²⁴Then Noe sobered up from the wine, and he knew what his younger son had done to him, ²⁵and he said,

²⁶He also said, “Blessed be the Lord, the God of Sem, and Chanaan shall be his slave.

²⁷ May God make space for Iapheth, and let him live in the houses of Sem, and let Chanaan become their slave.”

28 Now after the flood Noe lived three hundred fifty years. ²⁹And all the days of Noe amounted to nine hundred fifty years, and he died.

10 Now these are the generations of Noe’s sons, Sem, Cham, Iapheth, and sons were born to them after the flood.

2 The sons of Iapheth: Gamer and Magog and Madai and Ioyan and Elisa and Thobel and Mosoch and Thiras. ³And the sons of Gamer: Aschanaz and Riphath and Thorgama. ⁴And the sons of Ioyan: Elisa and Tharsis, Kitians, Rhodians. ⁵From these the islands of the nations were separated in their land, each according to language, in their tribes and in their nations.

6 And the sons of Cham: Chous and Mesraim, Phoud and Chanaan. ⁷And the sons of Chous: Saba

and Heuila and Sabatha and Regma and Sabakatha. And the sons of Regma: Saba and Dadan. ⁸Now Chous became the father of Nebrod. He was the first on earth to be a giant. ⁹He was a giant hunter before the Lord God; therefore they will say, "Like Nebrod a giant hunter before the Lord." ¹⁰And the beginning of his kingdom came to be Babylon, Orech and Archad and Chalanne in the land of Sennaar. ¹¹From that land he went forth to Assour and built Nineue and Rooboth-city and Kalach, ¹²and Dase between Nineue and between Kalach; this is the great city. ¹³And Mesraim became the father of the Loudieim and the Enemetieim and the Labieim and the Nephthalieim ¹⁴and the Patrosonieim and the Chaslonieim, there where Phylistieim came from, and the Kaphthorieim.

¹⁵ Now Chanaan became the father of Sidon as his firstborn and the Chettite ¹⁶and the Iebousite and the Amorrute and the Gergesite ¹⁷and the Heuite and the Aroukite and the Hasen-nite ¹⁸and the Aradian and the Samarite and Hamathi. And afterward the tribes of the Chananites were scattered abroad. ¹⁹And the boundaries of the Chananites extended from Sidon until one came to Gerara and Gaza, until one came as far as Sodoma and Gomorra, Adama and Seboim, as far as Lasa. ²⁰These are the sons of Cham, in their tribes, according to their languages, in their countries and in their nations.

²¹ And to Sem, also to him as father of all the sons of Eber, brother of Iapheth the Greater, there was procreation. ²²The sons of Sem: Ailam and Assour and Arphaxad and Loud and Aram and Kainan. ²³And the sons of Aram: Os and Houll and Gather and Mosoch. ²⁴And Arphaxad became the father of Kainan, and Kainan became the father of Sala; then Sala became the father of Eber. ²⁵And to Eber were born two sons: the name of the one was Phalek, for in his days the earth was divided, and his brother's name was Iektan. ²⁶Now Iektan became the father of Elmodad and Saleph and Hasarmoth and Iarach ²⁷and Hodorra and Aizel and Dekla ²⁸and Abimeel and Sabeu ²⁹and Ouphir and Heuila and Iobab. All these were the sons of Iektan. ³⁰And their abode extended from Masse until one came to Sophera, a mountain of the east. ³¹These are the sons of Sem, in their tribes, according to their languages, in their countries and in their nations.

11 And the whole earth was one lip, and there was one speech for all. ²And it came about as they moved from the east that they found a plain in the land of Sennaar and settled there. ³And one person said to the next, "Come, let us make bricks and bake them with fire." And the brick became stone for them, and the clay for them was bitumen. ⁴And they said, "Come, let us build ourselves a city and a tower whose top shall be as far as heaven, and let us make a name for ourselves before we are scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth." ⁵And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the sons of men had built. ⁶And the Lord said, "Look, one race and one lip of all, and this they have begun to do, and nothing that they undertake to do will now be wanting from them. ⁷Come, and let us go down, and confuse their tongue there so that they will not hear, each one the speech of the next." ⁸And the Lord scattered them abroad from there over the face of all the earth, and they left off building the city and the tower. ⁹Therefore its name was called Confusion, because there the Lord confused the lips of all the earth, and from there the Lord God scattered them abroad over the face of all the earth.

¹⁰ And these are the generations of Sem: Sem was a son of one hundred years when he became the father of Arphaxad, in the second year after the flood. ¹¹And Sem lived after he became the father of Arphaxad five hundred years and had sons and daughters and died.

¹² And Arphaxad lived one hundred thirty-five years and became the father of Kainan. ¹³And Arphaxad lived after he became the father of Kainan four hundred thirty years and had sons and daughters and died.

And Kainan lived one hundred thirty years and became the father of Sala. And Kainan lived after he became the father of Sala three hundred thirty years and had sons and daughters and died.

¹⁴ And Sala lived one hundred thirty years and became the father of Eber. ¹⁵And Sala lived after he became the father of Eber three hundred thirty years and had sons and daughters and died.

¹⁶ And Eber lived one hundred thirty-four years and became the father of Phalek. ¹⁷And Eber lived after he became the father of Phalek three hundred seventy years and had sons and daughters and died.

¹⁸ And Phalek lived one hundred thirty years and became the father of Ragau. ¹⁹And Phalek lived after he became the father of Ragau two hundred nine years and had sons and daughters and died.

²⁰ And Ragau lived one hundred thirty-two years and became the father of Serouch. ²¹And Ragau lived after he became the father of Serouch two hundred seven years and had sons and daughters and died.

²² And Serouch lived one hundred thirty years and became the father of Nachor. ²³And Serouch lived after he became the father of Nachor two hundred years and had sons and daughters and died.

²⁴ And Nachor lived seventy-nine years and became the father of Thara. ²⁵And Nachor lived after he became the father of Thara one hundred twenty-nine years and had sons and daughters and died.

²⁶ And Thara lived seventy years and became the father of Abram and Nachor and Harran.

²⁷ These then are the generations of Thara: Thara was the father of Abram and Nachor and Harran, and Harran was the father of Lot. ²⁸And Harran died before his father Thara in the land in which he was born, in the country of the Chal-deans. ²⁹And Abram and Nachor took wives for themselves; Abram's wife's name was Sara, and Nachor's wife's name was Melcha, the daughter of Harran, the father of Melcha and the father of Iescha. ³⁰And Sara was barren, and she was not bearing children.

³¹ And Thara took his son Abram and his son's son, Lot son of Harran, and his daughter-in-law Sara, his son Abram's wife, and he brought them out of the country of the Chaldeans to go into the land of Chanaan, and he came as far as Charran and settled there. ³²And the days of Thara in Charran amounted to two hundred five years, and Thara died in Charran.

12 And the Lord said to Abram, "Go forth from your country and from your kindred and from your father's house to the land that I will show you. ²And I will make you into a great nation, and I will bless you and make your name great, and you shall be one blessed. ³And I will bless those who bless you, and those who curse you I will curse, and in you all the tribes of the earth shall be blessed."

⁴ And Abram went, as the Lord had told him to, and Lot left with him. Now Abram was seventy-five years of age when he departed from Charran. ⁵And Abram took his wife Sara and his brother's son Lot and all their possessions that they had acquired and every person whom they had acquired in Charran, and they departed to go to the land of Chanaan, and they came to the land of Chanaan. ⁶And Abram passed through the land in its length as far as the place Sychem, at the high oak. Now at that time the Chananites used to inhabit the land. ⁷And the Lord appeared to Abram and said to him, "To your offspring I will give this land." And Abram built there an altar to the Lord who had appeared to him. ⁸And from there he withdrew to the mountain to the east of Baithel and set up his tent there—Baithel towards the sea and Haggai to the east, and there he built an altar to the Lord and called on the name of the Lord. ⁹And Abram set out, and as he traveled he encamped in the wilderness.

¹⁰ And a famine occurred upon the land, and Abram went down to Egypt to reside there as an alien, for the famine prevailed upon the land. ¹¹And it came about when Abram drew near to enter into Egypt that Abram said to his wife Sara, "I do know that you are a woman beautiful in countenance; ¹²it will be, therefore, that should the Egyptians see you, they will say, 'This is his wife,' and they will kill me, but you they will keep for themselves. ¹³Say, therefore, 'I am his sister,' so that it may go well with me because of you, and my soul will live on your account." ¹⁴And it came about when Abram entered into Egypt—as the Egyptians saw the woman, that she was very beautiful—¹⁵that then the rulers of Pharao saw her and praised her to Pharao and brought her into Pharao's house. ¹⁶And for her sake they dealt well with Abram, and he had sheep and calves and donkeys, male and female slaves, mules and camels.

¹⁷ And God tried Pharao and his house with great and grievous trials because of Sara, Abram's wife. ¹⁸Now when Pharao had called Abram he said, "What is this you have done to me, that you did not tell me that she is your wife? ¹⁹Why did you say, 'She is my sister'? And I took her to myself for a wife. And now here is your wife before you; take her; hurry off." ²⁰And Pharao commanded men concerning Abram to join in escorting him and his wife and all that he had and Lot with him.

13 Then Abram went up from Egypt, he and his wife and all that was his and Lot with him, into the wilderness.

² Now Abram was very rich in livestock and in silver and in gold. ³And he journeyed whence he had come into the wilderness as far as Baithel, to the place where formerly his tent had been, between Baithel and between Haggai, ⁴to the place of the altar that he had made there at first, and there Abram invoked the name of the Lord. ⁵And Lot, who was journeying together with Abram, had sheep and cattle and tents. ⁶And the land did not have room for them to live together, for their possessions were many, and they could not live together. ⁷And strife occurred between the herders of Abram's livestock and between the herders of Lot's livestock. Now at that time the Chananites and the Pherezites used to inhabit the land.

⁸ So then Abram said to Lot, "Let there not be strife between you and me and between your herders and my herders, for we are kindred. ⁹See, is not the whole land before you? Separate yourself from me. If you go^a to the left, I will go^a to the right, but if you go^a to the right, I will go^a to the left." ¹⁰And Lot, lifting up his eyes, saw all the region round about the Jordan, that all was watered—before God had overthrown Sodoma and Gomorra—like the orchard of God and like the land of Egypt until one came to Zogora. ¹¹And Lot chose for himself all the region round about the Jordan, and Lot set out from the east, and they separated, each one from his kinsman. ¹²So then Abram settled in the land of Chanaan, but Lot settled in a city of the regions^b round about and tented in Sodoma. ¹³Now the people who were in Sodoma were wicked and exceedingly sinful before God.

¹⁴ And God said to Abram after Lot had separated from him, "Look up with your eyes; look from the place where you are now, toward the north and southwest and east and sea. ¹⁵For all the land that you see, I will give it to you and to your offspring forever. ¹⁶And I will make your offspring like the sand of the earth; if anyone can count the sand of the earth, your offspring also shall be counted. ¹⁷Rise up, pass through the land, both in the length of it and in the breadth, for I will give it to you." ¹⁸And moving his tent, Abram came and settled by the oak of Mambre, which was in Chebron, and there he built an altar to the Lord.

¹³ And one of those who had been rescued, when he arrived, told Abram the emigrant. Now he, Amoris, used to live near the oak of Mambre, the brother of Eschol and brother of Aunan, who were confederates of Abram. ¹⁴And when Abram heard that his kinsman Lot had been taken captive, he counted his own homebreds, three hundred eighteen, and chased after them as far as Dan. ¹⁵And he fell upon them during the night, he and his servants, and smote them and chased them away to Choba, which is on the left of Damascus. ¹⁶Then he brought back all the cavalry of Sodoma, and he brought back his kinsman Lot and his possessions and the women and the people.

¹⁷ Now after he had returned from the slaughter of Chodollogomor and the kings who were with him, the king of Sodoma went out to meet him at the valley of Saue (this was the plain of a king). ¹⁸And Melchisedek king of Salem brought out bread loaves and wine; now he was priest of God Most High. ¹⁹And he blessed Abram and said,

"Blessed be Abram to God Most High, who created the heaven and the earth,

²⁰ and blessed be God Most High, who has delivered up your enemies as subjects to you!"

And he^b gave him one tenth of everything. ²¹Then

the king of Sodoma said to Abram, "Give me the men, but take the cavalry for yourself." ²²But Abram said to the king of Sodoma, "I will extend my hand to God Most High, who created the heaven and the earth: ²³if I shall take from a small cord to a sandal-thong of all the things that are yours—lest you say, 'I have made Abram rich,' ²⁴except the things that the young men have eaten and the share of the men who went along with me—Eschol, Aunan, Mambre—these shall take a share."

15 Now after these matters the Lord's word came to Abram in a vision, saying, "Do not be afraid, Abram; I am shielding you; your reward shall be very great." ²But Abram was saying, "O Master, what will you give me? And I, I am going away childless; as for the son of Masek, my female homebred, he is Damascus Eliezer." ³And Abram said, "Since you have given me no offspring, my male homebred will be my heir." ⁴And immediately a divine voice came to him, saying, "This one shall not be your heir, but one who shall come out of you, he shall be your heir." ⁵Then he brought him outside and said to him, "Look up to heaven, and number the stars, if you will be able to count them." And he said, "So shall your offspring be." ⁶And Abram believed God, and it was reckoned to him as righteousness.

⁷ Then he said to him, "I am the God who brought you out of the country of the Chaldeans so as to give you this land to possess." ⁸But he said, "O Master, Lord, how shall I know that I shall possess it?" ⁹And he said to him, "Take for me a heifer three years old and a female goat three years old and a ram three years old and a turtledove and a dove." ¹⁰And he took for him all these and divided them in the middle and placed them facing one another, but he did not divide the birds. ¹¹And birds came down on the carcasses, their cut halves, and Abram sat together with them.

¹² Then about sunset a trance fell upon Abram, and look, a great dark fear was falling upon him. ¹³And it was said to Abram, "Knowledgeably you shall know that your offspring shall be alien in a land not its own, and they^c shall enslave them and maltreat them and humble them for four hundred years. ¹⁴But I will judge the nation that they are subject to; then afterward they shall come out here with much baggage. ¹⁵Now as for yourself, you shall depart to your fathers in peace, buried in a good old age. ¹⁶Then in the fourth generation they shall be brought back here, for the sins of the Amorrites are not yet, to the present, filled up."

¹⁷ Now after the sun began to appear in the west, a flame appeared, and look, a smoking oven and torches of fire that passed through between these cut halves. ¹⁸On that day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, "To your offspring I will give this land from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates: ¹⁹the Kenites and the Kenezites and the Kedmonites ²⁰and the Chetites and the Pherezites and the Rhapsain ²¹and the Amorrites and the Chananites and the Heuites and the Gergesites and the Iebousites."

16 Now Sara, Abram's wife, was not giving birth for him. She, however, had an Egyptian slave-girl whose name was Hagar. ²And Sara said to Abram, "See, the Lord has shut me off from giving birth; so go in to my slave-girl in order that you may beget children by her." And Abram listened to the voice of Sara. ³And after ten years of Abram's living in the land of Chanaan, Sara, Abram's wife, took Hagar the Egyptian, her own slave-girl, and gave her to her husband Abram as a wife for him. ⁴And he went in to Hagar, and she conceived. And she saw that she was pregnant, and her mistress was dishonored before her. ⁵Then Sara said to Abram, "I am being wronged due to you! I have given my slave-girl into your bosom, but when she saw that she was pregnant, I was dishonored before her. May God judge between you and me!" ⁶But Abram said to Sara, "See, your slave-girl is in your hands; treat her as it may please you." And Sara maltreated her, and she ran from her presence.

⁷ But the Lord God's angel found her by the spring of water in the wilderness, by the spring on the way to Sour. ⁸And the angel of the Lord said to her, "Hagar, slave-girl of Sara, where are you coming from, and where are you going?" And she said, "I am running from the presence of my mistress Sara." ⁹But the angel of the Lord said to her, "Return to your mistress, and humble yourself under her hands." ¹⁰The angel of the Lord also said to her, "I will multitudinously multiply your offspring, and it will not be counted for multitude." ¹¹And the angel of the Lord said to her,

"See, you are pregnant and shall bear a son and shall call his name Ismael.

For the Lord has given heed to your humiliation.

¹² He shall be a rustic man; his hands ^ashall be ^aagainst all, and the hands of all against him, and he shall live facing all his kinfolk."

¹³And Hagar called the name of the Lord who was speaking to her, "You-are-the-God-who-looks-upon-me," because she said, "For truly I saw him face to face when he appeared to me." ¹⁴Therefore she called the well, "Well-of-the-one-whom-I-saw-face-to-face"; see, ^ait is ^a between Kades and between Barad.

17 Now Abram came to be ninety-nine years of age, and the Lord appeared to Abram and said to him, "I am your God; be well pleasing before me, and become blameless, ²and I will set my covenant between me and between you and will make you very numerous." ³And Abram fell ^bface down^b, and God spoke to him, saying, ⁴"And as for me, see, my covenant is with you, and you shall be an ancestor of a multitude of nations. ⁵And no longer shall your name be called Abram, but your name shall be Abraam, for I have made you an ancestor of many nations. ⁶And I will increase you very, very much, and I will make you into nations, and kings shall come from you. ⁷And I will establish my covenant between me and between you and between your offspring after you throughout their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be your god and your offspring's after you. ⁸And I will give to you and to your offspring after you the land that you inhabit as a resident alien, all the land of Chanaan, for a perpetual holding, and I will be a god to them."

⁹ And God said to Abraam, "Now as for you, you shall keep my covenant, you and your offspring after you throughout their generations. ¹⁰And this is the covenant, which you shall keep, between me and you and between your offspring after you throughout their generations: Every male of yours shall be circumcised, ¹¹and you shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskins, and it shall exist as a covenant sign between me and you. ¹²And a youngster of eight days shall be circumcised among you—every male—throughout your generations, the homebred of your household and the one bought with money from any son of a foreigner, who is not of your offspring. ¹³The homebred of your household and the one bought with money shall be circumcised with circumcision, and my covenant shall be on your flesh for an everlasting covenant. ¹⁴And as for an uncircumcised male who shall not be circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin on the eighth day, that soul shall be destroyed from his kin, for he has scattered my covenant."

¹⁵ And God said to Abraam, "As for Sara your wife, her name shall not be called Sara, but Sarra shall be her name. ¹⁶And I will bless her, and I will give you a child by her. And I will bless her, and she shall become nations, and kings of nations shall be from her." ¹⁷And Abraam fell face down and laughed and spoke in his mind, saying, "Shall a son be born to a hundred-year-old, and shall Sarra who is ninety years of age give birth?" ¹⁸And Abraam said to God, "As for Ismael, let him live before you!" ¹⁹But God said to Abraam, "Indeed; see, your wife Sarra shall bear you a son, and you shall call his name Isaak, and I will establish my covenant with him as an everlasting covenant and for his offspring after him. ²⁰Now concerning Ismael, see, I heard you; see, I have blessed him and will make him increase and will make him very numerous; he shall be the father of twelve nations, and I will appoint him as a great nation. ²¹But my covenant I will establish with Isaak, whom Sarra shall bear to you at this season in another year." ²²And he finished talking to him, and God went up from Abraam.

²³ And Abraam took his son Ismael and all his homebreds and all the ones bought with money and every male of the men that were in Abraam's house, and he circumcised their foreskins at the opportune time of that day, as God had said to him. ²⁴Now Abraam was ninety-nine years of age when he circumcised the flesh of his foreskin. ²⁵And his son Ismael was thirteen years of age when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin. ²⁶At the opportune time of that day Abraam and his son Ismael were circumcised, ²⁷and as for all the men of his house and the homebreds and the ones bought with money from alien nations, he circumcised them.

18 Now God appeared to him near the oak of Mambre, while he was sitting at the door of his tent at midday. ²And looking up with his eyes he saw, and see, three men stood over him. And when he saw them, he ran forward from his tent door to meet them and did obeisance upon the ground ³and said, "Lord, if perchance I have found favor before you, do not pass by your servant. ⁴Do let water be taken, and let them wash your feet, and you cool off under the tree. ⁵And I shall take bread, and you will eat, and after that you will pass by on your way—inasmuch as you have turned aside to your servant." And they said, "So do, as you have said." ⁶And Abraam hurried over to the tent to Sarra and said to her, "Hurry, and mix three measures of fine flour, and make loaves baked in ashes." ⁷And Abraam ran to the cows and took a little calf, tender and good, and gave it to the servant, and he hastened to prepare it. ⁸Then he took butter and milk and the little calf that he had prepared and set it before them, and they ate, and he stood by them under the tree.

⁹ And he said to him, "Where is your wife Sarra?" And he said in reply, "There, in the tent." ¹⁰And he said, "I will come to you, when I return, during this season next year, and Sarra your wife shall have a son." And Sarra, who was behind him, listened at the tent door. ¹¹Now Abraam and Sarra were old, advanced in days, and menstruation had ceased to happen to Sarra. ¹²And Sarra laughed within herself, saying, "It has not yet happened to me up to the present, and my lord is rather old." ¹³And the Lord said to Abraam, "Why is it that Sarra laughed within herself, saying, 'Shall I then indeed give birth? But I have grown old.' ¹⁴Can it be that a matter is impossible with God? In this season I will come back to you next year, and Sarra shall have a son." ¹⁵But Sarra denied, saying, "I did not laugh," for she was afraid. And he said, "No, but you did laugh."

¹⁶ And when the men had set out from there, they looked down upon the face of Sodoma and Gomorra, and Abraam was going along with them as he joined in escorting them. ¹⁷And the Lord said, "Surely I shall not hide from my servant Abraam what I am about to do? ¹⁸As for Abraam, he shall come to be a great and populous nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him. ¹⁹For I knew that he will instruct his sons and his household after him, and they will keep the ways of the Lord by doing righteousness and justice so that the Lord may bring upon Abraam all the things that he has talked about to him." ²⁰Then the Lord said, "The outcry concerning Sodoma and Gomorra has been increased, and their sins are very great! ²¹So when I go down I shall see whether they are perpetrating according to the outcry concerning them that is coming to me, but if not—that I may know."

²² And after the men had turned away from there, they went to Sodoma, but Abraam was still standing before the Lord. ²³Then when Abraam had come near, he said, "Surely you will not destroy the righteous with the ungodly, and the righteous will be as the ungodly? ²⁴If there should be fifty righteous in the city, will you destroy them? Will you not let the whole place go free on account of the fifty righteous, if they should be in it? ²⁵By no means will you do anything like this thing, to slay the righteous with the ungodly, and the righteous will be like the ungodly! By no means! Shall not you, the one who judges all the earth, do what is just?" ²⁶Then the Lord said, "If I find in Sodoma fifty righteous in the city, I will forgive the whole place for their sake." ²⁷And Abraam said in reply, "Now I have begun to speak to the Lord, though I am earth and ashes. ²⁸But if the fifty righteous should be diminished by five, will you destroy the whole city on account of the five?" And he said, "I will not destroy it, if I find forty-five there." ²⁹And he continued still to speak to him and said, "But if forty should be found there?" And he said, "On account of the forty I will not destroy it." ³⁰And he said, "Pardon, Lord, if I should speak. But if thirty should be found there?" And he said, "I will not destroy it, if I find thirty there." ³¹And he said, "Since I am compelled to speak to the Lord—and if twenty should be found there?" And he said, "On account of the twenty I will not destroy it." ³²And he said, "Pardon, Lord, if I should speak once more. But if ten should be found there?" And he said, "On account of the ten I will not destroy it." ³³Then the Lord went away, when he had left off speaking to Abraam, and Abraam returned to his place.

19 Now the two angels came to Sodoma at evening, and Lot was sitting beside the gate of Sodoma. And when Lot saw them he rose to meet them and did obeisance with his face upon the ground ²and said, "Here, lords, turn aside to your servant's house, and find lodging, and wash your feet, and when you have risen early you will depart on your way." They, however, said, "No, but we will find lodging in the street." ³And he kept constraining them, and they turned aside to him and entered into his dwelling. And he made them a feast and baked them unleavened loaves, and they ate ⁽⁴⁾before they lay down. ⁴And the men of the city, the Sodomites, from young man to elder, all the people together, encircled the dwelling, ⁵and they were summoning Lot and were saying to him, "Where are the men who came in to you tonight? Bring them out to us in order that we may have relations with them." ⁶And Lot went out to the doorway to them, but he shut the door after him. ⁷And he said to them, "By no means, brothers, do not act wickedly. ⁸Now I have two daughters who have not known a man. I shall bring them out to you, and use them as it may please you; only do not do anything unjust to these men, inasmuch as they have come in under the shelter of my beams.” ⁹But they said, “Stand away from there! As one, you came to reside as an alien. Surely not also to pass judgment? So now we will maltreat you rather than them.” And they were pressing the man Lot very hard and came near to smash the door. ¹⁰But the men, extending their hands, drew Lot into the house to themselves and shut the door of the house. ¹¹And they struck with blindness the men who were at the door of the house, from small to great, and they became exhausted searching for the door.

¹² Then the men said to Lot, “Have you anyone here, sons-in-law or sons or daughters? Or if you have anyone else in the city, bring that one out of this place. ¹³For we are about to destroy this place, because the outcry concerning them^a has been raised before the Lord, and the Lord has sent us to annihilate it^b.” ¹⁴Then Lot went out and spoke to his sons-in-law who had married his daughters and said, “Rise, and get out of this place, for the Lord is about to annihilate the city.” But he seemed before his sons-in-law to be jesting.

¹⁵ Now when dawn was breaking, the angels were urging Lot, saying, “Rise, take your wife and the two daughters whom you have, and get out, lest you also be destroyed together with the lawlessness of the city.” ¹⁶And they were confounded, and the angels seized his hand and his wife’s hand and his two daughters’ hands, as the Lord spared him. ¹⁷And it came about when they had brought them outside, that then they said, “In saving, save your own soul; do not look around backwards or stop in the whole region round about; get safely to the mountain, that you not be included.” ¹⁸But Lot said to them, “I pray, Lord, ¹⁹since your servant has found mercy before you and you have magnified your righteousness—which which you bring about with regard to me—to quicken my soul, but I shall not be able to proceed safely to the mountain, for fear the disasters overtake me and I die; ²⁰look, this city, which is small, is near enough for me to flee for refuge there; I shall escape there. Is it not small? And my soul will live!” ²¹And he said to him, “Look, I have indulged your person also in reference to this matter, not to overthrow the city concerning which you have spoken. ²²So hurry to escape there, for I shall not be able to do a thing until you enter there.” Therefore he called the name of the city Segor. ²³The sun came out on the earth, and Lot entered into Segor, ²⁴and the Lord rained on Sodoma and Gomorra sulfur and fire from the Lord out of heaven, ²⁵and he overthrew these cities and all the neighboring region and all the inhabitants in the cities and all the things that grow up out of the earth. ²⁶And his wife gazed backwards, and she became a stele of salt.

²⁷ And Abraam started early in the morning for the place where he had stood before the Lord, ²⁸and he gazed upon the face of Sodoma and Gomorra and upon the face of the land of the region round about and saw, and see, the flame of the land was going up like the vapor of a furnace.

³⁰ Now Lot went up out of Segor and settled in the mountain, and his two daughters with him, for he was afraid to dwell in Segor. And he lived in the cave, he and his two daughters with him. ³¹Now the elder said to the younger, “Our father is elderly, and there is no one on the earth who will come in to us, as is fitting in all the world. ³²Come, and let us give our father wine to drink, and let us lie with him and raise up offspring from our father.” ³³And they gave their father wine to drink on this night, and the elder, when she had gone in, lay with her father that night, and he did not know when she lay down and got up. ³⁴And it came about on the next day that then the elder said to the younger, “Look, I lay yesterday with our father; let us give him wine to drink this night also, and when you have gone in, lie with him, and let us raise up offspring from our father.” ³⁵And they gave their father wine to drink on that night also, and the younger, when she had gone in, lay with her father, and he did not know when she lay down and got up. ³⁶And the two daughters of Lot became pregnant by their father. ³⁷And the elder bore a son and called his name Moab: “From my father”; he is the ancestor of the Moabites to the present day. ³⁸And the younger bore a son too and called his name Amman: “Son of my race”; he is the ancestor of the Ammanites to the present day.

20 And from there Abraam moved to the land toward the southwest and lived between Kades and between Sour and resided in Gerara as an alien. ²And Abraam said of his wife Sarra, “She is my sister,” for he was afraid to say, “She is my wife,” lest perhaps the men of the city kill him on her account. Then Abimelech king of Gerara sent and took Sarra. ³And God came in to Abimelech in his^c sleep during the night and said, “Look, you are about to die by reason of the woman whom you have taken, whereas she is married to a man.” ⁴Now Abimelech had not touched her, and he said, “Lord, will you destroy an unwitting and righteous nation? ⁵Did not he himself say to me, ‘She is my sister’? And she herself said to me, ‘He is my brother.’ I did this with a pure heart and righteousness of hands.” ⁶Then God said to him during his^c sleep, “I too knew that you did this with a pure heart, and I was the one who spared you so that you did not sin in regard to me. Therefore I did not allow you to touch her. ⁷And now return the woman to the man, for he is a prophet, and he will pray for you, and you will live. If, however, you do

8 And Abimelech rose early in the morning and called all his servants and spoke of all these matters in their hearing; then all the men were very much afraid. ⁹And Abimelech called Abraam and said to him, "What is this you have done to us? Surely we have not committed some sin in regard to you, that you have brought great sin on me and on my kingdom? You have done a deed to me that no one shall do." ¹⁰And Abimelech said to Abraam, "What did you observe that you did this?" ¹¹And Abraam said, "Because I said, 'It appears there is no piety in this place, and so they will kill me because of my wife.' ¹²For indeed, she is truly my sister by my father, but not by my mother, and she became a wife to me. ¹³Now it came about when God brought me forth from my father's house, that then I said to her, 'This righteousness you shall do for me: in every place, there where we enter, say about me, He is my brother.' " ¹⁴Then Abimelech took a thousand didrachmas, sheep and calves and male and female slaves and gave them to Abraam and restored his wife Sarra to him. ¹⁵And Abimelech said to Abraam, "Look, my land is before you; settle where it may please you." ¹⁶And to Sarra he said, "Look, I have given your brother a thousand didrachmas; these shall be to you for the honor^a of your person and to all those^b with you, and tell the whole truth." ¹⁷Then Abraam prayed to God, and God healed Abimelech and his wife and his female slaves, and they gave birth. ¹⁸For the Lord had, in shutting off, shut off from the outside every womb in the house of Abimelech because of Sarra, Abraam's wife.

21 And the Lord visited Sarra as he had said, and the Lord did for Sarra as he had spoken, ²and when Sarra had conceived, she bore Abraam a son in his old age at the appointed time, as the Lord had spoken to him. ³And Abraam called the name of his son who was born to him, whom Sarra bore him, Isaak. ⁴And Abraam circumcised Isaak on the eighth day, as God had commanded him. ⁵Now Abraam was a hundred years of age when his son Isaak was born to him. ⁶And Sarra said, "The Lord has made laughter for me, for anyone who hears will congratulate me." ⁷And she said, "Who will report to Abraam that Sarra is nursing a child? For I have borne a son in my old age."

8 And the child grew and was weaned, and Abraam made a great banquet on the day his son Isaak was weaned. ⁹But when Sarra saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, who had been born to Abraam, playing with her son Isaak, ¹⁰then she said to Abraam, "Cast out this slave-girl and her son; for the son of this slave-girl shall not inherit together with my son Isaak." ¹¹Now the matter seemed very hard in the sight of Abraam on account of his son. ¹²But God said to Abraam, "Do not let the matter be hard in your sight on account of the child and on account of the slave-girl; whatever Sarra says to you, obey her voice, for in Isaak offspring shall be named for you. ¹³And as for the son of the slave-girl, I will make him also into a great nation, because he is your offspring." ¹⁴Then Abraam rose in the morning and took bread loaves and a skin of water and gave them to Hagar and put them on her shoulder, along with the child and sent her away. And when she departed she began wandering about the wilderness over against the well of the oath.

15 Then the water from the skin gave out, and she cast the child under a silver fir. ¹⁶And after departing she sat down opposite him a good way off, about a bowshot, for she said, "I will not look upon the death of my child." And she was seated opposite him, and the child cried out and wept. ¹⁷And God listened to the voice of the child from the place where he was, and God's angel called Hagar from heaven and said to her, "What is it, Hagar? Do not be afraid, for God has given ear to the voice of your child from the place where he is. ¹⁸Rise, take the child, and hold it fast with your hand, for I will make him into a great nation." ¹⁹And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of living water. And she went and filled the skin with water and gave the child a drink.

20 And God was with the child, and he grew up. And he dwelt in the wilderness and became an archer. ²¹And he dwelt in the wilderness of Pharan, and his mother got a wife for him from the land of Egypt.

22 And it came about at that time that then Abimelech, with Ochozath his groomsman and Phichol the commander-in-chief of his army, spoke to Abraam, saying, "God is with you in everything that you do; ²³now then swear to me by God that you will not injure me nor my offspring nor my name, but according to the righteousness with which I have dealt with you, you will deal with me and the land that you have resided in as an alien." ²⁴And Abraam said, "I will swear."

25 And Abraam rebuked Abimelech on account of the wells of water that Abimelech's servants had taken away. ²⁶And Abimelech said to him, "I did not know who did this deed, neither did you tell me, nor did I hear, except today." ²⁷And Abraam took sheep and calves and gave them to Abimelech, and both made a covenant. ²⁸And Abraam made seven ewe lambs of the sheep stand alone. ²⁹And Abimelech said to Abraam, "Why are there the seven ewe lambs of these sheep that you have made stand alone?" ³⁰And Abraam said, "Because^c these seven ewe lambs you shall receive from me in order that they may become a witness for me that I am the one who dug this well." ³¹Therefore he named the name of that place Well-of-adjuration, because there both swore an oath. ³²And they made a covenant at the well of the adjuration. Then Abimelech, with Ochozath his groomsman and Phichol the commander-in-chief of his army, rose and returned to the land of the Phylistieim. ³³And

Abraam planted ^aa ploughed field^a by the well of the oath and there invoked the name of the Lord: Everlasting-god. ³⁴And Abraam resided as an alien many days in the land of the Phylistieim.

22 And it came about after these matters that God tested Abraam and said to him, "Abraam, Abraam!" And he said, "Here I am." ²And he said, "Take your beloved son Isaak, whom you love, and go into the high land, and offer him as a whole burnt offering on one of the mountains, whichever I mention to you." ³And when Abraam had risen in the morning, he saddled his donkey. Now he took along with himself two servants and his son Isaak, and after he had split wood for a whole burnt offering and risen, he went and came to the place that God had mentioned to him, ⁽⁴⁾on the third day. ⁴And when Abraam looked up with his eyes, he saw the place far away. ⁵Then Abraam said to his servants, "Sit right here with the donkey, and the youngster and I will go through hither, and after we have done obeisance, we will come back to you." ⁶And Abraam took the wood of the whole burnt offering and laid it on his son Isaak; then he took both the fire and the knife in hand, and the two walked on together. ⁷And Isaak spoke to his father Abraam (when he had said, "Father!" and he had said, "What is it, child?"), saying, "Look, the fire and the wood! Where is the sheep for a whole burnt offering?" ⁸And Abraam said, "God will see to a sheep as a whole burnt offering for himself, child."

And as both walked on together ⁹they came to the place that God had mentioned to him. And Abraam built the altar there and laid on the wood, and when he had bound his son Isaak hand and foot, he laid him on the altar atop the wood. ¹⁰Then Abraam reached out his hand to take the knife to slay his son. ¹¹And the Lord's angel called him from heaven and said to him, "Abraam, Abraam!" And he said, "Here I am." ¹²And he said, "Do not lay your hand on the youngster nor do anything to him. For now I know that you do fear God, and for my sake you have not spared your beloved son." ¹³And as Abraam looked up with his eyes he saw, and see, a ram held fast in a sabelk plant by the horns. And Abraam went and took the ram and offered it up as a whole burnt offering instead of his son Isaak. ¹⁴And Abraam called the name of that place "The-Lord-saw," that they might say today, "On the mountain the Lord appeared."

¹⁵ And the Lord's angel called Abraam a second time from heaven, ⁽¹⁶⁾saying, ¹⁶"By myself I have sworn, says the Lord: Inasmuch as you have carried out this matter and for my sake have not spared your beloved son, ¹⁷I will indeed bless you with blessings, and I will make your offspring as numerous as the stars of heaven and as the sand that is by the seashore, and your offspring shall possess the cities of their adversaries, ¹⁸and in your offspring shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because you have obeyed my voice."

²⁰ Now it came about after these matters, that then it was told Abraam—they were saying—"See, Melcha, she too has borne sons to your brother Nachor: ²¹Ox the firstborn and Baux his brother and Kamouel the ancestor of the Syrians ²²and Chasad and Hazau and Phaldas and Iedlaph and Bathouel." ²³And Bathouel became the father of Rebekka. These were eight sons whom Melcha bore to Nachor, Abraam's brother. ²⁴And as for his concubine, whose name was Reema, she too bore Gaam and Tabech and Tochos and Mocha.

23 Now the life of Sarra amounted to one hundred twenty-seven years. ²And Sarra died in the city of Arbok that is in the lowland (this is Chebron) in the land of Chanaan. And Abraam went to mourn for Sarra and to grieve. ³And Abraam rose up from his dead and spoke to the sons of Chet, saying, ⁴"I am a resident alien and a sojourner among you; therefore give me possession of a burying place among you, and I shall bury my dead away from me." ⁵And the sons of Chet replied to Abraam, saying, ⁶"Not so, lord; but hear us. You are a king from a god among us. Bury your dead in our choice tombs, for not one of us shall withhold from you any tomb to bury your dead there." ⁷And when he had risen Abraam did obeisance to the sons of Chet, the people of the land, ⁸and Abraam spoke to them, saying, "If you have it in your heart that I bury my dead away from my presence, hear me, and speak on my behalf to Ephron the son of Saar, ⁹and let him give me the double cave that he has, which is in part of his field. For the money it is worth let him give it to me among you for possession of a tomb." ¹⁰Now Ephron was sitting among the sons of Chet, and in reply Ephron the Chettite spoke to Abraam, as the sons of Chet and all who were going into the city were listening, saying, ¹¹"Be attentive to me, lord, and hear me. I give you the field and the cave that is in it; before all my fellow citizens I have given it to you; bury your dead." ¹²And Abraam did obeisance before the people of the land, ¹³and he said to Ephron in the hearing of the people of the land, "Since you are in my presence, listen to me! Accept from me the money for the field, and I shall bury my dead there." ¹⁴Then Ephron answered Abraam, saying, ¹⁵"No, lord, for ^bI have heard of ^cfour hundred didrachmas of silver^c; what^b would this be between you and me? But as for you, bury your dead." ¹⁶And Abraam listened to Ephron, and Abraam handed over to Ephron the money that he had talked about in the hearing of the sons of Chet, four hundred didrachmas of silver certified by merchants.

¹⁷ And the field of Ephron, which was at the double cave, which^d is facing Mambre, the field and the cave that was in it, and every tree that was in the field, that is within its borders round about, were assigned ¹⁸to Abraam as a possession before the sons of Chet and all who were going into the city. ¹⁹After this Abraam buried Sarra his wife in the field's double cave, which is opposite Mambre (this is Chebron) in the land of Chanaan. ²⁰And the field and the cave that was in it were confirmed by the sons of Chet to Abraam for possession of a burying place.

^aOr an aroura = a measure of land (nearly two-thirds of an acre) in Egypt ^bI have heard. Land worth four hundred didrachmas of silver—what = We^{ed} ^ci.e. the estimated value ^di.e. the field

24 And Abraam was elderly, advanced in days, and the Lord blessed Abraam in regard to all things. ²And Abraam said to his servant, the elder of his household, the ruler of all that was his, "Put your hand under my thigh, ³and I will make you swear by the Lord, the God of heaven and the God of earth, so that you do not get a wife for my son Isaak from the daughters of the Chananites, whom I live among, ⁴but you shall go to my country, where I was born, and to my tribe, and get a wife for my son Isaak from there." ⁵And the servant said to him, "Perhaps the woman is not willing to go with me, back to this land. Shall I bring your son back to the land which you came from?" ⁶But Abraam said to him, "Take heed to yourself; do not bring my son back there. ⁷The Lord, the God of heaven and the God of earth, who took me from my father's house and from the land where I was born, who spoke to me and swore to me, saying, 'To you I will give this land, and to your offspring' he will send his angel ahead of you, and you shall take a wife for my son Isaak from there. ⁸If, however, the woman does not wish to go with you to this land, you will be clear of this oath; only do not bring my son back there." ⁹And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraam his lord and swore to him concerning this matter.

¹⁰ Then the servant took ten camels from his lord's camels and some of all his lord's goods with himself, and when he had risen, he went to Mesopotamia to the city of Nachor. ¹¹And he allowed the camels to rest outside the city beside the well of water toward evening, when the women who fetch water go out. ¹²And he said, "O Lord, God of my lord Abraam, prosper the way before me today, and do mercy with my lord Abraam. ¹³Here I stand by the spring of water, and the daughters of those who live in the city are coming out to draw water, ¹⁴and it shall be that the maiden to whom I should say, 'Incline your jar to me in order that I may drink,' and she should say to me 'Drink, and I will water your camels until they stop drinking,' this one you prepared for your servant Isaak, and by this I shall know that you did mercy toward my lord Abraam."

¹⁵ And it came about before he had finished speaking in his mind, that then, look, Rebekka, who was born to Bathouel son of Melcha the wife of Nachor—and he was Abraam's brother—was coming out with her water jar on her shoulders. ¹⁶Now the maiden was very beautiful in appearance; she was a maiden—no man had known her. So then going down to the spring she filled her jar and came up. ¹⁷Then the servant ran up to meet her and said, "Give me a little water to drink from your jar." ¹⁸And she said, "Drink, lord." And she hurried and lowered the jar upon her arm and gave him a drink ⁽¹⁹⁾until he stopped drinking. ¹⁹And she said, "I will fetch water for your camels also until they all have drunk." ²⁰And she hurried and emptied the jar into the watering trough and ran again to the well to draw and fetched water for all the camels. ²¹Now the man was observing her closely and was keeping silent to learn whether or not the Lord had prospered his journey.

²² And it came about when all the camels had stopped drinking, that the man took gold earrings a drachma each in weight and two bracelets for her arms, their weight being ten gold pieces. ²³And he questioned her and said, "Whose daughter are you? Tell me: Is there room at your father's place for us to lodge?" ²⁴And she said to him, "I am a daughter of Bathouel the son of Melcha, whom she bore to Nachor." ²⁵And she said to him, "We have both straw and fodder in abundance and a place to lodge." ²⁶And the man, being content, did obeisance to the Lord ⁽²⁷⁾and said, ²⁷"Blessed be the Lord, the God of my lord Abraam, who has not left behind righteousness and truth from my lord. Me the Lord has prospered on the way to the house of my lord's kinsman."

²⁸ And running off, the girl brought news to her mother's house about these matters. ²⁹Now Rebekka had a brother whose name was Laban, and Laban ran out to the man at the spring. ³⁰And it came about as soon as he saw the earrings and the bracelets on his sister's arms, and when he heard the words of his sister Rebekka as she was saying, "Thus the man has spoken to me," that then he went to the man as he stood by the camels at the spring ³¹and said to him, "Here, come in. Blessed be the Lord. Why do you stand outside? As for me, I have prepared the dwelling and a place for the camels." ³²Then the man came into the dwelling and unloaded the camels. And he gave him straw and fodder for the camels and water for his feet and the feet of the men who were with him. ³³And he set bread loaves before them to eat. And he said, "I will not eat until I have spoken my piece." And they said, "Speak on."

³⁴ And he said, "I am Abraam's servant. ³⁵Now the Lord has greatly blessed my lord, and he has been exalted, and he has given him sheep and calves and silver and gold and male and female slaves, camels and donkeys. ³⁶And Sarra my lord's wife bore one son to my lord after he had grown old, and he gave him as much as he had. ³⁷And my lord administered an oath to me, saying, 'You shall not take a wife for my son from the daughters of the Chananites, whom I am living among in their land, ³⁸but you shall go to my father's house and to my tribe and get a wife for my son from there.' ³⁹Then I said to my lord, 'Perhaps the woman will not go with me.' ⁴⁰And he said to me, 'The Lord, whom I have been well pleasing before, he will send his angel with you and prosper your journey, and you shall get a wife for my son from my tribe and from my father's house. ⁴¹Then you will be free from my curse; indeed, when perchance you come to my tribe and they do not give her to you, then you will be free from my adjuration.'

42 "And on coming today to the spring I said, 'O Lord, the God of my lord Abraam, if only you prosper my journey that I am now going on! 43Here I stand near the spring of water, and the daughters of the people of the city will come out to fetch water, and it shall be that the maiden to whom I should say, "Give me a little water from your jar to drink," 44and she should say to me, "You drink, and I will fetch water for your camels too," may this be the woman whom the Lord prepared for his own attendant Isaak, and by this I shall know that you have done mercy toward my lord Abraam.'

45 "And it came about before I finished speaking in my mind, that at once Rebekka was coming out with the water jar on her shoulders, and she went down to the spring and fetched water. Then I said to her, 'Give me a drink.' 46And hurriedly she let down the jar from herself and said, 'You drink, and I will water your camels.' And I drank, and she watered my camels. 47And I asked her and said, 'Whose daughter are you?' 'I am a daughter of Bathouel, Nachor's son,' said she, 'whom Melcha bore to him.' And I put the earrings on her and the bracelets around her arms. 48Then, being content, I did obeisance to the Lord and blessed the Lord, the God of my lord Abraam, who had prospered me on the way of truth to obtain the daughter of my lord's kinsman for his son. 49So if you are going to do mercy and righteousness toward my lord, tell me; but if not, tell me in order that I may turn to the right hand or to the left."

50 Then Laban and Bathouel said in reply, "This ordinance has come from the Lord; therefore we shall not be able to speak against you bad for good. 51Look, Rebekka is before you; take her, leave quickly, and let her be wife to your lord's son, as the Lord has spoken."

52 Now it came about when the servant of Abraam heard their words that he did obeisance upon the ground to the Lord. 53And when the servant had brought out articles of silver and gold and clothing, he gave them to Rebekka, and he gave gifts to her brother and mother. 54And he and the men who were with him ate and drank, and they went to bed. And when he rose in the morning, he said, "Send me away in order that I may depart to my lord." 55And her brothers and mother said, "Let the maiden remain with us about ten days, and after that she shall depart." 56But he said to them, "Do not detain me, and the Lord has prospered my journey; send me away in order that I may depart to my lord." 57Then they said, "Let us call the girl and ask her mouth." 58And they called Rebekka and said to her, "Will you go with this man?" And she said, "I will go." 59And they sent away their sister Rebekka and her possessions and Abraam's servant and those with him. 60And they blessed their sister Rebekka and said to her,

"You are our sister;
become thousands of myriads, and let your offspring gain possession of the cities of their adversaries."

61Then Rebekka and her maids, when they had risen, mounted the camels and went with the man, and taking along Rebekka, the servant departed.

62 Now Isaak used to go through the wilderness over against the well of the appearance, but he was dwelling in the land that is toward the southwest. 63And Isaak went out toward evening to meditate in the plain, and looking up with his eyes he saw camels coming. 64And Rebekka, looking up with her eyes, saw Isaak and leaped down from the camel 65and said to the servant, "Who is that man who is walking on the plain to meet us?" And the servant said, "This is my lord." Then taking her light summer garment she threw it around herself. 66And the servant recounted to Isaak all the matters that he had carried out. 67Then Isaak entered into his mother's house and took Rebekka, and she became his wife, and he loved her. And Isaak was comforted concerning his mother Sarra.

25 Now Abraam again took a wife, whose name was Chettoura. 2And she bore him Zembran and Iexan and Madan and Madiam and Iesbok and Soye. 3And Iexan was the father of Saba and Thaiman and Daidan. And the sons of Daidan were Ragouel and Nabdeel and Assourieim and Latouseim and Loomieim. 4And the sons of Madiam: Gaiphar and Apher and Henoch^a and Abira and Elraga. These all were the sons of Chettoura. 5And Abraam gave all his possessions to his son Isaak, 6and to the sons of his concubines Abraam gave gifts, and while he was still living he sent them away from his son Isaak, eastward to the east country.

7 Now these are the years of the days of the life of Abraam that he lived: one hundred seventy-five years. 8And breathing his last, Abraam died at a good old age, an old man and full of days, and was added to his people. 9And his sons Isaak and Ismael buried him in the double cave in the field of Ephron the son of Saar the Chettite, which is opposite Mambre, 10the field and the cave that Abraam acquired from the sons of Chet; there they buried Abraam and his wife Sarra. 11And it came about after Abraam died that God blessed his son Isaak. And Isaak settled by the well of the appearance.

12 Now these are the generations of Ismael, Abraam's son, whom Hagar, Sarra's slave-girl, bore to Abraam, 13and these are the names of the sons of Ismael, by the name of his clans: Nabaiioth, the firstborn of Ismael, and Kedar and Nabdeel and Massam 14and Masma and Idouma and Masse 15and Choddad and Thaiman and letour and Naphes and Kedma. 16These are the sons of Ismael, and these are their names in their tents and in their encampments, twelve rulers according to their nations. 17And these are the years of the life of Ismael: one hundred thirty-seven years, and breathing his last he died and was added to his kin. ¹⁸Now he settled from Heuilat to Sour, which is facing Egypt, until one comes to the Assyrians; he settled facing all his kinfolk.

19 And these are the generations of Isaak, Abraam's son: Abraam was the father of Isaak. ²⁰Now Isaak was forty years of age when he took Rebekka, daughter of Bathouel the Syrian of Mesopotamia, sister of Laban the Syrian, as a wife for himself. ²¹And Isaak petitioned the Lord concerning his wife Rebekka, because she was barren, and God heard him, and his wife Rebekka became pregnant. ²²And the children were cavorting within her, and she said, "If it is thus going to be with me, why do I have this?" Then she went to inquire of the Lord, ²³and the Lord said to her,

"Two nations are in your womb, and two peoples from your uterus shall be divided,
and a people shall excel over a people, and the greater shall be subject to the lesser."

²⁹ Now Iakob cooked a stew, and Esau came from the plain languishing, ³⁰and Esau said to Iakob, "Give me a taste of this red stew, for I am languishing!" Therefore his name was called Edom. ³¹And Iakob said to Esau, "Sell to me today your rights of primogeniture." ³²And Esau said, "Look, I am going to perish, and why do I have these rights of primogeniture?" ³³And Iakob said to him, "Swear to me today." And he swore to him, and Esau sold the rights of primogeniture to Iakob. ³⁴And Iakob gave Esau bread and lentil stew, and he ate and drank, and getting up he went away. And Esau trivialized the rights of primogeniture.

26 Now a famine occurred upon the land, besides the former famine that had occurred in the time of Abraam. Then Isaak went to Gerara, to Abimelech, king of Phylistieim. ²And the Lord appeared to him and said, "Do not go down to Egypt, but settle in the land about which I speak to you. ³And reside in this land as an alien, and I will be with you and will bless you. For to you and to your offspring I will give all this land, and I will establish my oath that I swore to your father Abraam. ⁴And I will make your offspring as numerous as the stars of heaven and will give to your offspring all this land, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in your offspring, ⁵since your father Abraam obeyed my voice and kept my ordinances and my commandments and my statutes and my precepts."

⁶ And Isaak settled in Gerara. ⁷Then the men of the place asked about his wife Rebekka, and he said, "She is my sister," for he was afraid to say, "She is my wife," lest perhaps the men of the place kill him for the sake of Rebekka, because she was attractive in appearance. ⁸And he stayed on there quite some time. Now Abimelech the king of Gerara, when he peered through the window, saw Isaak playing around with his wife Rebekka. ⁹Then Abimelech summoned Isaak and said to him, "So then she is your wife! Why is it that you said, 'She is my sister?'" And Isaak said to him, "Because I said, 'Lest perhaps I die because of her.'" ¹⁰And Abimelech said to him, "What is this you have done to us? Very nearly did someone of my kin lie with your wife, and you had brought ignorance upon us." ¹¹Then Abimelech instructed all his people, saying, "Anyone who touches this man or his wife shall be liable to the death penalty."

¹⁷ And Isaak departed from there and lodged in the ravine of Gerara and settled there. ¹⁸And again Isaak dug the wells of water that the servants of his father Abraam had dug, and the Phylistieim had stopped them up after his father Abraam had died, and he gave them names in accordance with the names that his father had named. ¹⁹And Isaak's servants dug in the ravine of Gerara and found there a well of living water. ²⁰And the herders of Gerara quarreled with Isaak's herders, asserting that the water was theirs. And he called the name of the well Injustice, for they did him injustice. ²¹Then setting out from there he dug another well, but they were disputing over that one also, and he named its name Enmity. ²²Then setting out from there he dug another well, and they did not quarrel over it, and he named its name Open-space, saying, "Inasmuch as now the Lord has made room for us and increased us on the land."

²³ And from there he went up to the well of the oath. ²⁴And on that night the Lord appeared to him and said, "I am the God of your father Abraam; do not be afraid, for I am with you and have blessed you and will make your offspring numerous for your father Abraam's sake." ²⁵And he built an altar there and invoked the name of the Lord and pitched his tent there. And there Isaak's servants dug a well.

commander-in-chief of his army. ²⁷And Isaac said to them, "Why did you come to me? You are the ones who hated me and sent me away from you." ²⁸And they said, "Seeing, we have seen that the Lord was with you, and we said, Let there come to be an oath between you and between us, and we will make a covenant with you ²⁹that you will not do us harm, just as we did not loathe you, and as we treated you well and sent you away in peace. And now you are blessed by the Lord." ³⁰And he made them a banquet, and they ate and drank. ³¹And when they had risen in the morning, they swore an oath, one person to the next, and Isaac sent them off, and they departed from him in safety. ³²And it came about on that day that then Isaac's servants, when they arrived, told him about the well that they had dug and said, "We did not find water." ³³And he called it Oath; therefore he called the city's name Well-of-oath, to the present day.

27 Now it came about after Isaac had grown old and his eyes had become too dim to see, that then he called his elder son Esau and said to him, "My son," and he said, "Here I am." ²And he said, "See, I have grown old, and I do not know the day of my death. ³Now therefore take your equipment, both quiver and bow, and go out into the plain, and hunt game for me, ⁴and prepare for me victuals, such as I like, and bring them to me in order that I may eat, so that my soul may bless you before I die."

⁵ Now Rebekka heard Isaac speaking to his son Esau. And Esau went into the plain to hunt game for his father. ⁶Then Rebekka said to her lesser son Iakob, "Look, I heard your father speaking to your brother Esau, saying, ⁷'Bring me game, and prepare for me victuals in order that when I have eaten I may bless you in the presence of the Lord before I die.' ⁸Now then, son, listen to me, as I command you, ⁹and go to the flocks; get me two kids from there, tender and good, and I shall prepare them as victuals for your father, such as he likes, ¹⁰and you shall bring them in to your father, and he will eat, so that your father may bless you before he dies." ¹¹But Iakob said to his mother Rebekka, "My brother Esau is a hairy man, while I am a smooth man. ¹²Perhaps my father will feel me, and I shall be before him like a scorners and bring a curse on myself and not a blessing." ¹³But his mother said to him, "Your curse be on me, child; only obey my voice, and go, bring them to me." ¹⁴And he went, got them and brought them to his mother, and his mother prepared victuals, just as his father used to love them. ¹⁵And Rebekka, when she had taken the fine garment of her elder son Esau, which was with her in the house, then she put it on her younger son Iakob, ¹⁶and she placed the skins of the kids on his arms and on the bare parts of his neck, ¹⁷and she gave the victuals and the bread loaves that she had prepared into the hands of her son Iakob.

¹⁸ And he brought them in to his father. And he said, "Father." And he said, "Here I am; who are you, child?" ¹⁹And Iakob said to his father, "I am Esau your firstborn; I have done according to what you talked about to me; rise, sit, and eat of my game, so that your soul may bless me." ²⁰But Isaac said to his son, "What is this that you have quickly found, O child?" And he said, "That which the Lord your God delivered up before me." ²¹Then Isaac said to Iakob, "Come near to me, and I shall feel you, child, whether you are my son Esau or not." ²²And Iakob drew near to his father Isaac, and he felt him and said, "The voice is Iakob's voice, yet the hands are the hands of Esau." ²³And he did not recognize him, for his hands were hairy like his brother Esau's hands, and he blessed him. ²⁴And he said, "Are you my son Esau?" And he said, "I am." ²⁵And he said, "Bring it to me, and I shall eat of your game, child, in order that my soul may bless you." And he presented it to him, and he ate, and he brought wine in to him, and he drank. ²⁶And his father Isaac said to him, "Come near to me, and kiss me, child." ²⁷And coming near he kissed him, and he smelled the scent of his clothes and blessed him and said,

is like the scent of a full field that the Lord has blessed.

²⁸ And may God give you of the dew of heaven and of the fatness of the earth and an abundance of grain and wine.

²⁹ And let nations be subject to you, and rulers shall do obeisance to you,
and become lord over your brother, and your father's sons shall do obeisance to you.

Accursed is the one who curses you, but blessed is the one who blesses you!"

³⁰ And it came about after Isaac had left off blessing his son Iakob, and it came about when Iakob had gone out from the presence of his father Isaac, that then his brother Esau came from the hunt. ³¹And he too prepared victuals and presented them to his father and said to his father, "Let my father rise and eat of his son's game, so that your soul may bless me." ³²And his father Isaac said to him, "Who are you?" And he said, "I am your firstborn son, Esau." ³³Then Isaac was astonished with very great astonishment and said, "So who was the one who hunted game for me and brought it in to me? And I ate of everything before you came, and I blessed him, and let him be blessed!" ³⁴Now it came about when Esau heard his father Isaac's words, that then he uttered a ^avery great and bitter^a cry and said, "Do bless me also, father!" ³⁵But he said to him, "Your brother, coming with deceit, took away your blessing."

³⁶And he said, "His name was rightly called Iakob, for he has supplanted me now this second time. He has both taken away my rights of primogeniture, and now he has taken away my blessing." Then Esau said to his father, "Did you not leave a blessing for me, father?" ³⁷And in reply Isaak said to Esau, "If I made him your lord, and I made all his brothers his domestics, with grain and wine I sustained him, then what shall I do for you, child?" ³⁸And Esau said to his father, "Surely you do not have only^a one blessing, father? Do bless me also, father!" And with Isaak cut to the quick, Esau uttered a cry and wept.

39 Then in reply his father Isaak said to him:

"See, away from the fatness of the earth shall your dwelling be, and away from the dew of heaven on high.

40 And by your dagger you shall live, and you shall be subject to your brother, but it shall be that when perchance you bring him down, then you shall loose his yoke from your neck."

41 And Esau was indignant at Iakob because of the blessing with which his father had blessed him. Then Esau said in his mind, "Let the days of mourning for my father come near in order that I may kill my brother Iakob." ⁴²But the words of her elder son Esau were told to Rebekka, and she sent and called her younger son Iakob and said to him, "See, your brother Esau is threatening you to kill you. ⁴³Now then, child, listen to my voice, and rise, escape to Mesopotamia to my brother Laban in Charran, ⁴⁴and dwell with him some days ⁴⁵until your brother's wrath and anger turn away from you, and he forgets what you have done to him, and I will send for and summon you from there—lest perhaps I be bereaved of you two children in one day."

46 Then Rebekka said to Isaak, "I have become irritated with my life because of the daughters of the sons of Chet. If Iakob will take a wife from the daughters of this land, why shall I live?"

28 Then Isaak, having called for Iakob, blessed him and commanded him, saying, "You shall not take a wife from the daughters of Chanaan. ²Rise, escape to Mesopotamia to the house of Bathouel, your mother's father, and take a wife for yourself from there from the daughters of Laban, your mother's brother. ³And may my God bless you and make you increase and make you numerous, and you shall become gatherings of nations. ⁴And may he give to you the blessing of my father Abraam, to you and to your offspring after you, to possess the land of your living as an alien, which God gave to Abraam." ⁵And Isaak sent Iakob away, and he went to Mesopotamia, to Laban the son of Bathouel the Syrian and brother of Rebekka the mother of Iakob and Esau.

6 Now Esau saw that Isaak blessed Iakob and that he was on his way to Mesopotamia of Syria to take a wife from there for himself, that as he was blessing him he also commanded him, saying, "You shall not take a wife from the daughters of Chanaan," ⁷and that Iakob obeyed his father and mother and went to Mesopotamia, ⁸and Esau saw that the daughters of Chanaan were evil in the sight of his father Isaak, ⁹and Esau went to Ismael and took Maeleth daughter of Abraam's son Ismael, sister of Nabaioth, as a wife in addition to his wives.

10 And Iakob departed from the well of the oath and went to Charran. ¹¹And he came upon a place and lay down there, for the sun had set. And he took one^a of the stones of the place and put it at his head and lay down in that place. ¹²And he dreamed, and see, a ladder set firmly in the earth, whose top was reaching into heaven, and the angels of God were ascending and descending on it. ¹³And the Lord leaned on it and said, "I am the Lord, the God of Abraam your father and the God of Isaak; do not be afraid; as for the land which you are sleeping on, I will give it to you and to your offspring. ¹⁴And your offspring shall be like the sand of the earth, and it shall widen out to the sea and to the southwest and to the north and to the east, and all the tribes of the earth shall be blessed in you and in your offspring. ¹⁵And see, I am with you, carefully guarding you in every way where you might go, and I will bring you back to this land, for I will not leave you until I have done all the things that I talked about to you." ¹⁶And Iakob woke from his sleep and said, "The Lord is in this place—yet I did not know it!" ¹⁷And he was afraid and said, "How awesome is this place! This is nothing other than a divine house, and this is the gate of heaven."

18 And Iakob rose in the morning, and he took the stone that he had put down there at his head and set it up for a stele and poured oil on the top of it. ¹⁹And Iakob called the name of that place Divine-house, and the city's name was formerly Oulamouz. ²⁰And Iakob made a vow, saying, "If the Lord God should be with me and should carefully guard me in this way that I go and should give me bread to eat and clothing to put on ²¹and should bring me back to my father's house in safety, then the Lord shall become god to me, ²²and this stone, which I have set up for a stele, shall be a divine house to me, and of all things that you might give me, as a tithe I will tithe them to you."

29 And Iakob, lifting up his feet, went to the land of the east, to Laban the son of Bathouel the Syrian and brother of Rebekka, mother of Iakob and Esau. ²And he was looking, and there was a well in the plain, and three flocks of sheep were resting there near it, for out of that well they would water the flocks. Now a large stone was on the well's mouth, ³and all the flocks would be gathered there, and they^b would roll the stone from the mouth of the well and water the sheep and restore the stone to its place on the mouth of the well.

4 And Iakob said to them, "Brothers, where are you from?" And they said, "We are from Charran."⁵ Then he said to them, "Do you know Laban the son of Nachor?" And they said, "We know him."⁶ And he said to them, "Is he well?" And they said, "He is well." And see, his daughter Rachel was coming with the sheep.⁷ And Iakob said, "There is still much daylight; it is not yet time for the livestock to be gathered together. Water the sheep; go off, and pasture them."⁸ But they said, "We shall not be able to until all the shepherds have been gathered together, and they roll the stone from the mouth of the well, and we shall water the sheep."

9 While he was still speaking with them, then Laban's daughter Rachel was coming with her father's sheep, for she was tending her father's sheep.¹⁰ Now it came about when Iakob saw Rachel, daughter of his mother's brother Laban, and the sheep of his mother's brother Laban, that then Iakob, drawing near, rolled the stone from the well's mouth and watered the sheep of his mother's brother Laban.¹¹ And Iakob kissed Rachel, and crying out with his voice he wept.¹² And he told Rachel that he was her father's kinsman and that he was Rebekka's son, and running off, she reported to her father concerning these matters.

13 And it came about when Laban heard the name of his sister's son Iakob, that he ran to meet him and, embracing him, kissed him and brought him into his house. And he related to Laban all these particulars.¹⁴ And Laban said to him, "You are of my bones and of my flesh!" And he was with him a month of days.

15 Then Laban said to Iakob, "Indeed, because you are my kinsman, you shall not be subject to me for nothing. Tell me what your wage is."¹⁶ Now Laban had two daughters; the name of the bigger was Leia, and the name of the younger was Rachel.¹⁷ And Leia's eyes were weak, but Rachel was shape-ly in figure and lovely in appearance.¹⁸ Now Iakob loved Rachel, and he said, "I will be subject to you seven years for your younger daughter Rachel."¹⁹ And Laban said to him, "It is better that I give her to you than that I give her to another man; dwell with me."²⁰ And Iakob was subject seven years for Rachel, and they were in his sight like a few days because he loved her.

21 Then Iakob said to Laban, "Give up my wife, that I may go in to her, for my days have been completed."²² And Laban gathered together all the men of the place and made a wedding feast.²³ And evening came, and Laban, taking his daughter Leia, brought her in to Iakob, and Iakob went in to her.²⁴ Now Laban gave to his daughter Leia his maid Zelpha as a maid for her.²⁵ Then morning came, and there was Leia! And Iakob said to Laban, "What is this you have done to me? Was I not subject to you for Rachel? And why have you deceived me?"²⁶ And Laban said, "It is not possible thus in our locality to give the younger before the elder.

²⁷ Therefore finish the heptad^a of this one, and I will give you this one also in return for work that you shall do at my place for yet another seven years."²⁸ And Iakob did so and fulfilled her heptad^a, and Laban gave him his daughter Rachel as a wife for him.²⁹ Now Laban gave his maid Balla to his daughter Rachel as a maid for her.³⁰ And he went in to Rachel, and he loved Rachel more than Leia. And he was subject to him another seven years.

31 Now when the Lord saw that Leia was hated, he opened her womb, but Rachel was barren.³² And Leia conceived and bore a son to Iakob, and she called his name Rouben, saying, "Inasmuch as the Lord has seen my humiliation, now it is me my husband will love."³³ And Leia conceived again and bore a second son to Iakob and said, "Because the Lord has heard that I am hated, he has also in addition given me this one too," and she called his name Symeon.³⁴ And yet again she conceived and bore a son and said, "At the present time my husband will be on my side, for I have borne him three sons"; therefore she called his name Leui.³⁵ And after she had conceived yet again, she bore a son and said, "Now yet again with respect to this I will acknowledge the Lord"; therefore she called his name Ioudas^b; then she ceased to bear.

30 Now when Rachel saw that she had not given birth for Iakob, then Rachel envied her sister, and she said to Iakob, "Give me children; otherwise, I shall die!"² And Iakob became angry with Rachel and said, "Surely I am not in the place of a god who has deprived you with respect to the fruit of the womb?"³ Then she said to Iakob, "Here is my female slave Balla; go in to her, and she shall bear upon my knees, and I too shall have children by her."⁴ And she gave him her female slave Balla as a wife for him, and Iakob went in to her.⁵ And Rachel's female slave Balla conceived and bore Iakob a son.⁶ And Rachel said, "God has judged me and heard my voice and given me a son"; therefore she called his name Dan.⁷ And Rachel's female slave Balla conceived yet again, and she bore Iakob a second son.⁸ And Rachel said, "God has assisted me, and I have lived together with my sister and have been strong enough," and she called his name Nephthali.

9 Now Leia saw that she had ceased to bear, and she took her female slave Zelpha and gave her to Iakob as a wife.¹⁰ Then Iakob went in to her, and Leia's female slave Zelpha conceived and bore Iakob a son.¹¹ And Leia said, "By fortune!" and she named his name Gad.¹² And Leia's female slave Zelpha conceived and bore Iakob a second son as well.¹³ And Leia said, "Happy am I! For the women pronounce me happy," and she called his name Aser.

14 Now in the days of wheat harvest Rouben went and found mandrake apples in the field and brought them to his mother Leia. Then Rachel said to Leia, "Give me some of your son's mandrakes."

¹⁵But Leah said, "Is it not enough for you that you have taken away my husband? Surely you will not also take away my son's mandrakes?" Then Rachel said, "Not so; let him lie with you through this night in exchange for your son's mandrakes."

¹⁶And Jakob came in from a field at evening, and Leah went out to meet him and said, "You shall come in to me today, for I have hired you in exchange for my son's mandrakes." And he lay with her through that night. ¹⁷And God heard Leah, and after she had conceived she bore Jakob a fifth son. ¹⁸And Leah said, "God has given me my hire, since I gave my female slave to my husband," and she called his name Issachar, which is Hire. ¹⁹And Leah conceived yet again, and she bore Jakob a sixth son. ²⁰Then Leah said, "God has given a good gift to me; at the present time my husband will choose me, for I have borne him six sons," and she called his name Zaboulon. ²¹And afterwards she bore a daughter and called her name Dina.

²²Then God remembered Rachel, and God heard her and opened her uterus, ²³and after she had conceived she bore Jakob a son. And Rachel said, "God has taken away my reproach," ²⁴and she called his name Ioseph, saying, "Let God add to me another son!"

²⁵Now it came about when Rachel had borne Ioseph, that Jakob said to Laban, "Send me away in order that I may depart to my region and to my country. ²⁶Give up my wives and children, on account of whom I was subject to you, in order that I may depart, for you know very well the servitude with which I have served you." ²⁷But Laban said to him, "If I had found favor before you, I would have learned it by ornithomancy. Indeed, God blessed me by your coming. ²⁸Specify your wage to me, and I will give it." ²⁹Then Jakob said to him, "You do know in what things I was subject to you and how numerous your cattle have been with me. ³⁰For what you had before me was little, and it increased to a multitude, and the Lord blessed you at my foot. Now then when shall I too prepare a household for myself?" ³¹And Laban said to him, "What shall I give to you?" And Jakob said to him, "You shall not give me anything; if you carry out this matter for me, I will again shepherd your sheep, and I will keep them. ³²Let your sheep pass by today, and separate thence every grey sheep among the lambs and every pure white and spotted one among the goats; such shall be my wage. ³³And my righteousness will hearken to me tomorrow, because my wage is before you. Any one that is not spotted and pure white among the goats and grey among the lambs shall, in my judgment, have been stolen." ³⁴Then Laban said to him, "Let it be according to your word." ³⁵And on that day he set apart the male goats that were spotted and pure white and all the female goats that were spotted and pure white and every one that was white among them and every one that was grey among the lambs and gave them into the control of his sons. ³⁶And he put a distance of three days' journey between them and between Jakob. Now Jakob was shepherding Laban's remaining sheep.

³⁷And Jakob took for himself a green rod of styrax and walnut and one of a plane tree, and Jakob stripped white stripes in them, tearing away the green. And the white that he had stripped appeared variegated on the rods. ³⁸And he set the rods that he had stripped in the channels of the watering troughs of water in order that, when the sheep would come to drink in front of the rods, as they came for drinking, ⁽³⁹⁾the sheep would come into heat at the rods, ³⁹and the sheep would produce pure white and variegated and ash-colored spotted young. ⁴⁰And Jakob set apart the lambs and set before the sheep a pure white ram and every variegated one among the lambs, and he separated flocks for himself on his own and did not mix them with Laban's sheep. ⁴¹Now it came about in the season in which the sheep came into heat, as they were conceiving, that Jakob placed the rods in the channels before the sheep that they might come into heat opposite the rods, ⁴²but when the sheep would give birth, he would not place them; so then the unmarked were Laban's, and the marked Jakob's. ⁴³And the man became very, very rich and had large herds and cattle and male slaves and female slaves and camels and donkeys.

31 Now Jakob heard the words of the sons of Laban, saying, "Jakob has taken all that was our father's, and he has made all this glory from what was our father's." ²And Jakob saw Laban's face, and see, it was not towards him as it was yesterday and the third day. ³Then the Lord said to Jakob, "Return to the land of your father and to your kindred, and I will be with you." ⁴And Jakob sent for and called Leah and Rachel into the plain where his flocks were ⁵and said to them, "I see your father's face, that it is not in favor of me as yesterday and the third day, but the God of my father has been with me. ⁶Now you yourselves too know that I was subject to your father with all my strength. ⁷Yet your father cheated me, and exchanged my wage for^a ten lambs, and God did not give him leave to harm me. ⁸If he should say thus, 'The variegated shall be your wage,' then all the sheep will bear variegated, but if he should say, 'The white shall be your wage,' then all the sheep will bear white. ⁹And God took away all the livestock of your father and gave them to me.

¹⁰"And it came about when the sheep were coming into heat, that then I saw them with my eyes in my sleep, and see, the male goats and the rams—pure white and variegated and ash-colored spotted—were mounting the sheep and the female goats. ¹¹And the angel of God said to me during sleep, 'Jakob.' And I said, 'What is it?' ¹²And he said, 'Look up with your eyes, and see the male goats and the rams—pure white and variegated and ash-colored spotted—mounting the sheep and the female goats, for I have seen how much

Laban is doing to you. ¹³I am the God who appeared to you at a divine place, there where you anointed a stele to me and made a vow to me there. Now therefore rise, and go forth from this land, and depart to the land of your origin, and I will be with you.” ¹⁴And Rachel and Leia said to him in reply, “Surely there is no longer a portion or an inheritance in our father’s house? ¹⁵Have we not been regarded by him as foreigners? For he has sold us, and he consumed our money by a devouring. ¹⁶All the wealth and the glory that God took away from our father shall belong to us and to our children. Now therefore do what God has said to you.”

²⁵ And Laban caught up with Iakob. Now Iakob pitched his tent on the mountain, and Laban stationed his kinsfolk on the mountain of Galaad. ²⁶And Laban said to Iakob, “What have you done? ⁽²⁷⁾Why did you flee secretly and rob me ⁽²⁶⁾and carry off my daughters like those captured by dagger? ²⁷And if you had told me, I would have sent you away with mirth and with music, drums and lyre. ²⁸I was not deemed worthy to kiss my youngsters and daughters. Now then, you have acted senselessly. ²⁹And now my hand is strong to harm you, but the God of your father spoke to me yesterday, saying, ‘Watch yourself, that you do not speak evil with Iakob.’ ³⁰So now you have gone, for with longing you longed to go off to your father’s house. Why did you steal my gods?” ³¹And Iakob said to Laban in reply, “Because I said, ‘Lest perhaps you take away your daughters from me, and all that is mine.’ ³²Discover what I have of yours, and take it.” And he did not discover anything with him. And Iakob said, “Anyone with whom you should find your gods shall not live in the presence of our kinsfolk.” Now Iakob did not know that his wife Rachel had stolen them.

³³ And Laban, when he had gone in, searched in Leia’s house and found nothing. And he went out of Leia’s house and searched in Iakob’s house and in the house of the two maids and found nothing. Then he also entered into Rachel’s house.

³⁴Now Rachel had taken the idols and put them into the camel’s packsaddles and sat on them. ³⁵And she said to her father, “Do not take it ill, lord; I cannot rise before you, for I have what is customary with women.” And Laban searched in the whole house and did not find the idols.

³⁶ Then Iakob became angry and quarreled with Laban. And Iakob said to Laban in reply, “What is my crime, and what is my fault, that you have followed hard after me ³⁷and that you have searched all my effects? What have you found of all the effects of your house? Set it here before your kinsfolk and my kinsfolk, and let them decide between us two. ³⁸These twenty years of mine I was with you; your sheep and your female goats were not barren; I did not consume the rams of your sheep; ³⁹that which was caught by wild beasts I have not brought back to you; I would exact from myself what was stolen by day and what was stolen by night; ⁴⁰by day I would become inflamed by heat and by frost by night, and sleep would withdraw from my eyes. ⁴¹These twenty years of mine I was in your household; I was subject to you fourteen years in exchange for your two daughters and six years among your sheep, and you falsified my wage with ten ewe lambs. ⁴²If the God of my father Abraam had not been with me—even the Fear of Isaak—you would now have sent me away empty-handed; God saw my humiliation and the labor of my hands and rebuked you yesterday.”

⁴³ Then in reply Laban said to Iakob, “The daughters are my daughters, and the sons are my sons, and the livestock are my livestock, and all things that you see are mine and my daughters’. What shall I do today for these or for their children whom they have borne? ⁴⁴Now therefore, come, let us make a covenant, you and I, and it shall become an attestation between you and me.” And he said to him, “Look, no one is with us; see, God is a witness between you and me.” ⁴⁵Then Iakob, taking a stone, set it up as a stele. ⁴⁶And Iakob said to his kinsfolk, “Gather stones.” And they gathered stones and made a mound, and they ate and drank there by the mound. ^(48a)And Laban said to him, “This mound bears witness between you and me today.” ⁴⁷And Laban called it Mound-of-the-witness, but Iakob called it Mound-witness.

⁴⁸⁽⁵¹⁾ Then Laban said to Iakob, “Here is this mound and the stele that I have set up between you and me; ^(52a)this mound bears witness, and this stele bears witness.” ^(48b)Therefore its name was called Mound-bears-witness, ⁴⁹and The-act-of-seeing, about which he said, “May God oversee between you and me, that we shall withdraw one from the other. ⁵⁰If you shall humiliate my daughters, if you shall take wives in addition to my daughters, beware, no one is with us. ⁵²For whether I do not cross over to you, or you do not cross over this mound and this stele to me for harm, ⁵³the God of Abraam and the God of Nabor will judge between us.” ⁵⁴And Iakob swore by the Fear of his father Isaak. ⁽⁵⁴⁾And Iakob offered a sacrifice on the mountain and called his kinsfolk, and they ate and drank and slept on the mountain.

55(32.1) Then in the morning when Laban had risen, he kissed his sons and his daughters and blessed them, and Laban, turning back, departed to his region.

32 (2)And Iakob departed on his own way. And looking up he saw a divine camp encamped, and the angels of God met him. 2(3)Now Iakob, when he saw them, said, "This is a divine camp!" And he called the name of that place Camps.

3(4) And Iakob sent messengers ahead of him to his brother Esau in the land of Seir in the territory of Edom, 4(5)and he commanded them, saying, "Thus you shall say to my lord Esau: Thus says your servant Iakob, 'I have lived with Laban as an alien and stayed until now, 5(6)and cattle and donkeys and sheep and male and female slaves have come into my possession, and I have sent to tell my lord Esau in order that your servant may find favor before you.'"

6(7) And the messengers returned to Iacob, saying, "We came to your brother Esau, and he is coming to meet you, and four hundred men are with him." 7(8)Then Iakob was greatly afraid and perplexed. And he divided the people that were with him and the cattle and the sheep into two companies, 8(9)and Iakob said, "If Esau should come to one company and eradicate it, then there will be the second company to save itself."

9(10) And Iakob said, "God of my father Abraam and God of my father Isaak, O Lord who said to me, 'Hurry off to the country of your origin, and I will do you good,' 10(11)it is sufficient for me because of all the righteousness and because of all the truth that you have brought about for your servant, for with my staff I crossed this Jordan, but now I have become two companies. 11(12)Deliver me from the hand of my brother Esau—because I am afraid of him—that he not come smite me and mother with children. 12(13)Yet you said, 'I will do you great good and make your offspring as the sand of the sea, which shall not be counted for multitude.'"

13(14) And he slept there that night. And from what he was bringing he took presents and sent them off to his brother Esau, 14(15)two hundred female goats, twenty male goats, two hundred sheep, twenty rams, 15(16)thirty milch camels and their young, forty cows, ten bulls, twenty donkeys and ten foals. 16(17)And he gave them under control to his servants, a flock separately. And he said to his servants, "Go on ahead of me, and put a space between drove and drove." 17(18)And he commanded the first, saying, "If Esau my brother should meet you and ask you, saying, 'Whose are you and where are you going, and whose are these going on ahead of you?' 18(19)you shall say, 'Your servant Iakob's; he has sent presents to my lord Esau, and there he is behind us.' " 19(20)And he commanded the first and the second and the third and all who were going on behind these flocks, saying, "Speak in accordance with this word to Esau when you find him. 20(21)And you shall say, 'There is your servant Iakob coming behind us.' " For he said, "I shall propitiate his face with the presents that go on before him, and afterwards I shall see his face, for perhaps he will accept my face." 21(22)And the presents passed by opposite his face, but he himself slept that night in the camp.

22(23) And that night, after he had gotten up, he took his two wives and his two maids and his eleven youngsters and crossed the ford of the Iakob. 23(24)And he took them and crossed the wadi and carried over all that was his. 24(25)And Iakob was left alone, and a man was wrestling with him until morning. 25(26)And he saw that he was not powerful against him, and he touched the flat part of his thigh, and the flat part of Iakob's thigh became numb as he wrestled with him. 26(27)And he said to him, "Send me away, for the dawn has come up." But he said, "I will not send you away, unless you bless me." 27(28)And he said to him, "What is your name?" And he said, "Iakob." 28(29)Then he said to him, "Your name shall no longer be called Iakob, but Israel shall be your name, because you have prevailed with a god, and with humans you are powerful." 29(30)Then Iakob asked and said, "Tell me your name." And he said, "Why do you ask this, my name?" And there he blessed him. 30(31)And Iakob called the name of that place Divine-form, "For I have seen a god face to face, and my life has been preserved." 31(32)And the sun rose upon him when he passed by Form-of-God; now he was limping upon his thigh. 32(33)Therefore to this day the sons of Israel shall not eat the sinew that became numb, that is on the flat part of the thigh, because he touched the flat part of Iakob's thigh, the sinew, and it became numb.

33 Now when Iakob looked up he saw, and see, his brother Esau was coming, and four hundred men with him. And Iakob distributed the youngsters to Leia and Rachel and the two maids 2 and put the two maids with their sons out front, and Leia with her youngsters behind, and Rachel and Ioseph last. 3But he himself advanced ahead of them and did obeisance upon the ground seven times until he came near his brother.

4 And Esau ran forward to meet him, and embracing him he kissed him and fell upon his neck, and they both wept. 5And looking up he saw the women and youngsters and said, "What are these to you?" And he said, "The youngsters by which God has shown mercy to your servant." 6And the maids and their children drew near and bowed down, 7and Leia and her children drew near and did obeisance, and afterwards Rachel and Ioseph drew near, and they did obeisance. 8And he said, "What are these to you, all these companies that I have met?" And he said, "That your servant may find favor before you, lord." 9But Esau said, "I have much, brother; let your property be yours." 10But Iakob said, "If I have found favor before you, accept my presents through my hands; with regard to this I saw your face, as someone might see a divine face, and you will be pleased with me. ¹¹Receive my blessings that I have brought to you, because God has shown mercy to me and I have everything." And he urged him, and he received them.

¹² And he said, "When we depart, we shall go a direct route." ¹³But he said to him, "My lord knows that the youngsters are rather delicate, and the sheep and cows are giving birth for me; so if I should drive them hard for one day, all the cattle will die. ¹⁴Let my lord advance ahead of his servant, whereas I will regain strength on the way in accordance with the leisure of the journey that is before me and in accordance with the pace of the young children until I come to my lord in Seir."

¹⁵ Then Esau said, "I shall leave behind with you some of the people who are with me." But he said, "Why is this? It is enough that I have found favor before you, lord." ¹⁶Then Esau turned back on that day to his way to Seir. ¹⁷And Iakob was setting out for Tents, and he made himself dwellings there and made tents for his cattle; therefore he called the name of that place Tents.

¹⁸ And Iakob came to Salem, a city of Sikima, which is in the land of Chanaan, when he came from Mesopotamia of Syria, and he encamped facing the city. ¹⁹And from Hemmor^a, Sychem's father, he acquired for one hundred lambs the portion of the field, there where he had set up his tent, ²⁰and there he set up an altar and invoked the God of Israel.

34 Now Dina the daughter of Leia, whom she had borne to Iakob, went out to observe the daughters of the inhabitants. ²And Sychem the son of Hemmor^a the Chorrite, the ruler of the land, saw her, and seizing her he lay with her and humbled her. ³And he attended to the person^b of Dina the daughter of Iakob, and he loved the maiden and spoke with her according to the maiden's mind. ⁴And Sychem spoke to his father Hemmor^a, saying, "Get me this girl for a wife."

⁵ Now Iakob heard that the son of Hemmor^a had defiled his daughter Dina, but his sons were with his livestock in the plain, and Iakob kept silent until they came. ⁶And Hemmor^a the father of Sychem went out to Iakob to speak with him. ⁷And the sons of Iakob came from the plain. And when they heard, the men were cut to the quick, and it was very painful to them because he had done an unseemly thing in Israel by lying with Iakob's daughter, and it shall not be thus.

⁸ And Hemmor^a spoke with them, saying, "My son Sychem has selected your daughter with his soul; give her to him as a wife. ⁹Make marriages with us; give your daughters to us, and take our daughters for your sons. ¹⁰And settle among us, and as for the land, see, it is broad before you; settle, and travel for business in it, and acquire property in it." ¹¹Then Sychem said to her father and to her brothers, "May I find favor before you, and whatever you say, we will give. ¹²Increase the

¹³ But the sons of Iakob answered Sychem and his father Hemmor^a with deceit and spoke with them, because they had defiled their sister Dina, ¹⁴and Symeon and Leui, Dina's brothers, Leia's sons, said to them, "We will not be able to carry out this matter, to give our sister to a man who has a foreskin, for it is a disgrace to us. ¹⁵In this we will become like you and settle among you, if you, even you, become like us when every male of yours has been circumcised, ¹⁶and we will give our daughters to you, and we will take some of your daughters as wives for us, and we will live beside you, and we will be as one clan. ¹⁷But if you do not listen to us to be circumcised, we will depart, taking our daughters."

¹⁸ And their words were pleasing before Hemmor^a and before Sychem, the son of Hemmor^a. ¹⁹And the young man did not delay to carry out this matter, for he was devoted to Iakob's daughter. Now he was the most honored of all those in his father's house. ²⁰So then Hemmor^a and his son Sychem came to the gate of their city and spoke to the men of their city, saying, ²¹"These people are peaceable with us; let them live on the land and travel it for business, and as for the land, see, it is broad before them. We will take their daughters as wives for us, and we will give them our daughters. ²²Only in this will the people become like us to live with us so as to be one people, when every male of ours is circumcised, as they also have been circumcised. ²³And will not their livestock and their possessions and their quadrupeds be ours? Only in this let us become like them, and they will live with us." ²⁴And all those going out the gate of their city listened to Hemmor^a and his son Sychem, and they had the flesh of their foreskin circumcised, every male.

²⁵ Now it came about on the third day, when they were in pain, that the two sons of Iakob, Symeon and Leui, Dina's brothers, took each one his dagger and entered into the city safely and killed every male. ²⁶They killed both Hemmor^a and his son Sychem with a dagger's edge and took Dina out of Sychem's house and went away. ²⁷Then the sons of Iakob came upon the casualties and plundered the city in which they^d had defiled their sister Dina, ²⁸and they took their sheep and their cattle and their donkeys, both as many as were in the city and as many as were in the plain. ²⁹And all their slaves and all their chattels and their wives they captured, and they plundered both as many things as were in the city and as many things as were in the dwellings. ³⁰Then Iakob said to Symeon and Leui, "You have made me hateful so that I am evil to all those inhabiting the land, both among the Chananites and the Pherezites. But as for me, I am few in number, and they, gathering together against me, will chop me up, and I shall be annihilated, I and my house-

35 Now God said to Iakob, “Arise, go up to the place Baithel, and reside there, and make an altar there to the God who appeared to you when you were fleeing from the presence of your brother Esau.”² Then Iakob said to his household and to all those who were with him, “Remove from your midst the foreign gods that are with you, and purify yourselves, and change your garments,³ and arise, let us go up to Baithel, and let us make an altar there to the God who hearkened to me in a day of distress, who was with me and preserved me on the road that I traveled.”⁴ And they gave to Iakob the foreign gods that were in their hands and the earrings in their ears, and Iakob hid them under the terebinth in Sikima, and he destroyed them to the present day.

5 And Israel rose up from Sikima, and a divine fear came upon the cities all around them, and they did not go in pursuit after the sons of Israel.⁶ Then Iakob came to Louza, which is Baithel, which is in the land of Chanaan, he and all the people who were with him.⁷ And there he built an altar and called the name of the place Baithel, for there God had revealed himself to him when he was fleeing from the presence of his brother Esau.⁸ Now Debbora, Rebekka’s nurse, died under the acorn tree below Baithel, and he called its name Acorn-tree-of-mourning.

9 And God appeared to Iakob again in Louza, when he arrived from Mesopotamia of Syria, and God blessed him.¹⁰ And God said to him, “Your name is Iakob; no longer shall it be called Iakob, but Israel shall be your name.”¹¹ And God said to him, “I am your God: increase, and multiply; nations and gatherings of nations shall be from you, and kings shall come from your loins.¹² And the land that I have given to Abraam and Isaak, I have given it to you; it shall be yours, and I will give this land to your offspring after you.”¹³ Then God went up from him out of the place where he had spoken with him.¹⁴ And Iakob set up a stele in the place in which he had spoken with him, a stone stele, and he poured out a libation on it and poured oil on it.¹⁵ And Iakob called the name of the place, there at which God had spoken with him, Baithel.

16(21) Then after Iakob had set out from Baithel, he pitched his tent beyond the tower of Gader.⁽¹⁶⁾ Now it came about when he drew near Chabratha to go to the land of Ephratha, that Rachel gave birth, and she experienced severe birth pangs in the birth.¹⁷ And it came about while she was giving birth with difficulty that the midwife said to her, “Take courage, for this one also is a son for you.”¹⁸ And it came about as she was giving up her soul, for she was dying, that she called his name Son-of-my-pain, but his father called him Benjamin.¹⁹ So then Rachel died, and she was buried on the way to Ephratha (this is Bethleem).²⁰ And Iakob set up a stele at her tomb; this is the stele of Rachel’s tomb to the present day.

21(22) And it came about when Israel dwelt in that land that Rouben went and lay with Balla his father’s concubine, and Israel heard, and it seemed evil in his sight.

22 Now the sons of Iakob were twelve.²³ The sons of Leia: Rouben (Iakob’s firstborn), Symeon, Leui, Ioudas, Issachar, Zaboulon.²⁴ And the sons of Rachel: Ioseph and Beniamin.²⁵ And the sons of Balla, Rachel’s maid: Dan and Nephthali.²⁶ And the sons of Zelpha, Leia’s maid: Gad and Aser. These were the sons of Iakob who were born to him in Mesopotamia of Syria.

27 Now Iakob came to his father Isaak at Mambre, at a city of the plain (this is Chebron) in the land of Chanaan, where Abraam and Isaak had resided as aliens.²⁸ And the days of Isaak that he lived amounted to one hundred eighty years.²⁹ And breathing his last he died and was added to his kin, old and full of days, and his sons Esau and Iakob buried him.

6 Then Esau took his wives and his sons and his daughters and all the slaves of his household and all his possessions and all his livestock and all that he had acquired and that he had procured in the land of Chanaan, and he went out of the land of Chanaan away from the presence of his brother Iakob.⁷ For their possessions were many so as to live together, and the land of their sojourning could not bear them because of the multitude of their possessions.⁸ And Esau lived on the mountain of Seir (as for Esau, he is Edom).

9 Now these are the generations of Esau, ancestor of Edom, on the mountain of Seir,¹⁰ and these are the names of the sons of Esau: Eliphaz son of Ada the wife of Esau, and Ragouel son of Basemmath the wife of Esau.¹¹ And the sons of Eliphaz were: Thaiman, Omar, Sophar, Gothom and Kenez.¹² Now Thamna was a concubine of Eliphaz the son of Esau, and she bore Amalek to Eliphaz; these were the sons of Ada, Esau’s wife.¹³ And these were the sons of Ragouel: Nachoth, Zare, Some and Moze; these were the sons of Esau’s wife, Basemmath.¹⁴ And these were the sons of Esau’s wife Olibema daughter of Ana the son of Sebegon: now she bore to Esau Ieous and Ieglom and Kore.

15 These are the chieftains, the sons of Esau. The sons of Eliphaz the firstborn of Esau: chieftain Thaiman, chieftain Omar, chieftain Sophar, chieftain Kenez,¹⁶ chieftain Kore, chieftain Gothom, chieftain Amalek; these are the chieftains of Eliphaz in the land of Idumea; they are the sons of Ada.¹⁷ And these are the sons of Esau’s son Ragouel: chieftain Nachoth, chieftain Zare, chieftain Some, chieftain Moze; these are the chieftains of Ragouel in the land of Edom; they are the sons of Esau's wife Basemmath. ¹⁸And these are the sons of Esau's wife Olibema: chieftain Ieous, chieftain Ieglom, chieftain Kore; these are the chieftains of Olibema. ¹⁹These are the sons of Esau, and these are their chieftains. These are the sons of Edom.

²⁰ And these are the sons of Seir the Chorrite who inhabits the land: Lotan, Sobal, Sebegon, Ana ²¹and Deson and Asar and Rison; these are the chieftains of the Chorrite the son of Seir in the land of Edom. ²²And the sons of Lotan were: Chorri and Haiman; now Lotan's sister was Thamna. ²³And these are the sons of Sobal: Golon and Manachath and Gaibel, Soph and Onam. ²⁴And these are the sons of Sebegon: Aie and Onan; this is the Onas who found Iamin in the wilderness, when he was pasturing the draft animals of his father Sebegon. ²⁵And these are the sons of Ana: Deson and Olibema daughter of Ana. ²⁶And these are the sons of Deson: Hamada and Asban and Iethran and Charran. ²⁷And these are the sons of Asar: Balaan and Zoukam and Ioykam and Oukan. ²⁸And these are the sons of Rison: Os and Aram. ²⁹These are the chieftains of Chorri: chieftain Lotan, chieftain Sobal, chieftain Sebegon, chieftain Ana, ³⁰chieftain Deson, chieftain Asar, chieftain Rison. These are the chieftains of Chorri by their chieftainships in the land of Edom.

This is Esau, the father of Edom.

37 Now Iakob settled in the land where his father had resided as an alien, in the land of Chanaan. ²And these are the generations of Iakob.

Ioseph, seventeen years of age, used to shepherd the sheep with his brothers, when he was young, with the sons of Balla and with the sons of Zelpha, his father's wives. And Ioseph brought back grievous censure to their father Israel. ³Now Iakob loved Ioseph more than all his sons, because he was a son of old age to him, and he made him a variegated tunic. ⁴But when his brothers saw that their father was cherishing him above all his sons, they hated him and could not speak anything peaceable to him.

⁵ And when Ioseph had dreamed a dream, he told it to his brothers, ⁶and he said to them, "Hear this dream that I dreamed. ⁷I imagined we were binding sheaves in the middle of the plain, and my sheaf rose and stood upright; then your sheaves, turning around, did obeisance to my sheaf." ⁸And his brothers said to him, "Surely you will not, when reigning, reign over us, or, when exercising dominion, exercise dominion over us?" And they proceeded to hate him more because of his dreams and because of his words.

⁹ And he saw another dream and related it to his father and to his brothers and said, "See, I have dreamed another dream, as though the sun and the moon and eleven stars were doing obeisance to me." ¹⁰And his father rebuked him and said to him, "What is this dream that you have dreamed? Shall we indeed, I and your mother and your brothers, when we come, come to do obeisance upon the ground to you?" ¹¹And his brothers were jealous of him, but his father closely watched the matter.

¹² Now his brothers went to Sychem to pasture their father's sheep. ¹³And Israel said to Ioseph, "Are not your brothers herding sheep at Sychem? Come, let me send you to them." And he said to him, "Here I am." ¹⁴And Israel said to him, "Go, see if your brothers and the sheep are well, and tell me." And he sent him from the valley of Chebron, and he came to Sychem. ¹⁵And a man found him wandering in the plain, and the man asked him, saying, "What are you seeking?" ¹⁶And he said, "I seek my brothers; tell me where they are pasturing." ¹⁷And the man said to him, "They have departed from here, for I heard them say, 'Let us go to Dothaim.'" And Ioseph went after his brothers and found them at Dothaim. ¹⁸Now they saw him beforehand from a distance before he came near to them, and they intended to act wickedly to kill him. ¹⁹And they said, each one to his brother, "Here comes that dreamer. ²⁰So come now, let us kill him and cast him into one of the pits, and we shall say, 'An evil animal has devoured him,' and we shall see what his dreams will be." ²¹But when Rouben heard it, he delivered him out of their hands and said, "We shall not smite him in regard to life." ²²And Rouben said to them, "Shed no blood; throw him into this pit in the wilderness, but lay no hand on him"—that he might rescue him out of their hands and restore him to his father. ²³Now it came about when Ioseph came to his brothers, that they stripped Ioseph of the variegated tunic that was around him, ²⁴and, taking him, they cast him into the pit. Now the pit was empty; it had no water.

ing up with their eyes, they saw, and see, Ismaelite wayfarers were coming from Galaad, and their camels were laden with fragrant substances and pine resin and oil of myrrh. Now they were traveling to bring them down to Egypt. ²⁶Then Ioudas said to his brothers, "What advantage is it if we kill our brother and conceal his blood? ²⁷Come, let us sell him to these Ismaelites, but let our hands not be upon him, because he is our brother and our flesh." And his brothers listened. ²⁸And some Madienite traders were passing by, and they drew out and brought up Ioseph from the pit and sold Ioseph to the Ismaelites for twenty gold pieces, and they brought Ioseph down to Egypt.

²⁹ Then Rouben returned to the pit, and he did not see Ioseph in the pit, and he tore his clothes. ³⁰And he returned to his brothers and said, "The youngster is not there^b, and I, where shall I yet go?" ³¹Then taking Ioseph's tunic, they slaughtered a kid of the goats and stained the tunic with the blood. ³²And they sent the variegated tunic, and they brought it in to their father and said, "This we have found; observe whether it is your son's tunic or not." ³³And he recognized it and said, "It is my son's tunic! An evil animal has devoured him, an animal has seized Ioseph." ³⁴Then Iakob tore his clothes and put sackcloth on his loins, and he was mourning for his son many days. ³⁵And all his sons and daughters gathered together and came to comfort him, and he would not be comforted, saying, "I shall go down to Hades to my son, mourning." And his father bewailed him. ³⁶Now the Madienites had sold Ioseph in Egypt to Petephres, Pharaoh's gelding, a chief butcher.

38 Now it came about at that time that Ioudas went down from his brothers and came as far as to a certain Odollamite man whose name was Hiras. ²And there Ioudas saw a Chananite man's daughter whose name was Saua, and he took her and went in to her. ³And after she had conceived she bore a son and called his name Er. ⁴And after she had conceived again she bore a son and called his name Aunan. ⁵And yet again she bore a son, and she called his name Selom. Now she was in Chasbi when she bore them. ⁶And Ioudas took for Er his firstborn a wife whose name was Thamar. ⁷But Er, Ioudas' firstborn, became wicked in the sight of the Lord, and God killed him. ⁸Then Ioudas said to Aunan, "Go in to your brother's wife, and act the part of a brother-in-law, and raise up offspring for your brother." ⁹But because Aunan knew that the offspring would not be his, it would come about that he would pour out ^bhis semen^b upon the ground when he would go in to his brother's wife so that he would not give offspring to his brother. ¹⁰Now it seemed evil in the sight of God that he did this, and he put him to death also. ¹¹Then Ioudas said to his daughter-in-law Thamar, "Stay as a widow in the house of your father until my son Selom becomes full-grown"—for he said, "Lest perhaps he too should die just like his brothers." And Thamar, after she had departed, stayed in the house of her father.

¹² Now the days were multiplied, and the wife of Ioudas, Saua, died, and after Ioudas had been comforted, he went up to Thamna to those shearing his sheep, he and his shepherd Hiras the Odollamite. ¹³And it was reported to his daughter-in-law Thamar—they were saying—"See, your father-in-law is going up to Thamna to shear his sheep." ¹⁴And taking off from herself the garments of her widowhood, she clothed herself with a light summer garment and adorned herself and sat down near the gates of Ainan, which is on the way past Thamna, for she saw that Selom had become full-grown, yet he did not give her to him as a wife. ¹⁵And when Ioudas saw her he thought she was a prostitute, for she had covered her face, and he did not recognize her. ¹⁶Then he turned aside to her from the way and said to her, "Allow me to come in to you," for he did not know that she was his daughter-in-law. And she said, "What will you give me, if you come in to me?" ¹⁷And he said, "I will send to you a kid of the goats from the flocks." And she said, "If you give a pledge until you send it." ¹⁸And he said, "What pledge shall I give to you?" And she said, "Your ring and your small necklace and the staff that is in your hand." And he gave them to her and went in to her, and she became pregnant by him. ¹⁹And getting up she went away and took off from herself her light summer garment and put on the garments of her widowhood.

²⁴ Now it came about after a period of three months that it was reported to Ioudas—they were saying—"Your daughter-in-law Thamar has played the whore, and see, she is with child by whoredom." Then Ioudas said, "Bring her out, and let her be burned." ²⁵But as she was being brought she sent to her father-in-law, saying, "By the man whose things these are, I am with child." And she said, "Take note whose is the ring and the small necklace and this staff." ²⁶Then Ioudas recognized them and said, "Thamar has been justified rather than I, inasmuch as I did not give her to my son Selom." And he did not continue to know her any more.

²⁷ Now it came about at the time she was giving birth, that then she had twins in her womb. ²⁸And it came about as she was giving birth that the one put forth his hand, and taking it, the mid-wife bound scarlet material on his hand, saying, "This one will come out earlier." ²⁹But when he retracted his hand, then immediately out came his brother. And she said, "Why has a barrier been cut through because of you?" And she called his name Phares. ³⁰And afterward his brother came out, upon whom was the scarlet material upon his hand, and she called his name Zara.

39 Now Ioseph was brought down to Egypt, and Petephres, the eunuch of Pharaoh, a chief butcher, an Egyptian, acquired him from the hand of the Ismaelites, who had brought him down there. ²And the Lord was with Ioseph, and he was a successful man, and he was in the house with his Egyptian lord. ³And his lord knew that the Lord was with him and the Lord was prospering whatever he did. ⁴And Ioseph found favor before his lord, and she was well pleased with him and appointed^a him over his house and gave everything that he had into Ioseph's control. ⁵Now it came about after he had been appointed over his house and over everything that he had, that then the Lord blessed the Egyptian's house for Ioseph's sake, and the Lord's blessing was on all that belonged to him in the house and in the field. ⁶And he entrusted everything that he had into Ioseph's hands, and he had no knowledge of any of his own affairs except the bread that he would eat.

And Ioseph was handsome in physique and very pleasing in appearance. ⁷And it came about after these matters, that then his lord's wife cast her eyes upon Ioseph and said, "Lie with me." ⁸But he would not, and he said to his lord's wife, "If, because of me, my lord has no knowledge of anything in his house and he gave everything that he has into my hands⁹ and nothing in this household is above me and he has not excluded anything from me except you, because you are his wife, then how shall I carry out this evil matter and sin against God?" ¹⁰And when she would speak to Ioseph day after day, then he would not submit to her to sleep with her in order to have relations with her. ¹¹Now some such day came: Ioseph went into the house to perform his tasks, and no one of those in the household was inside, ¹²and she drew him by his garments, saying, "Lie with me!" And leaving his garments behind in her hands he fled and went outside. ¹³Now^b it came about when she saw that he had left his garments behind in her hands and had fled and gone outside, ¹⁴that then she called those who were in her household and spoke to them, saying, "See, hec has brought among us a Hebrew servant to mock us! He came in to me, saying, 'Lie with me,' and I cried out with a loud voice. ¹⁵And as soon as he heard that I raised my voice and cried out, he fled and went outside, leaving his garments behind with me." ¹⁶And she left his garments with herself until the lord came into his house. ¹⁷And she spoke with him according to these words, saying, "The Hebrew servant, whom you brought in to us, came in to me to mock me and said to me, 'I will lie with you.' ¹⁸But when he heard that I raised my voice and cried out, he left his garments behind with me and fled and went outside."

¹⁹ Now it came about when his lord heard the words of his wife that she spoke to him, saying, "Thus your servant did to me," that then he was incensed with anger. ²⁰And Ioseph's lord, taking him, put him into the stronghold, into the place in which the king's prisoners are confined, there in the stronghold. ²¹And the Lord was with Ioseph and poured down mercy upon him, and he gave him favor before the chief jailer, ²²and the chief jailer gave the prison into Ioseph's control, and all who had been led away, who were in the prison, and everything that they were doing there. ²³The chief jailer of the prison had no knowledge of anything because of him, for everything was under Ioseph's control, because the Lord was with him, and whatever he would do, the Lord would prosper in his hands.

40 Now it came about after these matters that the chief cupbearer of the king of Egypt and the chief baker transgressed against their lord the king of Egypt. ²And Pharaoh became angry with his two eunuchs—with the chief cupbearer and with the chief baker—³and he put them in custody at the chief butcher's place in the prison, in the place, there where Ioseph had been led away. ⁴And the chief jailer put them together with Ioseph, and he came to their aid, and they were in the jail for some days. ⁵And both saw a dream—the chief cupbearer and the chief baker, who belonged to the king of Egypt, who were in the prison—each one a dream, in a single night was the appearance of his dream. ⁶And Ioseph came in to them in the morning, and he saw them, and they were troubled. ⁷And he was asking Pharaoh's eunuchs, who were with him in the jail at his lord's place, saying, "Why is it that your faces are gloomy today?" ⁸And they said to him, "We have seen a dream, and there is no one to interpret it." Then Ioseph said to them, "Is not the clarification of them through God? So relate them to me."

⁹ And the chief cupbearer related his dream to Ioseph and said, "In my sleep a vine was before me. ¹⁰And on the vine were three stems, and it was flourishing, having produced shoots; the grapes of a bunch of grapes were ripe. ¹¹And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand, and I took the bunch of grapes and squeezed it out into the cup and gave the cup into Pharaoh's hands." ¹²And Ioseph said to him, "This is its interpretation: the three stems are three days; ¹³yet three days and Pharaoh will remember your office and restore you to your chief cupbearership, and you shall give Pharaoh's cup into his hand in accordance with your former office, when you used to pour wine. ¹⁴But remember me through yourself, when it should go well with you, and you shall do mercy with me and make mention of me to Pharaoh and bring me out of this

¹⁶And the chief baker saw that he interpreted rightly, and he said to Joseph, “I also saw a dream, and I imagined I was taking up on my head three baskets of coarse meal loaves. ¹⁷Now in the top-most basket was baker’s work of all sorts, which the king, Pharaoh, eats, and the fowl of the sky were devouring them from the basket that was atop my head.” ¹⁸Then Joseph said to him in reply, “This is its interpretation: the three baskets are three days; ¹⁹within three more days Pharaoh will take away your head from you and hang you on a pole, and the birds of the sky will eat your pieces of flesh from you.”

²⁰Now it came about on the third ^aday that Pharaoh had a birthday, and^a he was making a feast for all his servants. And he remembered the office of the chief cupbearer and the office of the chief baker among his servants. ²¹And he restored the chief cupbearer to his office, and he gave the cup into Pharaoh’s hand, ²²but the chief baker he hanged, just as Joseph had interpreted to them. ²³But the chief cupbearer did not remember Joseph; rather, he forgot him.

41 Now it came about after two years of days that Pharaoh saw a dream. He imagined he was standing by the river, ²and look, coming up as it were out of the river were seven cows, fair in form and choice in flesh, and they were grazing in the reed grass. ³And seven other cows, ugly in form and scrawny in flesh, were coming up out of the river after them and were feeding by the cows by the bank of the river. ⁴And the seven cows that were ugly and scrawny in flesh ate up the seven cows that were fair in form and choice. Then Pharaoh awoke. ⁵And he dreamed for the second time, and look, seven ears of grain, choice and fair, were coming up on one stalk. ⁶And look, seven ears of grain, scrawny and wind-blasted, were growing up after them. ⁷And the seven ears of grain, scrawny and wind-blasted, swallowed up the seven choice and full ears of grain. Then Pharaoh awoke, and it was a dream.

⁸Now morning came, and his soul was troubled, and he sent for and called all the expounders of Egypt and all its wise men, and Pharaoh related his dream to them, and there was no one to tell it to Pharaoh. ⁹And the chief cupbearer spoke to Pharaoh, saying, “I recall my fault today. ¹⁰Pharaoh became angry with his servants and put us in custody in the house of the chief butcher, both me and the chief baker. ¹¹And we saw a dream in one night, he and I; we saw, each one, in accordance with his own dream. ¹²Now a young man was there with us, a Hebrew servant of the chief butcher, and we related them to him, and he interpreted them to us. ¹³And it came about that just as he interpreted to us, so also it happened, and thus I was restored to my office, but he was hanged.”

¹⁴Then Pharaoh sent for and called Joseph, and they brought him out of the stronghold and shaved him and changed his apparel, and he came to Pharaoh. ¹⁵And Pharaoh said to Joseph, “I have seen a dream, and there is no one to interpret it. But I have heard them saying of you that you, on hearing dreams, interpret them.” ¹⁶And Joseph said to Pharaoh in reply, “Without God the safety of Pharaoh will not be answered.” ¹⁷Then Pharaoh spoke to Joseph, saying, “In my dream I imagined I was standing by the bank of the river, ¹⁸and seven cows, choice in flesh and fair in form, were coming up as it were out of the river and were feeding in the reed grass. ¹⁹And look, seven other cows were coming up after them out of the river, worthless and ugly in form and scrawny in flesh, such that I had not seen uglier in the whole land of Egypt. ²⁰And the seven scrawny and ugly cows ate up the first seven fair and choice cows, ²¹and they entered into their bellies, and they did not become distinguishable considering that they entered into their bellies, and their appearances were ugly as also at first. And after I awoke, I fell asleep. ²²And I saw again in my sleep, and as it were seven ears of grain, full and fair, were coming up on one stalk; ²³then seven other ears of grain, scrawny and wind-blasted, were growing up in proximity to them, ²⁴and the seven scrawny and wind-blasted ears of grain swallowed up the seven fair and full ears of grain. So I spoke to the expounders, and there was no one to tell me.”

²⁵And Joseph said to Pharaoh, “Pharaoh’s dream is one; God has shown to Pharaoh what he is about to do. ²⁶The seven fair cows are seven years, and the seven fair ears of grain are seven years; Pharaoh’s dream is one. ²⁷And the seven scrawny cows that were coming up after them are seven years, and the seven scrawny and wind-blasted ears of grain shall be seven years of famine. ²⁸Now as for the word that I have spoken to Pharaoh, ‘God showed to Pharaoh what he is about to do,’ ²⁹look, seven years are coming, great plenty in all the land of Egypt. ³⁰Then afterwards will come seven years of famine, and they will forget the abundance in the whole land of Egypt, and the famine will consume the land, ³¹and the plenty will not be observed on the land because of the famine that will be afterwards, for it will be very severe. ³²And as for Pharaoh’s dream being repeated twice: because the matter that is from God will be real, and God will hasten to do it. ³³Now then search out a man, sensible and intelligent, and appoint him over the land of Egypt. ³⁴And let Pharaoh make and appoint district governors over the land, and let them take one-fifth of all the produce of the land of Egypt in the seven years of plenty, ³⁵and let them gather all the provisions of these seven good years that are coming, and let the grain be gathered under the authority of Pharaoh; let provisions be kept in the cities. ³⁶And the provisions shall be kept for the land in regard to the seven years of famine that will be in the land of Egypt, and the land will not be annihilated by the famine.”

37 And the words were pleasing before Pharaoh and before all his servants,³⁸ and Pharaoh said to all his servants, "Surely we shall not find such a person, who has a divine spirit within?"³⁹ Then Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Seeing that God has shown you all these things, there is no person more sensible and intelligent than you.⁴⁰ You shall be over my house, and all my people shall comply with your mouth; only with regard to the throne will I be above you."⁴¹ And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Look, I am appointing you today over all the land of Egypt."⁴² And removing his ring from his hand, Pharaoh placed it on Joseph's hand and arrayed him in fine linen apparel and placed a gold collar around his neck.⁴³ And he mounted him on the second chariot of those that were his, and a crier cried out in front of him. And he appointed him over the whole land of Egypt.⁴⁴ And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "I am Pharaoh; without you no one shall lift up a hand in reference to all the land of Egypt."⁴⁵ And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Psonthomphanech, and he gave him Asenneth daughter of Petephres, priest of Heliopolis, as a wife for him.

46 Now Joseph was thirty years of age when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh and went through all the land of Egypt.⁴⁷ And in the seven years of plenty the earth produced sheaves.⁴⁸ And he gathered up all the provisions of the seven years, in which there was plenty in the land of Egypt, and put the provisions in the cities; provisions of the plains of the city which were around it he put in it.⁴⁹ And Joseph gathered up very much grain—like the sand of the sea—until they were unable to count, for there was no counting.

50 Now before the seven years of famine came, Joseph had two sons, whom Asenneth daughter of Petephres, priest of Heliopolis, bore to him.⁵¹ And Joseph called the name of the firstborn Manasse, because "God has caused me to forget all my hardships and all my father's affairs."⁵² And the name of the second he called Ephraim, because "God has made me increase in the land of my humiliation."

53 So the seven years of plenty that occurred in the land of Egypt passed,⁵⁴ and the seven years of famine began to come, just as Joseph had said. And famine occurred in all the earth, yet in all the land of Egypt there were bread loaves.⁵⁵ And all the land of Egypt was hungry, and the people cried to Pharaoh for bread loaves. Then Pharaoh said to all the Egyptians, "Go to Joseph, and whatever he says to you, do."⁵⁶ And the famine was over the face of all the land, and Joseph opened all the granaries and was selling to all the Egyptians.⁵⁷ And all the countries came into Egypt to Joseph to buy, for the famine prevailed in all the earth.

42 Now Iakob, when he saw that there was a sale in Egypt, said to his sons, "Why are you idle?² See, I have heard that there is grain in Egypt; go down there, and purchase a few provisions for us in order that we may live and not die."³ And the ten brothers of Joseph went down to purchase grain from Egypt.⁴ But he did not send Joseph's brother Benjamin with his brothers, for he said, "Lest perhaps sickness befall him."⁵ And the sons of Israel came to buy with those who were coming, for the famine was in the land of Chanaan.

6 Now Joseph was ruler of the land; he was selling to all the people of the land. And when Joseph's brothers came, they did obeisance to him face down on the ground.⁷ And Joseph, when he saw his brothers, recognized them, and he was keeping himself estranged from them and spoke harshly to them and said to them, "Where have you come from?" And they said, "From the land of Chanaan to buy provisions."⁸ Now Joseph recognized his brothers, but they did not recognize him.⁹ And Joseph remembered the dreams that he himself had seen, and he said to them, "You are spies; you have come to scrutinize the tracks of the country!"¹⁰ But they said, "No, lord, your servants came to purchase provisions.¹¹ We are all sons of one man. We are peaceable; your servants are not spies."¹² Nevertheless he said to them, "No, but you came to see the tracks of the land!"¹³ Then they said, "We, your servants, are twelve brothers in the land of Chanaan, and see, the younger is with our father today, and the other is no more."¹⁴ But Joseph said to them, "This is what I have said to you, saying, 'You are spies!'¹⁵ In this you shall manifest yourselves: by the health of Pharaoh, you shall not depart from this place unless your younger brother comes here!¹⁶ Send one of you, and take your brother, but as for you, be led away until your words become manifest, whether you are telling the truth or not; otherwise, by the health of Pharaoh, surely you are spies."¹⁷ And he put them in custody for three days.

18 Then on the third day he said to them, "Do this, and you will live, for I fear God.¹⁹ If you are peaceable, let one brother of you be confined in the jail, but you yourselves go, and carry away the purchase of your grain allowance,²⁰ and bring your younger brother to me, and your words will be believed; otherwise, you shall die." And they did so.²¹ And each one said to his brother, "Indeed, for we are at fault concerning our brother, because we disregarded the affliction of his soul, when he pleaded with us, and we did not listen to him. This is why this affliction has come upon us."²² Then Rouben said to them in reply, "Did I not speak to you, saying, 'Do not injure the youngster? And you did not listen to me. And see, his blood is being sought out.'"²³ Now they did not know that Joseph was listening, for the interpreter was between them.²⁴ And turning away from them Joseph wept. And again he came to them and spoke to them, and he took Symeon from them and bound him before them.²⁵ Then Joseph commanded that they fill their containers with grain and to return the money to each one in his sack and to give them a stock of provisions for the journey. And thus it happened to them.

26 And after they had put their grain upon their donkeys, they departed from there. ²⁷Now when one loosened his bag to give the donkeys fodder where they had lodged, he saw his bundle of money, and it was atop the mouth of the bag. ²⁸And he said to his brothers, "The money has been returned to me, and, look, this is in my bag!" And their heart was confounded, and they were mutually troubled, saying, "What is this that God has done to us?"

29 And they came to their father Iakob in the land of Chanaan, and they told him all that had befallen them, saying, ³⁰"The man, the lord of the land, has spoken harshly to us, and he put us in custody as ones spying out the land. ³¹But we said to him, 'We are peaceable, we are not spies. ³²We are twelve brothers, sons of our father; the one is no more, and the smaller one is with our father today in the land of Chanaan.' ³³Then the man, the lord of the land, said to us, 'By this I shall know that you are peaceable: leave one brother here with me, and go off, taking the purchase of your household's grain allowance, ³⁴and bring your younger brother to me—and I shall know that you are not spies, but that you are peaceable, and I will return your brother to you—and travel in the land for business.'"

35 Now it came about as they were emptying their sacks that then each one's bundle of money was in their sack. And they saw their bundles of money, they and their father, and they were afraid. ³⁶And their father Iakob said to them, "I am the one you have bereaved of children: Ioseph is not, Symeon is not, and you will take Benjamin. All this has come upon me!" ³⁷Then Rouben spoke to his father, saying, "Kill my two sons, if I do not bring him to you. Give him into my hand, and I will bring him back to you." ³⁸But he said, "My son shall not go down with you, because his brother died and he alone has been left. And it will turn out that he becomes sick on the journey that you travel, and you will bring down my old age with sorrow to Hades."

43 Now the famine prevailed upon the land. ²And it came about when they had finished eating up the grain that they had brought from Egypt, that then their father said to them, "Again go purchase a few provisions for us." ³But Ioudas spoke to him, saying, "With a solemn declaration the man has solemnly declared to us, saying, 'You shall not see my face unless your younger brother be with you.' ⁴If, therefore, you send our brother with us, we will go down and buy you provisions, ⁵but if you do not send our brother with us, we will not go, for the man spoke to us, saying, 'You shall not see my face unless your younger brother be with you.'"⁶ And Israel said, "Why did you treat me badly by telling the man whether you have a brother?"⁷ And they said, "As he was inquiring, the man asked questions about us and our kindred, saying, 'Is your father still alive? Have you a brother?' And we reported to him in accordance with this questioning. Surely we did not know whether he would say to us, 'Bring your brother.'"⁸ Then Ioudas said to his father Israel, "Send the youngster with me, and rising, we will go in order that we may live and not die—both you and we and our dependants. ⁹And I am the one who is surety for him; demand him from my hand. If I do not bring him to you and set him before you, I will have failed in regard to you for all days. ¹⁰For if we had not delayed, we would already have returned twice."

11 Then their father Israel said to them, "If it is so, do this: take some of the fruits of the land in your containers, and bring down presents to the man, some pine resin and some honey, incense and oil of myrrh and terebinth and nuts. ¹²And take twice the money in your hands; bring back with you the money that was returned in your bags; perhaps it is a mistake. ¹³Take your brother also and rise, go down to the man. ¹⁴And may my God grant you favor before the man, and may he send off your one brother and Benjamin. For indeed, as for me, just as I have been bereaved of children, I have been bereaved of children."¹⁵ Now when the men took these presents ^athey also took double the money in their hands, and ^aBenjamin, and rising, they went down into Egypt and stood before Ioseph.

16 And Ioseph saw them and his brother Benjamin, and he said to the one in charge of his household, "Bring the men in to the house, and slaughter animals, and make ready, for the men shall eat bread loaves with me during the noon hour." ¹⁷And the man did just as Ioseph said, and he brought the men in to the house of Ioseph. ¹⁸Now when the men saw that they had been brought in to Ioseph's house, they said, "Because of the money that was returned in our bags at first we are being brought in so that he may accuse us falsely and set upon us, to take us as slaves with our donkeys." ¹⁹And going to the man who was in charge of Ioseph's house, they spoke with him in the gateway of the house, ²⁰saying, "We plead, lord; we came down at first to purchase provisions. ²¹Now it came about when we came to the lodging and opened our bags, that then there was the money of each one in his bag! Our money by weight we have now brought back in our hands, ²²and we have brought with ourselves other money to buy provisions. We do not know who put our money into our bags." ²³But he said to them, "May he be gracious to you; do not be afraid; your God and the God of your fathers gave you treasures in your bags, but I have your good money in full." And he brought Symeon out to them. ²⁴And he brought water to wash their feet and gave their donkeys fodder. ²⁵And they made the presents ready until Ioseph came at noon, for they had heard that he was going to have lunch there.

26 And Ioseph came into the dwelling, and they brought to him the presents that they had in their hands—into the house—and did obeisance to him face down on the ground. ²⁷And he asked them, “How are you?” And he said to them, “Is your father well, the old man of whom you spoke? Is he still alive?” ²⁸And they said, “Your servant our father is well; he is still alive.” And he said, “Blessed be that man to God.” And bending forward they did obeisance to him. ²⁹Then looking up with his eyes, he saw his brother Benjamin, born of the same mother, and said, “Is this your younger brother, whom you said you would bring to me?” And he said, “May God show mercy to you, child!” ³⁰And Joseph was troubled, for his insides were twisting up over his brother, and he was seeking to weep. And going into the chamber he wept there. ³¹Then washing his face and coming out he controlled himself and said, “Serve bread loaves.” ³²And they served him alone and them by themselves and the Egyptians who were dining with him by themselves, for the Egyptians could not eat bread loaves together with the Hebrews, for it is an abomination to the Egyptians. ³³And they were seated before him, the firstborn according to his seniority and the younger according to his youth, and the men were amazed, each one to his brother. ³⁴And they carried portions to them from him, but Benjamin’s portion was magnified beyond the portions of all, five-fold in comparison to the ones of those. And they drank and became intoxicated with him.

⁶ And when he found them, he spoke to them according to these words. ⁷Then they said to him, “Why does our lord speak according to these words? Heaven forbid for your servants to do according to this word! ⁸If indeed the money that we found in our bags we brought back to you from the land of Chanaan, how would we steal silver or gold from your lord’s house? ⁹As for the one among your servants with whom the cup should be found, let him die, but as for us, we will be slaves to our lord.” ¹⁰And he said, “Even now, as you say thus it shall be: the one with whom the cup should be found shall be my slave, but as for you, you shall be clear.” ¹¹And each one hurried and lowered his bag to the ground, and each opened his bag. ¹²And he was searching, beginning from the elder until he came to the younger, and he found the cup in the bag of Benjamin. ¹³And they tore their clothes, and each one put his bag on his donkey, and they returned to the city.

¹⁴ Then Ioudas and his brothers came in to Ioseph while he was still there, and they fell on the ground before him. ¹⁵And Ioseph said to them, “What is this deed that you have done? Do you not know that a person such as I will practice ornithomancy by ornithomancy?” ¹⁶And Ioudas said, “What shall we say in answer to our lord or what should we speak or how should we justify ourselves? But God has found out the injustice of your servants. Here we are, our lord’s domestics, both we and the one with whom the cup has been found.” ¹⁷But Ioseph said, “Heaven forbid for me to carry out this matter! The person with whom the cup was found, he shall be my slave, but as for you, go up in safety to your father.”

¹⁸ Then Ioudas, drawing near to him, said, “I plead, lord, let your servant speak a word before you, and do not become angry with your servant, because you are after Pharaoh. ¹⁹Lord, it was you who asked your servants, saying, ‘Do you have a father or a brother?’ ²⁰And we said to our lord, ‘We have an elderly father, and he has a younger child of his old age, and his brother died, and he alone was left to his mother, and his father loved him.’ ²¹Then you said to your servants, ‘Bring him down to me, and I am going to take care of him.’ ²²And we said to our lord, ‘The youngster will not be able to leave his father behind, and if he should leave his father behind, he will die.’ ²³Then it was you who said to your servants, ‘Unless your younger brother comes down with you, you shall not continue still to see my face.’ ²⁴And it came about when we went up to your servant, our father, that we told him the words of our lord. ²⁵Then our father said to us, ‘Go again; buy us a few provisions.’ ²⁶But we said, ‘We shall not be able to go down; yet if indeed our younger brother goes down with us, we will go down, for we shall not be able to see the man’s face, if our younger brother is not with us.’ ²⁷Then your servant our father said to us, ‘You know that my wife bore me two. ²⁸And the one went away from me, and you said that he had come to be eaten by wild beasts, and I have not seen him ever since. ²⁹So if you take this one also from my presence and sickness befall him on the way, then you will bring down my old age with sorrow to Hades.’ ³⁰So now if I go in to your servant, our father, and the youngster be not with us (now his soul depends upon the soul of this one), ³¹then it shall be that when he sees the youngster is not with us, he will perish, and your servants will bring down the old age of your servant, our father, with grief to Hades. ³²For your servant has become surety for the child with my father, saying, ‘If I do not bring him to you and set him before you, I will have failed towards my father for all days.’ ³³So now I will remain with you as a slave, my lord’s domestic, in place of the child, but let the child go up with his brothers. ³⁴For how shall I go up to my father, if the child is not with us?—lest I see the evils that will find my father!”

45 And Ioseph could not bear with all those who were standing by him, but said, “Send all away from me.” And no one stood by Ioseph any longer when he was making himself known to his brothers. ²And he let go his voice with weeping; now all the Egyptians heard it, and it came to be heard in the household of Pharao. ³And Ioseph said to his brothers, “I am Ioseph. Is my father still alive?” And his brothers could not answer him, for they were troubled.

⁴ Then Ioseph said to his brothers, “Come near to me.” And they came near. And he said, “I am your brother Ioseph, whom you sold into Egypt. ⁵Now therefore do not be distressed nor let it seem hard to you that you sold me here, for God sent me before you for life. ⁶For famine is on the earth this second year, and there are still five years remaining in which there will be neither plowing nor harvest. ⁷For God sent me before you, to leave behind a remnant of you on the earth and to nourish a great posterity of you. ⁸Now therefore it is not you who have sent me here, but rather God, and he made me as a father to Pharao and lord of all his house and ruler over all the land of Egypt. ⁹So hurry, go up to my father, and say to him, ‘This is what your son Ioseph says, God made me lord of all the land of Egypt; so come down to me, and do not remain. ¹⁰And you shall settle in the land of Gesem of Arabia, and you shall be near me, you and your sons and your son’s sons, your sheep and your cattle and as much as you have, ¹¹and I will nourish you there—for there is famine for five more years—lest you be annihilated, you and your sons and all your possessions.’ ¹²Look, your eyes and the eyes of Benjamin my brother see that it is my mouth that speaks to you. ¹³So report to my father all my glory in Egypt and how much you have seen and make haste; bring my father down here.” ¹⁴And falling upon his brother Benjamin’s neck, he wept on him, and Benjamin wept on his neck. ¹⁵And kissing all his brothers, he wept on them, and after that his brothers spoke to him.

¹⁶ And the utterance was proclaimed in Pharao’s house—they were saying—“Ioseph’s brothers have come.” And Pharao and his retinue were delighted. ¹⁷Then Pharao said to Ioseph, “Say to your brothers, ‘Do this: load your transport animals, and go off to the land of Chanaan, ¹⁸and come to me, taking along your father and your possessions, and I will give you some of all the good things of Egypt, and you shall eat the marrow of the land.’ ¹⁹And as for you, command these things, to take wagons for them from the land of Egypt—for your children and wives—and when you have taken up your father, come. ²⁰Do not spare your accoutrements with your eyes, for all the good things of Egypt shall be yours.”

said by Pharao the king, and he gave them a stock of provisions for the journey, ²²and to all he gave two garments, but to Benjamin he gave three hundred gold pieces and five exceptional garments, ²³and to his father he sent the same kinds of things, and ten donkeys carrying some of all the good things of Egypt, and ten mules carrying bread loaves to his father for the journey. ²⁴Then he sent his brothers off, and they went, and he said to them, “Do not get angry on the way.”

²⁵ And they went up out of Egypt and came into the land of Chanaan to their father Iakob, ²⁶and they told him, saying, “Your son Ioseph is alive, and he rules over all the land of Egypt!” And Iakob’s mind was confounded, for he did not believe them. ²⁷And they spoke to him all the things said by Ioseph, as many as he had said to them. And when he saw the wagons that Ioseph had sent so as to take him up, the spirit of their father Iakob was rekindled. ²⁸Then Israel said, “It is a great thing for me if my son Ioseph is still alive. I will go see him before I die.”

46 Now after Israel had set out, he and all that was his, he came to the well of the oath and offered a sacrifice to the God of his father Isaak. ²Then God said to Israel in a vision of the night (when he had said, “Iakob, Iakob,” and he had said, “What is it?”), ³saying, “I am the God of your fathers; do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for I will make you into a great nation there, ⁴and it is I who will go down with you to Egypt, and it is I who will bring you up totally^a, and Ioseph shall lay his hands on your eyes.”

⁵ Then Iakob rose up from the well of the oath, and the sons of Iakob took up their father Israel and their chattels and their wives on the wagons that Ioseph had sent to carry him, ⁶and when they had taken up their possessions and every acquisition that they had acquired in the land of Chanaan, then he came into Egypt, Iakob and all his offspring with him, ⁷sons and his sons’ sons with him, daughters and his sons’ daughters, and all his offspring he brought into Egypt.

Saunis and Thasoban and Aedis and Aroedis and Arielis. ¹⁷And the sons of Aser: Iemna and Iesoua and Ieoul and Baria and their sister Sara. And the sons of Baria: Chobor and Melchiel. ¹⁸These are the sons of Zelpha, whom Laban gave to his daughter Leia, who bore these to Iakob, sixteen persons. ¹⁹And the sons of Iakob's wife Rachel: Ioseph and Beniamin. ²⁰And ^ato Ioseph in the land of Egypt were born sons^a, Manasse and Ephraim, whom Asenneth daughter of Petephres, priest of Heliopolis, bore to him. And ^bto Manasse were born sons^b, whom the Syrian concubine bore to him: Machir, and Machir became the father of Galaad. And the sons of Manasse's brother Ephraim: Southalaam and Taam. And the sons of Southalaam: Edem. ²¹And the sons of Beniamin: Bala and Chobor and Asbel. And ^cto Bala were born sons^c: Gera and Noeman and Anchis and Ros and Mamphin and Hophim, and Gera became the father of Arad. ²²These are the sons of Rachel, whom she bore to Iakob—all eighteen persons. ²³And the sons of Dan: Hasom. ²⁴And the sons of Nephthali: Iasiel and Goyni and Isaar^d and Syllem. ²⁵These are the sons of Balla, whom Laban gave to his daughter Rachel, who bore these to Iakob—all seven persons. ²⁶And all the persons who came with Iakob into Egypt, who came out from his thighs, not including the wives of Iakob's sons, all the persons were sixty-six. ²⁷And the sons of Ioseph who were born to him in the land of Egypt were nine persons. All the persons of Iakob's house who came into Egypt were seventy-five.

²⁸ And he sent Ioudas ahead of him to Ioseph in order to meet him over against Heroonpolis in the land of Ramesses. ²⁹And when Ioseph had hitched up his chariots, he went up to meet his father Israel over against Heroonpolis. And when he appeared to him, he fell upon his neck and wept with much weeping. ³⁰And Israel said to Ioseph, "Henceforth I shall die, since I have seen your face, for you are still alive." ³¹And Ioseph said to his brothers, "When I go up, I will tell Pharao and will say to him, 'My brothers and my father's household, who were in the land of Chanaan, have come to me. ³²Now the men are shepherds, for they have been stockmen, and they have brought their livestock and their cattle and all that is theirs.' ³³So if Pharao should call you and say to you, 'What is your occupation?' ³⁴you shall say, 'We your servants are stockmen from childhood until now, both we and our fathers'—in order that you may settle in the land of Gesem of^e Arabia, for every shepherd of sheep is an abomination to Egyptians."

47 And Ioseph went and told Pharao, saying, "My father and my brothers with their livestock and cattle and all that is theirs have come from the land of Chanaan, and see, they are in the land of Gesem." ²And of his brothers he took along five men and set them before Pharao. ³And

Pharao said to Ioseph's brothers, "What is your occupation?" And they said to Pharao, "Your servants are shepherds of sheep, both we and our fathers." ⁴And they said to Pharao, "We have come to reside as aliens in the land, for there is no pasture for the livestock of your servants, because the famine has prevailed in the land of Chanaan. Now therefore your servants will settle in the land of Gesem." ⁵Then Pharao said to Ioseph, ⁽⁶⁾"Let them settle in the land of Gesem, and if you know that there are capable men among them, appoint them as rulers of my livestock." And Iakob and his sons came into Egypt to Ioseph, and Pharao king of Egypt heard. ⁽⁵⁾And Pharao spoke to Ioseph, saying, "Your father and your brothers have come to you. ⁶See, the land of Egypt is before you; settle your father and your brothers in the best land."

⁷ Then Ioseph brought in his father Iakob and set him before Pharao, and Iakob blessed Pharao. ⁸And Pharao said to Iakob, "How many are the years of the days of your life?" ⁹And Iakob said to Pharao, "The days of the life of my father, during which I am sojourning are one hundred thirty years. Few and grievous have been the days of the years of my life; they did not attain to the days of the years of the life of my fathers, during which days they sojourned." ¹⁰And when Iakob had blessed Pharao, he departed from him. ¹¹And Ioseph settled his father and brothers and granted them a holding in the land of Egypt, in the best land, in the land of Ramesses, as Pharao had ordered. ¹²And Ioseph would measure out grain to his father and brothers and all his father's household, grain per person.

¹³ Now there was no grain in all the land, for the famine prevailed greatly, and the land of Egypt and the land of Chanaan failed because of the famine. ¹⁴Then Ioseph collected all the money that was found in the land of Egypt and in the land of Chanaan for the grain that they would buy, and he would measure out grain to them, and Ioseph brought all the money into Pharao's house. ¹⁵And the money from the land of Egypt and from the land of Chanaan failed. Then all the Egyptians came to Ioseph, saying, "Give us bread loaves, and why are we dying in your presence? For our money has failed." ¹⁶And Ioseph said to them, "Bring your livestock, and I will give you bread loaves in exchange for your livestock, if the money has failed." ¹⁷Then they brought their livestock to Ioseph, and Ioseph gave them bread loaves in exchange for the horses and in exchange for the sheep and in exchange for the cattle and in exchange for the donkeys, and in that year he nourished them with bread loaves in exchange for all their livestock. ¹⁸And that year came to an end, and they came to him in the second year and said to him, "Let us not be wiped out by our lord, for if the money has failed and the possessions and the livestock are with you, our lord, then there is nothing left to us in the presence of our lord except our own body and our land. ¹⁹So lest we die in your presence and the land be desolated, acquire us and our land in exchange for bread loaves, and we with our land will be Pharaoh's slaves; grant seed in order that we may sow and live and not die, and the land will not be desolated."

20 And Ioseph acquired all the land of the Egyptians for Pharaoh. For the Egyptians sold their land to Pharaoh, because the famine gained mastery over them. And the land became Pharaoh's—²¹and the people he subjugated to him as slaves from the furthest boundaries of Egypt to the furthest—²²except for the land of the priests alone. Ioseph did not acquire it, for by a grant Pharaoh gave a gift to the priests, and they would eat the grant that Pharaoh gave them; therefore they did not sell their land. ²³So then Ioseph said to all the Egyptians, "See, I have acquired you and your land today for Pharaoh. Take seed for yourselves, and sow the land, ²⁴and there will be produce from it; you shall give the fifth part to Pharaoh, but the four parts shall be your very own as seed for the land and as food for you and all those in your households." ²⁵And they said, "You have saved us; we found favor before our lord, and we will be slaves to Pharaoh." ²⁶And Ioseph imposed it for them as an ordinance upon the land of Egypt, to this day, to give one-fifth to Pharaoh, except for the land of the priests alone; it was not Pharaoh's.

27 So then Israel settled in the land of Egypt on the land of Gesem, and they gained an inheritance on it and increased and multiplied exceedingly. ²⁸And Iakob survived in the land of Egypt seven-teen years, and Iakob's days of the years of his life amounted to one hundred forty-seven years. ²⁹Now the days for Israel to die drew near, and he called his son Ioseph and said to him, "If I have found favor before you, put your hand under my thigh, and you shall bring about mercy and truth for me so as not to bury me in Egypt, ³⁰but I will lie down with my fathers, and you shall carry me out of Egypt and bury me in their burial place." And he said, "I will do according to your word." ³¹Then he said, "Swear to me." And he swore to him. And Israel did obeisance upon the top of his staff.

48 Now it came about after these matters that then it was told to Ioseph, "Your father is ill." And taking along his two sons, Manasse and Ephraim, he went to Iakob. ²And it was reported to Iakob—they were saying—"See, your son Ioseph is coming to you." And summoning his strength, Israel sat upon the bed. ³And Iakob said to Ioseph, "My God appeared to me in Louza in the land of Chanaan, and he blessed me ⁴and said to me, 'See, I will make you increase and will multiply you and will make you into gatherings of nations and will give to you this land, and to your offspring after you, for a perpetual holding.' ⁵Now therefore your two sons, who were born to you in Egypt before I came into Egypt to you, are mine, Ephraim and Manasse; like Rouben and Symeon they shall be mine. ⁶But the descendants that you may produce hereafter shall be yours; they shall be called after the name of their brothers in their allotments. ⁷Now as for me, when I was coming from Mesopotamia of Syria, your mother Rachel died in the land of Chanaan, while I was drawing near, by the hippodrome of ^aChabratha, of the land^a, to go to Ephratha, and I buried her on the way to the hippodrome," this is Bethlehem.

8 And Israel, when he saw Ioseph's sons, said, "Who are these to you?" ⁹And Ioseph said to his father, "They are my sons, whom God has given me here." And Iakob said, "Bring them to me in order that I may bless them." ¹⁰Now his eyes were heavy-sighted because of old age, and they could not see. And he brought them near to him, and he kissed them and embraced them. ¹¹And Israel said to Ioseph, "See, I was not deprived of your face, and see, God has shown me your offspring also." ¹²And Ioseph brought them from his knees, and they did obeisance to him face down upon the earth. ¹³Then when Ioseph had taken his two sons, both Ephraim in his right hand but on Israel's left, and Manasse in his left hand but on Israel's right, he brought them near him. ¹⁴But Israel, stretching out his right hand, laid it on the head of Ephraim—now he was the younger—and his left on the head of Manasse, his hands crosswise. ¹⁵And he blessed them and said,

"The God whom my fathers Abraam and Isaak were well pleasing before, the God who sustains me from my youth to this day,

¹⁶ the angel who rescues me from all evils, bless these youngsters, and in them my name will be invoked, and the name of my fathers Abraam and Isaak, and may they be multiplied into a great multitude upon the earth."

17 Now when Ioseph saw that his father laid his right hand on the head of Ephraim, it seemed grievous to him, and Ioseph took hold of his father's hand to remove it from Ephraim's head to Manasse's head. ¹⁸And Ioseph said to his father, "Not so, father; for this one is the firstborn. Put your right hand on his head." ¹⁹And he would not, but said, "I know, child, I know; this one also shall become a people, and this one shall be exalted, but his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his offspring shall become a multitude of nations." ²⁰And he blessed them on that day, saying,

"In you Israel will be blessed when they say,
'God make you like Ephraim and like Manasse.'"

And he put Ephraim ahead of Manasse. ²¹Then Israel said to Ioseph, "Look, I am about to die, and God will be with you, and God will bring you back from this land to the land of your fathers. ²²Now I am giving you Sikima, as something special beyond your brothers, which I took from the hand of the Amorrites with my dagger and bow."

49 Then Iakob summoned his sons and said: “Gather together in order that I may tell you what will happen to you at the last of the

- ² Assemble, and hear, O sons of Iakob;
 hear Israel your father.
- ³ Rouben, you are my firstborn,
 my might and beginning of my children, hard to bear and hard, self-centered.
- ⁴ You became wanton like water; do not boil

 For you went up upon your father’s bed;
 then you defiled the couch where you

- ⁵ Symeon and Leui are brothers; they perpetrated injustice by their and may my inward parts not press in on because in their anger they killed men and in their passion they hamstringed a

- ⁷ Cursed be their anger, because it is self-and their wrath, because it has grown

 I will divide them in Iakob

 mountains,
 and, in blessings, over everlasting dunes;
 they shall be upon the head of Ioseph and on the crown of the brothers whom he led.

the cave which is in the field of Ephron the Chettite, ³⁰in the double cave that is opposite Mambre in the land of Chanaan, which cave Abraam acquired from Ephron the Chettite in acquisition of a tomb. ³¹There they buried Abraam and his wife Sarra, and there they buried Isaak and his wife Rebekka, and there they buried Leia, ³²in the acquisition of the field and the cave that is in it from the sons of Chet." ³³And Iakob ceased issuing orders to his sons, and lifting his feet onto the bed he breathed his last and was added to his people.

50 And Ioseph, falling on his father's face, wept over him and kissed him. ²And Ioseph ordered his servants, the undertakers, to prepare his father for burial, and the undertakers prepared Israel for burial. ³And they completed his forty days, for so the days of burial are reckoned. And Egypt mourned for him seventy days.

⁴ Then after the days of mourning had passed, Ioseph spoke to the chief men of Pharao, saying, "If I have found favor before you, speak into the ears of Pharao, saying: ⁵My father made me swear an oath, saying, 'In the tomb that I dug out for myself in the land of Chanaan, there you shall bury me.' Now then I will go up and bury my father, and I will return." ⁶And Pharao said, "Go up; bury your father, as he made you swear."

¹²And his sons did thus for him just as he had commanded them, and they buried him there.

¹³And his sons took him up into the land of Chanaan and buried him in the double cave over against Mambre, which cave Abraam acquired in acquisition of a tomb from Ephron the Chettite.

¹⁴And Ioseph returned to Egypt, he and his brothers and those who had gone up together to bury his father.

¹⁵ Now when Ioseph's brothers saw that their father had died, they said, "Perhaps Ioseph may bear a grudge against us and requite us a requital for all the evils that we showed him." ¹⁶And approaching Ioseph they said, "Your father administered an oath before he expired, saying, ¹⁷'Say thus to Ioseph: Forgive them their injustice and fault, seeing that they showed you painful things.' And now accept the injustice of the attendants of the God of your father." And Ioseph wept as they were speaking to him. ¹⁸And coming to him they said, "We here are your domestics." ¹⁹And Ioseph said to them, "Do not be afraid, for I am God's. ²⁰You deliberated against me for painful things, but God deliberated concerning me for good things in order that a numerous people might be sustained, so that it might come to be as today." ²¹And he said to them, "Have no fear; it is I who will sustain you and your households." And he reassured them and spoke to their heart.

²⁴ And Ioseph spoke to his brothers, saying, "I am about to die, but with a visitation God will visit you and bring you up out of this land to the land that God swore to our fathers Abraam and Isaak and Iakob." ²⁵And Ioseph made the sons of Israel swear, saying, "In the time of the visitation with which God will visit you, you shall also carry up my bones from here together with you." ²⁶And Ioseph expired at one hundred ten years of age, and they honored him with funeral rites and placed him in the coffin in Egypt.

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of the book of Exodus has followed the edition of the Greek text prepared by John William Wevers (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum II.1: Exodus [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1991]).

This English translation has not altered Wevers' edited Greek text of Exodus, except infrequently in relation to punctuation. Whereas one might argue for modifications in selected texts, it seemed prudent to adhere to the Göttingen edition and to postpone discussion of possible changes to Wevers' edition and treat them in the commentary on the NETS translation of Exodus under preparation.

In the account of the tabernacle (Hebrew [MT] 28.23–28; 36.8–34; 37.10b–15, 17–27), in those contexts where the Greek translation omits material in the Hebrew as we know it, Wevers inserted the Greek text as Origen constructed it. However, because these insertions are not part of the original translation, an English translation of Origen's text appears indented and in smaller typeface in the appropriate places.

General Character

The material found in Exodus consists of narrative, poetry, legal formulation and instructions for building and operating the tabernacle. The Greek translator generally adhered closely to a form of the Hebrew text similar to the MT. From time to time, however, the Greek is longer,¹ shorter² or ordered differently.³ Reasons for such variation are not always clear, and each context requires careful evaluation. For the most part, however, the translator sought to provide a word-for-word rendering. The terms "interlinearity" or "isomorphism" appropriately describe how the translator seems to have proceeded.⁴

While the Greek is often stilted, it normally conveys the sense of the Hebrew text well, and the translator uses various approaches to bring liveliness to the text. For example, in some contexts where the same Hebrew term is used repeatedly, the translator selected different Greek terms as glosses for the same Hebrew. An interesting example is found in the genealogies of chapter 6.

συγγένεια (v. 14)

In this case the translator, presumably because he has already used a preferred term to represent one Hebrew lexeme, then selected a second Greek term to represent כַּשְׂפָּחָה. So within the space of ten verses

10.22	καὶ ἐγένετο σκότος γνόφος θύελλα and there was darkness, gloom, hurricane	וַיְהִי חֹשֶׁךְ אַפְלָה and there was dense darkness
13.2	πᾶν πρωτότοκον πρωτογενές every firstborn, first-produced	כָּל בְּכוֹרִים all the firstborn
16.29	τὴν ἡμέραν ταύτην τὰ σάββατα this day, the sabbaths	הַשַּׁבָּת the sabbath
25.16(17)	ἱλαστήριον ἐπίθεμα χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ a propitiatory as a cover of pure gold	כִּפְרֵת זָהָב טָהוֹר a mercy seat of pure gold

³ The order of the commandments in MT 20.13–15 is different from that in the Greek translation:

MT: Murder	Greek: Adultery
Adultery	Theft

we find three different terms rendering מְשִׁפָּחָה. Another example would be in 2.7 where the MT reads מִיְנִיקָה (“nurse”) and תִּינִיק (“to nurse”), using the same Hebrew root. The translator chose the participle τροφεύουσιν (“a nursing woman”) and θηλάσει (“she shall suckle”), two distinct terms, to gloss the same Hebrew root. This kind of lexical variation in the Greek translation occurs quite regularly, even as the translator is careful to preserve general, interlinear correspondence in his translation.

In the Hebrew narrative of Exodus the waw-conjunctive occurs frequently. The translator of Exodus normally used καί as the Greek equivalent. However, where a change in subject occurs or some other emphasis may be warranted, he selected δέ. Aejmelaeus observes that in the case of the translation of Exodus “[c]oordination of clauses by ׀ has been rendered by the use of various literal and free renderings, but total omission of ׀—disregarding the apodotic cases—is found in less than 3% of the cases, of which 3% some cases may even depend upon a difference in the Vorlage.”⁵ So the places where the translator failed to render the conjunction are rather infrequent. The translator was equally careful to render pronouns in his Hebrew text.

In the case of word order the translator tended to follow his Hebrew text, but not always slavishly. For example, in Hebrew the pronominal formations normally are attached to nouns as suffixes. We should expect the translator to place the pronoun in Greek following the noun, imitating the Hebrew order, if adherence to Hebrew word order was a significant issue. Non-translation Greek tends to place them in front. In Greek Exodus we discover that about 30 (out of approximately 350) cases are pre-posed, a proportion that is unusually high among the various Septuagint translators.

The aorist form of the verb is the most common rendering chosen by the translator for the Hebrew verb, reflecting the large number of suffixed forms or waw (׀) + prefixed forms (in narrative). However, he does not hesitate to employ other Greek tense forms should that convey more adequately his understanding of the sense of his Hebrew text. An interesting example of this is found in 1.12–14. In the comparative clause structure of v. 12 the translator rendered the imperfect aspect of the Hebrew verbs well by the Greek imperfect form (“But as much as they were humbling them, by so much the more they kept becoming more numerous and stronger”). Each of the verbs that follow (vv. 12b–14) continues to use Greek imperfect forms. This tense form fit the context well, because at this point in the story the narrative reports the worsening condition of the Israelite people as they were oppressed. We also observe in this same context the translator’s use of lexical variation for the same Hebrew term:

v. 13 בַּפֶּרֶךְ . . . יַעֲבִירוּ . . . καὶ κατεδυνάστευον . . . βίᾳ (imperfect tense)
v. 14 בַּפֶּרֶךְ . . . עָבְרוּ . . . καταδουλοῦντο . . . μετὰ βίας (imperfect tense)

And further his repeated use of similar formations (in this case κατα- compounds), presumably for literary effect, may be noted:

v. 13–14 κατεδυνάστευον . . . καταδύνων . . . καταδουλοῦντο.

After his extensive study of the Septuagint of Exodus, Wevers comments that “the dominant characteristic of Exod as a translation document is its expansionist character. On the whole Exod expands far more than contracts.”⁶ This tendency appears in many different forms. For example, the translator is careful to define Aaron as Moses’ brother even when this is not present in the source text (cf. 7.7, 9, 19; 8.5). At 25.6(17) the translator defined the כַּפֹּרֶת (ἱλαστήριον), the gold plate placed at the top of the ark, as a “cover” (ἐπίθεμα), a term that has no equivalent in the Hebrew text.

Others examples could be added, but the tendency is clear. There is no indication that such clarifications are based on a different Hebrew text. Rather, these additions probably represent the translator’s efforts to ensure that his understanding of the source text would be communicated clearly and explicitly in Greek to the reader.

Of Stereotypes, Calques and Isolates

As the translator proceeded in his work, choosing appropriate terms in the target language to render adequately and contextually the sense of the source text taxed his ability. In Exodus the translator was sensitive to the Hebrew context and so did not hesitate to choose different Greek terms so that the Hebrew sense, as he understood it, would be conveyed adequately. Once he connected a Greek term semantically with a Hebrew term, he tended to continue with this equivalency, unless the context led him to gloss the source text in a different way. For example, the usual rendering of לֶחֶם in Exodus is $\lambda\alpha\lambda\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$, whereas $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\epsilon\iota\nu$ normally renders בָּרַךְ . However, in one case (31.12, where there is no textual variant in the Septuagint tradition) $\lambda\alpha\lambda\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ renders בָּרַךְ , and out of the three hundred occurrences of $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\epsilon\iota\nu$, it translates בָּרַךְ about seventeen times. $\lambda\alpha\lambda\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ would seem to constitute the default rendering of בָּרַךְ . It is not clear why variation from the default occurs, but it indicates that the translator exercised some freedom. As we have noted previously, we discover lexical variation in contexts where we would expect the usual Greek equivalent because the same Hebrew term is repeated.

Sometimes a Hebrew term will have several distinctive meanings, but the translator will use one Greek term whose semantic content only covers one of the meanings expressed by the Hebrew term. In such cases if the translator sticks with the usual equivalent, then it may create some tension in the context. An examination of the use of $\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\rho\tau\acute{\iota}\alpha$ as the usual equivalent for חַטָּאת (eleven times) and עוֹלָה (three times) provides an interesting example. חַטָּאת indicates both sin and the ritual associated with removing sin (i.e., sin offering). NRSV, for instance, renders it as “sin offering” at 29.14, 36; 30.10, but in all other contexts it uses “sin” (10.17; 32.21, 30, 31, 32, 34; 34.7, 9). The standard sense of $\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\rho\tau\acute{\iota}\alpha$ is “failure, fault or sin.” It does not carry the sense of “sin offering.” When the translator uses $\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\rho\tau\acute{\iota}\alpha$ as the stereotypical gloss for חַטָּאת , the Greek term no longer makes sense in those contexts where חַטָּאת signifies “sin offering.” In 29.36 where Moses is instructed every day to “offer a bull as a sin offering for atonement” (NRSV), the Septuagint reads $\kappa\alpha\acute{\iota}$ τὸ μωσχάριον τῆς ἁμαρτίας ποιήσεις τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ καθαρισμού (“and the young calf for the sin you shall do on the day of the purification” [NETS]). In these contexts $\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\rho\tau\acute{\iota}\alpha$ becomes an isolate, i.e., being the default rendering for חַטָּאת but not rendering the contextualized meaning of this Hebrew term in the context of the source language, leading to semantic tension in the Greek context (on isolates, see “TO THE READER OF NETS”).

If we move further along this lexical continuum, the calque represents the point on the semantic scale where the semantic range of the Hebrew term dominates that of the chosen Greek gloss. The use of $\delta\iota\alpha\theta\eta\kappa\eta$ (27.21; 31.7; 39.15) as the standard equivalent for בְּרִית is a well-known example. Others commonly found in the Septuagint also occur in Exodus— $\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\upsilon$ for הַנֶּהַח , $\kappa\upsilon\rho\iota\omicron\varsigma$ for יְהוָה and $\delta\acute{o}\xi\alpha$ for כְּבוֹד .

At times the translator has recourse to transliteration as his only viable strategy. Some of these become standard Greek terms. These would include $\sigma\acute{\alpha}\beta\beta\alpha\tau\alpha$ (Sabbata), $\pi\acute{\alpha}\sigma\chi\alpha$ (passover), $\mu\acute{\alpha}\nu$ (Man), $\chi\epsilon\rho\upsilon\beta/\chi\epsilon\rho\upsilon\beta\acute{\iota}\mu$ (cheroub/cheroubim) and terms of measurement such as $\gamma\acute{o}\mu\omicron\rho$ and $\acute{\iota}\nu$.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF EXODUS

Selected Words and Phrases

1. The Bread of Presentation

The translator rendered variously the bread that God commands to be placed on the table outside the most holy part of the tent of witness, the bread of the presence. In the first three Exodus contexts where these ritual loaves are discussed, as God gives instructions to Moses for the construction of the tent of witness and Moses has it built, the MT has לֶחֶם פְּנִיָּם (25.30) or לֶחֶם הַפְּנִיָּם (35.13; 39.36). The Septuagint renderings are various:

- 25.29(30) ἄρτους ἐνώπιός μου (facing loaves in front of me, NETS)
 35.13 (no equivalent in Septuagint)
 39.18 (39.36) καὶ τοὺς ἄρτους τοὺς προκειμένους (and the presentation loaves, NETS)

In Ex 40.23 (LXX 40.21) as the writer describes the placement of the table in the constructed tent of witness, the bread is placed on it but defined as עֲרֵךְ לֶחֶם (lit. “an arrangement of bread”). NRSV renders the sentence “and set the bread in order on it.” This clause is rendered by the translator:

- Καὶ προσέθηκεν ἐπ’ αὐτῆς ἄρτους τῆς προθέσεως ἔναντι κυρίου (יהוה) (ויערך עליו ערך לחם לפני יהוה) (MT) and he presented on it loaves of presentation before the Lord (NETS)
 (and he set the bread in order on it before the LORD) (NRSV)

The translator did not consider the Hebrew expression to be a technical, cultic phrase, or if he did, either he felt no compulsion to render it consistently or he did not have readily to hand a Greek equivalent that had become normative for Greek-speaking Jews in Alexandria. The rendering that becomes somewhat standard (used in Supplements [Chronicles] for example), i.e., ἄρτους τῆς προθέσεως, only occurs in the Pentateuch at Exodus at 40.21(23) and possibly 39.18(36). We do not know for sure whether the original translator devised the phrase that comes to represent the “loaves of presentation” in Greek, since it is not clear if the same person translated Ex 1–34 and 35–40. What the translator does present consistently is that these loaves were placed “before the Lord.”

2. Divine Name and General Term for Deity

The usual rendering of the tetragrammaton (יהוה) in Exodus is κύριος, as in the other sections of the Septuagint. Four times (3.4; 13.19; 18.1; 20.1), however, the translator uses κύριος to render יהוה. Why the translator glossed יהוה with κύριος is not altogether clear, but the variation does not seem to be textually based. κύριος as a translation of the tetragrammaton renders the qere of the Hebrew text (i.e., what the vowel marks indicate, יהוה), not the kethibh (i.e., what the consonants indicate).

Several times (4.10, 13; 5.22; 15.17; 32.22) when the author addresses God as יהוה (“Lord” or “Master”), the translator renders it as κύριος. In these cases κύριος renders the Hebrew term appropriately. In ten contexts the translation has κύριος with no equivalent in the MT. Sometimes the addition seems to be for clarification (8.28; 17.15; 24.1, 16; 32.31; 34.10; 35.3; 39.12), and in the other instance the translator has apparently chosen to represent the meaning of the Hebrew text in a different way (16.32).

In 4.24 the translator has opted for ἄγγελος κυρίου to render יהוה. Perhaps the translator did not want to attribute directly to “the Lord” this attempt on Moyses’ life. Several times the double term יהוה יהוה was rendered by κύριος alone (8.10; 9.30), and יהוה alone was rendered by κύριος ὁ θεός ὑμῶν / σου (12.31; 13.5, 11). Whether these anomalies were textually based or occurred for some other reason is uncertain.

In the Septuagint of Exodus κύριος normally lacks a definite article (about 354 times in Wevers’ edition), which would indicate that the translator considered it primarily a proper name.⁷ There are fifteen occasions when the translator used the definite article with κύριος to represent יהוה. There does not appear to be any specific pattern.

Θεός usually translates יהוה (about 129 times in Exodus). However, in 41 contexts it rendered יהוה (almost a quarter of the occurrences of θεός). The only occurrence of יהוה (6.3, preposed by the preposition ב) is rendered as θεός ὡν αὐτῶν (“being their God,” NETS). Several times (3.18 [2x]; 5.3b) the translator rendered the combined יהוה יהוה by θεός alone. Perhaps the translator thought that the use of κύριος would not be appropriate because of the way God’s personal name was being revealed to Israel (3.18), or perhaps, because Moyses was making his first appeal to Pharaoh (5.3b), the more generic term seemed appropriate. There are also several contexts where the Hebrew text has יהוה as the reference to God, and the translator normally used θεός as his gloss. In a number of contexts θεός apparently has no Hebrew equivalent, usually in conjunction with cases of κύριος to render יהוה.

The translator’s use of θεός, the general term for deity (including non-Israelite deities), was more diverse than his use of his equivalent for the proper name of Israel’s God. In NETS Exodus θεός is rendered as ‘G/god’ and κύριος as ‘L/lord.’ The capitalized forms refer to Israel’s deity.

In Ex 3.13–14, when God appears to Moyses through the burning bush, Moyses asks God to tell him his name. The translator rendered the difficult Hebrew as Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ὢν (“I am The One Who Is,” NETS⁸). The translator repeated (14b) this expression (ὁ ὢν = יהוה) as the name for the God of Israel, who has sent Moyses. The similar form of יהוה (proper name) and יהוה (first person singular, prefix form of the Qal stem of יהוה = “to be”) and the corresponding etiology cannot be duplicated in Greek. The translator opted to translate the expression, not to transliterate it in this context.

3. Pharaoh’s “Hardness of Heart”

In Exodus one of the most provocative issues is the way in which Israel’s God interacts with Pharaoh. As God acts to extricate Israel from her bondage in Egypt, he influences Pharaoh’s behavior. His motive is ⁷ Normally in Greek a proper name does not require the definite article. Sometimes, if the name is indeclinable, the definite article will be used to remove any ambiguity about the function of its noun in the clause. When the Hebrew text uses יהוה to refer to a human “lord, owner, master,” the translator consistently uses an article with the noun to indicate that it is not being used as a proper name (21.4[2x], 5, 6[2x], 8, 32). This same convention is used to represent בעל (21.28, 29[2x], 34[2x]; 22.8, 11, 12, 14, 15). There is no Hebrew equivalent to the usage at 21.36 but the Greek text uses the definite article (τῷ κυρίῳ αὐτοῦ).

⁸ NRSV glosses the Hebrew as “I AM WHO I AM,” with several options mentioned in the footnote, namely “I AM WHAT I AM” or “I WILL BE WHAT I WILL BE.”

explained in 14.4: “I will harden Pharaoh’s heart . . . so that I will gain glory for myself over Pharaoh and all his army; and the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD” (NRSV). Three Hebrew verbs are used to express this concept and the translator is quite consistent, if not stereotyped, in his renderings, with the exception of 7.13.

כבד βαρύνω	השק σκληρύνω	קיח σκληρύνω	קיח κατισχύω
Qal form: 7.14 ⁹ ; 9.7	Hiphil form: 7.3;	Piel form: 4.21; 9.12;	Qal form: 7.13
Hiphil form:	13.15	10.20, 27; 11.10; 14.4,
8.11(15), 28(32);		8, 17
9.34; 10.1 ¹⁰		Qal form: 7.3, 22;
		8.15(19); 9.35

In these choices the translator sought to reflect the different emphases in the Hebrew terms—heaviness or weightiness in the equivalence of βαρύνω for כבד and hardness in the equivalence of σκληρύνω for השק. However, the equivalence of σκληρύνω and κατισχύω for קיח (“make strong, strengthen”) is notable, but for different reasons. In the case of σκληρύνω, the semantic overlap in Exodus with קיח focuses on the idea of firmness = stubbornness. The Hebrew term generally means, “to be strong or firm” and in the Piel form “to make strong or firm.” When related to the noun לב (“heart”), it signifies positively devotion (a firm conviction), but negatively stubbornness. σκληρύνω represents the latter in Exodus as it defines Pharaoh’s response to God’s activities through the plagues or the catastrophe at the Red Sea. If the evidence in LSJ is correct and complete, this usage of the verb σκληρύνω to signify stubbornness may have emerged initially in the Septuagint of Exodus.¹¹

The singular use of κατισχύω at 7.13 as the rendering of קיח with the sense of “prevail” is also interesting (“and the heart of Pharaoh prevailed, and he did not listen to them” [NETS]). Wevers suggests that “presumably Exod here used κατίσχυσεν to set the scene of the struggle between the divine signs and the stubborn heart of Pharaoh.”¹² In other words the translator purposely changed the stereotypical rendering of קיח by σκληρύνω to κατίσχυσεν, probably to emphasize this aspect of contest. In this context God performs the first sign through Moses and Aaron to convince Pharaoh to release Israel (the rod becoming a dragon) (7.8–13), and it follows the explanation that God provides to Moses concerning the series of events that is about to unfold and result in Israel’s release. Only in this context (7.1–13) do we find all three terms (βαρύνω, σκληρύνω, κατισχύω) used to define God’s influence on Pharaoh and Pharaoh’s response to Moses’ demands as God’s representative.

4. “Seeing God”

Exodus is unusual in the narratives of the Old Testament with respect to the number of times when people, either individually or as a group, ask to “see God” or are permitted by God’s initiative to see him. In addition to the times that Moses is invited up onto Mount Sina in order to meet with God (Moses’ face is shining after he meets with God), the pillar of cloud and fire or the cloud that descended over the newly erected tabernacle signify the presence of God with Israel, all of which reflect this emphasis upon seeing, meeting, or in some other way directly interacting with God.

Where the Hebrew text states that people “see God,” the translator employs various means to express a theologically sensitive rendering, presumably preserving the theological principle that no person can see God and live. At 3.6 the comparative texts and translations read:

¹⁰ In 10.1 there are significant Greek texts that have the alternative reading ἐσκήρυνα. Rahlfs chose this reading, presumably because it had the support of B. However, I think Wevers’ judgment is correct that the translator’s consistent use of βαρύνω for כבד in reference to Pharaoh’s stubbornness would urge us to accept ἐβάρυνα as the original text.

¹² J. W. Wevers, Notes on the Greek Text of Exodus (Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1990) 98.

MT: ויסתר משה פניו כי ירא מהביט אל האלהים

NRSV: And Moses hid his face, for he was afraid to look at God.

LXX: ἀπέστρεψεν δὲ Μωυσῆς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ· εὐλαβέτω γὰρ κατεμβλέψαι ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ.

NETS: And Moyses turned his face away, for he was afraid to look down before God.

This singular use of κατεμβλέψαι in Exodus as the rendering of מִהִבִּיט here indicates that the translator was avoiding the implication that Moyses actually “looked at,” i.e., saw, God. Wevers also notes that the preposition ἐνώπιον “enhances the avoidance of directly looking at God.”¹³

After God completes his revelation of Israel’s covenantal obligations, he invites the Israelite leadership to ascend Sina and worship (24.1–2). The narrative describes this encounter (24.9–11) as an occasion when the chief men of Israel “saw the God of Israel . . . they beheld God” (NRSV). In fact they celebrated by eating a sacred meal in God’s presence. The comparative texts and translations read:

MT: (10) ויראו את אלהי ישראל . . . (11) ויחזו את האלהים

NRSV: and they saw the God of Israel . . . also they beheld God

LXX: καὶ εἶδον τὸν τόπον, οὗ εἰστήκει ἐκεῖ ὁ θεὸς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ . . . καὶ ὠφθησαν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τοῦ θεοῦ.

NETS: And they saw the place, there where the God of Israel stood . . . And they appeared in the place of God

The Septuagint translator would only admit that Israel’s leaders saw “the place . . . where the God of Israel stood,” but not that human beings saw God. He described this place in the following manner: “that which was beneath his feet, like something made from lapis lazuli brick and like the appearance of the firmament of heaven in purity.” This note in the narrative may have influenced his choice to emphasize the “place” of God. The Hebrew text (v. 11) notes the expectation that seeing God should result in calamity, but God graciously restrains himself. No one is harmed through this experience. “Not even one . . . perished,” the Septuagint notes.

The other primary context comes in Ex 33–34 as Moyses intercedes with God, seeking Israel’s preservation from God’s threatened judgment after the golden calf episode. When God promises to relent and to continue with his program to bring Israel to the land of Chanaan, Moyses asks for some visible sign that God will stand by his word. Moyses boldly asks to see God. “Show me your glory!” he demands (33.18). The risk in his demand becomes explicit as the narrator records God’s warning that “you cannot see my face; for no one shall see me and live” (33.20). Yet God makes an accommodation for Moyses’ sake. While many things in this narrative context deserve comment, I will focus on 33.23.

NRSV: then I will take away my hand, and you shall see my back; but my face shall not be seen.

LXX: καὶ ἀφελῶ τὴν χεῖρα, καὶ τότε ὄψη τὰ ὀπίσω μου, τὸ δὲ πρόσωπόν μου οὐκ ὀφθήσεται σοι.

NETS: And I will take my hand away, and then you shall see my hind parts, but my face will not appear to you.

The translator removes any suggestion that Moyses might see any significant part of God, only his “hind parts.”

The translator’s handling of these contexts would suggest that his theological framework governed his rendering, as he sought to follow the principle (33.20) that “no one shall see me [God] and live,” at the same time dealing with segments in the narrative of Exodus that affirmed that some in Israel did see God and continued to live.

Perhaps connected with this phenomenon is the way in which the translator renders the Hebrew root יָדַע, which means “to appoint, meet.” When it occurs in the description of the ark and the use of the propitiatory or the tabernacle itself, God affirms to Israel that “there I will meet with you” (25.21; 29.42, 43; 30.36). However, in each of these settings the translator “quite intentionally”¹⁴ understood this root as the verb יָדַע, which means “to know.”

¹⁴ Wevers, Notes, 401.

Text	MT	NRSV	LXX	NETS
25.22(21)	וְנִוְעַדְתִּי לְךָ שָׁם	There I will meet with you	καὶ γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν	And I will be known to you from there
29.42	אֲשֶׁר אֲנִוְעַד לָכֶם שָׁמָּה	where I will meet with you	ἐν οἷς γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν	by which I will be known to you there
30.36	אֲשֶׁר אֲנִוְעַד לְךָ שָׁמָּה	where I shall meet with you	ὅθεν γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν	there where I shall be known to you.
29.43	וְנִוְעַדְתִּי שָׁמָּה לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל	I will meet with the Israelites there	καὶ τάξομαι ἐκεῖ τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ	And I will there prescribe for the sons of Israel

It is improbable that in all four instances the translator misread his source text or that he read a source at variance with MT. More likely, they bespeak theological sensitivity about divine involvement in human agency. The translator emphasized that God revealed himself, and this is how a “meeting” was to be understood between God and human beings. The use of τάξομαι in 29.43 reinforces this idea that God’s meeting was the occasion when his commands were communicated.

5. The Ten Commandments

The translator’s rendering of the traditionally named “ten commandments” (Ex 20.1–17) was very close to the Hebrew text as we have it today. However, characteristically the Greek text is expansionist:

- 20.10 ὁ βοῦς σου καὶ τὸ ὑποζύγιόν σου (“your ox and your draft animal”)
 20.12 ἵνα εὖ σοι γένηται (“so that it may be well with you”)¹⁵
 20.12 (ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς) τῆς ἀγαθῆς (“[on] the good [land]”).

Further, there are several texts in which the order of materials is different:

Text	MT	NRSV	LXX	NETS
20.13	לֹא תִרְצַח	You shall not murder.	Οὐ μοιχεύσεις	You shall not commit adultery.
20.14	לֹא תִנְאָף	You shall not commit adultery.	Οὐ κλέψεις	You shall not steal.
20.15	לֹא תִגְנוֹב	You shall not steal.	Οὐ φονεύσεις	You shall not murder.

Whether the different order is due to textual or other reasons is not possible to determine at this point. One other word order change worth noting occurs in 20.17. The Septuagint places the neighbor’s wife first before the neighbor’s house, in contrast to the Hebrew text that places the house first, followed by the wife. Why such a reordering occurs remains a matter of speculation.

The terminology referring to the various commands that God gives to Israel tends to be stereotyped in translation. The exceptions are the term קָמַץ, which is rendered by four different terms, and מִצְוָה, which was translated primarily by ἐντολή, but once by πρόσταγμα. What nuance πρόσταγμα carried that made it the right choice for the translator in 20.6 is uncertain.

¹⁵ The addition is included in the citation of this command in Ephesians 6.2–3.

Νόμος (law)	Νόμιμος αἰώνιος (perpetual precept)	Ἐντολή (commandment)	Δικαίωμα (statute)	Πρόσταγμα (ordinance)
קח 12.43;13.10	עלם קח 12.14, 17; 27.21; 28.43(39)	מצוה 12.17; 15.26; 16.28; 24.12	קח 15.25, 26	קח 18.16, 20
תורה 12.49; 13.9; 16.4, 28; 18.16, 20; 24.12	עלם קח 29.28; 30.21		ממפט 21.1, 9, 31; 24.3	ממרה 20.6
	קח 12.24

The use of the adjective νόμιμος in the singular as a substantive τὸ νόμιμον,¹⁶ although infrequently documented in the third century BCE, became the stereotyped rendering for עולם חק(ת) in Exodus, reflecting the singular form of the Hebrew terms.

6. The Peoples of Chanaan

When God talks about fulfilling his promise to Abraam, Isaak and Iakob in Exodus, the land to which he will lead them is defined as belonging to specific people. In the Greek Pentateuch seven different groups are specified consistently:

εἰς τὸν τόπον τῶν Χαναναίων καὶ Χετταίων καὶ Ἀμορραίων καὶ Φερεζαίων καὶ Εὐαίων καὶ Γεργεσαίων καὶ Ἰεβουσαίων (into the place of the Chananites and Chettites and Amorrites and Pherezites and Heuites and Gergesites and Iebousites.
[NETS 3.8, 17; 23.23; 34.11; in different order at 13.5; partial list at 23.28; 33.2])

Consistently (apart from 23.28) Γεργεσαίων has been added at some point (position 4, 5 or 6) in the list, although it does not occur in the translator's Hebrew text.

7. Specific Texts

In Ex 25–31 Moyses receives instructions for building the tabernacle. After the event of the Golden Calf (32–34), Moyses proceeds with the construction of the “tent of witness” (35–40). Undoubtedly the account describing the construction of the tabernacle (אהל מועד), σκηνη τοῦ μαρτυρίου, “tent of witness,” or משכן/σκηνη “tent,” presents the greatest problem in Exodus to understanding the translation process.

The Greek text, when compared to the MT, is much shorter and puts various materials in a different order. Further, some indicators suggest that either the translator responsible for at least part of chapters 35–40 was different from the translator of chapters 1–34 or a later editor has substantially altered the initial translation for some reason.

Generally speaking the Greek translation describes the production of the priestly vestments (36.8–40) and then the construction of the tabernacle and its equipment (37.1–39.11), whereas the Hebrew text begins with the construction of the tabernacle and its equipment (36.8–38.31) and then describes the priestly vestments (39). But the alterations in the translation are sometimes surprising. The Greek text does not describe the making of the incense altar, for example. It abbreviates significantly passages related to the lampstand and the table of the presence. Detailed charts comparing the Hebrew and Greek texts can be found in various treatments of this problem.¹⁷ Midrashic explanation that is not found in the Hebrew text occurs at one point. The bronze for the bronze altar is said to be taken “from the bronze firepans that belonged to the men who revolted with the gathering of Kore” (38.22).¹⁸

¹⁶ W. Gutbrod, “νόμιμος,” in TDNT IV, 1088 notes “As a noun τὸ νόμιμον is ‘what is right and fair’; P. Landanae (1912/14), 16.8.”

Gooding, The Account of the Tabernacle: Translations and Textual Problems of the Greek Exodus, Texts and Studies: Contributions to Biblical and Patristic Literature (New Series 6; Cambridge, 1959); Wevers, Text History, 117–143; Aejmelaeus, On the Trail, 116–130; Martha Wade, Consistency of Translation Techniques in the Tabernacle Accounts of Exodus in the Old Greek (SBLSCS 49; Atlanta: SBL, 2003).

¹⁸ The material seems to be taken from the account in Num 16.37–39 (MT: 17.2–4).

Various hypotheses have been proposed to explain why these major differences emerged in the tradition:

1. The translator had a Hebrew text different from that which we have today, and this accounts for the variation in the Greek text. However, no Hebrew text yet discovered seems to match the Greek translation.

2. For some reason the translator of chapters 1–34 did not complete the translation and another person finished the task, who used a different translation process, while consulting the earlier material. Detailed studies of translation technique expressed in these respective sections, however, indicate only minor variations in translation techniques between these sections of Exodus, apart from chapter 38.

3. One person did the original translation of Exodus following the order of the Hebrew text as we know it, but because he misunderstood the text, or for some other reasons, he created inconsistencies in his translation. A later reviser has edited this original work, adding some materials particularly in chapter 38 and being responsible for a major rearrangement of the Greek text.

4. The original translator is responsible for the current Greek text and used specific principles as the basis for his unique account, which is a “well-planned, well-constructed account which when read by itself and without prejudice usually makes good sense.”¹⁹

At this point we might suggest that the most recent comprehensive studies (1) see no need to postulate a different Hebrew text throughout chapters 35–40, (2) discern a large degree of consistency in the fundamental translation technique used throughout Greek Exodus, but (3) detect enough difference between 1–34 and 35–40 to indicate another hand may be at work in some way in the final chapters of the translation, and (4) proceed from the assumption that the original translation of 35–40 was created to make sense to the translator and his presumed audience. We have little data to inform us about the sociological aspects of translation in antiquity and in particular biblical translation. Whether it was acceptable to abbreviate portions of sacred text and make major rearrangements in the structure of the narrative remains debated. However, the fact remains, whether we postulate one translator for Ex 1–40 or several translators or editors, we have a Greek translation for this section that is quite different, being much shorter and ordered differently, from the Hebrew text that we possess today.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

NETS Exodus normally has followed the punctuation proposed in Wevers’ edited text. In terms of versification, where the Septuagint differs from that of the NRSV, the NRSV versification is noted in parenthesis (cf. 18.18; 21.16, 17).

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

In addition to the standard grammars and lexica, I have received considerable assistance from the works by John William Wevers, particularly his Notes on the Greek Text of Exodus (1990) and his Text History of the Greek Exodus (1992). The translation and commentary by Alain le Boulluec and Pierre Sandevour in L’Exode BA (1989) has been helpful in many instances. The earlier translation by Brenton has also provided assistance from time to time.

Wevers’ discussion of the Tabernacle section, as well as those by David Gooding in The Account of the Tabernacle: Translation and Textual Problem of the Greek Exodus (1959) and Martha Wade in Consistency of Translation Techniques in the Tabernacle Accounts of Exodus in the Old Greek (2003), have provided significant methodological and textual suggestions.

I must also acknowledge the assistance of Albert Pietersma, who provided editorial guidance and helped to resolve many translation issues.

1 These are the names of the sons of Israel who had entered into Egypt with Iakob their father. Each with their whole household went in: ²Rouben, Symeon, Leui, Ioudas, ³Issachar, Zaboulon and Beniamin, ⁴Dan and Nephthali, Gad and Aser. ⁵But Ioseph was in Egypt. Now all souls from Iakob were seventy-five. ⁶Then Ioseph died, and all his brothers and all that generation. ⁷But the sons of Israel increased and multiplied and became common and were growing very, very strong. Now the land kept multiplying them.

8 Now another king arose over Egypt, who did not know Ioseph. ⁹Now he said to his nation, "Look, the race of the sons of Israel is a great multitude and is becoming stronger than we. ¹⁰Come then, let us deal shrewdly with them, lest it be multiplied, and, whenever war happens to us, these also shall be added to the opponents, and after going to war against us, they shall depart from the land." ¹¹And he set over them overseers of tasks in order to afflict them in the tasks. And they built fortified cities for Pharao, both Pithom and Ramesses and On, which is Heliopolis^a. ¹²But as much as they were humbling them, by so much the more they kept becoming more numerous and stronger, and the Egyptians were disgusted with the sons of Israel. ¹³And the Egyptians were oppressing the sons of Israel forcefully ¹⁴and were grievously afflicting their life by the hard tasks in clay and brick making and all the tasks in the plains, according to all the tasks in which they were enslaving them with force.

15 And the king of the Egyptians spoke to the Hebrews' midwives, to one of them whose name was Sepphora, and the name of the second was Phoua, ¹⁶and he said, "Whenever you act as midwives to the Hebrew women and they should be at the birthing stage, if then it be male, kill it, but if female, preserve it alive." ¹⁷But the midwives feared God, and they did not do as the king of Egypt instructed them and tried to keep the males alive. ¹⁸Then the king of Egypt summoned the midwives and said to them, "Why is it that you have done this thing and tried to keep the males alive?" ¹⁹The midwives then said to Pharao, "The Hebrew women are not like the women of Egypt, for they give birth before the midwives go in to them," and they were already giving birth. ²⁰Now God was dealing well with the midwives, and the people kept on multiplying and becoming very strong. ²¹Because the midwives were fearing God, they made families for themselves. ²²Then Pharao instructed all his people, saying, "Every male that might be born to the Hebrews, throw into the river, and every female, keep it alive."

2 Now there was a certain man from the tribe of Leui who took one of the daughters of Leui and married her. ²And she conceived and bore a male child. Now when they saw it was handsome, they sheltered it for three months. ³But when they could hide it no longer, its mother took a basket and plastered it with a mixture of pitch and tar, and she put the child in it and placed it in the marsh beside the river. ⁴And his sister was watching from a distance to learn what would happen to him.

5 Now Pharao's daughter came down to the river to bathe, and her attendants were walking beside the river. And when she saw the basket in the marsh, she sent her attendant, and she picked it up. ⁶Now when she opened it, she saw a child crying in the basket, and Pharao's daughter spared it and said, "This is one of the Hebrews' children." ⁷And his sister said to Pharao's daughter, "Do you wish that I summon for you a nursing woman from the Hebrews, and she shall suckle the child for you?" ⁸Then she, Pharao's daughter, said to her, "Go!" But the girl went and summoned the child's mother. ⁹And Pharao's daughter said to her, "Take care of this child for me, and suckle it for me, and I will give you your pay." Then the woman took the child and kept suckling it. ¹⁰Now when the child grew up, she brought it to Pharao's daughter, and it became to her for a son. And she named his name Moyses, saying, "I drew him out of the water."

11 Now it came to pass in the course of those many days, when he had fully grown, Moyses went out to his brothers, the sons of Israel. And as he observed their toil, he saw an Egyptian man beating some Hebrew from his own brothers, the sons of Israel. ¹²Now when he looked around this way and that, he saw no one, and he struck the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. ¹³Now when he went out on the next day, he saw two Hebrew men fighting, and he said to the one who was in the wrong, "Why do you beat your fellow?" ¹⁴But he said, "Who appointed you ruler and judge over us? You do not intend to kill me, do you, in the same way you killed the Egyptian yesterday?" Then Moyses was afraid and said, "Has this matter perhaps become so well known?" ¹⁵Now Pharao heard about this matter, and he was seeking to kill Moyses.

Then Moyses withdrew from Pharao's presence and settled in the land of Madian. Now when he came into the land of Madian, he sat upon the well. ¹⁶Now the priest of Madian had seven daughters who were tending their father's sheep. So when they arrived, they were drawing water until they filled the receptacles in order to water their father's sheep. ¹⁷But when the shepherds arrived, they were driving them away. But Moyses got up and rescued them and drew water for them and watered their sheep. ¹⁸Now they arrived back to Ragouel, their father, and he said to them, "Why is it that you were quick to arrive today?" ¹⁹And they said, "An Egyptian man rescued us from the shepherds and drew water for us and watered the sheep." ²⁰And he said to his daughters, "And where is he? And for what reason have you left this man behind like this? Invite him then in order that he might eat bread." ²¹Now Moyses stayed with the man, and he gave Sepphora, his daughter, to Moy-ses for a wife. ²²Now when she became pregnant, the woman bore a son, and Moyses called his name Gersam, saying, "Because I am a resident alien in a foreign land."

²³ Now after those many days the king of Egypt died, and the sons of Israel groaned from the tasks and cried out, and their cry rose up to God from the tasks. ²⁴And God listened to their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraam and Isaak and Iakob. ²⁵And God looked upon the sons of Israel, and he became known to them.

3 And Moyses was tending the sheep of Iothor, his father-in-law, the priest of Madian, and he led the sheep beyond the wilderness and came to the mountain, Choreb. ²Now an angel of the Lord appeared to him in a fire of flame out of the bush, and he saw that the bush was burning with fire, but the bush was not burning up. ³Then Moyses said, "When I pass by, I will look at this great sight, why it is that the bush is not burning up." ⁴Now when the Lord saw that he was drawing near to see, the Lord called him from the bush, saying, "Moyeses, Moyses." And he said, "What is it?" ⁵And he said, "Do not come near here! Loose the sandal from your feet! For the place on which you are standing is holy ground." ⁶And he said to him, "I am the God of your father, God of Abraam and God of Isaak and God of Iakob." And Moyses turned his face away, for he was afraid to look down before God.

⁷ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "When I looked, I saw the affliction of my people in Egypt, and I have heard their cry on account of the taskmasters. For I know their pain. ⁸And I came down to deliver them from the hand of the Egyptians and to bring them out of that land and to bring them into a good and spacious land, into a land flowing with milk and honey, into the place of the Chananites and Chettites and Amorrites and Pherezites and Heuites and Gergesites and Iebousites. ⁹And now, look, the cry of the sons of Israel has come to me, and I have seen the oppression with which the Egyptians oppress them. ¹⁰And now come, let me send you to Pharao, king of Egypt, and you will bring my people, the sons of Israel, out of the land of Egypt. ¹¹And Moyses said to God, "Who am I that I should go to Pharao, king of Egypt, and that I should bring the sons of Israel out of the land of Egypt?" ¹²But God spoke to Moyses, saying, "I will be with you, and this shall be the sign for you that I am sending you: when you have brought my people out of Egypt, you shall also serve God at this mountain."

¹³ And Moyses said to God, "Look, I shall come to the sons of Israel and shall say to them, 'The God of your fathers has sent me to you'; they will ask me, 'What is his name?' What shall I say to them?" ¹⁴And God said to Moyses, "I am The One Who Is." And he said, "Thus shall you say to the sons of Israel, 'The One Who Is has sent me to you.'" ¹⁵And God said again to Moyses, "Thus you shall say to the sons of Israel, 'The Lord, the God of your fathers, God of Abraam and God of Isaak and God of Iakob, has sent me to you.'

This is an everlasting name of mine and a memorial of generations to generations.

¹⁶ "Therefore, go, and assemble the elders' council of the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them, 'The Lord, the God of your fathers, has appeared to me, God of Abraam and God of Isaak and God of Iakob, saying, "With concern I have concerned myself with you and what has happened to you in Egypt." ¹⁷And I said, "I will bring you up from the affliction of the Egyptians into the land of the Chananites and Chettites and Heuites and Amorrites and Pherezites and Gergesites and Iebousites, into a land flowing with milk and honey.'" ¹⁸And they will listen to your voice, and you and the elders' council of Israel shall go in to Pharao, king of Egypt, and you shall say to him, 'The God of the Hebrews has summoned us. Therefore, let us go a three days' journey into the wilderness so that we may sacrifice to our God.' ¹⁹Now I know that Pharao, king of Egypt, will not permit you to go, except with a mighty hand. ²⁰And when I stretch out my hand, I will strike the Egyptians with all my wonders that I will perform among them, and after these things he will send you away. ²¹And I will give favor to this people before the Egyptians. Now whenever you depart, you will not go away empty-handed. ²²But a woman will ask from a neighbor and tent mate of hers silver and gold articles and clothing, and you shall put them on your sons and on your daughters, and you shall plunder the Egyptians."

4 Then Moyses answered and said, "If then they should not believe me or listen to my voice, for they will say, 'God has not appeared to you!' what shall I say to them?" ²Then the Lord said to him, "What is this in your hand?" And he said, "A rod." ³And he said, "Throw it on the ground!" And he threw it on the ground, and it became a snake, and Moyses fled from it. ⁴And the Lord said to Moyses, "Stretch out your hand, and seize the tail! (then he stretched out his hand and seized the tail, and it became a rod in his hand) ⁵—so that they may believe you, that the Lord, the God of their fathers, God of Abraam and God of Isaak and God of Iakob, has appeared to you."

⁶ Now the Lord said to him again, "Put your hand into your bosom!" And he put the hand into his bosom, and he brought his hand out of his bosom, and his hand became as snow. ⁷And he said, "Again put your hand into your bosom!" And he put the hand into his bosom and brought it out of his bosom, and again it was restored to the color of his flesh. ⁸"Now if they should not believe you or listen to the voice of the first sign, they will believe you because of the voice of the last sign. ⁹And it will be if they should not believe you for these two signs or listen to your voice, you shall take some of the river's water and pour it on the dry ground, and the water, whatever you take from the river, will be blood on the dry ground."

10 But Moses said to the Lord, "Please, Lord, I am incompetent—before yesterday or the third day or since you began to speak to your attendant. I am weak-voiced and slow-tongued." ¹¹Then the Lord said to Moses, "Who gave a mouth to a person, and who made him deaf and mute, seeing and blind? Is it not I, the Lord God? ¹²And now go, and I will open your mouth and teach you what you are going to speak." ¹³And Moses said, "Please, Lord, appoint another capable person, whom you will send." ¹⁴And enraged with anger towards Moses the Lord said, "Look, is not Aaron your brother, the Leuite? I know that when he speaks, he will speak for you. And look, he will come out to meet you, and when he sees you, he will be glad in himself. ¹⁵And you shall speak to him and put my words in his mouth. And I will open your mouth and his mouth and will teach you what you shall do. ¹⁶And he shall speak for you to the people, and he shall be your mouth, but you shall be to him the things pertaining to God. ¹⁷And this rod, which was turned into a snake, you shall take in your hand, with which you shall perform the signs with it."

18 Now Moses went and returned to Iothor, his father-in-law, and said, "I shall go and return to my brothers in Egypt and see whether they are still living." And Iothor said to Moses, "Go in health." Now after those many days the king of Egypt had died. ¹⁹And the Lord said to Moses in Madian, "Go! Return to Egypt! For all those who were seeking your soul are dead." ²⁰Then Moses took his wife and children and put them on draft animals, and he went back to Egypt. And Moses took the rod from God in his hand.

21 And the Lord said to Moses, "As you go and return to Egypt, see, all the wonders which I put in your hands, you shall perform them before Pharaoh. But I will harden his heart, and he will not send the people away. ²²Then you shall say to Pharaoh, 'This is what the Lord says, "My firstborn son is Israel."' ²³And I said to you, "Send my people away so that they might serve me." Now then, if you are unwilling to send them away, see then, I will kill your firstborn son.'"

24 Now it happened on the way at the lodging, an angel of the Lord met him and was seeking to kill him. ²⁵And Sepphora took a pebble and circumcised the foreskin of her son, and she fell at his feet and said, "The blood of the circumcision of my child is staunched." ²⁶And he went away from him, because she said, "The blood of the circumcision of my child is staunched."

27 And the Lord said to Aaron, "Go into the wilderness for a meeting with Moses." And he went and met him at the mountain of God, and they kissed one another. ²⁸And Moses reported to Aaron all the words of the Lord that he sent and all the signs that he commanded him. ²⁹Then Moses and Aaron went and assembled the elders' council of the sons of Israel. ³⁰And Aaron spoke all these words that God had spoken to Moses and performed the signs before the people. ³¹And the people believed and were glad because God had observed the sons of Israel and because he had seen their oppression. Then the people bowed down and did obeisance.

5 And after these things Moses and Aaron went in to Pharaoh and said to him, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says, 'Send away my people so that they may celebrate a feast to me in the wilderness.'" ²And Pharaoh said, "Who is this whose voice I shall listen to so that I send away the sons of Israel? I do not know the Lord, and I am not sending Israel away!" ³And they say to him, "The God of the Hebrews has summoned us. We will travel then a three days' journey into the wilderness in order to sacrifice to our God, lest death or murder meet us." ⁴And the king of Egypt said to them, "Moses and Aaron, why are you diverting my people from their tasks? Each of you, go back to his tasks." ⁵And Pharaoh said, "Look, the people of the land now are very numerous. Therefore, let us not give them relief from their tasks." ⁶Then Pharaoh instructed the people's taskmasters and recorders, saying, ⁷"No longer will straw continue to be given to the people for brick-making, as it was yesterday and the third day. Let them go themselves and gather straw for themselves. ⁸And the levy of brick-making that they themselves make each day, you shall impose on them; you shall not remove anything. For they have spare time! For this reason they have cried out, saying, 'Let us go and offer sacrifice to our God.' ⁹Let the tasks of these people be made heavy, and let them be preoccupied with these things and let them not be preoccupied by empty words."

¹⁰ Then the taskmasters and recorders kept urging them on and telling the people, saying, "This is what Pharaoh says, 'I am no longer giving you straw. ¹¹As you yourselves go, gather for yourselves straw wherever you may find it, for nothing is being removed from your levy.'" ¹²And the people were scattered in the whole of Egypt to gather stubble for straw. ¹³Now the taskmasters kept urging them on, saying, "Complete the customary tasks daily even as when the straw was being given to you." ¹⁴And the recorders of the race of the sons of Israel, who had been set over them by the overseers of Pharaoh, were beaten, saying, "Why did you not finish your levies of brick-making, just as yesterday and the third day, also today?"

¹⁵ Then the recorders of the sons of Israel, they came in and cried out to Pharaoh, saying, "Why are you acting like this to your domestics? ¹⁶Straw is not being given to your domestics, and they tell us to make the brick, and look, your servants have been beaten. So you will treat your people unjustly." ¹⁷And he said to them, "You have spare time; you are men of leisure! For this reason you say, 'Let us go; let us offer sacrifice to our God.' ¹⁸Now then, go, and get to work! For the straw shall not be given to you, and you shall deliver the levy of brick-making." ¹⁹Now the recorders of the sons of Israel were seeing themselves in difficulties, because they were saying, "You shall not come short of the customary amount of brick-making daily."

20Now they met Moyses and Aaron coming to meet them, as they were going out from Pharao, 21and they said to them, "May God see you and judge, because you have made our smell loathsome before Pharao and before his attendants, to put a sword into his hands to kill us."

22 Then Moyses turned to the Lord and said, "Lord, why did you harm this people? And why have you sent me? 23Even from the time when I have gone in to Pharao to speak in your name, he has harmed this people, and you have not delivered your people."

6 And the Lord said to Moyses, "Now you shall see what I will do to Pharao. For by a mighty hand he will send them away, and by a raised arm he will drive them out of his land."

2 Then God spoke to Moyses and said to him, "I am the Lord, 3and I appeared to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, being their God, and my name, Lord, I did not make known to them. 4Also, I established my covenant with them in order to give them the land of the Chananites, the land of their sojourning, in which they also lived as sojourners on it. 5And I listened to the groaning of the sons of Israel, those whom the Egyptians are making into slaves, and I remembered your covenant. 6Go! Tell the sons of Israel, saying, 'I am the Lord, and I will bring you out from the domination of the Egyptians, and I will deliver you from slavery, and I will redeem you by a raised arm and great judgment. 7And I will take you for myself, as my people, and I will be your God, and you shall know that I am the Lord, your God, who brought you out from the oppression of the Egyptians. 8And I will bring you into the land for which I stretched out my hand to give it to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, and I will give it to you by allotment. I am the Lord.' " 9Then Moyses spoke in this way to the sons of Israel, and they did not listen to Moyses because of discouragement and the hard tasks.

10 Then the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, 11 "Go in, tell Pharao, king of Egypt, to send away the sons of Israel from his land." 12Then Moyses spoke before the Lord, saying, "Look, the sons of Israel did not listen to me, and how will Pharao listen to me? Now, I am without eloquence." 13But the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron and gave them instructions for Pharao, king of Egypt, that he send the sons of Israel away from the land of Egypt.

14 And these are the chiefs of the households of their ancestral lineages: sons of Rouben, firstborn of Israel: Henoch and Phallous, Hasron and Char-mi. This is the family of Rouben. 15And sons of Symeon: Iemouel and Iamin and Oad and Iachin and Saar and Saoul, the son of the Phoenician. These are the paternal lineages of the sons of Symeon. 16And these are the names of the sons of Leui according to their families: Gedson and Kaath and Merari. And the years of Leui's life were one hundred thirty-seven. 17And these are sons of Gedson: Lobeni and Semei, households of their paternal lineage. 18And sons of Kaath: Amram and Isaar, Chebron and Oziel. And the years of Kaath's life were one hundred thirty years. 19And sons of Merari: Mooli and Omousi. These are the households of Leui's ancestral lineages according to their families. 20And Amram took Iochabed, the daughter of his father's brother, for his own wife, and she bore him both Aaron and Moyses and Mariam, their sister. Now the years of Amram's life were one hundred thirty-six years. 21And sons of Isaar: Kore and Napheg and Zechri. 22And sons of Oziel: Misael and Elisaphan and Setri. 23Now Aaron took Elisabe, daughter of Aminadab, sister of Naasson, for his wife, and she bore him Nadab and Abioud and Eleazar and Ithamar. 24And sons of Kore: Asir and Elkana and Abiasaph. These are the generations of Kore. 25And Eleazar, Aaron's son, took one of the daughters of Phoutiel for his wife, and she bore him Phinees. These are the heads of the ancestral lineage of the Leuites, according to their generations.

26 This is Aaron and Moyses whom God told to bring the sons of Israel out of Egypt with their host. 27These are the ones negotiating with Pharao, king of Egypt, and they brought the sons of Israel out of Egypt—Aaron himself and Moyses.

28 On the day in which the Lord spoke to Moyses in the land, Egypt, 29the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, "I am the Lord. Say to Pharao, king of Egypt, what I am saying to you." 30And Moyses said before the Lord, "Look, I am weak-voiced, and how will Pharao listen to me?"

7 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, "Look, I have given you as a god to Pharao, and Aaron, your brother, shall be your prophet. 2Now you shall speak to him all things that I command you, and Aaron, your brother, shall tell Pharao so that he sends the sons of Israel away from his land. 3But I will harden Pharao's heart, and I will multiply my signs and wonders in the land, Egypt. 4And Pharao shall not listen to you, and I will lay my hand upon Egypt, and I will bring out with my host my people, the sons of Israel, from the land of Egypt with great vengeance. 5And all the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch out the hand against Egypt, and I shall bring the sons of Israel out from their midst." 6And Moyses and Aaron did just as the Lord commanded them; so they did. 7Now Moyses was eighty years old, but Aaron, his brother, was eighty-three years old, when he spoke to Pharao.

8 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying, 9 "And if Pharao should speak to you, saying, 'Give us a sign or wonder,' you also shall say to Aaron, your brother, 'Take the rod, and throw it upon the ground before Pharao and before his attendants, and it will be a dragon.' " 10Now Moyses and Aaron went in before Pharao and his attendants and did so just as the Lord commanded them. And Aaron threw down the rod before Pharao and before his attendants, and it became a dragon. 11And Pharao summoned the experts of Egypt and the sorcerers, and they also, the enchanters of the Egyptians, did likewise by their magical potions. 12And each one threw down his rod, and they became dragons, and the rod of Aaron swallowed the rods of those people. ¹³And the heart of Pharaoh prevailed, and he did not listen to them, just as the Lord spoke to them.

¹⁴ Now the Lord said to Moyses, "The heart of Pharaoh is weighed down so as not to send away the people. ¹⁵Go to Pharaoh in the morning. Look, he himself is going out to the water, and you shall stand, meeting him on the bank of the river, and the rod that was turned into a snake you shall take in your hand. ¹⁶And you shall say to him, 'The Lord, the God of the Hebrews, has sent me to you, saying, "Send away my people so that they may serve me in the wilderness." And look, you did not listen up to this point. ¹⁷This is what the Lord says, "By this you shall know that I am the Lord. Look, with the rod that is in my hand I am about to strike upon the water that is in the river, and it shall turn to blood. ¹⁸And the fish that are in the river shall die, and the river shall stink, and the Egyptians shall be unable to drink water from the river.' " ¹⁹Now the Lord said to Moyses, "Say to Aaron, your brother, 'Take your rod, and stretch out the hand over the waters of Egypt and over their rivers and over their canals and over their marshes and over all their accumulated water, and they shall be blood.' " And blood occurred in all the land of Egypt, both in things made from wood and things made from stone.

8 Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Go in to Pharaoh, and you will say to him, 'This is what the Lord says: Send away my people so that they may serve me. ²But if you are unwilling to send them away, look, I am going to strike all your borders with frogs. ³And the river shall vomit frogs, and when they come up, they shall enter into your houses and into the secret places of your bedrooms and upon your beds and into the houses of your attendants and your people and in your bread dough and in your ovens. ⁴And upon you and upon your attendants and upon your people the frogs shall come up.' " ⁵Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Say to Aaron, your brother, 'Stretch out by hand your rod over the rivers and over the canals and over the marshes, and bring up the frogs.' " ⁶And Aaron stretched out the hand over the waters of Egypt and brought up the frogs. And the frog was made to come up and covered the land of Egypt. ⁷But also the Egyptians' enchanters did likewise with their magical potions, and they brought up frogs on the land of Egypt.

⁸ Then Pharaoh called Moyses and Aaron and said, "Pray on my behalf to the Lord, and let him take away the frogs from me and from my people, and I will send away the people, and they may sacrifice to the Lord." ⁹Then Moyses said to Pharaoh, "Arrange for me when I should pray for you and for your attendants and your people, to remove the frogs from you and from your people and out of your houses—only in the river shall they remain." ¹⁰And he said, "Tomorrow." He said, therefore, "As you have said so that you may know that there is no other except the Lord. ¹¹And the frogs shall be taken away from you and out of your houses and out of your villages and from your attendants and from your people—only in the river shall they remain." ¹²Then Moyses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh, and Moyses cried to the Lord about the curtailing of the frogs, as he had arranged with Pharaoh. ¹³And the Lord did just as Moyses said, and the frogs died from the houses and from the villages and from the fields. ¹⁴And they gathered them in heaps and heaps, and the land stank. ¹⁵But when Pharaoh saw that respite had occurred, his heart was weighed down, and he did not listen to them, just as the Lord said.

¹⁶ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Say to Aaron: 'Stretch out by hand your rod, and strike the levees of earth, and there shall be gnats both on people and on quadrupeds and on the whole land of Egypt.' " ¹⁷Aaron, therefore, stretched out by hand the rod and struck the levees of the earth, and the gnats were both on people and on quadrupeds, and in every levee of the earth, the gnats were in all the land of Egypt. ¹⁸But also the enchanters did likewise with their magical potions to produce the gnat, and they could not. And the gnats were both on people and on quadrupeds. ¹⁹The enchanters, therefore, said to Pharaoh, "This is the finger of God!" And Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he did not listen to them, just as the Lord said.

²⁰ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Rise early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh. Look, he himself will go out to the water, and you will say to him, 'This is what the Lord says: Send away my people so that they may serve me. ²¹But if you should be unwilling to send away my people, look, I am going to send against you and against your attendants and against your people and against your houses the dog-fly, and the Egyptians' houses shall be filled with the dog-fly, even into the land which they are on. ²²And I will distinguish gloriously on that day the land of Gesem, which my people are on, whereon the dog-fly shall not be, so that you may know that I am the Lord, the Lord of all the land^a. ²³And I will put a distinction between my people and between your people. Now on the morrow this sign shall be upon the land." ²⁴And the Lord did so, and the dog-fly came in great numbers into the houses of Pharaoh and into the houses of his attendants and into the whole land of Egypt, and the land was ruined as a result of the dog-fly.

²⁵ Then Pharaoh summoned Moyses and Aaron, saying, "Go, and sacrifice to your God in the land!" ²⁶And Moyses said, "It cannot be so! For we would sacrifice to the Lord our God the abominations of the Egyptians. For if we should sacrifice the abominations of the Egyptians before them, we will be stoned. ²⁷A three days' journey we will go into the wilderness, and we will sacrifice to the Lord, our God, according as he told us." ²⁸And Pharaoh said, "I will send you away—and sacrifice to the Lord, your God, in the wilderness, but not far shall you proceed to go. Pray, therefore, for me to the Lord." ²⁹Then Moyses said, "Right now I will go out from you, and I will pray to God, and the dog-fly will depart from you and from your attendants and your people tomorrow. Do not add anymore, Pharaoh, to deceiving, so as not to send away the people to sacrifice to the Lord."

³⁰ Then Moyses went out from Pharaoh and prayed to God. ³¹Now the Lord did as Moyses said, and he took away the dog-fly from Pharaoh and from his attendants and from his people, and not one remained. ³²And Pharaoh made his heart heavy also on this occasion, and he was unwilling to send away the people.

9 Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Go in to Pharaoh, and you shall say to him, 'This is what the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, says: Send away my people so that they may serve me. ²Yet if you are unwilling to send away my people, but still hold on to them, ³look, the hand of the Lord will be on your animals on the plains, both on the horses and on the draft animals and on the camels and cattle and sheep—a very great death. ⁴And I will distinguish gloriously between the animals of the Egyptians and between the animals of the sons of Israel. Not a thing from all the sons of Israel shall die.' " ⁵And God gave a limit, saying, "Tomorrow the Lord will do this thing on the land." ⁶And the Lord did this thing on the next day, and all the Egyptians' animals died, but from the animals of the sons of Israel nothing died. ⁷But when Pharaoh saw that nothing from the animals of the sons of Israel died, Pharaoh's heart became heavy, and he did not send away the people.

⁸ Then the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying, "You take handfuls of furnace soot, and let Moyses scatter it toward heaven before Pharaoh and before his attendants. ⁹And let it become a dust cloud over all the land of Egypt, and there shall be upon humans and quadrupeds festering sores, oozing blisters, both on humans and on quadrupeds and in all the land of Egypt." ¹⁰And he took the furnace soot before Pharaoh, and Moyses scattered it toward heaven, and festering sores, oozing blisters occurred both on humans and on quadrupeds. ¹¹And the magicians were unable to stand before Moyses because of the festering sores. For the festering sores occurred on the magicians and in the whole land of Egypt. ¹²But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not listen to them, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

¹³ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Rise early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and you shall say to him, 'This is what the Lord says, the God of the Hebrews: Send away my people so that they may serve me. ¹⁴For at the present time I am sending out all my encounters into the heart of you and your attendants and your people so that you may know that there is no other like me in all the land.' ¹⁵For if now I sent my hand, I would strike you and your people with death, and you would be destroyed from the land.' ¹⁶And for this reason you have been spared in order that I might display in you my power and in order that my name might be proclaimed in all the land.' ¹⁷Still then you hold on to my people so as not to send them away. ¹⁸Look, I am about to rain at this hour tomorrow very abundant hail, such as has not occurred in Egypt from the day which it was founded until this day. ¹⁹Now, therefore, hurry to gather your animals and whatever belongs to you on the plain. For all the humans and animals, whatever should be found on the plains and should not enter into a dwelling, but the hail should fall upon them, shall die.'" ²⁰The one among Pharaoh's attendants who feared the word of the Lord gathered his animals into dwellings. ²¹But whoever did not pay attention with his mind to the word of the Lord left the animals on the plain.

²² Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Stretch out your hand toward heaven, and there shall be hail on the whole land of Egypt, both on humans and animals and on all herbage which is on the land." ²³Then Moyses stretched out the hand towards heaven, and the Lord gave sounds and hail, and fire ran about on the land, and the Lord rained hail on the whole land of Egypt. ²⁴Now there was hail and fire flashing in the hail. Now the hail was very, very abundant, such as had not occurred in Egypt from the time when a people had come into being upon it. ²⁵Then hail struck in all the land of Egypt from human to animal, and all herbage on the plain the hail struck, and all the trees on the plains the hail crushed. ²⁶Only in the land, Gesem, where the sons of Israel were, the hail did not occur.

²⁷ Then Pharaoh sent and summoned Moyses and Aaron and said to them, "Now I have sinned. The Lord is just but I and my people are impious. ²⁸Therefore pray for me to the Lord, and let him put a stop to God's sounds and hail and fire, and I will send you away, and you will no longer continue to stay." ²⁹And Moyses said to him, "As soon as I leave the city, I will spread out my hands to the Lord, and the sounds will stop, and the hail and the rain will be no more so that you may know that the land^a is the Lord's. ³⁰Both you and your attendants—I know that you have not yet come to fear the Lord.”³¹ Now the flax and the barley were ruined. For the barley was ripe, and the flax was going to seed.³² But the wheat and the spelt were not ruined, for they were late.³³ Then Moyses went out from Pharaoh outside of the city, and he spread out hands to the Lord, and the sounds ceased, and the hail, and the rain no longer dripped on the land.³⁴ Now when Pharaoh saw that the rain had ceased, and the hail and the sounds, he continued to sin and made his heart and that of his attendants heavy.³⁵ And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not send away the sons of Israel, according as the Lord said to Moyses.

10 Then the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, “Go in to Pharaoh. For I made his heart and that of his attendants heavy in order that one after another these signs might come upon them,² that you may recount in the ears of your children and to the children of your children how I mocked the Egyptians, and my signs that I did among them, and you will know that I am Lord.”

3 Then Moyses and Aaron went in before Pharaoh and said to him, “This is what the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, says, ‘For how long are you unwilling to respect me? Send away my people so that they may serve me!’⁴ But if you are not willing to send away my people, look, I am bringing during this hour tomorrow a grasshopper swarm upon all your borders.⁵ And it shall cover the face of the land, and you will not be able to see the land, and it shall devour all the rest that remains that the hail left for you, and it shall devour every tree that grows for you on the land.⁶ And your houses and the houses of your attendants and all the houses in all the land of Egypt shall be filled, something that your fathers or their grandfathers have never seen, from the day when they came on the land^a until this day.’” And Moyses turned away and went out from Pharaoh.

7 Then the attendants of Pharaoh say to him, “For how long will this be a stumbling-block for us? Send away the people so that they may serve the Lord their God. Or do you wish to know that Egypt lies in ruins?”⁸ And they brought back both Moyses and Aaron to Pharaoh, and he said to them, “Go! Serve the Lord your God. But who and who are those that are going?”⁹ And Moyses says, “With the young and old men we will go, with our sons and daughters and sheep and cattle, for it is the Lord our God’s feast.”¹⁰ And he said to them, “Let the Lord so be with you. According as I send you, I should not also send your chattels, should I? Take note that wickedness lies before you.¹¹ Not so! But let the men go, and you serve God! For this you yourselves are asking.” Then they thrust them out from the presence of Pharaoh.

12 Then the Lord said to Moyses, “Stretch out the hand on the land of Egypt, and let the grasshopper come up on the land, and it will devour all the herbage of the land and all the fruit of the trees, which the hail left behind.”¹³ And Moyses lifted up the rod towards heaven, and the Lord brought up a south wind upon the land that whole day and whole night. The morning came, and the south wind took up the grasshopper¹⁴ and brought it up on all the land of Egypt, and a great many settled on all the borders of Egypt. A grasshopper such as this had not occurred before it, and after it there shall not be such.¹⁵ And it covered the face of the land, and the land was ruined. And it devoured all the herbage of the land and all the fruit of the trees, which was left from the hail. Nothing green was left on the trees and on all the herbage of the plain in the whole land of Egypt.¹⁶ Then Pharaoh hastened to summon Moyses and Aaron, saying, “I have sinned before the Lord your God and against you.¹⁷ Therefore bear with my sin now again, and pray to the Lord your God, and let him take away from me this death.”¹⁸ So Moyses went out from Pharaoh and prayed to God.¹⁹ And the Lord turned a violent wind from the sea, and it took up the grasshopper and threw it into the Red Sea, and not one grasshopper was left in the whole land of Egypt.²⁰ And the Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart, and he did not send away the sons of Israel.

21 Then the Lord said to Moyses, “Stretch out the hand towards heaven, and let there be darkness over the land of Egypt, palpable darkness.”²² So Moyses stretched out the hand toward heaven, and there was darkness, gloom, hurricane, on all the land of Egypt for three days.²³ And no one saw his brother, and no one rose up from his bed for three days. But for all the sons of Israel there was light in all places where they were dwelling.²⁴ And Pharaoh summoned Moyses and Aaron, saying, “Go! Serve the Lord your God. Only leave behind the sheep and cattle. And let your chattels depart with you.”²⁵ And Moyses said, “But you also will give us whole burnt offerings and sacrifices that we shall make to the Lord our God,²⁶ and our animals will go with us, and we shall not leave behind a hoof. For from them we shall take to serve the Lord our God. But we do not know how we should worship the Lord our God until we go there.”²⁷ But the Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart, and he was unwilling to send them away.²⁸ And Pharaoh says, “Depart from me; watch out that yet again you see my face. Now on whatever day you should appear to me, you shall die!”²⁹ Then Moyses says, “You have spoken! I shall no longer appear to you in person.”

11 Then the Lord said to Moyses, “Still one plague I will bring upon Pharaoh and upon Egypt, and after these things he will send you away from here. Now whenever he sends you away, with everything he will expel you with expulsion.² Speak then secretly to the ears of the people, and let each one ask from his neighbor and a woman from her neighbor silver and gold articles and clothing.”³ Now the Lord gave favor to his people before the Egyptians, and they supplied them. And the man Moyses became very great before the

4 And Moses said, "This is what the Lord says: Around midnight I am going to enter into the midst of Egypt, and every firstborn in the land, Egypt, shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh, who sits on the throne, to the firstborn of the female slave by the millstone and to the firstborn of every animal. 6And there will be a great cry throughout the whole land of Egypt, such as has not been and such as will not again be repeated. 7But among all the sons of Israel a dog will not snarl with his tongue from human being to animal in order that you might know by what means the Lord shall distinguish gloriously between the Egyptians and Israel. 8And all these servants of yours shall come down to me and do obeisance before me, saying, 'Leave, you and all your people, whom you are leading away,' and after these things I will go out." Then Moses went out from Pharaoh with wrath.

9 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Pharaoh will not listen to you in order that I may multiply my signs and wonders in the land, Egypt." 10So Moses and Aaron did all these signs and wonders in the land, Egypt, before Pharaoh. But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he was unwilling to send away the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt.

12 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron in the land, Egypt, saying: 2This month shall be for you the beginning of months; it is first for you among the months of the year. 3Speak to the whole congregation of the sons of Israel, saying, "On the tenth of this month let them take, each person, a sheep according to the paternal houses, a sheep for each household. 4But if those in the household are too few so that they are not enough for a sheep, he shall join with himself his nearby neighbor according to the number of souls; you, each one, shall number together that which is sufficient for a sheep. 5You shall have a perfect sheep, a one-year-old male. You shall take from the lambs and kids. 6And it shall be kept for you until the fourteenth of this month, and all the multitude of the congregation of the sons of Israel shall slay it towards evening. 7And they shall take some of the blood and shall put it on the two doorposts and on the lintel in the houses whichever they eat them in. 8And they shall eat the meat this night, roasted in fire, and they shall eat unleavened bread with bitter herbs. 9You shall not eat from it raw or boiled in water but rather roasted in fire, head with the feet and inner organs. 10You shall not leave any of it until morning, and you shall not break a bone of it. But that which remains from it until morning, you shall burn with fire. 11Now in this way you shall eat it: your loins girded and your sandals on your feet and your staves in your hands. And you shall eat it with haste—it is the Lord's pascha. 12And I will pass through in the land, Egypt, on this night, and I will strike down every firstborn in the land, Egypt, from human being to animal, and on all the gods of the Egyptians I will execute vengeance. I am the Lord. 13And the blood shall be for you as a sign on the houses, there where you are, and I will see the blood, and I will protect you, and there shall not be a plague among you to destroy, whenever I strike in the land, Egypt.

14 And this day shall be a memorial for you, and you shall celebrate it as a feast to the Lord throughout your generations. You shall celebrate it as a perpetual precept. 15For seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, but from the first day you shall remove leaven from your houses. Everyone, whoever eats leaven, that soul shall be destroyed from Israel, from the first day until the seventh day. 16And the first day shall be called holy, and the seventh day shall be designated holy for you. No work of service shall be done on them, except what shall be done for every soul; this only shall be done for you. 17And you shall keep this commandment. For on this day I will bring your host out of the land of Egypt, and you shall make this day throughout your generations a perpetual precept. 18When the first month begins, on the fourteenth day, from the evening you shall eat unleavened bread until the twenty-first day of the month until the evening. 19For seven days leaven shall not be found in your houses. Everyone, whoever eats something leavened, that soul shall be destroyed from the congregation of Israel both among the gioras^a and the natives of the land. 20Anything leavened you shall not eat; in every habitation of yours you shall eat unleavened bread."

21 Then Moses summoned the entire elders' council of Israel and said to them, "When you go away, take for yourselves a sheep according to your families and sacrifice the pascha. 22And you shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dipping from the blood by the door, you shall also touch the lintel and on both doorposts, from the blood that is by the door. But you, each one, shall not go out the door of his house until morning. 23And the Lord will pass by to strike the Egyptians, and he will see the blood upon the lintel and on both doorposts, and the Lord will pass by the door, and he will not allow the destroyer to enter into your houses to strike. 24And you shall keep this word as a precept for yourself and your sons forever. 25Now when you come into the land whichever the Lord gives you, according as he said, you shall observe this service. 26And it shall be if your sons shall say to you, 'What is this service?' 27then you shall say to them, 'This pascha is a sacrifice to the Lord who protected the houses of the sons of Israel in Egypt when he struck the Egyptians, but our houses he preserved.' " And the people bent down and did obeisance.

28 And when they went away, the sons of Israel did as the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron; so they did.

29 Now it happened during the middle of the night that the Lord struck every firstborn in the land, Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh who sits upon the throne, to the firstborn of the female captive who is in the pit, even to the firstborn of every animal. ³⁰And Pharaoh arose during the night and all his attendants and all the Egyptians, and there was a great cry in all the land of Egypt. For there was not a house which had no dead person in it. ³¹And Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron during the night and he said to them, "Arise, and go out from my people, both you and the sons of Israel. Go! Serve the Lord your God according as you say. ³²Take both your sheep and cattle, and get going, but bless me too."

³³ And the Egyptians were forcing the people, to throw them out of the land quickly. For they said, "We are all dying!" ³⁴Now the people took the dough before it was leavened, their kneaded mixtures wrapped in their clothes on their shoulders. ³⁵And the sons of Israel did as Moses instructed them and asked from the Egyptians silver and gold articles and clothing. ³⁶And the Lord gave favor to his people before the Egyptians, and they supplied them, and they plundered the Egyptians.

⁴³ Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying: This is the law of the pascha. No alien shall eat of it. ⁴⁴And every domestic of anyone or purchased slave you shall circumcise him, and then he shall eat of it. ⁴⁵A resident alien or hired person shall not eat of it. ⁴⁶In one house it shall be eaten; you shall not take any of the meat outside of the house, and you shall not break a bone of it. ⁴⁷The entire congregation of the sons of Israel shall do this. ⁴⁸But if any guest should draw near to you to keep the pascha to the Lord, you shall circumcise every male of his, and then he shall draw near to keep it, and he shall be like a native of the land. No uncircumcised person shall eat of it. ⁴⁹There shall be one law for the local inhabitant and for the guest among you who has drawn near.

⁵⁰ And the sons of Israel did just as the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron for them; so they did. ⁵¹And it happened on that day the Lord brought the sons of Israel out of the land of Egypt together with their host.

13 Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: ²Consecrate to me every firstborn, first-produced, opening every womb among the sons of Israel, from human being to animal. It's mine!

³ Then Moses said to the people, "Keep remembering this day in which you came out of Egypt, from a house of slavery. For by a mighty hand the Lord brought you out from there. And leaven shall not be eaten. ⁴For on this very day you are going out in the month of the new things. ⁵And it shall be whenever the Lord your God brings you into the land of the Chananites and Chettites and Heuites and Gergesites and Amorites and Pherezites and Iebousites, which he swore to your fathers to give you, a land flowing with milk and honey, you shall also perform this service in this month. ⁶For six days you shall eat unleavened bread, but on the seventh day there is the Lord's feast. ⁷Unleavened bread you shall eat for the seven days. Anything leavened shall not be seen among you, nor shall you possess leaven in all your borders. ⁸And you shall tell your son on that day, saying, 'For this reason the Lord God acted for me when I was going out of Egypt.' ⁹And it shall be a sign for you on your hand and a memorial before your eyes in order that the law of the Lord might be in your mouth. For with a mighty hand the Lord brought you out of Egypt. ¹⁰And you shall keep this law according to the times of the seasons from days to days.

¹¹ "And it shall be whenever the Lord your God brings you into the land of the Chananites, in the manner which he swore to your fathers, and he gives it to you, ¹²you shall also set apart everything opening the womb, the males, for the Lord. Everything opening the womb from the herds or among your animals, whatever belongs to you, you shall consecrate the males to the Lord. ¹³Everything opening the womb of a donkey you will exchange for a sheep. But if you do not make an exchange, you shall redeem it. Every firstborn of a human being among your sons you shall redeem. ¹⁴Now if your son should ask you afterward, saying, 'What is this?' you shall also say to him, 'With a mighty hand the Lord brought us out of the land of Egypt, from a house of slavery. ¹⁵But when Pharaoh hardened against sending us away, he killed every firstborn in the land, Egypt, from the firstborn of human beings to the firstborn of animals. Therefore, I am sacrificing to the Lord everything opening the womb, the males, and I will redeem every firstborn of my sons.' ¹⁶And it shall be for a sign on your hand and immovable before your eyes. For with a mighty hand the Lord brought you out of Egypt."

¹⁷ Now when Pharaoh sent away the people, God did not lead them the way of the land of the Phylistiim, because it was near. For God said, "Lest there be regret by the people when they see war and they return to Egypt." ¹⁸And God led the people a roundabout way towards the wilderness, towards the Red Sea. Now in the fifth generation the sons of Israel went up out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁹And Moses took the bones of Ioseph with him.

For Joseph made the sons of Israel swear an oath, saying, "With a concern the Lord will concern himself with you, and you shall bring my bones there with you."²⁰ Then the sons of Israel, when they departed from Sokchoth, camped at Othom on the edge of the wilderness.²¹ Now God was leading them, by day by a pillar of cloud to show them the way but during the night by a pillar of fire.²² The pillar of cloud during the day and the pillar of fire by night did not depart from before all the people.

14 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:² Speak to the sons of Israel, and when they turn back, let them camp opposite the village between Magdolos and between the sea, opposite Beelsepphon. Before them you shall camp by the sea.³ And Pharaoh will say to his people, "These sons of Israel are wandering in the land. For the wilderness has closed in on them."⁴ Now I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and he will pursue after them. And I will be glorified in Pharaoh and in all his army, and all the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord. And they did so.

⁵ And it was reported to the king of the Egyptians that the people had escaped. And the heart of Pharaoh and his attendants was turned against the people, and they said, "What is this we have done, sending away the sons of Israel so they are not subject to us?"⁶ Then Pharaoh hitched up his chariots and led away all his people together with him,⁷ and he took six hundred choice chariots and all the cavalry of the Egyptians and the third-ranked officers over all of them.⁸ And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and he pursued after the sons of Israel. Now the sons of Israel were leaving with a high hand.⁹ And the Egyptians pursued after them and found them encamped by the sea, and all the cavalry and chariots of Pharaoh and the horsemen and his army were opposite the village, opposite Beelsepphon.

¹⁰ And Pharaoh advanced. And when they looked up, the sons of Israel saw with their eyes, and the Egyptians encamped behind them, and they were very afraid. Then the sons of Israel cried out to the Lord.¹¹ And they said to Moyses, "Because there were not graves in the land of Egypt did you bring us out to put us to death in this wilderness? What is this you have done to us, bringing us out of Egypt?"¹² Was this not the matter that we told you in Egypt, saying, 'Leave us alone in order that we might be subject to the Egyptians?' For it was better for us to be subject to the Egyptians than to die in this wilderness."¹³ But Moyses said to the people, "Take courage! Stand, and see the deliverance from God that he will perform for you today. For as you have seen the Egyptians today, you shall not ever again see them time without end."¹⁴ The Lord will fight for you, and you will be quiet."

¹⁵ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Why are you crying out to me? Speak to the sons of Israel, and let them break camp.¹⁶ And you, raise your rod, and stretch out your hand over the sea, and break it apart, and let the sons of Israel enter into the midst of the sea on what was dry.¹⁷ And look, I will harden the heart of Pharaoh and all the Egyptians, and they will enter in after them. And I will be glorified in Pharaoh and in all his army and in his chariots and in his horses.¹⁸ And all the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, as I am being glorified in Pharaoh and in his chariots and his horses."

¹⁹ Then the angel of God, who was going before the camp of the sons of Israel, rose up and went behind. Now the pillar of cloud also rose up from before them and stood behind them.²⁰ And it went in between the camp of the Egyptians and between the camp of Israel. And there was darkness and gloom, and the night elapsed, and they did not mix together with one another during the whole night.

²¹ But Moyses stretched out the hand over the sea, and the Lord drew off the sea by a strong south wind during the whole night, and he made the sea dry, and the water was divided.²² And the sons of Israel entered into the midst of the sea on the dry ground, and the water became a wall for them on the right and a wall on the left.²³ Then the Egyptians pursued, and all the cavalry of Pharaoh and the chariots and the riders went in after them into the midst of the sea.²⁴ And it happened in the early morning watch that the Lord looked at the camp of the Egyptians in the pillar of fire and cloud, and he threw the camp of the Egyptians into disarray.²⁵ And he bound together the axles of their chariots and led them violently. And the Egyptians said, "Let us flee from Israel! For the Lord fights the Egyptians for them!"

²⁶ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Stretch out your hand over the sea, and let the water return and cover up the Egyptians, both the chariots and the riders."²⁷ So Moyses stretched out the hand over the sea, and the water returned near day to its place. Now the Egyptians fled under the water, and the Lord shook off the Egyptians in the middle of the sea.²⁸ And when the water had returned, it covered the chariots and riders and all the host of Pharaoh that had entered after them into the sea. Not even one of them remained!²⁹ But the sons of Israel went across dry ground in the midst of the sea, and the water was for them a wall on the right and a wall on the left.

³⁰ And the Lord rescued Israel in that day from the hand of the Egyptians. And Israel saw the Egyptians dead along the shore of the sea.³¹ So Israel saw the great hand, which things the Lord had done to the Egyptians. And the people feared the Lord and trusted God and Moyses, his attendant.

15 Then Moyses and the sons of Israel sang this song to God and spoke, saying,
"Let us sing to the Lord, for gloriously he has glorified himself;
horse and rider he threw into the sea.

- ² Helper and defender he has become to me, for deliverance;
this is my God, and I will glorify him;
my father's God, and I will exalt him.
- ³ The Lord, when he shatters wars,
the Lord is his name.

4 "The chariots of Pharaoh and his host he threw into the sea;
choice riders, third-ranked officers, he drowned in the Red Sea.

5 With open sea he covered them;
they sank down into the deep like stone.

6 Your right hand, O Lord, has been glorified in power;
your right hand, O Lord, crushed enemies.

7 And in the abundance of your glory you shattered the adversaries;
you sent your anger, and it consumed them like stubble.

8 And through the breath of your wrath the water separated;
the waters were congealed like a wall;
the waves were congealed in the midst of the sea.

9 The enemy said, 'In pursuit I will overtake;
I will divide spoils; I will satisfy my soul;
I will destroy with my dagger; my hand shall dominate.'

10 You sent your breath^a; the sea covered them;
they sank like lead in violent water.

11 "Who is like you among the gods, O Lord?
Who is like you, glorified among holy ones,
awesome in glorious deeds, doing wonders?

12 You extended your right hand;
the earth swallowed them.

13 "You led by your righteousness this people of yours whom you redeemed;
you summoned by your power into your holy abode.

14 Nations heard and became angry; pangs seized those dwelling among the Philistim.

15 Then leaders of Edom made haste.
And rulers of the Moabites, trembling seized them;
all those inhabiting Chanaan melted away.

16 May fear and trembling fall upon them; by the greatness of your arm let them be turned into stone
until your people should pass by, O Lord, until this people of yours, whom you acquired, should pass by.

17 Lead them in, and plant them in the mountain of your inheritance, in your prepared dwelling place that you made, O Lord, a holy precinct, O Lord, that your hands prepared.

18 The Lord, ruling forever and ever and

19 Because the cavalry of Pharaoh together with chariots and riders went into the sea, the Lord also brought the water of the sea upon them, but the sons of Israel walked through dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 Then Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took the tambourine in her hand, and all the women went out after her with tambourines and dances. ²¹And Miriam took their lead, saying:
"Let us sing to the Lord, for gloriously he has glorified himself.

Horse and rider he threw into the sea."

22 Then Moses removed the sons of Israel from the Red Sea and led them into the wilderness of Sour. And they were journeying for three days in the wilderness and were not finding water to drink.
²³And they came to Merra and could not drink water from Merra, for it was bitter. Therefore the name of that place was called Bitterness. ²⁴And the people were complaining against Moses, saying,
"What shall we drink?" ²⁵Then Moses cried to the Lord, and the Lord showed him wood, and he threw it into the water, and the water became sweet. There he set for him statutes and judgments, and there he tested him. ²⁶And he said, "If you by paying attention listen to the voice of the Lord, your God, and do before him pleasing things, and give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, every disease which I brought upon the Egyptians, I will not bring upon you. For I am the Lord who heals you."

27 And they came to Ailim, and twelve springs of water and seventy date palm trunks were there.
And they camped there by the waters.

16 And they set out from Ailim, and the entire congregation of the sons of Israel came to the wilderness of Sin, which is between Ailim and between Sina. And on the fifteenth day, in the second month, after they had gone out from the land of Egypt, ²the entire congregation of the sons of Israel was complaining against Moses and Aaron, ³and the sons of Israel said to them, "If only we had died, struck by the Lord, in the land of Egypt, when we sat at the cauldrons of meat and were eating bread to the full, because you led us out into this wilderness to kill all this congregation by famine."

4 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Look, I am going to rain bread from heaven for you, and the people shall go out, and they shall collect the day's portion for a day so that I might test them whether they will walk by my law or not. ⁵And it shall be on the sixth day, and they shall prepare whatever they bring in, and it shall be double whatever they gather together daily for a day." ⁶Then Moses and Aaron said to the entire congregation of the sons of Israel, "At evening you shall know that the Lord brought you out of the land of Egypt, ⁷and in the morning you shall see the glory of the Lord, when he heard your complaining against God. But we,
what are we that you complain against us?" ⁸And Moses said, "When the Lord gives you meat in the evening to eat and bread in the morning to the full, because the Lord heard your complaining which you complain against us, then we, what are we? For not against us is your complaining, but rather against God."

9 And Moyses said to Aaron, "Say to the entire congregation of the sons of Israel: Draw near before God. For he has heard your complaining." ¹⁰And when Aaron was speaking to the entire congregation of the sons of Israel, they also turned about towards the wilderness, and the glory of the Lord appeared in a cloud. ¹¹And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, ¹²"I have heard the complaining of the sons of Israel. Speak to them, saying: Towards evening you shall eat meat, and in the morning you shall be filled with bread. And you shall know that I am the Lord, your God."

13 So evening came, and quail^a came up and covered the camp. Then morning came, when the dew was lifting around the camp, ¹⁴and look, upon the surface of the wilderness was something fine like coriander, white like frost on the ground. ¹⁵And when they saw it, the sons of Israel said one to the other, "What is this?" For they did not know what it was. Then Moyses said to them, "This is the bread that the Lord has given you to eat. ¹⁶This is the word that the Lord instructed, 'Each person, gather from it for those appropriate; a gomorb^b per head, according to the number of your souls, each of you with your tent mates collect.'" ¹⁷And the sons of Israel did so, and they collected, the one much and the other less. ¹⁸And they measured by the gomorb^b. The one with much did not have excess, and the one with less did not have too little. Each person collected for those appropriate at his own home. ¹⁹Then Moyses said to them, "Let no one leave any of it to the morning." ²⁰And they did not listen to Moyses, but certain ones left some of it to the morning. And it bred worms and stank, and Moyses was irritated with them. ²¹And they collected it morning by morning, each person that which was appropriate for him. But when the sun grew hot, it melted.

22 But it happened on the sixth day, they collected double what was required, two gomorb^b for one person. And all the leaders of the congregation went in and reported to Moyses. ²³And Moyses said to them, "This is the word that the Lord spoke: Tomorrow is Sabbata, a rest holy to the Lord. Whatever you bake, bake, and whatever you boil, boil. And all the excess, leave it in storage until the morning." ²⁴And they left some of it until the morning, according as Moyses instructed them. And it did not stink, nor was there a worm in it. ²⁵And Moyses said, "Eat today! For today is Sabbata to the Lord. It will not be found on the plain. ²⁶Six days you will collect, but on the seventh day is Sabbata. There will be none in it."

27 And it happened on the seventh day, certain of the people went out to collect, and they found none. ²⁸Then the Lord said to Moyses, "For how long are you unwilling to listen to my commandments and my law? ²⁹See! For the Lord has given you this day, the sabbaths. Therefore he gave you on the sixth day bread for two days. Sit, each person, in your houses; let no one go out from his place on the seventh day." ³⁰And the people sabbatized on the seventh day.

31 And the sons of Israel called its name Man. Now it was white like coriander seed, but its taste was like cake with honey. ³²Then Moyses said, "This is the word that the Lord instructed: Fill the gomorb^b with Man for deposit for your generations in order that they might see the bread that you ate in the wilderness, how the Lord brought you out from the land of Egypt." ³³And Moyses said to Aaron, "Take one golden jar, and place in it the gomorb^b full of Man, and you will put it away before God for preservation for your generations." ³⁴As the Lord instructed Moyses, Aaron also put it away before the witness for preservation. ³⁵Now the sons of Israel ate Man for forty years until they came into inhabited land. They ate Man until they came near to the region of Phoenicia. ³⁶Now the gomorb^b was a tenth of three measures.

17 And the entire congregation of the sons of Israel set out from the wilderness of Sin according to their encampments by the word of the Lord, and they camped at Raphidin. But there was not water for the people to drink. ²And the people were railing against Moyses, saying, "Give us water so that we may drink!" And Moyses said to them, "Why are you railing at me, and why are you testing the Lord?" ³But the people thirsted there for water, and the people kept complaining against Moyses, saying, "Why is it that you brought us up from Egypt to kill us and our children and animals with thirst?" ⁴Then Moyses cried out to the Lord, saying, "What shall I do with this people? A little while yet and they will stone me!" ⁵And the Lord said to Moyses, "Go on ahead of this people, but take with you some of the elders of the people and the rod with which you struck the river take in your hand, and go. ⁶I here have taken my stand, before you came, on the rock at Choreb. And you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, and the people will drink." And Moyses did so before the sons of Israel. ⁷And he called the name of that place Testing and Raillery because of the railing of the sons of Israel and because they tested the Lord, saying, "Is the Lord among us or not?"

8 Then Amalek came and was fighting Israel at Raphidin. ⁹And Moyses said to Iesous, "Choose for yourself capable men, and go forth, and set up in battle array with Amalek tomorrow. And look, I stand on top of the hill, and the rod of God is in my hand." ¹⁰And Iesous did as Moyses said to him and set up in battle array with Amalek, and Moyses and Aaron and Hor went up onto the top of the hill. ¹¹And it happened whenever Moyses held up his hands, Israel was prevailing, and whenever he lowered his hands, Amalek was prevailing. ¹²But Moyses' hands were heavy. And they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat on it. And Aaron and Hor kept supporting his hands, here one and there one. And the hands of Moyses were supported until the setting of the sun. ¹³And Iesus routed Amalek and all his people by slaughter of dagger.

¹⁴ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Write this down for a memorial in a book, and put into the ears of Iesus that with a wipe out I will wipe out the memorial of Amalek from beneath heaven. ¹⁵And Moyses built an altar to the Lord and called its name "The Lord is my refuge^a," ¹⁶because by a secret hand the Lord fights against Amalek from generations to generations.

18 Now Iothor, the priest of Madian, Moyses' father-in-law, heard all that the Lord did to Israel, his own people. For the Lord brought Israel out from Egypt. ²Now Iothor, Moyses' father-in-law, took Sepphora, Moyses' wife, after her dismissal, ³and his two sons. The name of one of them was Gersam (saying, "I was a resident alien in a foreign land"), ⁴and the name of the second, Eliezer ("for the God of my father was my help, and he delivered me from the hand of Pharao"). ⁵And Iothor, Moyses' father-in-law, and the sons and wife came to Moyses in the wilderness, where he encamped at the mountain of God. ⁶And it was reported to Moyses, saying, "Look, Iothor, your father-in-law, is coming to you, and your wife and two sons with him." ⁷And Moyses went out for a meeting with his father-in-law, and he did obeisance before him and kissed him, and they greeted one another. And he led him into the tent. ⁸And Moyses recounted to his father-in-law all that the Lord did to Pharao and the Egyptians for the sake of Israel and all the hardship that happened to them in the way and that the Lord delivered them from the hand of Pharao and from the hand of the Egyptians. ⁹Now Iothor was amazed at all the good things that the Lord did to them, that^b he delivered them from the hand of the Egyptians and from the hand of Pharao.

¹⁰ And Iothor said, "Blessed be the Lord, because he delivered his people from the hand of the Egyptians and from the hand of Pharao. ¹¹Now I know that the Lord is great beyond all the gods, on account of this that they attacked them." ¹²And Iothor, Moyses' father-in-law, took whole burnt offerings and sacrifices to God. And Aaron and all the elders of Israel came to eat bread together with Moyses' father-in-law before God.

¹³ And it happened after the morrow Moyses sat down to judge the people. Now all the people had stood near Moyses from morning to evening. ¹⁴And when Iothor saw all that he was doing for the people, he says, "What is this that you are doing to the people? Why do you sit alone, but all the people stand near you from morning to evening?" ¹⁵And Moyses says to his father-in-law, "Because the people come to me to seek judgment from God. ¹⁶For whenever a dispute happens to them and they come to me, I decide for each person, and I teach them the ordinances of God and his law." ¹⁷Then Moyses' father-in-law said to him, ¹⁸"You are dealing with this thing incorrectly! (18) You will be destroyed with unbearable destruction, both you and all this people who are with you. This matter is too heavy for you—you will be unable to do it alone. ¹⁹Now then listen to me, and I will advise you, and God will be with you. You be for the people the things pertaining to God, and you shall bring their cases to God, ²⁰and you shall attest to them the ordinances of God and his law, and you shall show them the ways that they shall walk in and the works that they shall do. ²¹And you, search for yourself from all the people capable, god-fearing men, righteous men, who hate arrogance, and you shall set them over them as officers of thousands and officers of hundreds and officers of fifties and officers of tens, ²²and they shall judge the people every season. Now the burdensome matter they shall bring to you, but the smaller matters of judgment they themselves shall judge, and they will make it easier for you, and they will help you. ²³If you do this thing, God will strengthen you, and you will be able to stand, and all this people will go to their own place with peace."

²⁴ Now Moyses listened to the voice of his father-in-law and did what he said to him. ²⁵And Moyses chose capable men from all Israel and made them over them officers of thousands and officers of hundreds and officers of fifties and officers of tens. ²⁶And they were judging the people every season. Now the burdensome matter they were bringing to Moyses, but every smaller matter they themselves were judging. ²⁷Then Moyses sent away his own father-in-law, and he went away to his country.

19 Now in the third month of the departure of the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt on this day they came into the wilderness of Sina. ²And they departed from Raphidin and came into the wilderness of Sina, and Israel camped there opposite the mountain. ³And Moyses went onto the mountain of God, and God called him from the mountain, saying, "This is what you shall say to the house of Iakob and report to the sons of Israel: ⁴You yourselves have seen what I have done to the Egyptians, and I took you up as though on eagles' wings, and I brought you to myself. ⁵And now if by paying attention you listen to my voice and keep my covenant, you shall be for me a people special above all nations. For all the earth is mine. ⁶And you shall be for me a royal priesthood and a holy nation. These words you shall say to the sons of Israel."

⁷ And Moyses went and called the elders of the people and set before them all these words that God instructed him. ⁸And all the people with one accord answered and said, "All that God said we will do and heed." Then Moyses carried the words of the people up to God. ⁹Now the Lord said to

^aOr My Lord is a refuge ^bPerhaps because

Moyses, "Look, I am coming to you in a pillar of cloud in order that the people may listen while I speak to you and they may trust you forever."

And Moyses reported the words of the people to the Lord. ¹⁰And the Lord said to Moyses, "When you go down, testify solemnly to the people, and purify them today and tomorrow, and let them wash their clothes, ¹¹and be prepared for the third day. For on the third day the Lord will come down upon the mountain Sina before all the people. ¹²And you shall set limits for the people round about, saying, 'Be on your guard against going onto the mountain and grazing it at all. Everyone who touches the mountain shall die by death. ¹³A hand shall not touch it. For he shall be stoned with stones or shot with an arrow. Whether animal or whether human, it shall not live.' Whenever the sounds and the trumpets and the cloud leave the mountain, they shall come up on the mountain." ¹⁴And Moyses went down from the mountain to the people and consecrated them, and they washed their clothes. ¹⁵And he said to the people, ^a"Prepare for three days. Do not go near a woman^a."

¹⁶ And it happened on the third day, when it was toward dawn, sounds and lightning and dark cloud were occurring upon the mountain Sina; the sound of the trumpet was ringing loudly, and all the people in the camp were terrified. ¹⁷And Moyses led the people out from the camp for a meeting with God, and they stood near, below the mountain. ¹⁸Now the mountain Sina was smoking in its entirety, because God had come down upon it in fire, and the smoke was rising up like the smoke of a furnace. And all the people were very astonished. ¹⁹Now the sounds of the trumpet, increasing, became much stronger. Moyses was speaking, and God answered him with sound. ²⁰And the Lord came down upon the mountain Sina onto the top of the mountain, and the Lord called Moyses onto the top of the mountain, and Moyses went up. ²¹And God spoke to Moyses, saying, "Go down, testify solemnly to the people lest they come near to God to observe and a multitude of them should fall. ²²And let the priests who approach God be consecrated, lest the Lord do away with some of them. ²³And Moyses said to God, "The people will be unable to climb up to the mountain Sina. For you have testified solemnly to us, saying, 'Set a limit to the mountain, and keep it holy.'" ²⁴Then the Lord said to him, "Go; descend, and you and Aaron with you come up. But do not let the priests and people use force to come up to God, lest the Lord destroy some of them." ²⁵So Moyses went down to the people and spoke to them.

20 And the Lord spoke all these words, saying: ²¹I am the Lord your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery. ³You shall not have other gods besides me.

⁴ You shall not make for yourself an idol or likeness of anything whatever is in heaven above and whatever is in the earth beneath and whatever is in the waters beneath the earth. ⁵You shall not do obeisance to them, nor are you to serve them, for I am the Lord your God, a jealous god, repaying sins of fathers upon children up to the third and fourth generation to those who hate me, ⁶and doing mercy unto thousands, for those who love me and keep my ordinances.

⁸ Remember the day of the sabbaths to consecrate it. ⁹For six days you shall labor and do all your labor, ¹⁰but on the seventh day there is Sabbath to the Lord your God. You shall not do in it any labor, you and your son and your daughter, your male slave and your female slave, your ox and your draft animal and any animal of yours and the guest who resides among you. ¹¹For in six days the Lord made the heaven and the earth and the sea and all things in them, and he rested on the seventh day. For this reason the Lord blessed the seventh day and consecrated it.

¹² Honor your father and mother so that it may be well with you and so that you may be long-lived on the good land that the Lord your God is giving you.

¹³ You shall not commit adultery.

¹⁶ You shall not testify falsely against your neighbor with false witness.

¹⁸ And all the people were perceiving the sound and the flashes and the sound of the trumpet and the mountain smoking. Now all the people were afraid and stood at a distance. ¹⁹And they said to Moyses, "You speak to us, and do not let God speak to us, lest we die." ²⁰And Moyses says to them, "Take courage! For in order to test you God has come to you in order that his fear might be in you so that you do not sin." ²¹Now the people were standing at a distance, but Moyses went into the darkness where God was.

²² And the Lord said to Moyses: This is what you shall say to the house of Iakob and report to the sons of Israel, "You have seen what I have spoken from heaven to you. ²³You shall not make for yourselves silver gods, and gold gods you shall not make for yourselves. ²⁴An altar of earth you shall make for me, and you shall sacrifice on it your whole burnt offerings and deliverance offerings, your sheep and your bull calves in every place, there where I pronounce my name, and I will come to you and bless you. ²⁵But if you make an altar of stones for me, you shall not build them cut. For you have placed the tool upon it, and it has been defiled. ²⁶You shall not go up by steps onto my altar so that you do not reveal your shame upon it.

21 And these are the statutes that you shall set before them:

2 If you buy a Hebrew servant, for six years he shall be subject to you. But in the seventh year he shall go away a free person without obligation. ³If he comes in single, he shall also go out single. But if a wife enters together with him, the wife also shall go out with him. ⁴But if the master gives him a wife and she bears him sons or daughters, the wife and children shall be his master's, but he shall go out single. ⁵Now if the servant says in response, "I have come to love my master and wife and children; I am not departing a free person," ⁶his master shall lead him to the tribunal of God, and then he shall lead him to the door at the doorpost, and his master shall pierce his ear with a small awl, and he shall be subject to him forever.

7 Now if someone sells his own daughter as a domestic slave, she shall not go away in the same way as slave women depart. ⁸If she, whom he betrothed to himself, does not please her master, he shall cause her to be redeemed. But to a foreign nation the master is not to sell her, because he has broken faith with her. ⁹Now if he betroths her to his son, he shall deal with her according to the statute of daughters. ¹⁰And if he takes another to him, he shall not withhold her necessities and clothing and marital rights. ¹¹But if he does not do for her these three things, she shall go out without obligation, without silver.

12 Now if someone strikes someone and he dies, let him be put to death with death. ¹³But the one who acts unwittingly, but God delivered him into his hands—I will give you a place, there where the killer shall flee. ¹⁴Now if someone attacks his neighbor to kill him treacherously and he flees, from my altar you shall take him to put him to death.

15 Let the one who strikes his father or his mother be put to death with death.

16(17) Let the one who insults his father or his mother end with death.

17(16) Whoever steals any of the sons of Israel and, having gained control over him, sells him, and he be found with him, let him end with death.

18 Now if two men rail at one another and one strikes his neighbor with a stone or fist and he does not die but he be laid upon his bed, ¹⁹if the person arises and walks around outside on a rod, the striker shall not be liable, except for his loss of employment he shall pay compensation and for medical treatment.

20 Now if someone strikes his male slave or his female slave with a rod and he dies under his hands, let him justly be punished. ²¹But if he survives one day or two, he shall not be punished, for he is his silver.

22 Now if two men fight and strike a pregnant woman and her child comes forth not fully formed, he shall be punished with a fine. According as the husband of the woman might impose, he shall pay with judicial assessment. ²³But if it is fully formed, he shall pay life for life, ²⁴eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, ²⁵burn for burn, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 Now if someone strikes the eye of his male domestic or the eye of his female attendant and cause blindness, he shall send them away free in exchange for their eye. ²⁷Now if he knocks out the tooth of a male domestic or the tooth of his female attendant, he shall send them away free in exchange for their tooth.

28 Now if a bull gores a man or a woman and he dies, the bull shall be stoned with stones, and its meat shall not be eaten, but the owner of the bull shall not be liable. ²⁹But if the bull was prone to gore before yesterday and before the third day and they warn its owner and he does not restrain it and it kills a man or a woman, the bull shall be stoned, and its owner shall die as well. ³⁰And if a ransom is imposed upon him, he shall pay a ransom for his life, whatever they impose upon him. ³¹But if it gores a son or a daughter, according to this statute they shall deal with him^a. ³²And if the bull gores a male servant or female servant, he shall give to their master thirty didrachmas of silver, and the bull shall be stoned.

33 Now if someone opens a pit or hews a pit and does not cover it and a calf or donkey falls in there, ³⁴the owner of the pit shall pay compensation. He shall give silver to their owner, but that which is dead shall be his.

35 Now if someone's bull gores the neighbor's bull and it dies, they shall sell the living bull and divide its silver, and the dead bull they shall divide. ³⁶But if it is known that the bull was prone to goring before yesterday and before the third day and they warn its owner and he does not restrain it, he shall pay compensation, bull for bull, but the one that died shall be his.

22 Now if anyone steals a calf or sheep and slaughters or sells it, he shall pay five calves in compensation for the bull calf and four sheep for the sheep.

2 Now if the thief is found at the point of break-in and, being beaten, dies, it is not homicide in his case. ³Now if the sun has risen upon him, he is guilty. He shall die in exchange. Now if he does not have anything let him be sold for the theft. ⁴Now if he is caught and the stolen item from donkey to sheep is found in his hand alive, he shall compensate them double.

5 Now if someone grazes a field or vineyard and leaves his animal to graze another field, he shall pay compensation from his field according to its yield. But if he should graze all the field, the best of his field or the best of his vineyard he shall pay in compensation.

6 Now if fire breaks out and finds thorns and burns a threshing floor or ears of corn or a plain, the one who started the fire shall pay compensation.

7 Now if someone gives to a neighbor silver or goods to guard and it is stolen from the person's house, if the thief be found, he shall pay double in compensation. ⁸But if the thief is not found, the owner of the house shall draw near before God and swear that surely he himself has not acted wickedly against the entire deposit of the neighbor.

⁹ With regard to any specific injustice concerning calf and draft animal and sheep and garment and any loss which is alleged, whatever in fact it might be, the trial of both parties shall come before God, and the one convicted by God shall pay double in compensation to his neighbor.

¹⁰ Now if someone gives the neighbor a draft animal or sheep or calf or any animal to guard and it breaks a limb or dies or becomes captive and no one knows, ¹¹there shall be an oath of God between both parties that surely he has not acted wickedly against the entire deposit of the neighbor, and so his owner shall accept, and he shall not at all make compensation. ¹²But if it is stolen from him, he shall pay compensation to the owner. ¹³And if it becomes prey to wild beasts, he shall take him to the prey and shall not pay compensation.

¹⁴ Now if someone asks from the neighbor and it breaks a limb or dies and the owner is not with it, he shall pay compensation. ¹⁵But if the owner is with it, he shall not pay compensation. But if he be one who hired it, it shall be his in lieu of his hire.

²⁰ The one who sacrifices to the gods, except to the Lord alone, shall be destroyed.

²¹ And you shall not harm a guest, nor shall you oppress him, for you were guests in the land, Egypt. ²²Every widow and orphan you shall not harm. ²³But if you harm them with harm, and crying out, they call out to me, I will by paying attention listen to their voice, ²⁴and I will be enraged with anger and will kill you with the dagger, and your wives shall be widows, and your children orphans.

²⁸ You shall not revile gods, and you shall not speak ill of your people's rulers.

²⁹ First fruits of your threshing floor and press you shall not hold back.

The firstborn of your sons you shall give to me.

³⁰You shall do the same with your bull calf and your sheep and your draft animal. For seven days it shall be under its mother, but on the eighth day you shall restore it to me.

³¹ And you shall be my holy men, and meat torn by animals you shall not eat. Throw it to the dog!

23 You shall not accept a groundless report. You shall not consent with the unjust person to be an unjust witness. ²You shall not be with the majority for wrongdoing. You shall not associate with a crowd to turn side with the majority so as to turn aside a trial. ³And a poor person you shall not pity in a trial.

⁴ Now if you meet your enemy's ox or his draft animal when they go astray, you shall turn back and restore them to him.

⁶ You shall not pervert judgment of a poor man in his trial. ⁷From every unjust thing said you shall keep away. An innocent and just person you shall not kill, and you shall not acquit the impious person for the sake of bribes. ⁸And you shall not take bribes. For bribes blind the eyes of those who see and corrupt just matters.

¹² Six days you shall do your tasks, but on the seventh day you shall rest in order that your ox and your draft animal might rest and that the son of your female servant and the guest might be refreshed. ¹³All that I have spoken to you, observe. And you shall not recall a name of other gods; neither shall it be heard from your mouth.

¹⁴ Three times during the year hold a feast for me. ¹⁵Take heed to keep the feast of unleavened bread. Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, just as I commanded you according to the time of the month of the new things. For in it you came out of Egypt.

You shall not appear before me empty-handed.

¹⁹ The first fruits of the first products of your land you shall bring into the house of the Lord your God.

You shall not boil a lamb in its mother's milk.

20 And look, I am sending my angel in front of you in order to guard you on the way in order to bring you into the land that I prepared for you. ²¹Mind yourself, and listen to him, and do not disobey him. For he shall not hold you in undue awe, for my name is upon him.

22 If by paying attention you listen to my voice and do all that I tell you, I will be an enemy to your enemies and will resist those who resist you.

23 For my angel will go, leading you, and will bring you in to the Amorrite and Chettite and Pherezite and Chananite and Gergesite and Heuite and Iebousite, and I will destroy them. ²⁴You shall not do obeisance to their gods nor serve them. You shall not act according to their practices, but with demolition shall demolish and by smashing shall smash their steles. ²⁵And you shall serve the Lord your God, and I will bless your bread and your wine and your water, and I will turn away sickness from you. ²⁶There shall not be a childless or barren woman in your land. I will fulfill the number of your days. ²⁷And I will send fear, leading you, and I will confound all the nations, those into which you are entering, and I will make all your adversaries fugitives. ²⁸And I will send hornets before you, and it shall drive out the Amorrites and the Heuites and the Chananites and the Chettites from you. ²⁹I will not drive them out in one year, lest the land become desolate and the wild animals of the land become many against you. ³⁰Little by little I will drive them out from you until you are increased and inherit the land. ³¹And I will set your boundaries from the Red Sea until the Sea of the Phylistiim and from the wilderness until the great river Euphrates. And I will surrender into your hands those dwelling in the land, and I will drive them out from you. ³²You shall not make a covenant with them and their gods. ³³And they shall not dwell in your land, lest they make you sin against me. For if you are subject to their gods, these people shall be an obstacle for you.

24 And he said to Moyses, "Come up to the Lord, you and Aaron and Nadab and Abioud and seventy of Israel's elders, and they shall do obeisance to the Lord from afar. ²And Moyses alone shall come near to God, but they themselves shall not come near. And the people shall not come up together with them."

3 And Moyses went in and recounted to the people all God's words and statutes. And all the people answered with one voice, saying, "All the words that the Lord has spoken we will do and heed." ⁴And Moyses wrote all the words of the Lord. Now, early in the morning, Moyses constructed an altar at the foot of the mountain and twelve stones for the twelve tribes of Israel. ⁵And he sent the young men of the sons of Israel, and they offered whole burnt offerings and sacrificed a sacrifice of deliverance to God, bull-calves. ⁶Now, taking half of the blood, Moyses poured it into bowls, and half of the blood he poured out towards the altar. ⁷And taking the book of the covenant, he read in the ears of the people, and they said, "All that the Lord has said we will do and heed." ⁸Then Moyses, taking the blood, scattered it over the people and said, "Look, the blood of the covenant that the Lord made with you concerning all these words."

9 And Moyses and Aaron and Nadab and Abioud and seventy of the elders' council of Israel went up. ¹⁰And they saw the place, there where the God of Israel stood, and that which was beneath his feet, like something made from lapis lazuli brick and like the appearance of the firmament of heaven in purity. ¹¹And not even one of the chosen of Israel perished^a. And they appeared in the place of God and were eating and drinking.

12 And the Lord said to Moyses, "Come up to me into the mountain, and be there. And I will give you the stone tablets, the law and the commandments that I wrote to legislate for them." ¹³And Moyses rose up, and Iesous who assisted him, and went up into the mountain of God. ¹⁴And they said to the elders, "Wait quietly here until we return to you. And look, Aaron and Hor are with you. If a case arises for someone, let them go to them."

15 And Moyses and Iesous went up into the mountain, and the cloud covered the mountain. ¹⁶And God's glory descended upon the mountain, Sina, and the cloud covered it for six days, and the Lord called Moyses on the seventh day from the midst of the cloud. ¹⁷Now the appearance of the Lord's glory was like a flaming fire on the top of the mountain before the sons of Israel. ¹⁸And Moyses entered into the midst of the cloud and went up into the mountain, and he was there on the mountain for forty days and forty nights.

25 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and take for me first fruits from all those to whom it seems good in their heart, and you shall receive my first fruits. ³And this is the first fruits that you shall take from them: gold, silver, bronze, ⁴blue, purple, double scarlet and twisted linen and goat's hair ⁵and red-dyed rams' skins and blue skins and decay-resistant wood ⁶⁽⁷⁾and stones of sardius and stones for engraving for the shoulder-strap and the full-length robe. ⁷⁽⁸⁾And you shall make a holy precinct for me, and I shall appear among you. ⁸⁽⁹⁾And you shall make for me according to all that I show you on the mountain—the pattern of the tent and the pattern of all its furnishings. So you shall make.

9(10) And you shall make an ark of witness from decay-resistant wood, the length two and a half cubits and the width a cubit and a half and the height a cubit and a half. ¹⁰⁽¹¹⁾And you shall gold-plate it with pure gold. Outside and inside you shall gild it, and you shall make for it twisted gold moldings around. ¹¹⁽¹²⁾And you shall cast four gold rings for it and put them on the four sides, two rings on the one side and two rings on the second side. ¹²⁽¹³⁾And you shall make carrying-poles from decay-resistant wood and gold-plate them with gold. ¹³⁽¹⁴⁾And you shall put the carrying-poles into the rings on the sides of the ark to lift the ark with them. ¹⁴⁽¹⁵⁾In the rings of the ark the carrying-poles shall be fixed. ¹⁵⁽¹⁶⁾And you shall deposit in the ark the witnesses, whichever I give you.

16(17) And you shall make a propitiatory as a cover of pure gold, the length two and a half cubits and the width one and a half cubits. ¹⁷⁽¹⁸⁾And you shall make two cherubim engraved in gold, and you shall position them at both sides of the propitiatory. ¹⁸⁽¹⁹⁾They shall be made—one cherub on this side and one cherub on the second side of the propitiatory. And you shall make the two cherubim on the two sides. ¹⁹⁽²⁰⁾The cherubim shall be stretching the wings above, overshadowing with their wings the propitiatory and their faces towards one another. Towards the propitiatory shall the faces of the cherubim be. ²⁰⁽²¹⁾And you shall place the propitiatory on the ark above, and in the ark you shall deposit the witnesses, whichever I give you. ²¹⁽²²⁾And I will be known to you from there, and I will speak to you from above the propitiatory in between the two cherubim that are on the ark of witness, even in accord with all that I may command you for the sons of Israel.

22(23) And you shall make a table of pure gold, the length two cubits and the width one cubit and the height a cubit and a half. ²³⁽²⁴⁾And you shall make for it twisted gold moldings around, ⁽²⁵⁾and you shall make for it a rim, a handbreadth all around. ²⁴And you shall make a twisted molding for the rim around. ²⁵⁽²⁶⁾And you shall make four gold rings, and you shall place the rings on the four parts of its feet ⁽²⁷⁾under the rim. ²⁶And the rings shall be for sheaths for the carrying-poles so as to lift the table with them. ²⁷⁽²⁸⁾And you shall make the carrying-poles from decay-resistant wood, and you shall gold-plate them with pure gold, and the table shall be lifted by them. ²⁸⁽²⁹⁾And you shall make its bowls and censers and libation cups and ladles, those with which you shall pour a libation. Of pure gold you shall make them. ²⁹⁽³⁰⁾And you shall place upon the table facing loaves, in front of me always.

30(31) And you shall make a lampstand from pure gold. You shall make the lampstand engraved. Its stem and branches and bowls and buds^a and lilies shall be part of it. ³¹⁽³²⁾Now six branches going out sideways, three branches of the lampstand out of its one side and three branches of the lampstand out of the second side. ³²⁽³³⁾And three bowls shaped like nuts on one branch, a bud and a lily. So for the six branches that go out from the lampstand. ³³⁽³⁴⁾And on the lampstand four bowls shaped like nuts, its buds and lilies. ³⁴⁽³⁵⁾A bud under two branches of it and a bud under four branches of it; so for the six branches that go out from the lampstand. ³⁶Let the buds and branches be part of it, the whole engraved from one piece of pure gold. ³⁷And you shall make its seven lamps, and you shall position the lamps, and they shall shine from the one face. ³⁸And its oil vessel and its underlays^b you shall make from pure gold. ³⁹All these vessels shall be a talent of pure gold. ⁴⁰See to it that you make them according to the pattern that has been shown to you on the mountain.

26 And you shall make the tent with ten curtains from twisted linen and blue and purple and twisted scarlet. With cherubim by the work of a weaver you shall make them. ²The length of the one curtain shall be twenty-eight cubits and a width of four cubits shall be the one curtain. The same measure shall be for all the curtains. ³Now five curtains shall be joined from one another, one from the other, and five curtains shall be joined one from the other. ⁴And you shall make for them blue loops at the edge of one curtain from the one side for the coupling, and likewise you shall make at the edge of the outer curtain for the second coupling. ⁵Now you shall make fifty loops for the one curtain and shall make fifty loops from the side of the curtain at the coupling of the second, facing, corresponding to one another, for each one. ⁶And you shall make fifty golden clasps and shall join the curtains one to the other with the clasps, and the tent shall be one.

7 And you shall make goat-hair skins as a covering over the tent. Eleven skins you shall make them. ⁸The length of one skin shall be thirty cubits, and the width of one skin shall be four cubits. The same measure shall be for the eleven skins. ⁹And you shall join the five skins together and the six skins together. And you shall fold double the sixth skin at the front of the tent. ¹⁰And you shall make fifty loops on the edge of the one skin in the middle for the coupling, and fifty loops you shall make on the edge of the second adjoining skin.

11 And you shall make fifty bronze clasps and attach the clasps from the loops and join the skins, and there shall be one. ¹²And you shall lay down^c the excess in the skins of the tent. The half skin that remains you shall let hang down. The excess of the skins of the tent you shall let hang down behind the tent. ¹³A cubit from this side and a cubit from that side from the remainder of the skins from the length of the skins of the tent shall be covering over the sides of the tent on each side in order to cover it. ¹⁴And you shall make a covering for the tent, red-dyed rams' skins and blue-dyed skins as coverings above.

15 And you shall make pillars for the tent from decay-resistant wood. ¹⁶Ten cubits you shall make one pillar and a cubit and a half the width of one pillar. ¹⁷Two hooks for one pillar corresponding one to the other; likewise you shall make for all the pillars of the tent. ¹⁸And you shall make pillars for the tent, twenty pillars for the side towards the north. ¹⁹And forty silver bases you shall make for

³⁶⁽⁴⁰⁾ And for the sons of Aaron you shall make tunics and sashes, and you shall make turbans for them for honor and glory. ³⁷⁽⁴¹⁾And you shall put them on Aaron, your brother, and his sons with him. And you shall anoint them and fill their hands and consecrate them so that they may serve me as priests. ³⁸⁽⁴²⁾And you shall make for them linen undergarments to hide the shame of their flesh; from hip to thighs they shall be. ³⁹⁽⁴³⁾And Aaron and his sons shall wear them, whenever they enter the tent of witness or whenever they come near to the altar of the holy place to minister, and they shall not bring onto themselves sin, lest they die: a perpetual precept for him and his seed after him.

29 And these are things that you shall make for them to consecrate them so that they serve me as priests. You shall take one young calf from the cattle and two rams without blemish ²and unleavened loaves kneaded with oil and unleavened cakes coated with oil. You shall make them with fine flour from wheat. ³And you shall place them upon one reed basket and bring them near on the reed basket, and the young bull and the two rams. ⁴And Aaron and his sons you shall bring near to the doors of the tent of witness and wash them with water. ⁵And taking the vestments, you shall clothe Aaron, your brother, with both the full-length robe and the shoulder-strap and the oracle, and you shall join together the oracle to the shoulder-strap for him. ⁶And you shall place the headdress on his head and place the thin plate "Holiness" on the headdress. ⁷And you shall take some of the oil of anointing and pour it upon his head and anoint him. ⁸And his sons you shall bring near and clothe them with tunics ⁹and gird them with the sashes and put on them the turbans, and they shall have a priesthood to me forever. And you shall validate the hands of Aaron and the hands of his sons.

his sons' right ears and on the tips of their right hands and on the tips of their right feet. ²¹And you shall take from the blood that is from the altar and from the oil of anointing and sprinkle on Aaron and on his vestment and his sons and the vestments of his sons with him. And he shall be consecrated, and his vestment and his sons and the vestments of his sons with him. But the blood of the ram you shall pour against the altar round about.

²⁶ And you shall take the breast from the ram of validation, which is for Aaron, and set it apart as something set apart before the Lord, and it shall be for you for a share. ²⁷And you shall consecrate the breast as something set apart, and the shoulder of the advance deduction, which has been set apart and which has been deducted in advance from the ram of validation from Aaron and from his sons. ²⁸And it shall be for Aaron and his sons a perpetual precept from the sons of Israel. For this is an advance deduction, and it shall be an advance deduction from the sons of Israel from the victims of deliverance, an advance deduction for the Lord.

38 And these are things that you shall do on the altar: two yearling lambs without blemish each day upon the altar perpetually, an offering in perpetuity. ³⁹The one lamb you shall do in the morning, and the second lamb you shall do in the evening. ⁴⁰And a tenth of fine flour mixed with beaten oil, the fourth of a hin^a, and a libation, the fourth of a hin^a of wine, with the one lamb. ⁴¹And the second lamb you shall do in the evening. In accordance with the morning sacrifice and in accordance with its libation you shall do, an odor of fragrance, an offering for the Lord, ⁴²a sacrifice in perpetuity throughout your generations, at the doors of the tent of witness before the Lord, by which I will be known to you there so as to speak to you. ⁴³And I will there prescribe for the sons of Israel, and I will be regarded as holy by my glory. ⁴⁴And I will consecrate the tent of witness and the altar, and Aaron and his sons I will consecrate to serve me as priests. ⁴⁵And I will be invoked among the sons of Israel and will be their god. ⁴⁶And they will know that I am the Lord their God who brought them from the land of Egypt, to be invoked by them and to be their God.

30 And you shall make an altar of incense from decay-resistant wood. ²And you shall make it a cubit long and a cubit wide. It shall be square and two cubits high. Its horns shall be part of it. ³And you shall gold-plate them with pure gold, its hearth and its sides round about and its horns, and you shall make for it a twisted gold molding round about. ⁴And two pure gold rings you shall make for it below its twisted molding; on the two sides you shall make them at the two flanks. And they shall be housings for the sticks to carry it by them. ⁵And you shall make sticks from decay-resistant wood and gold-plate them with gold. ⁶And you shall place it in front of the veil that is over the ark of witnesses by which I will be known to you there. ⁷And Aaron will burn on it mixed, finely ground incense. Morning by morning, whenever he prepares the lamps, he will burn incense on it. ⁸And whenever Aaron lights the lamps in the evening, he will burn incense on it—incense of perpetuity always before the Lord for their generations. ⁹And you shall not offer on it other incense, offering, sacrifice, and a libation you shall not pour on it. ¹⁰And Aaron will make atonement on its horns once in the year. By means of the blood of the purification of sins, the atonement, once in the year he will purify it for their generations. It is a holy of holies for the Lord.

¹⁴Everyone who passes along for the review from twenty years and upward shall give the tax to the Lord. ¹⁵The wealthy person will not increase, and the poor person will not decrease the half of the didrachma when giving the tax to the Lord to make atonement for your souls. ¹⁶And you shall take the silver of the tax from the sons of Israel and give it for the labor cost of the tent of witness, and for the sons of Israel it shall be a remembrance before the Lord to make atonement for your souls.

³⁴ And the Lord said to Moyses: Take for yourself spices—oil of myrrh, onycha, galbanum that is sweet and translucent frankincense, each shall be in equal proportion. ³⁵And they will make it incense, perfumed work of a perfumer, mixed, pure, holy work. ³⁶And you shall beat some of it small and place it before the witnesses in the tent of witness, there where I shall be known to you. It shall be a holy of holies for you. ³⁷Incense according to this mixture you shall not make for yourselves. It is to you something made holy to the Lord. ³⁸Whoever makes such as this, so as to be scented with it, shall perish from his people.

31 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Look, I have summoned by name Beseleel the son of Ouri son of Hor of the tribe of Ioudas, ³and I have filled him with a divine spirit of skill and intelligence and knowledge in every work, ⁴to be designing and to construct, to fashion the gold and the silver and the bronze and the blue and the purple and the spun scarlet and the twisted linen ⁵and the stone works and for the works crafted from wood, to fashion according to all the works. ⁶And I have appointed him and Eliab the son of Achisamach from the tribe of Dan, and to everyone intelligent at heart I have given intelligence, and they shall make all things that I instructed you—⁷the tent of witness and the ark of the covenant and the propitiatory that is on it and the furnishings of the tent ⁸and the altars and the table and all its utensils and the pure lampstand and all its utensils ⁹and the washbasin and its base ¹⁰and Aaron's ministry vestments and the vestments of his sons to serve me as priests ¹¹and the oil of anointing and the incense of the mixture for the sanctuary—according to all that I commanded you, they shall do.

¹²And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹³And you, instruct the sons of Israel, saying, "Observe and keep my sabbaths! For it is a sign with me and among you for your generations in order that you may know that I am the Lord who consecrates you. ¹⁴And you shall keep the sabbaths, because this is holy for you. The one who profanes it shall with death be put to death. Everyone who will do work in it, that soul shall be destroyed from among his people. ¹⁵For six days you shall do works, but on the seventh day there is Sabbata, a rest holy to the Lord. Everyone who does work on the seventh day shall be put to death. ¹⁶And the sons of Israel will keep the sabbaths to observe them throughout their generations, an everlasting covenant ¹⁷with me and the sons of Israel." It is an everlasting sign because in six days the Lord made the heaven and the earth, and on the seventh day he stopped and rested.

¹⁸And he gave Moyses, when he stopped speaking to him on the mountain, Sina, the two tablets of witness, stone tablets written by the finger of God.

32 And when the people saw that Moyses delayed to come down from the mountain, the people gathered together before^a Aaron and say to him, "Get up, and make us gods who will go before us. For this Moyses, the man who brought us out from the land of Egypt, we do not know what has happened to him." ²And Aaron says to them, "Remove the gold earrings in the ears of your wives and daughters, and bring them to me." ³And all the people removed the gold earrings in their ears and brought them to Aaron. ⁴And he received from their hands and formed them with an engraving tool and made them a molten calf and said, "These are your gods, Israel, who brought you up from the land of Egypt." ⁵And when Aaron saw, he built an altar before it, and Aaron proclaimed, saying, "The Lord's feast tomorrow!" ⁶And early the next day, he brought up whole burnt offerings and offered a sacrifice of deliverance, and the people sat down to eat and drink, and they arose to play.

⁷And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, "Go! Descend quickly from here, for your people have acted lawlessly, whom you brought out of the land of Egypt. ⁸They have deviated quickly from the way that you commanded them. They made for themselves a calf and did obeisance to it and offered sacrifices to it, and they said, ⁹'These are your gods, Israel, who brought you up from the land of Egypt.' ¹⁰And now allow me, and, enraged with anger against them, I will destroy them and make you into a great nation."

¹¹And Moyses prayed before the Lord his God and said, "Why, Lord, are you enraged with anger against your people whom you brought out of the land of Egypt with great power and an uplifted arm? ¹²Lest the Egyptians should speak, saying, 'With evil intent he led them out to kill them in the mountains and to destroy them utterly from the earth,' stop the anger of your rage, and be propitious at the wickedness of your people, ¹³remembering Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, your domestics, to whom you swore by yourself and spoke to them, saying, 'I will greatly multiply your seed as the stars of the sky in number,' and all this land that you said you would give to their seed, and they will possess it forever." ¹⁴And the Lord was propitiated concerning the harm that he said he would do to his people.

¹⁵And Moyses turned and went down from the mountain, and the two tablets of witness were in his hands, stone tablets written on both their sides; on this side and that side they were written. ¹⁶And the tablets were God's work, and the writing, God's writing, was engraved in the tablets. ¹⁷And when Iesous heard the sound of the people shouting, he says to Moyses, "The sound of war is in the camp!" ¹⁸And he says,

"It is not the sound of those taking the lead by force or the sound of those taking the lead in a rout, but the sound of those taking the lead in wine I hear."

¹⁹Now when he was drawing near to the camp, he sees the calf and the dancing, and being enraged with anger, Moyses threw from his hands the two tablets and shattered them beneath the mountain. ²⁰And taking the calf that they made, he burnt it with fire and ground it small and scattered it on the water and made the sons of Israel drink it.

²¹And Moyses said to Aaron, "What did this people do to you that you brought upon them great sin?" ²²And Aaron said to Moyses, "Do not be enraged, lord. For you know the impulse of this people. ²³For they say to me, 'Make us gods who will go before us. For this Moyses, the man who brought us out from the land of Egypt, we do not know what has happened to him.' ²⁴And I said to them, 'If gold things belong to anyone, take them off!' and they gave them to me, and I threw them into the fire, and this calf came out!"

²⁵ And when Moyses saw the people, that it had scattered—for Aaron scattered them, an object of gloating to their opponents—²⁶then Moyses stood at the gate of the camp and said, "Who is with the Lord? Let him come to me!" Then all the sons of Leui gathered to him. ²⁷And he says to them, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says, 'Each one put his own sword on his thigh, and go through, and return from gate to gate through the camp, and each one kill his brother, and each one his neighbor, and each one the one nearest to him.'" ²⁸And the sons of Leui did according as Moyses said to them, and there fell from the people on that day about three thousand men. ²⁹And Moyses said to them, "You filled your hands today for the Lord, each one by the son or by the brother, for a blessing to be bestowed upon you."

³⁰ And it happened on the next day that Moyses said to the people, "You have sinned a great sin, and now I will go up to God in order that I might make atonement for your sin." ³¹Then Moyses turned to the Lord and said, "I beg, O Lord. This people has sinned a great sin and made for themselves gold gods. ³²And now, if you shall forgive them the sin, forgive. But if not, erase me from your book that you have written." ³³And the Lord said to Moyses, "If anyone has sinned before me, I will erase him from my book. ³⁴But now go, and lead this people to the place that I told you. Look, my angel^a will go before your face. But on whichever day I concern myself, I will bring upon them their sin."

33 And the Lord said to Moyses, "Go, ascend from here, you and your people, whom you brought out of the land of Egypt, into the land that I swore to Abraam, Isaak and Iakob, saying, 'To your seed I will give it.' ²And I will send along my angel^a before you, and he will cast out the Amorrite and Chettite and Pherzite and Gergesite and Heuite and Iebousite. ³And he will lead you into a land flowing with milk and honey. For I shall never go up together with you because you are a stiff-necked people, lest I exterminate you in the way."

⁴ And when the people heard this grievous statement, they mourned in mournful ways. ⁵And the Lord said to the sons of Israel, "You are a stiff-necked people. Watch, lest I bring another plague upon you and exterminate you. Now then, take off the vestments of your glory and the ornamentation, and I will show you what I will do to you." ⁶And the sons of Israel removed their ornamentation and finery from^b the mountain of Choreb.

¹² And Moyses said to the Lord, "Look, you say to me, 'Lead up this people!' but you did not disclose to me whom you would send along with me. And you said to me, 'I have known you above all others, and you have favor with me.' ¹³If then I have found favor before you, disclose yourself to me. Let me see you recognizably in order that I might find favor before you and in order that I might know that this nation is your people." ¹⁴And he says, "I myself will go before you, and I will give you rest." ¹⁵And he says to him, "If you yourself do not go, do not lead me up from here. ¹⁶And how shall it be truly known that I have found favor with you, both I and your people, other than if you go along with us? And we shall be glorified, both I and your people, above all the nations that are on the earth."

¹⁷ Then the Lord said to Moyses, "Even this word that you have spoken, I will do for you. For you have found favor before me, and I know you above all others." ¹⁸And he says, "Show me your own glory!" ¹⁹And he said, "I will pass by before you in my glory, and I will call by my name "Lord" before you. And I will have mercy on whomever I have mercy, and I will have compassion on whomever I have compassion." ²⁰And he said, "You shall not be able to see my face. For a person shall never see my face and live." ²¹And the Lord said, "Look, a place is near me. You shall stand on the rock. ²²Now, whenever my glory passes by, then I will put you in a hole of the rock, and I will cover you with my hand until I pass by. ²³And I will take my hand away, and then you shall see my hind parts, but my face will not appear to you."

34 And the Lord said to Moyses, "Cut for yourself two stone tablets, just like the first ones, and ascend to me onto the mountain, and I will write upon the tablets the words that were on the first tablets that you shattered, ²and be prepared for the morning, and you shall come up onto the mountain, Sina, and shall stand there for me on the top of the mountain. ³And let no one come up with you or be seen in all the mountain. And do not let the sheep and the cattle graze near that mountain." ⁴And he cut two stone tablets, just like the first ones. And when it was early in the morning, Moyses went up onto the mountain, Sina, just as the Lord instructed him. And Moyses took with him the two stone tablets. ⁵And the Lord descended in a cloud, and he stood beside him there, and he called in the name of the Lord. ⁶And the Lord passed by before his face, and he called,

"The Lord, the Lord God is compassionate and merciful,

⁷ patient and very merciful and truthful and preserving righteousness and doing mercy for thousands, taking away acts of lawlessness and of injustice and sins, and he will not acquit the guilty person, bringing lawless acts of fathers upon children and upon children of children, upon the third and fourth generation."

⁸And quickly, bowing down to the earth, Moyses did obeisance ⁹and said, "If I have found favor before you, let my Lord go together with us. For the people are stiff-necked, and you shall take away our sins and lawless acts, and we will be yours."

¹⁰ And the Lord said to Moyses: Look, I am making a covenant with you. Before all your people I shall do glorious things that have not happened in all the earth and in any nation. And all the people among whom you are will see the works of the Lord because the things that I will do for you are awesome.

¹¹ Mind all the things that I command you. Look, I am casting out from before you the Amorrite and Chananite and Chettite and Pherzite and Heuite and Gergesite and Iebousite. ¹²Mind yourself, lest you make a covenant with those dwelling on the land that you are entering into, lest it become a stumbling block for you. ¹³Their altars^a you shall tear down, and their steles you shall break, and their groves you shall cut down, and the cast images of their gods you shall burn with fire. ¹⁴For you shall not do obeisance before another god. For the Lord God, a jealous name, is a jealous God, ¹⁵lest you make a covenant with those dwelling on the land and they go fornicating after their gods and they sacrifice to their gods and invite you and you should eat their sacrifices ¹⁶and you should take from their daughters for your sons and from your daughters you should give to their sons and your daughters go fornicating after their gods and they lead your sons to fornicate after their gods.

¹⁷ And you shall not make for yourself molten gods.

¹⁸ And the feast of unleavened bread you shall keep. Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, according as I have commanded you, during the time in the month of the new things. For in the month of the new things you came out of Egypt.

¹⁹ All that opens the womb, the males are mine, firstborn of a cow and firstborn of a sheep. ²⁰And you shall redeem the firstborn of a draft animal with a sheep. Now if you do not redeem it, you shall give a price. Every firstborn of your sons you shall redeem.

You shall not appear before me empty-handed.

²¹ Six days you shall work, but on the seventh day you shall rest. In seedtime and harvest you shall rest. ²²And a feast of weeks you shall make for me during the beginning of the wheat harvest, and a feast of gathering in the middle of the year. ²³Three times per year every male of yours shall appear before the Lord, the God of Israel. ²⁴For whenever I cast out the nations from before you and enlarge your borders, no one shall desire your land whenever you go up to appear before the Lord your God three times per year.

²⁶ The first products of your land you shall bring into the house of the Lord your God.

You shall not boil a lamb in its mother's milk.

²⁷ And the Lord said to Moyses: Write for yourself these words. For on the basis of these words I have made a covenant with you and Israel. ²⁸And Moyses was there before the Lord for forty days and forty nights. He did not eat bread and he did not drink water. And he wrote these words on the tablets of the covenant, the Ten Words.

²⁹ And as Moyses was descending from the mountain, the two tablets also were in Moyses' hands. Now as he was descending from the mountain, Moyses did not know that the appearance of the skin of his face was charged with glory while he was speaking to him. ³⁰And Aaron and all the elders of Israel saw Moyses, and the appearance of the skin of his face was charged with glory, and they were afraid to come near to him. ³¹And Moyses called them, and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation turned to him, and Moyses spoke to them. ³²And after these things all the sons of Israel drew near to him, and he commanded them all the things that the Lord said to him on the mountain, Sina. ³³And when he stopped speaking to them, he placed a covering over his face. ³⁴But whenever Moyses would enter in before the Lord to speak with him, he would remove the covering until coming out. And when he came out, he would tell all the sons of Israel what the Lord commanded him. ³⁵And the sons of Israel saw the face of Moyses that it was charged with glory, and Moyses put a covering over his face until he went in to converse with him.

35 And Moyses assembled the entire congregation of the sons of Israel and said to them: These are the words that the Lord said to do them:

2 Six days you shall do works, but on the seventh day there is a rest, something holy, Sabbata, a repose for the Lord. Let everyone who does work in it die! ³You shall not burn a fire in any settlement of yours on the day of the sabbaths. I am the Lord.

4 And Moyses spoke to the entire congregation of the sons of Israel, saying: This is the matter that the Lord instructed, saying: ⁵Take from among yourselves an advance deduction for the Lord. Everyone who is disposed in heart will bring the first fruits to the Lord, gold, silver, bronze, ⁶blue, purple, double spun scarlet and twisted linen and goats' hair ⁷and red-dyed rams' skins and blue skins and decay-resistant wood ⁸(⁹)and stones of sardius and stones for engraving for the shoulder-strap and the full-length robe.

9(¹⁰) And let everyone among you skilled in mind come and fashion all the things that the Lord instructed—¹⁰(¹¹)the tent and the wrappings and the coverings and the hooks and the bars and the pillars ¹¹(¹²)and the ark of witness and its carrying-poles and its propitiatory and the veil ¹²(¹³)and the hangings of the court and its pillars ¹³(¹⁴)and the stones of emerald ¹⁴(¹⁵)and the incense and the oil of the anointing ¹⁵(¹⁶)and the table and all its utensils ¹⁶(¹⁷)and the lampstand of the light and all its utensils ¹⁷(¹⁸)and the altar and all its utensils ¹⁸(¹⁹)and the holy vestments of Aaron, the priest, and the vestments that they will minister in ¹⁹and the tunics of the priesthood for the sons of Aaron (¹⁵)and the oil of the anointing and the incense of the mixture.

20 And the entire congregation of the sons of Israel went away from Moyses. ²¹And each one whose heart was inclining brought, and to whose mind it seemed good, they brought an advance deduction for the Lord for all the works of the tent of witness and for all its labor costs and for all the vestments of the holy place. ²²And the men brought from their wives. Everyone to whose mind it seemed good brought seals and earrings and finger-rings and hair clasps and bracelets, every gold implement, and all, as many as brought advance deductions of gold for the Lord. ²³And with whom was found linen and blue skins and red-dyed rams' skin, they brought. ²⁴And everyone who deducted in advance an advance deduction, silver and bronze, they brought advance deductions to the Lord, and among whom decay-resistant wood was found for all the works of construction, they brought. ²⁵And every woman skilled in mind to spin with hands, they brought spun things, the blue and the purple and the scarlet and the linen. ²⁶And all the women to whose mind it seemed good, with skill spun the goat's hair. ²⁷And the rulers brought the stones of emerald and the stones for setting into the shoulder-strap and into the oracle ²⁸and the mixtures and the oil of the anointing and the mixture of the incense. ²⁹And every man and woman whose mind was impelling them to enter in and do all the works that the Lord instructed to do them through Moyses—the sons of Israel brought an advance deduction for the Lord.

30 And Moyses said to the sons of Israel: Look, God has called by name Beseleel the son of Ouri son of Hor from the tribe of Ioudas ³¹and has filled him with a divine spirit of skill and intelligence and knowledge of all things ³²to construct according to all the works of construction, to form the gold and the silver and the bronze ³³and to work the stone and to fashion the wood and to make by every work of skill ³⁴and to instruct as well he gave him in his mind, both to him and to Eliab the son of Achisamach from the tribe of Dan. ³⁵And he filled them with skill and intelligence of mind to understand all things, to make the works of the holy place and to weave the woven and the embroidered things with the scarlet and the linen, to make every work of construction, of embroidery.

36 And Beseleel and Eliab and everyone skilled in mind, to whom were given skill and knowledge in them to know how to make all the works according to the holy things that are fitting, did according to all that the Lord instructed.

2 And Moyses called Beseleel and Eliab and all those having the skill, to whom God gave knowledge in their heart, and all those who freely desired, to make a start on the works so as to complete them, ³and they received from Moyses all the advance deductions that the sons of Israel brought for all the works of the holy place to make them, and they were still receiving the things being offered from those who were bringing morning by morning. ⁴And all the skilled who were making the works of the holy place, each one according to his work that they were fashioning, were drawing near ⁵and said to Moyses, "The people are bringing much beyond the works that the Lord has instructed to do." ⁶And Moyses ordered and proclaimed in the camp, saying, "Let man and woman no longer work for the first fruits of the holy place." And the people were prevented from offering any more. ⁷And the works were sufficient for the equipment, to make it, and they had a surplus.

8 And every skilled person among those working made (^{39.1})the vestments of the holy places that belonged to Aaron, the priest, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

9(2) And they made the shoulder-strap from gold and blue and purple and spun scarlet and twisted linen. ¹⁰(³)And the leaves of gold were cut up as hairs so as to weave together with the blue and the purple and with the spun scarlet and with the twisted linen. They made it a woven work, ¹¹(⁴)shoulder pieces joined from both sides, (⁵)a work woven into one another by mutual twisting of each part. ¹²From it they made in accord with its making, from gold and blue and purple and spun scarlet and twisted linen, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

13(6) And they prepared both stones of emerald, having been fastened and set about with gold, inscribed and engraved with the engraving of a seal with the names of the sons of Israel, ¹⁴(⁷)and he set them on the shoulders of the shoulder-strap, stones of remembrance of the sons of Israel, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

15(8) And they made an oracle, a work woven with embroidery, like the work of the shoulder-strap, from gold and blue and purple and spun scarlet and twisted linen. 16(9) They made the oracle square, doubled: the length of a span and the width of a span, doubled. 17(10) And there was interwoven in it a woven piece, set with stones, with four rows. A row of stones—sardius and topaz and emerald—was the one row. 18(11) And the second row—ruby and lapis lazuli and jasper. 19(12) And the third row—ligurion and agate and amethyst. 20(13) And the fourth row—chrysolite^a and beryl and onyx, set in gold and bound in gold. 21(14) And the stones were of the names of the sons of Israel, twelve corresponding to their names, engraved seals, each with its own name for the twelve tribes. 22(15) And they made on the oracle plaited tassels, a work of braiding, from pure gold. 23(16) And they made two small gold shields and two gold rings. 24(17) And they put the two gold rings on both corners of the oracle. 25(17) And they put the braids of gold on the rings on both sides of the oracle (18) and onto the two couplings, the two braids. 26(18) And they put them on the two small shields and put them on the shoulders of the shoulder-strap opposite in front. 27(19) And they made two gold rings and put them on the two wings, at the extremity of the oracle, on the extremity of the rear of the shoulder-strap inward. 28(20) And they made two gold rings and put them on both shoulders of the shoulder-strap below it, in front beneath the coupling, above the woven strap of the shoulder-strap. 29(21) And he fastened the oracle by the rings on it to the rings of the shoulder-strap, being held together by the blue, having been interwoven into the woven work of the shoulder-strap, lest the oracle be loosened from the shoulder-strap, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

30(22) And they made the undergarment beneath the shoulder-strap, a woven work entirely blue. 31(23) Now the collar of the undergarment was in the middle interwoven, plaited together, having an indestructible border around the collar. 32(24) And they made on the hem of the undergarment below little pomegranates as of a flowering pomegranate tree, from blue and purple and spun scarlet and twisted linen. 33(25) And they made gold bells and put the bells on the hem of the undergarment all around between the little pomegranates. 34(26) A gold bell and a little pomegranate were on the hem of the undergarment all around in order to minister, according as the Lord instructed Moyses.

35(27) And they made linen tunics, a woven work, for Aaron and his sons. 36(28) And the turbans from linen and the headdress from linen and the underpants from twisted linen. 37(29) And their sashes from linen and blue and purple and spun scarlet, a work of an embroiderer, in the same manner as the Lord instructed Moyses.

38(30) And they made the thin gold plate, something set apart of the holy place, of pure gold. 39 And he wrote letters on it, put in relief like a seal, "Holiness to the Lord." 40(31) And they put on the border something blue so that it lay on the headdress above, in the same manner as the Lord instructed Moyses.

37 (36.8b) And they made for the tent ten curtains. 2(9) Twenty-eight cubits was the length of the one curtain. All were the same. And the width of the one curtain was four cubits.

[36.8] The work of the tent of ten curtains from twisted linen and blue and purple and twisted scarlet; he made them with cherubim, by the work of a weaver. [9] A length of the one curtain was twenty-eight cubits, and a width of four cubits was the one curtain; the measurement was the same for all the curtains [10] and the five curtains joining one from the other and five curtains joining one from the other. [11] And he made blue loops on the edge of the one curtain from the side for the coupling. And thus he did on the edge of the outer curtain for the second coupling. [12] Now fifty loops he made for the one curtain, and fifty loops he made from the side of the curtain according to the coupling of the second. The loops were opposite to one another for each one. [13] And he made fifty gold clasps, and he joined together the curtains, one to the other with the clasps. And the tent became one. [14] And he made hairy skins as a cover over the tent. Eleven skins he made them. [15] The length of the one skin was thirty cubits and the width of the one skin was four cubits; the measurement was the same for the eleven skins. [16] And he joined the five skins together and the six skins together. [17] And he made fifty loops on the edge of the skin in between as a coupling, and fifty loops he made on the edge of the adjoining second skin. [18] And he made fifty bronze clasps, and he joined the tent to be one. [19] And he made red-dyed skins of rams as a covering for the tent and blue skins above as an outer covering. [20] And he made the pillars for the tent from decay-resistant wood, standing. [21] The length of the pillar was ten cubits, and the width of the one pillar was a cubit and half a cubit. [22] Two hooks for the one pillar opposite one to the other; thus he made all the pillars of the tent. [23] And he made the pillars of the tent twenty pillars on the side towards the south southward. [24] And forty silver bases he made for the twenty pillars, two bases for the one pillar for both its parts and two bases for the one pillar for both its parts. [25] Now for the second side of the tent towards the north he made twenty pillars [26] and their forty silver bases, two bases for the one pillar and two bases for the one pillar. [27] And on the back parts of the tent seaward he made six pillars. [28] And two pillars he made on the corners of the tent on the backsides. [29] And they were even beneath, and in the same way they were even at their capitals for one connection. Thus he did for the two, for both corners. [30] And there were eight pillars and their silver bases, sixteen bases, two bases for the one pillar and two

bases for the one pillar. ³¹And he made five bars from decay-resistant wood for the pillar on the one side of the tent. ³²And five bars for the pillar on the second side of the tent and five bars for the rear pillar of the tent towards the sea. ³³And he made the middle bar reaching between the pillars from side to side. ³⁴And the pillars he gold-plated with gold, and their rings he made of gold into which he inserted the bars, and he gold-plated the bars with gold.

¹⁹(21) And this was the arrangement of the tent of witness, as it was instructed to Moyses, for the ministry of the Leuites through Ithamar the son of Aaron, the priest. ²⁰(22)And Beseleel the son of Ouri from the tribe of Ioudas made according as the Lord instructed Moyses, ²¹(23)and Eliab the son of Achisamach from the tribe of Dan, who constructed the woven things and the needlework and the embroidered things, to weave with scarlet and linen.

38 ^(37.1)And Beseleel made the ark. ²(2)And he gold-plated it with pure gold inside and outside and made for it gold molding all around. ³(3)And he cast for it four gold rings, two on the one side and two on the second side, ⁴(5)wide enough for the staves so as to carry it by them. ⁵(6)And he made the propitiatory above the ark from pure gold, ⁶(7)and two gold cherubim, ⁷(8)one cherub on the one end of the propitiatory and one cherub on the second end of the propitiatory, ⁸(9)overshadowing with their wings the propitiatory.

⁹(10, 11) And he made the presentation table of pure gold. ¹⁰(13)And he cast for it four gold rings, two on the one side and two on the second side, wide enough so as to carry with the staves in them. ¹¹(15)And the staves of the ark and the table he made and gold-plated them with gold.

[^{37.10b}]From decay-resistant wood. Its length two cubits and its width a cubit and its height a cubit and a half. [¹¹]He gold-plated it with pure gold, and he made for it gold molding around. [¹²]And he made for it a rim, a handbreadth around. And he made gold molding for its rim around it. [¹³]And he made for it four gold rings, and he put the rings on the four sides, which are part of its four feet, [¹⁴]under the rim. And the rings were for sheaths for its poles, so as to carry the table. [¹⁵]And he made the poles from decay-resistant wood, and he gold-plated them with gold, so as to carry the table.

¹²(16)And he made the utensils of the table, both the bowls and the censers and the ladles and the libation bowls, those with which he would pour a libation, of gold.

¹³(17) And he made the lampstand, which gives light, of gold, ¹⁴firm, the stem ⁽¹⁸⁾and the branches on both of its sides, ¹⁵from its branches the buds projecting, three from this one and three from that one, equal to one another, ¹⁶(19-22)and their lamp-holders, which are on the ends, almond-like out of them, and the sockets out of them in order that the lamps might be on them, and the seventh socket on the end of the lamp-holder on the top above, firm, completely gold, ¹⁷(23)and seven lamps on it of gold and its snuffers of gold and its pouring vessels of gold.

[^{37.17}]From pure gold he made the lampstand engraved, its stem and its branches and its mixing bowls and its buds and its lilies; they were part of it. [¹⁸]Now, there were six branches going out from its sides, three branches of the lampstand from its one side and three branches of the lampstand from its second side. [¹⁹]Three mixing bowls, shaped like nuts, on the one branch a bud and a lily, and three mixing bowls shaped like nuts, on the one branch a bud and a lily. Thus for the six branches that go out from the lampstand. [²⁰]And on the lampstand were four mixing bowls shaped like nuts, its buds and its lilies. [²¹]The bud was under the two branches of it, for the six branches that go out from it. [²²]Their buds and their branches were part of it. The whole was engraved from one piece of pure gold. [²³]And he made its seven lamps and its snuffers and its pouring vessels from pure gold. ¹²⁴A talent of pure gold he made it and all its utensils. ¹²⁵This man made the gold altar from decay-resistant wood. Its length was five cubits and its width, five cubits, square, and its height three cubits. He made its horns. ¹²⁶And he gold-plated them with pure gold, its top and its sides around and its horns, and he made for it gold molding around it. ¹²⁷And two gold rings he made for it under its molding on its two sides beneath both its sides, for sheaths for the poles in order to carry it by them. ¹²⁸And he made the poles decay-resistant wood, and he gold-plated them with gold.

¹⁸This one silver-plated the pillars with silver, and he cast gold rings for the pillars and gilded the bars with gold and gold-plated the pillars of the veil with gold, and he made the hooks of gold. ¹⁹This one made also the clasps of the tent of gold and the clasps of the courtyard and clasps to spread out the covering above of bronze. ²⁰This one cast the silver capitals of the tent and the bronze capitals of the door of the tent and for the gate of the courtyard. And he made silver hooks on the pillars. This one silver-plated them. ²¹(^{38.20})This one made both the pegs of the tent and the pegs of the courtyard of bronze.

39 ^(38.24)All the gold that was fashioned into the works according to all the workmanship of the holy things was part of the gold of the first fruit: twenty-nine talents and seven hundred and thirty shekels according to the holy shekel of gold. ²(²⁵)And an advance deduction of silver from the registered men of the congregation was a hundred talents and one thousand and seven hundred and seventy-five shekels, ⁽²⁶⁾one drachma per head, half a shekel according to the holy shekel, ³everyone passing by the registration from twenty years and upward, about six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

¹⁴(^{39.33}) And they brought the vestments to Moyses and the tent and its utensils and the bases and its bars and the pillars ¹⁵(³⁵)and the ark of the covenant and its staves ¹⁶(³⁸)and the altar and all its utensils and the oil of the anointing and the incense of the mixture ⁽³⁷⁾and the pure lampstand ¹⁷and its lamps, lamps for burning, and the oil for the light ¹⁸(³⁶)and the table of presentation and all its utensils and the presentation loaves ¹⁹(⁴¹)and the vestments of the holy place, that are Aaron's and the vestments of his sons for the priesthood, ²⁰(⁴⁰)and the hangings of the courtyard and its pillars and bases and the veil of the door of the tent and of the gate of the courtyard ²¹and all the utensils of the tent and all its equipment ⁽³⁴⁾and the prepared hides, the red-dyed rams' skins and the coverings, blue skins and the covers for the rest ⁽⁴⁰⁾and the pegs and all the equipment for the works of the tent of witness. ²²(⁴²)As the Lord instructed Moyses, so the sons of Israel made all the preparation. ²³(⁴³)And Moyses saw all the works, and they had made them in the way the Lord instructed Moyses; so they made them. And Moyses blessed them.

40 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²In day one of the first month at the new moon, you shall set up the tent of witness, ³and you shall position the ark of witness and shall protect the ark with the veil, ⁴and you shall bring in the table and present its presentation and shall bring in the lampstand and put on its lamps, ⁵and you shall position the gold altar to burn incense before the ark and shall put the covering of the veil on the door of the tent of witness, ⁶and the altar of the offerings you shall position near the doors of the tent of witness and shall set the courtyard around it. ⁷(⁹)And you shall take the oil of the anointing and shall anoint the tent and all the things in it and shall consecrate it and all its utensils, and they shall be holy. ⁸⁽¹⁰⁾And you shall anoint the altar of the offerings and all its utensils, ⁹and you shall consecrate the altar, and the altar shall be a holy of holies. ¹⁰⁽¹²⁾And you shall bring Aaron and his sons near to the doors of the tent of witness and wash them with water, ¹¹⁽¹³⁾and you shall put the holy vestments on Aaron and shall anoint him and consecrate him, and he shall serve me as priest. ¹²⁽¹⁴⁾And his sons you shall bring near and shall put tunics on them, ¹³⁽¹⁵⁾and you shall anoint them in the same way you anointed their father, and they shall serve me as priests, and it shall be so that their anointing for priesthood is forever for their generations. ¹⁴⁽¹⁶⁾And Moyses did all the things that the Lord commanded him; so he did.

table in the tent of witness on the side of the tent of witness towards the north, outside the veil of the tent, ²¹⁽²³⁾and he presented on it loaves of presentation before the Lord, just as the Lord instructed Moyses. ²²⁽²⁴⁾And he positioned the lampstand in the tent of witness, towards the side of the tent towards the south, ²³⁽²⁵⁾and he put on its lamps before the Lord, just as the Lord instructed Moyses. ²⁴⁽²⁶⁾And he positioned the gold altar in the tent of witness in front of the veil, ²⁵⁽²⁷⁾and he burnt on it the incense of the mixture, according as the Lord instructed Moyses. ²⁶⁽²⁹⁾And the altar of the offerings he placed near the doors of the tent of witness, ²⁷⁽³³⁾and he set up the courtyard around the tent and the altar, and Moyses finished all the works.

²⁸⁽³⁴⁾ And the cloud covered the tent of witness, and the tent was filled with the glory of the Lord. ²⁹⁽³⁵⁾And Moyses was unable to enter into the tent of witness, because the cloud was overshadowing it, and the tent was filled with the glory of the Lord. ³⁰⁽³⁶⁾Now whenever the cloud lifted from the tent, the sons of Israel moved camp with their household stuff. ³¹⁽³⁷⁾But if the cloud did not lift, they did not move camp until the day in which the cloud lifted. ³²⁽³⁸⁾For cloud was over the tent by day and fire was over it by night before all Israel in all their journeyings.

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of Leuitikon has been based on the edition of John William Wevers (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum II.2: Leviticus [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1986]). Wevers' edition is accompanied by two supplemental volumes: The Text History of the Greek Leviticus (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1986) and Notes on the Greek Text of Leviticus (SBLSCS 44; SBL: Atlanta, 1997). The Greek text of Leviticus from which I made the NETS translation includes the emendations to the Göttingen text suggested by Wevers in his Notes, p. 483. I record differences between the Göttingen edition and the emended text in Notes (We^N) in the NETS footnotes by the designation We^{ed}.

THIS TRANSLATION

On Method

What I attempt in this translation is to reflect, by way of English, the translational convention at work in the mind of the Greek translator as indicated by the text he produced. The Greek Leviticus is a text that the translator constructed on the basis of how he understood his Hebrew parent text to function, in combination with what he thought that Hebrew text meant. In other words, he was accounting as best he could for Hebrew words and syntactical units while toeing the line of a peculiar translational convention. His is not a freestanding idiomatic translation based on an understanding of the idiom of Hebrew syntactic units. Rather, his strange Greek is first and foremost a reflection of his attitude to his parent text and the force his parent text exerted on his choice of equivalents.

In the first place, then, NETS Leuitikon tries to be an English translation of a Greek translation. As the general introduction, "TO THE READER OF NETS," points out, this is the approach of NETS: to present to the English reader the two-dimensionality of the Septuagint. This text has a horizontal dimension in terms of the relation of Greek words and phrases to each other, and it has a vertical dimension in terms of its subservience to the Hebrew text(s) from which it was translated.

Meaning of Greek words

My point of departure is that Greek words are taken to mean what they meant in standard Greek of the time. Such a method helps to avoid two lexicographical pitfalls. The first is the practice of reading Hebrew meanings into Greek words on the basis of their occurrence in the LXX. The second is partially to allow the context within the LXX to determine the meaning of a Greek word/phrase used in an abnormal way. Consequently, for example, it was not possible to translate κοίτη σπέρματος with "sexual intercourse" as the Hebrew שכבת זרע or the Greek context implies. Instead the reader will find "bed of semen." Although κοίτη alone can mean "sexual intercourse" in non-translation Greek, the phrase as we find it in Leuitikon is not so attested. The same applies to προσήλυτος, which cannot be assumed to mean "stranger" on the basis of its pairing with Hebrew גר or its use in context. I have rather tried by the gloss "guest" to convey something of the sense of "come over as stranger." In other words, a προσήλυτος was deemed an outsider to the group but nonetheless accorded special treatment, not unlike the Mediterranean hospitality lavished on guests. Some Greek words are transcriptions of the source language; others were constructed from Semitic roots, e.g., πάσχα from פסח and σαββατίζω from שבת, which have been rendered as "pascha" and "sabbatize," respectively. Leuitikon contains no obvious calques (see "TO THE READER OF NETS").

NATURE OF THE GREEK TRANSLATION

General Remarks

Enough detailed information on the characteristics of the language employed in the Greek Leviticus and the individual quirks of the translator can be found in Wevers' Notes. Further comment may be found in the introduction of Paul Harlé and Didier Pralon's Le Levitique BA (1988). As a result, I will focus on the semantic aspects of a few of the translator's choice of words.

In general it may be said that the translator of Leuitikon, to use Albert Pietsma's words, is not "performing his translator's duty to the reader, namely, to convey the total meaning of the source text." Rather, instead of trying to convey meaning in idiomatic Greek from larger Hebrew phrases, he works mostly from the individual Hebrew syntactical units and what individual Greek equivalents he has chosen for them. This fact is further borne out by the lack of connecting particles found in the Septuagint.

Pleonasms

The preceding description is witnessed most clearly by what are known as relative pleonasms found in the Greek rendering of the resumption of the pronoun found in Hebrew syntax. A typical Hebrew relative sentence such as Lev 15.20b וְכֹל אֲשֶׁר תֵּשֵׁב עָלָיו יִטְמָא may be translated literally: "and everything that she sits on [it] . . . shall be unclean." The Greek translator renders the Hebrew more or less word for word as follows: καὶ πᾶν ἐφ' ὃν ἐπικαθίσθη ἐπ' αὐτό, ἀκάθαρτον ἔσται. I have endeavored to pass this on to the reader as follows, using the colloquial English sentence with the preposition separated from its object: "everything also which she sits down on shall be unclean."

Distributives

Among the translators of the Pentateuch it was especially the Leuitikon translator who insisted on rendering the Hebrew distributive כֹּל אִישׁ אִישׁ literally, and therefore woodenly, with resultant negative transfer from the source language. Thus, for example, on six occasions (17.3, 8, 10, 13; 18.6; 22.18) he translated it by ἄνθρωπος ἄνθρωπος ("person by person"), once (15.2) by ἄνθρω ἀνθρω ("man by man"), twice (22.4; 24.15) by ἄνθρωπος ("a person") and once (20.2) by τις ("any one").

Some Individual Words

On the level of individual words one finds this one-to-one dependence also to be true, in most cases. For example, the Hebrew word translated as "grain offering" in the NRSV will appear in NETS simply as "offering" because the Greek translator has chosen a general Greek term for offering as his counterpart for every occurrence of that Hebrew word. The same thing applies to the Hebrew use of "hand" in combination with other words to produce idioms. Someone whose "hand reaches" is someone who has financial means. There is a good Greek word for this, εὐπορέω, which by itself would have accounted for the Hebrew. It does indeed appear in 25.26, but the Greek translator is constrained to account in Greek for the Hebrew "hand" and therefore adds to his idiom an unnecessary item. Fortunately the English of NETS can come to the rescue with "has plenty in hand." When in 25.35 a person becomes poor, the result is that in Hebrew one "has a shaky or slippery hand." The Greek translator rendered this phrase by the singular and well chosen Greek term ἀδυνατέω, "to lack strength," which would have sufficed to account for the Hebrew, but once again the translator's attitude toward his parent text demanded at this point that he account also for "hands." This same situation holds true for the Hebrew formula "to ordain," which is "to fill the hands." In Leuitikon (8.33; 16.32; 21.10), as also in Numbers and Exodus, the Greek translator chooses the verb τελειώω, "to complete, validate" plus "hand." This phrase comes into NETS as "whose hand has been validated," compared to the phrase "who has been ordained" in the NRSV, signaling that the Greek translator worked in a word-for-word manner rather than choosing an idiomatic option. Similar examples are θραύσμα, which NETS renders "rupture" for קִרְחָה, whereas NRSV has "itch," and ἀφή, which NETS translates "attack" for עָנָה, while NRSV has "disease."

Cultic Terminology

In rendering Hebrew cultic terminology into Greek, there seems to be certainty about some kinds of sacrifices but not about others. For instance we find that for the Hebrew words חַטָּאת "sin/sin offering" and עֲוֹנוֹת "guilt/guilt offering," the Greek counterparts are always the same, i.e., ἁμαρτία and πλημμέλεια. They are rendered in NETS by "sin" and "error," respectively. But for the Hebrew "wave offering," זָבַח, there are four different Greek equivalents: δόμα, ἀφαίρεμα (also used for the Hebrew זָבַח, NRSV "offering"), ἐπιθέμα and ἀφορίσμα. Its cognate verb פָּהַל (Hiphil) also has four different Greek equivalents: ἐπιτίθημι, ἀφαίρεω, ἀφορίζω and ἀναφέρω. In these instances the Greek equivalents do not approximate the meaning of the Hebrew. It could be that by the time this translation was made, all but certain kinds of sacrifices had lost their meaning to the translator.

Consistency

The words “mostly” and “in most cases” used above for the translator’s modus operandi are important, because the Leuitikon translator is not consistent in the way he goes about things. Even though in most cases he works atomistically, ignoring Greek idiom, the odd exception occurs. In this he is quite distinct from the translators of Deuteronomy and Exodus, for example. This circumstance can be illustrated by the comparative “than,” which in Hebrew is expressed by the word “from” (מִן). Commonly the translator will choose his standard preposition for the Hebrew “from” and construct a barely intelligible Greek sentence, e.g., 13.3 ταπεινή ἀπὸ τοῦ δέρματος NETS: “low in the skin,” cf. NRSV “deeper than the skin.” But occasionally he decides instead to employ the standard Greek idiomatic expression for the same Hebrew, e.g., 13.30, 31 ἑγκοιλοτέρα τοῦ δέρματος NETS: “more hollow than the skin.”

The standard explanations that try to account for the inconsistency in Leuitikon do not do justice to the complexity of this book. If it appears that his poor Greek usage may provide one clue, one could put forward equal evidence of his grammar and choice of translation equivalents being of a decent standard. Variation for the sake of creativity also does not satisfy as an explanation because there are enough instances of blatant *un-*creativity to persuade one otherwise. Leuitikon may thus be said to have many faces.

Interlinearity as an Explanatory Model for Inconsistency

The interlinear model developed by Albert Pietersma does offer a plausible explanation in that it points to the two-dimensionality of the text.¹ The translator worked in small bits at a time. His Greek syntactic units, at any given instance, were subject to interference from the parent text, but this interference happens to a greater or lesser degree from moment to moment. There is therefore a lack of semantic coherence at times but also a lack of systematization. The result is that we have a disordered text and a text that is episodic in its nature. The lack of semantic coherence is attributable to the interference from the parent text, but not in all instances. Other factors that produce inconsistency such as changes in number and person are difficult to explain due to our ignorance of the exact form of the translator’s source text and whether the translator ever made changes on his own initiative.

NETS AND THE NRSV

The procedure followed in my translation was always to start with the NRSV and then to alter it insofar as it did not represent the Greek or the differences between the Hebrew and the Greek. So the reader should as a rule of thumb expect NETS to reveal the differences between the Greek and the Hebrew from a synoptic point of view. Occasionally this will be overridden by the need to point out the force of the Hebrew upon the Greek, as in the occurrence of “and” or other particles that are the equivalent of Hebrew וְ. Thus the appearance of “and” in NETS without a corresponding equivalent in NRSV will not always signal that there is an addition in the Greek. Deviations from the NRSV may therefore occur both for reasons of meaning and of style.

In NETS the actions at the altar will appear quite different from the NRSV. Often the verbs in the Greek are unrelated to the action expressed in Hebrew. Also the verbs in Hebrew would frequently have a verbal suffix or the object marker plus suffix, whereas the Greek would have none. Although an assumed objective pronoun might be standard practice in Greek, this absence of “it” or “them” will appear in NETS to distinguish these cases from the times when the objective pronoun does appear in the Greek. Thus one would find in NETS “the priest shall do the presenting” (1.15). But when neither the Hebrew nor the Greek have the objective pronoun, but NRSV does include it for the sake of style, then it will appear in NETS, e.g., “he will lay it” (2.9).

Sometimes the English of NETS unavoidably misrepresents the Greek. For example in chapter 4 and 7.10, where I have rendered ψυχή (f) by “soul,” the personal pronouns “she” or “her” that follow will be rendered by “him” or “his” in NETS.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Albert Pietersma, who is the driving force behind the NETS project, has given much of his time to devote personal attention to me and the problems raised by this difficult book. I am pleased to acknowledge his valuable advice and criticism. Leonora Jackson was a great help in the more difficult chapters.

1 And the Lord summoned Moyses and spoke to him from the tent of witness, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: When a person of you brings gifts of livestock to the Lord, you shall bring your gifts from the cattle and from the sheep.

³ If his gift is a whole burnt offering from the cattle, he shall present a male without blemish; he shall bring it to the door of the tent of witness, acceptable before the Lord. ⁴And he shall lay his hand on the head of the offering, a thing acceptable to him to atone for him. ⁵And they shall slaughter the bull calf before the Lord, and the sons of Aaron the priests shall offer the blood, and they shall pour out the blood against all sides of the altar that is at the entrance of the tent of witness. ⁶And when they flay the whole burnt offering, they shall cut it up limb by limb. ⁷And the sons of Aaron the priests shall put fire on the altar and pile wood onto the fire. ⁸And the sons of Aaron the priests shall pile the divided parts and the head and the suet onto the wood that is on the fire on the altar, ⁹but the entrails and the legs they shall wash with water, and the priests shall lay everything on the altar. It is an offering, a sacrifice, an odor of fragrance to the Lord.

2 Now if a soul presents a gift, a sacrifice to the Lord, his gift shall be fine flour, and he shall pour oil on it and put frankincense on it—it is a sacrifice—²and he shall bring it to the sons of Aaron the priests. And after gripping from it a handful of the fine flour with the oil and all its frankincense, the priest shall lay its memorial portion on the altar; it is a sacrifice, an odor of fragrance to the Lord. ³And what remains from the sacrifice is for Aaron and his sons, a holy of holies from the Lord's sacrifices.

¹¹ You shall not prepare any sacrifice that you may bring to the Lord with leaven, for you shall not present any leaven and any honey to offer of it to the Lord. ¹²You shall present them to the Lord as a gift of first fruit, but they shall not be brought onto the altar for an odor of fragrance to the Lord. ¹³And every gift of your sacrifice shall be salted with salt. You shall not omit from your sacrifices the salt of the Lord's covenant; on each gift of yours you shall offer salt to the Lord your God.

3 Now if his gift to the Lord is a sacrifice of deliverance, if he brings it from the cattle, whether male or female, he shall bring it without blemish before the Lord. ²And he shall lay his hands on the head of the gift, and he shall slaughter it at the entrance to the tent of witness, and the sons of Aaron the priests shall pour out the blood against all sides of the altar of whole burnt offerings. ³And they shall bring from the sacrifice of deliverance an offering to the Lord: the fat that covers the entrails and all the fat that is on the entrails ⁴and the two kidneys and the fat that is on them at the thighs, and he shall remove the appendage that is on the liver with the kidneys. ⁵And the sons of Aaron the priests shall offer them up on the altar, on the whole burnt offerings on the wood that is on the fire; it is an offering, an odor of fragrance to the Lord.

without blemish (he shall remove it with the loin muscles) and the fat that covers the entrails and the fat that is on the entrails ¹⁰and both the kidneys and the fat that is on them at the thighs, having also removed the appendage which is on the liver with the kidneys, ¹¹the priest shall make an offering on the altar, an odor of fragrance, an offering to the Lord.

All the fat is the Lord's. ¹⁷It shall be a precept forever throughout your generations, in all your settlement; you shall not eat any fat and any blood.

4 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: If a soul sins unintentionally before the Lord regarding the Lord's ordinances, which one must not do, and does any one of them:

³ If it is the anointed high priest who sins, so that the people sin, then he shall bring for his sin that he has committed a calf from the cattle without blemish to the Lord for his sin. ⁴And he shall bring the bull calf to the door of the tent of witness before the Lord and lay his hand on the head of the bull calf before the Lord, and he shall slaughter the bull calf in front of the Lord. ⁵And the anointed priest, who has had his hands validated, after taking some of the blood of the bull calf, shall then bring it into the tent of witness. ⁶And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle some of the blood seven times with his finger before the Lord in front of the holy veil. ⁷And the priest shall put some of the blood of the bull calf on the horns of the altar of the incense of the combination that is before the Lord, which is in the tent of witness, and all the blood of the bull calf he shall pour out at the base of the altar of whole burnt offerings, which is at the entrance of the tent of witness. ⁸And all the fat of the bull calf for sin he shall remove from it: the fat that covers the innards and all the fat that is on the innards ⁹and the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, which is on the thighs, and the appendage which is on the liver—he shall remove it with the kidneys, ¹⁰just as he removes it from the bull calf of the sacrifice of deliverance. And the priest shall offer on the altar of offering. ¹¹And the skin of the bull calf and all its flesh, as well as its head and its appendages and its entrails and its dung—¹²even the whole bull calf they shall carry out to a clean place outside the camp where

¹³ But if the whole congregation of Israel acts in ignorance and the matter escapes the notice of the eyes of the congregation and they do one of any of the commandments of the Lord, which shall not be done, and they shall be in error ¹⁴and the sin wherein they were sinning should become known to them, then the congregation shall bring a calf of the cattle without blemish for the sin and bring it to the entrance of the tent of witness. ¹⁵And the elders of the congregation shall lay their hands on the head of the bull calf before the Lord, and they shall slaughter the bull calf before the Lord. ¹⁶And the anointed priest shall bring some of the blood of the bull calf into the tent of witness, ¹⁷and the priest shall dip his finger into some of the blood of the bull calf and sprinkle it seven times before the Lord in front of the holy veil. ¹⁸And the priest shall put some of the blood onto the horns of the altar of the incense of the combination that is before the Lord, which is in the tent of witness, and he shall pour out all the blood at the base of the altar of offerings that is near the door of the tent of witness. ¹⁹And he shall remove all the fat from it and offer it up on the altar. ²⁰And he shall do with the bull calf just as he did with the bull calf for sin; thus it shall be done. And the priest shall make atonement for them, and the sin shall be forgiven them. ²¹And they shall carry the whole bull calf outside the camp and burn up the bull calf as they completely burned the first bull calf. It is for^a a sin of the congregation.

²² But if the ruler sins and does unintentionally one of any of the commandments of the Lord their God, which shall not be done, and sins and is in error ²³and the sin wherein he has sinned becomes known to him, then he shall bring his gift: a young billy goat, a male without blemish. ²⁴And he shall lay his hand on the head of the young goat, and they shall slaughter it at the spot where they slaughter the whole burnt offerings before the Lord. It is for^a a sin. ²⁵And the priest shall put some of the blood of the one for sin with his finger on the horns of the altar of whole burnt offerings, and he shall pour out all its blood at the base of the altar of whole burnt offerings. ²⁶And all its fat he shall offer up on the altar, like the fat of the sacrifice of deliverance. And the priest shall make atonement for him because of his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

²⁷ But if any one soul of the people of the land sins unintentionally in doing one of any of the Lord's commandments that shall not be done and he is in error ²⁸and the sin wherein he sins becomes known to him, then he shall bring a young nanny goat; he shall bring a female without blemish for the sin that he has committed, ²⁹and he shall lay his hand on the head of his mistake, and they shall slaughter the nanny goat for sin at the place where they slaughter the whole burnt offerings. ³⁰And the priest shall take some of its blood with his finger and put it onto the horns of the altar of whole burnt offerings, and he shall pour out all its blood at the base of the altar. ³¹And he shall remove all the fat in the same way that he removes from the sacrifice of deliverance, and the priest shall offer it up on the altar for an odor of fragrance to the Lord. And the priest shall make atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

5 Now if a soul sins and hears a sound of oath-taking and he is a witness or has seen it or knows of it, if he does not report the matter, he will assume the guilt. ²Or a soul who touches any unclean thing, whether a carcass or the kill of an unclean animal or unclean carcasses of abominations or the unclean carcasses of cattle ³ or touches some uncleanness of a person, any of his uncleanness in which he is defiled by touching, and it escaped his notice, but later on comes to know it, and should be in error, ⁴or a soul who swears, determining with his lips to do evil or to do good, in any way that the person may speak forcefully by an oath, and if it escapes the notice of his eyes and if he comes to know it and should sin in any one of these, ⁵then he shall declare his sin concerning the things in which he has sinned. ⁶And he shall bring to the Lord for whatever he has done amiss, for the sin that he has committed, a female from the sheep—a lamb, or a young nanny goat for sin. And the priest shall make atonement for him, for his sin that he has committed, and the sin will be forgiven him.

⁷ But if his hand does not have the capability for what is sufficient for a sheep, he shall bring for his sin which he has committed two turtledoves or two young doves to the Lord, one for sin and one for a whole burnt offering. ⁸And he shall bring them to the priest, and the priest shall bring the one for sin first. And the priest shall snip off its head at the neck, and he shall not divide it. ⁹And he shall sprinkle some blood of the one for sin against the wall of the altar, but what remains of the blood he shall squeeze out against the base of the altar, for it is for^a sin. ¹⁰And the second he shall prepare as a whole burnt offering, as is customary. And the priest shall make atonement for him for his sin that he has committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

¹¹ But if his hand does not find a brace of turtledoves or two young doves, then he shall bring his gift for that in which he sinned: one-tenth of an ophi^b of fine flour for sin. He shall not pour oil on it; neither shall he place frankincense on it, because it is for sin. ¹²And he shall bring it to the priest, and after gripping from it a handful, the priest shall lay its memorial portion on the altar on the^a whole burnt offerings to the Lord. It is for^a sin. ¹³And the priest shall make atonement for him, for his sin that he has committed in respect of one of these things, and it will be forgiven him. But what is left shall be for the priest like the offering of fine flour.

¹⁷ And a soul that sins and does one of any of the Lord's commandments, which he ought not to do, and does not know and is in error and assumes the sin ¹⁸shall then bring a ram, without blemish from the sheep of the value of silver, for error to the priest. And the priest shall make atonement for him concerning his ignorance of which he was ignorant and did not know himself, and it shall be forgiven him, ¹⁹because he has committed an error before the Lord.

6 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²If a soul sins and by overlooking disregards the commandments of the Lord and falsifies matters pertaining to his neighbor—in a deposit or regarding joint ownership or regarding plunder or did his neighbor some wrong ³or has found a loss and lied about it—and he swears falsely about one of all which a man may do in order to sin by these, ⁴then it shall be whenever he sins and is in error and restores the booty which he seized or the injustice he committed or the deposit which was deposited with him or the loss which he found ⁵because of every matter about that which he swore about unjustly, he shall also repay the capital itself, and he shall add to it one fifth. Whosoever it is, he shall restore to him on the day he should be convicted. ⁶And for his error he shall bring to the Lord: a ram from the sheep without blemish, of the value for that which he offended. ⁷And the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord, and he shall be forgiven for one of all that he did and offended by it.

⁹Command Aaron and his sons, saying: This is the law of the whole burnt offering. The whole burnt offering itself in its burning shall be on the altar all night until the morning, and the fire of the altar shall burn on it; it shall not be put out. ¹⁰And the priest shall put on a linen tunic, and he shall put on linen undergarments around his body, and he shall remove from the altar the sacrificial remains to which the fire has reduced the whole burnt offering, and he shall deposit it nearby the altar. ¹¹And he shall take off his vestment and put on another vestment and carry the sacrificial remains out to a clean place outside the camp. ¹²And fire on the altar shall burn on it and shall not be put out. And the priest shall burn wood on it morning by morning and pile on it the whole burnt offering and place on it the fat of the deliverance. ¹³And a fire shall burn perpetually on the altar. It shall not be put out.

¹⁹ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁰This is the gift of Aaron and his sons, which they shall present to the Lord on the day you shall anoint him: one tenth of an ophi^a of fine flour as a perpetual sacrifice, half of it in the morning and half of it in the evening. ²¹It shall be prepared in a frying-pan with oil; he shall bring it kneaded, rolled, a sacrifice of pieces, a sacrifice as an odor of fragrance to the Lord. ²²The priest who is anointed after him from his sons shall prepare it; it is a perpetual law; all of it shall be completely consumed. ²³And every sacrifice of a priest shall be wholly burned and shall not be eaten.

smashed. But if it is boiled in a bronze vessel, he shall scour it and wash it out with water. ²⁹Every male among the priests shall eat them. They are holy of holies to the Lord. ³⁰And none of the ones for sin, some of whose blood is brought into the tent of witness to make atonement in the holy place, shall be eaten. It shall be burned up by fire.

³¹(7.1) And this is the law of the ram for error. They are holy of holies. ³²(2)At a spot where they slaughter the whole burnt offering they shall slaughter the ram for error before the Lord, and he shall pour out the blood against all sides of the base of the altar. ³³(3)And he shall present from it all its fat from it and the lower back and all the fat that covers the innards and all the fat that is on the innards ³⁴(4)and the two kidneys and the fat that is on them at the thighs and the appendage that is on the liver—he shall remove them with the kidneys. ³⁵(5)And the priest shall offer them up on the altar as an offering to the Lord; it is for error. ³⁶(6)Every male among the priests shall eat them; in a holy place they shall eat them; they are holy of holies. ³⁷(7)As is the one for sin, so is the one for error. For them there is one law. The priest who makes atonement with it shall have it. ³⁸(8)And the priest who offers a person's whole burnt offering: the skin of the whole burnt offering that he offers shall be his. ³⁹(9)And every sacrifice that is prepared in the oven and everything that is prepared on a hearth or in a pan is for the priest who offers it; it shall be his. ⁴⁰(10)And every sacrifice made up with oil or not made up shall belong to all the sons of Aaron, to each the same.

7 ^(7.11)This is the law of the sacrifice of deliverance that they shall offer to the Lord. ²(12)If he brings it for praise, then he shall bring for the sacrifice of praise cakes of fine flour made up with oil and unleavened wafers spread with oil and fine flour mixed with oil. ³(13)In addition to leavened cakes he shall bring his gifts for a sacrifice of praise for deliverance. ⁴(14)And he shall present one out of all his gifts as an advance deduction for the Lord. It shall belong to the priest who pours out the blood of the deliverance. It shall be his. ⁵(15)And the flesh of the sacrifice of praise for deliverance shall belong to him, and on the day it is given it shall be eaten. They shall not leave any of it until the morning. ⁶(16)And if it is a vow or if he sacrifices his gift voluntarily, it shall be eaten on the same day that he brought his sacrifice and on the next day. ⁷(17)And what is left of the flesh of the sacrifice until the third day shall be burned up by fire. ⁸(18)But if when eating, he should eat some of the meat on the third day, it will not be accepted for him who offers it, nor shall it be credited to him. It is a defilement, and the soul who eats any of it shall assume the guilt.

deliverance, which belongs to the Lord, and his uncleanness is on him—that soul shall be utterly destroyed from his people. ¹¹⁽²¹⁾And a soul who touches any unclean thing whether of human uncleanness or of unclean quadrupeds or any unclean abomination and eats of the meat of the sacrifice of deliverance, which is the Lord's, that soul shall be utterly destroyed from his people.

¹²⁽²²⁾ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹³⁽²³⁾Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: You shall eat no fat of cows and of sheep and of goats. ¹⁴⁽²⁴⁾And the fat of carcasses and of things caught by wild animals may be put to any use but shall not be eaten for food. ¹⁵⁽²⁵⁾Anyone who eats the fat of animals, of which he may bring some of them as an offering to the Lord—that soul shall be utterly destroyed from his people. ¹⁶⁽²⁶⁾You shall not eat any blood, either of birds or of animals, in any of your settlements. ¹⁷⁽²⁷⁾Any soul who eats blood—that soul shall be utterly destroyed from his people.

8 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Take Aaron and his sons and his vestments and the anointing oil and the bull calf for sin and the two rams and the basket of unleavened bread, ³and assemble the whole congregation at the door of the tent of witness. ⁴And Moyses did as the Lord instructed him, and he assembled the congregation at the door of the tent of witness. ⁵And Moyses said to the congregation: This is the thing that the Lord commanded to do.

⁶ And Moyses brought Aaron and his sons forward and washed them with water. ⁷And he put the tunic on him and fastened the girdle about him and put the undergarment on him, and he placed on him the shoulder-strap and girded him about according to the procedure of the shoulder-strap, and he bound him fast with it. ⁸And he put on him the oracle, and he put on the oracle the explanation and the truth. ⁹And he put the headband on his head, and on the headband, in front, he put the golden leaf, the devoted holy object, as the Lord instructed Moyses.

¹⁰ And Moyses took some of the anointing oil ¹¹and sprinkled some of it on the altar seven times and anointed the altar and consecrated it and all its utensils and the washbasin and its base and consecrated them. And he anointed the tent and all the things in it and consecrated it. ¹²And Moyses poured out some of the anointing oil on Aaron's head and anointed him and consecrated him. ¹³And Moyses brought forward the sons of Aaron and clothed them with tunics and fastened belts around them and tied turbans on them just as the Lord instructed Moyses.

of the altar. ²⁵And he took the fat and the lower back and the fat that was on the entrails and the appendage of the liver and the two kidneys and the fat on them and the right shoulder. ²⁶And out of the basket of validation that is before the Lord he took one unleavened cake and one oil bread and one wafer and placed them on the fat and the right shoulder. ²⁷He placed all these onto the hands of Aaron and on the hands of his sons, and he offered them up as an advance deduction before the Lord. ²⁸Then Moyses took them from their hands, and Moyses offered them up on the altar on the whole burnt offering of validation, which is an odor of fragrance; it is an offering to the Lord. ²⁹And after Moyses took the breast, he separated it as an addition before the Lord, from the ram of validation, and it was Moyses' portion as the Lord commanded Moyses.

9 And it happened on the eighth day that Moyses called Aaron and his sons and the council of elders of Israel. ²And Moyses said to Aaron, "Take for yourself a calf from the cows for sin and a ram for a whole burnt offering, without blemish, and offer them before the Lord. ³And speak to the council of elders of Israel, saying, 'Take one billy goat from the goats for sin, a calf and a yearling lamb without blemish for a whole offering ⁴and a calf and a ram for a sacrifice of deliverance before the Lord and fine flour mixed with oil. For today the Lord will be seen among you.' " ⁵And they took them, as Moyses commanded, to the front of the tent of witness, and the whole congregation drew near, and they stood before the Lord. ⁶And Moyses said, "This is the thing that the Lord said, 'Do, and the glory of the Lord will be seen among you.' " ⁷And Moyses said to Aaron, "Draw near to the altar, and perform the one for your sin and your whole burnt offering, and make atonement for yourself and your house. And deal with the gifts of

¹² And he slaughtered the whole burnt offering. And the sons of Aaron brought him the blood, and he poured it out against all sides of the altar. ¹³And they brought him the whole burnt offering limb by limb, them and the head, and he placed them on the altar. ¹⁴And he washed the entrails and the legs with water, and he placed them on the whole burnt offering on the altar.

¹⁸ And he slaughtered the bull calf and the ram of the sacrifice of deliverance that was of the people. And the sons of Aaron brought the blood to him—and he poured it out against all sides of the altar—¹⁹and the fat of the bull calf and of the ram, the lower back and the fat that covers over the entrails and the two kidneys and the fat on them and the appendage on the liver. ²⁰And he placed the fat pieces on the breasts, and he offered up the fat pieces on the altar, ²¹and the breast and the right shoulder Aaron removed as an advance deduction before the Lord, as the Lord had instructed Moyses.

²² And after Aaron raised his hands towards the people, he blessed them. And he came down after performing the one for sin and the whole burnt offerings and those pertaining to deliverance. ²³Moyses and Aaron entered the tent of witness, and when they came out, they blessed all the people, and the glory of the Lord became visible to all the people. ²⁴And fire came out from the Lord and consumed what was on the altar, both the whole burnt offerings and the fat pieces, and all the people saw it and were amazed and fell face down.

10 And when the two sons of Aaron, Nadab and Abioud, each took his fire-pan, they placed fire on it and threw incense on it and offered before the Lord strange fire such as the Lord had not ordered them. ²And fire came out from the Lord and consumed them, and they died before the Lord. ³And Moyses said to Aaron, "This is what the Lord spoke, saying,

'Among those who are near me
I will be shown holy,

and in the whole congregation

I will be glorified.^a

And Aaron was shocked.

4 And Moyses summoned Misael and Elisaphan sons of Oziel, sons of the brother of Aaron's father, and said to them, "Come forward, and carry your brothers away from the holy things, outside the camp."⁵ And they came forward and carried them by their tunics outside the camp as Moyses had said.⁶ And Moyses said to Aaron and Eleazar and Ithamar, his sons who remained, "You shall not unbind your head, and you shall not tear your vestments so that you do not die, and wrath will come over the whole congregation, but your kindred, the whole house of Israel, shall bewail the burning with which they were set on fire by the Lord."⁷ And you shall not go out of the door of the tent of witness so that you do not die, for the anointing oil from the Lord is on you." And they did according to the word of Moyses.

8 And the Lord spoke to Aaron, saying:⁹ You shall not drink wine nor sikera^a, neither you nor your sons with you, whenever you enter into the tent of witness or when you approach the altar, and you will not die; it is a perpetual precept throughout your generations¹⁰ to distinguish between the holy and the profane and between the unclean and the clean,¹¹ and you shall teach the sons of Israel all the precepts that the Lord has spoken to them by the hand of Moyses.

12 And Moyses said to Aaron and^b Eleazar and Ithamar the sons of Aaron who remained: Take the sacrifice that is left from the Lord's offerings, and you shall eat it unleavened beside the altar. They are holy of holies.¹³ And you shall eat it in a holy place. For this is a precept for you and a precept for your sons from the offerings to the Lord, for so I am commanded.¹⁴ And the breast of what has been set apart and the shoulder of the advance deduction you shall eat in a holy place, you and your sons and your house with you, for it was given as a precept to you and as a precept to your sons, from the sacrifices of deliverance of the sons of Israel.¹⁵ The shoulder of the advance deduction and the breast of what was set apart you shall offer besides the sacrifices of the fat pieces, to set apart what was set apart before the Lord. And it shall belong to you and to your sons and to your daughters with you as a perpetual precept, as the Lord instructed Moyses.

16 And when Moyses inquired and sought the goat for sin—this had already been burned up! And Moyses was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's remaining sons, saying,¹⁷ "Why did you not eat the one for sin in a sacred place? For, because they are holy of holies, he gave this to you to eat so that you may remove the guilt of the congregation and make atonement for them before the Lord."¹⁸ For nothing of its blood was brought into the sanctuary. You shall eat it in a holy place facing inside, as the Lord instructed me."¹⁹ And Aaron spoke to Moyses, saying, "If today they have brought their items for sin and their whole burnt offerings before the Lord, and these things have befallen me, and if I shall eat the items for sin today, will it not be pleasing to the Lord?"²⁰ And Moyses heard this, and it pleased him.

11 And he Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying:² Speak to the sons of Israel, saying:

From all the land animals, these are the animals that you shall eat.³ Any animal that divides the hoof and splits the hooves into two parts and brings up the cud among the animals—these you shall eat.⁴ But among those that bring up the cud and divide the hoof and split the hoof, you shall not eat any of them: the camel, because it brings up the cud but does not split the hoof—this one is unclean for you.⁵ And the hare, because this animal brings up the cud but does not split the hoof—this one is unclean for you.⁶ And the coney, because this animal brings up the cud but does not split the hoof—this one is unclean for you.⁷ And the pig, because this animal divides the hoof and cleaves the claws of the hoof, but this animal does not bring up the cud—this one is unclean for you.⁸ Of their flesh you shall not eat, and their carcasses you shall not touch; these things are unclean for you.

9 And these you shall eat of all that are in the waters. All those that have fins and scales in the waters and in the seas and in the wadis—these you shall eat.¹⁰ And all those in the waters or in the sea and in the wadis that do not have fins or scales, of all those things that the waters disgorge and of every living being which is in the water are an abomination.¹¹ And they shall be abominations to you. Of their flesh you shall not eat, and you shall feel loathing for their carcasses.¹² And all things without fins and scales, of those in the water—this is an abomination to you.

13 And these you shall regard with loathing among the birds. And they shall not be eaten; they are an abomination: the eagle and the bearded vulture and the osprey¹⁴ and the vulture and the kite and those like it¹⁵ and a raven and those like it¹⁶ and ostrich and little owl and sea gull and those like it and a hawk and those similar to it¹⁷ and long-eared owl and diving petrel and ibis¹⁸ and water hen and pelican and swan¹⁹ and heron and water plover and those like it and hoopoe and bat.

20 And all creeping things that can fly, that walk upon on all fours, shall be abominations to you.²¹ But among the winged creeping things that walk on all fours, these you shall eat: they that have upper legs above their feet with which to leap on the ground.²² And of them, these you shall eat: the locust larva and those similar to it and the bald locust and those similar to it and the grasshopper and those similar to it and the snake-fighting grasshopper and those similar to it.²³ All winged creeping things that have four feet are an abomination to you.

anyone who touches any of their carcasses shall be unclean until the evening. ²⁵And anyone who carries any of their carcasses shall wash his clothes and shall be unclean until the evening. ²⁶And among all the animals the one that is a divider of the hoof and has a cloven hoof but does not chew the cud—they shall be unclean to you. Everyone who touches any of their carcasses shall be unclean until the evening. ²⁷And every one that walks on paws among any animals that walk on all fours shall be unclean to you. Anyone who touches any of their carcasses shall be unclean until the evening. ²⁸And the one who carries any of their carcasses shall wash his clothes and shall be unclean until the evening. These things shall be unclean for you.

²⁹ And these are unclean for you among the creeping things that creep on the earth: the weasel and the mouse and the dry-land crocodile, ³⁰field mouse and chameleon and gecko and lizard and blind rat. ³¹These are unclean to you among all the creeping things that are on the earth. Anyone that touches them when they are dead shall be unclean until the evening. ³²And anything onto which any of them falls upon, when they are dead, shall be unclean, whether any article of wood or cloth or skin or sacking, any article, when work is done with it; it shall be dipped into water, and it shall be unclean until the evening, and then it shall be clean. ³³And any earthen vessel into which some of them fall inside, whatever is in it shall be unclean, and it shall be smashed. ³⁴And any food that could be eaten, which water comes onto, shall be unclean. And any liquid that could be drunk shall be unclean in any such vessel. ³⁵Anything that any of their carcasses falls onto shall be unclean. Bread-ovens and pot-stands shall be demolished. These are unclean, and these shall remain unclean for you, ³⁶with the exception of springs of water and a cistern and a gathering of water—it shall be clean, but whoever touches carcasses in them shall be unclean. ³⁷But if any of their carcasses fall on any sowing seed that could be sown, it shall be clean. ³⁸But if water is poured onto any seed and any of their carcasses fall onto it, it shall be unclean for you.

³⁹ Now if an animal dies, that which it is permitted for you to eat—anyone who touches their carcasses shall be unclean until the evening. ⁴⁰And he who eats of any of these carcasses shall wash his clothing and shall be unclean until the evening. And he who carries any of their carcasses shall wash his clothing and shall be bathed in water and shall be unclean until the evening.

⁴¹ And every creeping thing that creeps on the earth: this shall be an abomination to you; it shall not be eaten. ⁴²And whatever moves on its belly and whatever moves on four legs at all times, whatever has many feet among all the creeping things that creep upon the earth, you shall not eat it, for it is an abomination to you. ⁴³And you shall not make your souls detestable with any that creep, those that creep on the earth, and you shall not defile yourselves with them, and you shall not become unclean by them. ⁴⁴For it is I who am the Lord your God, and you shall be sanctified, and you shall be holy, for I am holy, I the Lord your God. And you shall not defile your souls with any of the creeping things that stir on the earth. ⁴⁵For it is I who am the Lord who brought you up from the land of Egypt to be your God; you shall be holy, for I am holy, I, the Lord.

⁴⁶ This is the law pertaining to land animals and birds and every being that moves through the water and every being that crawls upon the earth, ⁴⁷to make a distinction between the unclean and between the clean and between breeding things that may be eaten and between breeding things that may not be eaten.

12 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them:

Any woman, if she is fertilized and bears a male child, shall also be unclean seven days; as at the days of the separation of her period, she shall be unclean. ³And on the eighth day she shall circumcise the flesh of his foreskin. ⁴And thirty-three days shall she remain in her unclean blood; she shall not touch anything holy or come into the holy place until the days of her purification are completed. ⁵But if she bears a female child, she shall be unclean twice seven days, as in her sitting apart, and sixty-six days shall she remain in her unclean blood.

⁶ And when the days of her purification are completed, for a son or for a daughter, she shall bring to the priest at the door of the tent of witness a lamb in its first year without blemish, for a whole burnt offering, and a young of the doves or a turtledove for sin. ⁷And he shall offer it before the Lord, and the priest shall make atonement for her, and he shall purify her from the source of her blood. This is the law for her who bears a male or female child. ⁸But if her hand does not find what is enough for a lamb, then she shall take two turtledoves or two young of doves, one for a whole burnt offering and one for sin, and the priest shall make atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

² When any person has on the skin of his body a conspicuous lesion indicating disease, and if there is an attack of leprosy disease on the skin of his body, then he shall be brought to Aaron the priest or to one of his sons the priests. ³And the priest shall look at the attack on the skin of his body, and if the hair in the attacked area has turned white and the appearance of the attack is low in the skin of the body, it is an attack of a leprous disease, and the priest shall look and declare him defiled. ⁴But if the conspicuous spot is white in the skin of his body and its appearance is not low in the skin and its hair has not changed to white hair but it is hardly visible, the priest shall isolate the attack for seven days. ⁵And the priest shall look at the attack on the seventh day, and look, the attack remains before him, the attack has not undergone change in the skin, then the priest shall isolate him seven days for the second time. ⁶And the priest shall look at him a second time on the seventh day, and look, the attack is not apparent, the attack has not changed in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him clean, for it is a mark, and after he has washed his clothes he shall be clean. ⁷But if the mark in the skin by altering changes after the priest has looked at him for his cleansing, then he shall appear a second time before the priest. ⁸And the priest shall look at him, and look, the mark has changed on his skin, then the priest shall declare him defiled; it is a leprous disease.

⁹ And as for an attack of a leprous disease—if it happens to a person, then he shall come to the priest. ¹⁰And the priest shall see, and look, there is a white lesion in the skin, and it has turned the hair white, and some of the healthy part of the living flesh is in the lesion; ¹¹it is a leprous disease of long standing; it is in the skin of the body. And the priest shall pronounce him defiled and isolate him, for he is unclean. ¹²But if in breaking out, the leprous disease breaks out in the skin, and the leprous disease covers all the skin of the attacked area, from head to foot, so far as the priest can see, ¹³then the priest shall see, and look, the leprous disease has covered all the skin of the body. And the priest shall declare him clean of the attack; since it has all turned white, he is clean. ¹⁴And on the day when living tissue appears in it, he shall be declared defiled, ¹⁵and the priest shall look at the healthy tissue, and the healthy tissue will render him defiled because it is unclean. It is a leprous disease. ¹⁶But if the healthy tissue restores itself and changes to white, then he shall come to the priest, ¹⁷and the priest shall see, and look, the attack has changed to white, and the priest shall pronounce the attacked area clean. It is clean.

¹⁸ And if the flesh in its skin becomes a festering sore and if it heals ¹⁹and in the place of the festering sore there is a white lesion or a shiny one that turns white or reddens, then he shall appear before the priest. ²⁰And the priest shall see, and look, its appearance is deeper than the skin, and its hair has turned white, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean; it is a leprous disease; it broke out in the festering sore. ²¹But if the priest sees, and look, the hair on it is not white, and it is not low in the skin of the flesh but is hardly visible, then the priest shall isolate him seven days. ²²And if in spreading out it spreads in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean; it is an attack of leprous disease. It has broken out in the festering sore. ²³But if the bright spot remains in one place and does not spread, it is the scar of the festering sore, and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

the skin, it is a leprous disease; it has broken out in the burn, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean. It is an attack of leprous disease. ²⁶But if the priest sees, and look, the hair in the bright spot is not white, and it is not low in the skin but is inconspicuous, then the priest shall isolate him seven days. ²⁷And the priest shall examine him on the seventh day, and if in spreading out it spreads in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean. It is an attack of leprous disease. It has broken out in the festering sore. ²⁸But if the bright spot remains in one place and does not spread in the skin but is inconspicuous, it is a lesion from the burn, and the priest shall pronounce him clean, for it is the style of the burn.

²⁹ And as for man or woman—if there is on them an attack of leprous disease on the head or in the beard, ³⁰then the priest shall examine the attack. And look, its appearance is more hollow than the skin and the hair in turning yellow is thin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean; it is a rupture, a leprous disease of the head or a leprous disease of the beard. ³¹And if the priest examines the attack of the rupture, and look, its appearance is no more hollow than the skin and there is no yellow hair in it, then the priest shall isolate the attack of the rupture for seven days. ³²And on the seventh day the priest shall examine the attack, and look, the rupture has not spread and there is no yellow hair in it and the appearance of the rupture is not hollow in the skin, ³³then the skin shall be shaven, but the rupture shall not be shaven. And the priest shall isolate the rupture for a second seven days. ³⁴And on the seventh day the priest shall examine the rupture, and look, the rupture has not spread in the skin after he has been shaven and the appearance of the rupture is not hollow in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him clean. And he shall wash his clothes and be clean. ³⁵But if in spreading, the rupture spreads in the skin after he was pronounced clean, ³⁶then the priest shall look. And look, the rupture has spread in the skin; the priest shall not inspect for yellow hair because he is unclean. ³⁷But if the rupture remains in place, visibly, and black hair has grown in it, the rupture has healed; he is clean, and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

appearance of a leprous disease in the skin of his flesh, ⁴⁴he is a leprous person. With defilement the priest shall pronounce him defiled; his attack is on his head.

45 And the leprous person on whom is the attack—let his clothes be loosened and his head be uncovered, and let him put on something around his mouth, and he will have been called unclean. ⁴⁶He is unclean and shall remain unclean all the days the attack is on him. He shall reside apart; he shall spend his life outside the camp.

47 As for clothing: if an attack of leprous disease appears in it, in woolen cloth or cloth made of tow, ⁴⁸whether in the warp or in the woof, or in linen clothes or in woolen clothes or in a skin or in any article made of skin, ⁴⁹and the attack becomes greenish or reddish in the skin or in the garment, whether in warp or woof, or in any article made of skin, it is an attack of leprous disease, and one shall show it to the priest. ⁵⁰And the priest shall examine the attack, and the priest shall isolate the attack for seven days. ⁵¹And the priest shall examine the attack on the seventh day. And if the attack has spread in the cloth, whether in the warp or in the woof, or in the skin, in the case of anything whereby skin is made into a product, the attack is a lasting leprous disease; it is unclean. ⁵²He shall burn the clothing, whether the warp or the woof, in woolen things or in linen things, or any article of skin which the attack is in, for it is a lasting leprous disease; it shall be burned with fire.

53 Now if the priest looks, and the attack has not spread in the clothing, whether in the warp or in the woof or in any article of skin, ⁵⁴then the priest shall give orders, and he shall wash the article which the disease appears in, and the priest shall isolate the attack for a second seven days. ⁵⁵And the priest shall examine the attack after it has been washed, and this attack has not changed its appearance, and the attack is not spreading: it is something unclean; it shall be burnt with fire, it has been firmly set in the garment, whether in the warp or in the woof.

56 And if the priest looks and the attack has become inconspicuous after it is washed, he shall tear it out of the cloth, whether ^aout of the warp^a or out of the woof or ^bout of the skin^b. ⁵⁷But if it still appears in the garment, whether in the warp or in the woof or in any article of skin, it is leprous disease that has broken out; that in which the attack occurs shall be burned with fire. ⁵⁸But the cloth, whether warp or woof, or any article of skin that shall be washed and the attack shall leave it, shall then be washed a second time, and it shall be clean.

59 This is the law for an attack of leprous disease in a cloth of wool or tow, either in warp or woof, or in any article of skin, to declare it clean or defiled.

14 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²This is the law for the leprous person on the day that he is to be cleansed:

And he shall be brought to the priest, ³and the priest shall go out, outside of the camp, and the priest shall see, and look, the attack of leprous disease is healed from the leprous person, ⁴and the priest shall give orders, and they shall take for the one who has been cleansed two living clean fowl and cedar wood and scarlet spun thread and hyssop. ⁵And the priest shall give orders, and they shall slaughter the one fowl over living water in an earthen vessel. ⁶And as for the living fowl: he shall take it and the cedar wood and the scarlet spun thread and the hyssop and dip them and the living fowl in the blood of the fowl that was slaughtered over living water. ⁷And he shall sprinkle it about, seven times upon the one who was cleansed of the leprous disease, and he shall be clean, and he shall send forth the living bird into the plain. ⁸And the one who was cleansed shall wash his clothes and have all his hair shaven and bathe in water, and he shall be clean. And after that he shall come into the camp and shall spend time outside his dwelling seven days. ⁹And it shall be on the seventh day that he shall have all his hair shaven: his head and his beard and his eyebrows, and he shall have all his hair shaven. And he shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water, and he shall be clean.

10 And on the eighth day he shall take two lambs of a year old without blemish and one sheep in its first year without blemish and three-tenths of choice flour as an offering mixed with oil and one cup of oil. ¹¹And the priest who cleanses shall set the person who is being cleansed, along with these things, before the Lord, at the door of the tent of witness. ¹²And the priest shall take the one lamb and offer it for error, along with the cup of oil, and set it apart as something set apart before the Lord. ¹³And they shall slaughter the lamb in the place where they slaughter the whole burnt offerings and the ones for sin, in a holy place, for the one for sin, like the one for error, belongs to the priest; they are holy of holies. ¹⁴And the priest shall take some of the blood of the one for error, and the priest shall put it onto the lobe of the right ear of the one who is being cleansed and on the tip of his right hand and on the tip of his right foot. ¹⁵And the priest, after taking some of the cup of oil, shall pour it into the left hand of the priest ¹⁶and wet his right finger with the oil that is in his left hand and sprinkle seven times with his finger before the Lord. ¹⁷But the remaining oil that is in his hand the priest shall put on the lobe of the right ear of the one being cleansed and on the tip of his right hand and on the tip of his right foot, on the place of the blood of the one for error. ¹⁸Now the oil that is left in the priest's hand the priest shall put on the head of the one who was cleansed. And the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord; ¹⁹the priest shall perform the one for sin, and the priest shall make atonement for the one being cleansed from his sin. And afterward the priest shall slaughter the whole burnt offering,²⁰ and the priest shall offer the whole burnt offering and the sacrifice on the altar before the Lord. And the priest shall make atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

21 But if he is poor and his hand does not find, he shall take one lamb for what he has done in error as an advance deduction, to make atonement for him, and one-tenth of fine flour mixed with oil for a sacrifice and one cup of oil,²² also two turtledoves or two young doves, such as his hand finds, and one shall be for sin and one for a whole burnt offering.²³ And on the eighth day he shall bring them to render him clean, to the priest, to the door of the tent of witness, before the Lord,²⁴ and the priest shall take the lamb for error and the cup of oil and shall place them as an addition before the Lord.²⁵ And he shall slaughter the lamb for error and the priest shall take some of the blood of the one for error and put it on the lobe of the right ear of the one being cleansed and on the tip of his right hand and on the tip of his right foot.²⁶ And the priest shall pour out some of the oil into the left hand of the priest,²⁷ and the priest shall sprinkle with the right finger some of the oil that is in his left hand seven times before the Lord.²⁸ And the priest shall put some of the oil that is in his hand onto the lobe of the right ear of the one being cleansed and on the tip of his right hand and the tip of his right foot, on the place of the blood of the one for error.²⁹ Now the oil that is remaining in the priest's hand he shall put onto the head of the one who was cleansed, and the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord.³⁰ And he shall do one of the turtledoves or of the young doves, as his hand found,³¹ one for sin and one for a whole burnt offering, along with the sacrifice, and the priest shall make atonement before the Lord for the one being cleansed.³² This is the law in which is the attack of leprous disease and of the one who cannot find with his hand for his cleansing.

33 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying:

34 When you come into the land of the Chananites, which I give you in possession, and I shall give a leprous disease in the houses in the land acquired by you,³⁵ then he whose house it is shall come and report to the priest, saying, "Something like an attack has been seen in my house"³⁶ And the priest shall give orders to strip the house before the priest goes in to look at the attack, and whatever is in the house will not become unclean, and afterward the priest shall go in to examine the house.³⁷ And he shall look at the attack in the walls of the house, hollow, greenish or reddish, and their appearance is lower than the walls,³⁸ and the priest, after going out of the house at the door of the house, the priest shall then isolate the house seven days.³⁹ And the priest shall return on the seventh day and look at the house, and look, the attack has spread in the walls of the house.⁴⁰ And the priest shall give orders, and they shall take out the stones in which is the attack and throw them into an unclean place outside the city.⁴¹ And they shall scrape off the inside of the house round about and pour out the soil in an unclean place outside the city.⁴² And they shall take other scraped stones and place them in return, instead of the stones, and take other soil and re-plaster the house.

43 But if the attack returns again and arises in the house, after he has taken out the stones and after the house has been scraped out and after it has been plastered over,⁴⁴ then the priest shall go in and look; if the attack has spread in the house, it is a lasting leprous disease in the house; it is unclean.⁴⁵ And they shall demolish the house, both its timber and its stones, and all the soil they shall take outside the city to an unclean place.⁴⁶ And he who enters the house all the days that it is isolated shall be unclean until the evening,⁴⁷ and he who sleeps in the house shall wash his garments and shall be unclean until the evening, and he who eats in the house shall wash his garments and be unclean until the evening.

48 But if the priest after coming near, enters and sees, and look, the attack, by spreading, has not spread in the house after the house was plastered over, then the priest shall declare the house clean, because the attack is healed.⁴⁹ And to purify the house he shall take two living, clean fowl and cedar wood and scarlet spun yarn and hyssop⁵⁰ and shall slaughter the one fowl over living water in an earthen vessel⁵¹ and shall take the cedar wood and the scarlet spun yarn and the hyssop and the living fowl and dip them in the blood of the slaughtered fowl over living water and sprinkle with them on the house seven times.⁵² And he shall purify the house with the blood of the fowl and with the living water and with the living fowl and with the cedar wood and with the hyssop and with the scarlet spun yarn,⁵³ and he shall send forth the living fowl away from the city into the plain, and he shall make atonement for the house, and it shall be clean.

54 This is the law concerning every attack of a leprous disease and of a rupture⁵⁵ and of leprous disease of clothing and of a house⁵⁶ and of a scar and of a mark and of a bright spot⁵⁷ and to determine on which day something is unclean and on which day it will be declared clean. This is the law for leprous disease.

15 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them:

Man by man, whoever has a flow out of his body, his flow is unclean.³ And this is the law of his uncleanness: when he flows seed out of his body from the flow or if his body has become compacted through the flow, this is his uncleanness because of it. All the days of the flow of his body or if his body has become compacted through the flow, this is his uncleanness.⁴ Every bed that the one suffering from spermatorrhoea lies on shall be unclean, and every thing that the one suffering from spermatorrhoea sits on shall be unclean.⁵ And a person who touches his bed shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening. ⁶And he who sits on the object that the one suffering from spermatorrhoea has sat on shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening. ⁷And he who touches the flesh of the one suffering from spermatorrhoea shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening. ⁸But if the one suffering from spermatorrhoea spits on one who is clean, he shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening. ⁹And any packsaddle of a donkey that the one suffering from spermatorrhoea mounts on shall be unclean until evening. ¹⁰And everyone who touches anything that was under him shall be unclean until the evening, and he who carries these things shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening. ¹¹And as many as the one suffering from spermatorrhoea touches without his having rinsed his hands shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water and be unclean until the evening. ¹²And as for an earthen vessel that the one suffering from spermatorrhoea touches—it shall be shattered, and a vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water and shall be clean.

¹³ But if the one suffering from spermatorrhoea is cleansed of his flow, then there shall be counted off for him seven days for his cleansing, and he shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water, and he shall be clean. ¹⁴And on the eighth day he shall take for himself two turtledoves or two young doves and shall bring them before the Lord to the entrance of the tent of witness and give them to the priest. ¹⁵And the priest shall prepare them, one for sin and one for a whole burnt offering, and the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord for his flow.

¹⁶ And as for a person whose bed of semen issues forth from him, he shall then bathe his whole body in water and shall be unclean until the evening. ¹⁷And all clothing and all skin which a bed of semen comes upon shall then be washed with water and be unclean until the evening. ¹⁸In the case of a woman, if a man lies with her in a bed of semen, then they shall bathe in water and be unclean until the evening.

and her impurity be on him, then he shall be unclean seven days, and every bed that he lies on shall be unclean.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moyses after the two sons of Aaron died, when they brought near strange fire before the Lord, and they died. ²And the Lord said to Moyses:

Speak to Aaron your brother, and let him not enter at any time into the sanctuary inside the veil facing the propitiatory that is on the ark of witness, and he will not die, for I will be seen in the cloud upon the propitiatory. ³Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a calf from the cattle for sin and a ram for a whole burnt offering. ⁴And he shall put on the consecrated linen tunic, and linen pants shall be on his flesh, and he shall gird himself with a linen girdle and wrap around a linen turban; they are holy vestments. And he shall bathe his entire body in water and then put them on. ⁵And he shall take from the congregation of the sons of Israel two billy goats for sin and one ram for a whole burnt offering.

⁶ And Aaron shall offer the bull calf for sin, which is his own, and shall make atonement for himself^a and for his house. ⁷And he shall take the two goats and set them before the Lord at the door of the tent of witness, ⁸and Aaron shall place lots on the two goats, one lot for the Lord and one lot for the one to be sent off. ⁹And Aaron shall present the goat which the lot fell on for the Lord and offer for sin, ¹⁰and the goat which the lot fell on of the one to be sent off he shall set it alive before the Lord to make atonement over it, to send it away into the place for sending away—he shall let it go into the wilderness.

¹⁵ And he shall slaughter the goat for sin that is for the people before the Lord and bring in its blood inside the veil and do with its blood as he did with the blood of the bull calf, and he shall sprinkle its blood on the propitiatory in front of the propitiatory. ¹⁶And he shall make the holy place ritually acceptable because of the unclean things of the sons of Israel and because of their wrongs—concerning all their sins, and so he shall do for the tent of witness, which has been established among them in the midst of their uncleanness. ¹⁷And no person shall be in the tent of witness, when he enters to make atonement in the holy place, until he comes out. And he shall make atonement for himself^a and for his house and for all the congregation of the sons of Israel. ¹⁸And he shall go out to the altar which is before the Lord and make atonement on it and shall take some of the blood of the bull calf and some of the blood of the goat and put it on the horns of the altar, round about. ¹⁹And he shall sprinkle some of the blood on it with his finger seven times and pronounce it clean and hallow it from the uncleanness of the sons of Israel.

²⁰ And he shall finish making the holy place and the tent of witness and the altar ritually acceptable, and he shall pronounce clean the things that pertain to the priests. And he shall bring near the live goat. ²¹And Aaron shall lay his hands on the head of the live goat and confess over it all the lawless acts of the sons of Israel and all their offences and all their sins and shall put them on the head of the live goat and shall send it away into the desert by the hand of a ready person. ²²And the goat shall bear on itself their offences to an untrampled region, and he shall send off the goat into the wilderness.

it there. ²⁴And he shall bathe his body in water in a holy place and put on his garment; then he shall come out and perform his sacrifice and the sacrifice of the people and shall make atonement for himself^a and his house and for the people as for the priests. ²⁵And the fat for sins he shall offer up on the altar. ²⁶And the one who sends off the goat set apart for release shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water and afterward shall come into the camp. ²⁷And the bull calf for sin and the goat for sin, of whom their^b blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place—they shall take them outside the camp and burn them up with fire, and their skins and their flesh and their dung. ²⁸Now the one who burns them shall wash his clothes and bathe his body in water and afterward shall come into the camp.

²⁹ And this shall be a perpetual precept to you: In the seventh month, on the tenth of the month, you shall humble your souls and shall do no work, neither the native nor the guest among you who adheres. ³⁰For on this day he shall make atonement for you, to cleanse you from all your sins before the Lord, and you shall be clean. ³¹This rest shall be Sabbata of sabbaths to you, and you shall humble your souls; it is a perpetual precept. ³²The priest, he whom they anoint and he whose hands they shall validate to serve as priest in his father's place, shall make atonement and shall put on the linen garment, the holy vestment. ³³And he shall make the holy of the holy ritually acceptable, and he shall make ritually acceptable the tent of meeting and the altar, and he shall make atonement for the priests and for the entire congregation. ³⁴And this shall be a perpetual precept for you, to make atonement for the sons of Israel for all their sins. It shall be done once a year as the Lord instructed Moyses.

² Speak to Aaron and his sons and to all the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: This is the word that the Lord has commanded, saying: ³Person by person of the sons of Israel, whoever slaughters a calf or a sheep or a goat in the camp, or who slaughters it outside the camp ⁴and does not bring it to the door of the tent of witness, to perform it as a whole burnt offering or as a deliverance to the Lord, acceptable for an odor of fragrance, and who slaughters outside and does not bring it to the door of the tent of witness in order to bring a gift to the Lord before the tent of the Lord, then bloodshed shall be reckoned to that person. He has shed blood; that soul shall be exterminated from its people ⁵in order that the sons of Israel may bring their sacrifices, whatever they shall slaughter in the plains, and they shall bring them to the Lord, to the priest at the entrance of the tent of witness, and they shall offer them as a sacrifice of deliverance to the Lord. ⁶And the priest shall dash the blood against all sides of the altar, before the Lord at the entrance of the tent of witness and offer up the fat as an odor of fragrance to the Lord,⁷ and they shall no longer offer their sacrifices to useless things, to whom they go out to commit fornication after them. It shall be a perpetual precept to you throughout your generations.

8 And you shall say to them: Person by person of the sons of Israel and from the sons of the guests among you who adhere, whoever performs a whole burnt offering or sacrifice⁹ and does not bring it to the door of the tent of witness, to perform it to the Lord, that person shall be exterminated from his people.

10 Person by person of the sons of Israel or of the guests among you who adhere, whoever eats any blood—and I will set my face against the soul who eats blood and will utterly destroy it from its people.¹¹ For the life of all flesh is its blood, and I have given it to you for making atonement for your souls on the altar, for it is its blood that makes atonement for the soul.¹² Therefore I have said to the sons of Israel: No soul among you shall eat blood, and no guest among you who adheres shall eat blood.¹³ And person by person of the sons of Israel and of the guests among you who adhere, whoever hunts as prey a wild animal or bird that may be eaten, shall pour out the blood and cover it with earth.

14 For the life of all flesh is its blood, and I have said to the sons of Israel: You shall not eat the blood of any flesh. For the life of all flesh is its blood; anyone who eats it shall be exterminated.¹⁵ And any soul, among the natives or among the guests who eats a carcass or what has been torn by wild animals shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening; then he shall be clean.¹⁶ But if he does not wash his clothes and bathe his body in water, he shall assume his transgression of the law.

18 And the Lord said to Moyses, saying:
2 Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: I am the Lord your God.³ You shall not act according to the practices of the land of Egypt, wherein you lived, and you shall not act according to the practices of the land of Chanaan, there where I am bringing you, and you shall not live by their precepts.⁴ My judgments you shall perform, and my ordinances you shall keep, to walk by them; I am the Lord your God.⁵ And you shall keep all my ordinances and all my judgments, and you shall do them; as for the things a person does, he shall live by them; I am the Lord your God.

6 Person by person shall not approach any of the household of his flesh to uncover shame; I am the Lord.⁷ You shall not uncover the shame of your father and the shame of your mother, for she is your mother; you^a shall not uncover her shame.⁸ You shall not uncover the shame of your father's wife; it is the shame of your father.⁹ You shall not uncover her shame—the shame of your sister, from your father or from your mother, whether born at home or born abroad.¹⁰ You shall not uncover their shame—the shame of your son's daughter or of your daughter's daughter, for it is your own shame.¹¹ You shall not uncover the shame of your father's wife's daughter; she is your sister by the same father. You shall not uncover her shame.¹² You shall not uncover the shame of your father's sister, for she is of your father's own household.¹³ You shall not uncover the shame of your mother's sister, for she is of your mother's own household.¹⁴ You shall not uncover the shame of your father's brother, and you shall not approach his wife, for she is your relative.¹⁵ You shall not uncover the shame of your daughter-in-law, for she is your son's wife; you shall not uncover her shame.¹⁶ You shall not uncover the shame of your brother's wife; it is your brother's shame.¹⁷ You shall not uncover the shame of a woman and her daughter. You shall not take her son's daughter and her daughter's daughter to uncover their shame, for they are of your own household; it is a profane act.¹⁸ You shall not take a woman as a rival in addition to her sister, to uncover her shame in addition to her while she is still alive.

19 And you shall not approach a woman to uncover her shame in the separation of her uncleanness.²⁰ And you shall not give your bed of semen to the wife of your neighbor, to bring defilement onto her.²¹ And you shall not give any of your offspring to serve a ruler. And you shall not profane the holy name. I am the Lord.²² And you shall not sleep with a male as in a bed of a woman, for it is an abomination.²³ And you shall not give your bed to any quadruped for sowing to bring defilement on it, nor shall any woman stand before any quadruped so as to be mounted, for it is loathsome.

24 Do not defile yourselves in any of these ways. For by all these things the nations I am sending out before your face were defiled.²⁵ And the land became defiled, and I repaid their evil because of it, and the land was angry with its inhabitants.²⁶ And you shall keep all my precepts and all my ordinances and not commit any of all these abominations, the inhabitant and the guest among you who has come²⁷ (for the men of the land, who were before you, committed all of these abominations, and the land became defiled);²⁸ otherwise the land will become angry with you when you defile it, as it became angry with the nations that were before you.²⁹ For anyone who commits any of all these abominations—the souls that do so shall be exterminated from their people.³⁰ And keep my ordinances: not to commit any of all these abominable precepts that were done before you, and you shall not be defiled by them, for I am the Lord your God.

19 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:
2 Speak to the congregation of the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: You shall be holy, for I am holy, the Lord your God.³ Let each fear his father and his mother, and you shall keep my sabbaths; I am the Lord your God. ⁴You shall not follow after idols, and you shall not make gods of cast metal for yourselves; I am the Lord your God.

⁵ And if you offer a sacrifice of deliverance to the Lord, offer it acceptable on your behalf. ⁶It shall be eaten on the day you offer it and on the next day, and if it is left over until the third day, it shall be burned up by fire. ⁷But if in eating it is eaten on the third day, it is not fit to be offered; it will not be accepted. ⁸And he who eats it shall assume guilt because he has profaned what is holy to the Lord, and the souls who eat it shall be exterminated from their people.

¹¹ You shall not steal; you shall not deal falsely; each of you shall not falsely accuse his neighbor. ¹²And you shall not swear by my name in an unjust matter, and you shall not profane the name of your God; it is I who am the Lord your God.

¹³ You shall not act unjustly towards your neighbor, and you shall not plunder, and the wages of a day laborer shall not rest overnight with you until morning. ¹⁴You shall not speak badly of the deaf and put an obstacle before the blind, and you shall fear the Lord your God; it is I who am the Lord your God.

¹⁵ You shall not do something unjust in judgment; you shall not accept the person of the poor or admire the person of a high official; with justice you shall judge your neighbor. ¹⁶You shall not go around in deceit among your nation; you shall not conspire against the blood of your neighbor; it is I who am the Lord your God.

¹⁷ You shall not hate in your mind your kin; in reproof you shall reprove your neighbor, and you shall not assume guilt because of him. ¹⁸And your own hand shall not take vengeance, and you shall not be angry against the sons of your people, and you shall love your neighbor as yourself; it is I who am the Lord.

¹⁹ You shall keep my law. You shall not breed your animals to those of a different kind, and you shall not sow your vineyard with something different, and you shall not put on yourself an adulterated garment woven with two materials.

²⁰ And if one lies with a woman in a bed of semen and she is a domestic carefully guarded for a man but she by means of release had not been ransomed neither had freedom been given her, they shall get an inquiry. They shall not die, since she had not been freed, ²¹and he shall bring for his error to the Lord, at the door of the tent of meeting, a ram for error. ²²And the priest shall make atonement for him with the ram for error before the Lord for the sin that he committed, and the sin he committed shall be forgiven him.

²³ Now when you enter into the land that the Lord your God is giving you and plant any kind of tree for food, then you shall thoroughly purify its uncleanness; three years its fruit shall be impure to you; it shall not be eaten. ²⁴And in the fourth year all its fruit shall be holy, laudable to the Lord. ²⁵But in the fifth year you shall eat the fruit, its yield is an increase for you; it is I who am the Lord your God.

²⁶ Do not eat on the mountains. And you shall not practice orinthomancy or divination by means of birds. ²⁷You shall not make a hair roll out of the hair on your head or spoil the appearance of your beard. ²⁸And you shall not make any incisions in your body for a soul^a and make any tattooed characters upon you; it is I who am the Lord your God.

²⁹ Do not profane your daughter by making her commit fornication, and the land will not fornicate, and the land shall be full of lawlessness. ³⁰You shall keep my sabbaths and be respectful of my sanctuaries; it is I who am the Lord.

³¹ You shall not follow after ventriloquists, and you shall not attach yourselves to enchanters, to be thoroughly polluted by them; it is I who am the Lord your God.

³² You shall rise before a grey-haired person and honor the person of the old, and you shall fear your God; it is I who am the Lord your God.

³³ Now if some guest approaches you in your land, you shall not oppress him. ³⁴The guest who comes over to you shall be to you as the native among you, and you shall love him as yourself, for you were guests in the land of Egypt; it is I who am the Lord your God.

³⁵ You shall not do what is unjust in judgment in measures and in standard weights and in balances. ³⁶You shall have just balances and just standard weights and an honest half-peck; it is I who am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt. ³⁷And you shall keep my entire law and all my ordinances, and you shall do them; it is I who am the Lord your God.

20 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²You shall also speak to the sons of Israel:

If any of the sons of Israel or of the guests who have come in Israel—whoever gives any of his offspring to a ruler, by death let him be put to death; the nation in the land shall stone them with stones. ³And it is I who will set my face against that person and will utterly destroy him from his people, because he has given of his offspring to a ruler, to defile my holy things and to profane the name of those consecrated to me. ⁴But if the natives of the land should by an oversight overlook with their eyes away from that person when he gives of his offspring to a ruler in order not to kill him, ⁵then I will set my face against that person and his family and will utterly destroy him from among his people, him and all who are like-minded in going out to commit fornication with the rulers.

6 And a soul that follows after ventriloquists or enchanters so as to commit fornication after them, I will set my face against that soul and will utterly destroy him from his people. ⁷And you shall be holy, for I, the Lord your God, am holy. ⁸And you shall keep my ordinances and observe them; I am the Lord that sanctifies you. ⁹A person, a person who speaks severely with his father or his mother—with death let him be put to death; he has spoken severely with his father or his mother—he shall be liable.

10 A person who commits adultery with the wife of a man or who commits adultery with the wife of his neighbor—let both the adulterer and the adulteress by death be put to death. ¹¹And if anyone lies with his father's wife, he has uncovered his father's shame; let both of them by death be put to death; they are liable. ¹²And if anyone lies with his daughter-in-law, let both of them by death be put to death, for they have behaved impiously; they are liable. ¹³And he who lies with a male in a bed for a woman, both have committed an abomination; by death let them be put to death; they are liable. ¹⁴He who takes a wife and her mother—it is transgression of the law; they shall burn both him and them with fire, and there shall be no lawlessness among you. ¹⁵And he who gives his sleeping-witch to a quadruped, by death let him be put to death, and you shall kill the quadruped. ¹⁶And a woman who shall approach any animal for her to be mounted by it—you shall kill the woman and the animal; by death they shall be put to death; they are liable.

22 And you shall keep all my ordinances and all my judgments and do them, and the land to which I bring you there to settle in it will never be angry with you. ²³And you shall not walk by the precepts of the nations that I am sending out away from you. Because they did all these things, I also abhorred them. ²⁴And I have said to you: You shall inherit their land, and it is I who will give it to you in possession, a land that is flowing with milk and honey. I am the Lord your God who has separated you from all the nations. ²⁵And you shall separate them: between the clean animals and between the unclean animals and between the clean birds and between the unclean; you shall not cause your souls to be loathsome by the animals and by the birds and by any of the creeping things of the earth, which I have set apart for you by uncleanness. ²⁶And you shall be holy to me, for I the Lord your God am holy, who has separated you from all the nations to be mine.

27 And a man or a woman—whoever among them becomes a ventriloquist or an enchanter, let both by death be put to death; with stones you shall stone them; they are liable.

21 And the Lord said to Moyses^a: Address the priests, the sons of Aaron, and you shall say to them:

They shall not be defiled by souls^b among their nation ²except by their nearest kin: for father and mother and sons and daughters, for a brother ³and for a virgin sister, who approaches him, who had not been given in marriage to a husband—he shall be defiled for these. ⁴He shall not be defiled suddenly among his people to his own desecration. ⁵And you shall not have a bald spot shaven upon your head for the dead, nor shall they shave the appearance of their beard, and they shall not cut incisions into their flesh. ⁶They shall be holy to their God and not profane the name of their God. For it is they that offer the sacrifices of the Lord as gifts of their God, and they shall be holy. ⁷They shall not marry a woman who is a prostitute and one who has been profaned and a woman rejected by her husband. For he is holy to the Lord his God, ⁸and he will sanctify him—it is he that offers the gifts of the Lord your God; he shall be holy, for I the Lord, who sanctifies them, am holy. ⁹And if the daughter of a person who is a priest profanes herself through going out to commit fornication, she profanes the name of her father; she shall be burned on fire.

10 And the priest who is great among his brothers, when the anointing oil has been poured on his head and when he has been validated to wear the vestments, shall not unbind his head and shall not tear his vestments. ¹¹And he shall not enter for any dead soul; he shall not be defiled for his father or even for his mother. ¹²And he shall not depart from the holy things, and he shall not profane what is consecrated, belonging to his God, for God's holy oil of anointing is upon him; I am the Lord. ¹³He shall marry a wife who is a virgin of his own kin. ¹⁴A widow and one rejected and profaned and a prostitute—these he shall not marry. Rather, he shall marry a wife who is a virgin of his own kin, ¹⁵and he shall not profane his offspring among his kin; I am the Lord that sanctifies him.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁷Say to Aaron: A person from your kin among your families—if any such person has a blemish on him, he shall not approach to offer the gifts of his

a + saying = We^{ed} bI.e. departed soul tantamount to corpse

God. ¹⁸Any person who has a blemish on him shall not draw near—a person who is lame or blind or having a mutilated nose or who has a cut ear ¹⁹or a person who has a crushed hand or a crushed foot ²⁰or a hunchback or one with white spots on the eye or one that has inflammation in his eyes or a person who has on him a severe itch or lichen-like growth or one with a single testicle. ²¹Anyone of the offspring of Aaron the priest who has on him a blemish shall not come near to offer sacrifices to your God; since he has a blemish, he shall not come near to offer the gifts of God. ²²He shall eat the gifts of God, the holy of holies, and of the holy things. ²³Only he shall not draw near to the veil and not come near the altar, because he has a blemish, and he shall not profane the sanctuary of his God, for it is I who am the Lord who sanctify them. ²⁴And Moyses spoke to Aaron and his sons and to all the sons of Israel.

22 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to Aaron and his sons, and let them give heed because of the sacred things of the sons of Israel, which they dedicate to me, and they shall not profane my holy name; I am the Lord. ³Say to them: Any person from all your offspring throughout your generations who comes near the sacred things, which the sons of Israel dedicate to the Lord, and his uncleanness is upon him—that soul shall be exterminated from my presence; I am the Lord your God. ⁴And a man of the offspring of Aaron the priest—and he is a sufferer from a leprous disease or spermatorrhoea—shall not eat of the sacred things until he has been cleansed. And he who touches anything of the uncleanness of a soul^a or a person whose bed of semen issues forth from him ⁵or whoever touches any unclean creeping thing that defiles him or by any human being by whom he defiles him, according to all his uncleanness—⁶a soul who touches them shall be unclean until evening. He shall not eat of the sacred things unless he has washed his body in water. ⁷And should the sun set, he shall then be clean, and then he shall eat of the sacred things, for it is his bread. ⁸A carcass and what was torn by wild animals he shall not eat, to be defiled by them; I am the Lord. ⁹And they shall keep my charges so that they may not through them assume guilt and die because of them, if they profane them; I am the Lord, the God who sanctifies them.

person eats sacred things out of ignorance, he shall then add one-fifth to it and give the sacred thing to the priest. ¹⁵And they shall not profane the sacred things of the sons of Israel, which they separate for the Lord, ¹⁶and bring upon themselves lawless conduct of error, by eating their sacred things, for I am the Lord who sanctify them.

¹⁷ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁸Speak to Aaron and his sons and the whole congregation of Israel, and you shall say to them: Person by person of the sons of Israel or of the guests who adhere to them in Israel, whoever presents his gifts according to any agreement of theirs or according to any choice of theirs, whatever they may bring to ^bthe Lord^b as a whole burnt offering, ¹⁹^cthese shall be^c acceptable to you—a male without blemish of the cattle-herds and of the sheep and of the goats. ²⁰They shall not offer to the Lord anything that has on it a blemish, for it shall not be acceptable to you.

²¹ And a person who offers a sacrifice of deliverance to the Lord, expressly uttering a vow according to a choice, or at your feasts, from the cattle-herds or from the sheep, to be acceptable it shall be without blemish; there shall be no blemish in it. ²²Anything blind or broken-limbed or with its tongue cut or having warts or acute itching or having lichen-like growth—these you shall not offer to ^bthe Lord^b and you shall not give of them as an offering on the altar to the Lord. ²³And a calf or a sheep that has a cut on its ear or one with a stunted tail, you shall make a slaughtering of them for yourself, but it will not be accepted for your vow. ²⁴A gelding and one bruised and one castrated and one whose testicles were torn off—you shall not offer these to the Lord, and you shall not do them in your land. ²⁵And from an alien's hand you shall not offer any of these as gifts to your God, since there are corruptions in them; there is a blemish in them; they shall not be acceptable to you.

²⁶ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁷When a calf or a sheep or a goat is born, then it shall remain seven days under its mother, but on the eighth day and beyond it shall be accepted as a gift, an offering to the Lord. ²⁸And as for a calf or a sheep—you shall not slaughter her and her young on one day. ²⁹But if you sacrifice a sacrifice, a vow of joyfulness, to the Lord, you shall sacrifice it as something acceptable to you. ³⁰It shall be eaten on the same day; you shall not leave any of the meat until morning; I am the Lord.

³¹ And you shall keep my commandments and do them. ³²And you shall not profane the name of the holy one, and I shall be sanctified among the sons of Israel; I am the Lord who sanctifies you, ³³who brought you out of the land of Egypt to be your God; I am the Lord.

23 And the Lord said to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: The feasts of the Lord, those that you shall call designated, holy—these are my feasts.

3 Six days you shall do acts of work, and on the seventh day there is Sabbata, a rest, designated, holy to the Lord; you shall do no work; it is Sabbata to the Lord in your every settlement.

4 These are the feasts for the Lord, and they are designated, holy, those that you shall call out at their appointed time. ⁵In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, in the middle of the time approaching evening, is a pascha to the Lord. ⁶And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread to the Lord; seven days you shall eat unleavened things. ⁷And the first day shall be a designated, holy one to you; you shall not do any work of service. ⁸And for seven days you shall present whole burnt offerings to the Lord, and the seventh day shall be a designated holy one to you; you shall not do any work of service.

9 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁰Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: When you enter into the land that I give you and you reap its harvest, you shall also bring a sheaf as the first fruit of your harvest to the priest. ¹¹And he shall raise up the sheaf before the Lord, acceptable for you; on the day after the first the priest shall raise it up. ¹²And on the day when you bring the sheaf, you shall do a sheep a year old, without blemish, as a whole burnt offering to the Lord, ¹³and its sacrifice—two-tenths of choice flour prepared with oil; a sacrifice to the Lord it is, an odor of fragrance to the Lord, and its libation, one-fourth of a hin^a of wine. ¹⁴And you shall eat no bread or parched fresh kernels until this very day, until you yourselves offer the gifts to your God; it is a perpetual precept throughout your generations in your every settlement.

15 And from the day after the sabbaths, from the day on which you bring the sheaf of the addition, you shall count off seven whole weeks. ¹⁶You shall count until the day after the last week, fifty days, and you shall present a new sacrifice to the Lord. ¹⁷You shall offer bread as an addition from your settlement: two loaves of bread. They shall consist of two-tenths of fine flour, baked with leaven, of first products to the Lord. ¹⁸And you shall offer with the bread seven lambs, a year old without blemish, and one calf from the cattle-herd and two rams without blemish; they shall be a whole burnt offering to the Lord, along with their sacrifices and their libations: a sacrifice, an odor of fragrance to the Lord. ¹⁹You shall also prepare one young billy goat from the goats for sin and two lambs a year old as a sacrifice of deliverance with the bread of the first products. ²⁰And the priest shall place them with the bread of the first products—an addition before the Lord, together with the two lambs; they shall be holy to the Lord for the priest who offers them; they shall be his. ²¹And this day you shall call designated; it shall be holy to you; you shall not do any work of service on it—a perpetual precept throughout your generations in your every settlement.

22 And when you reap the harvest of your land, you shall not in your harvesting thereafter make a thorough job of the harvest of your field, and you shall not gather the gleanings of your harvest; you shall leave them remaining for the poor and for the guest; I am the Lord your God.

23 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁴Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: In the seventh month, on the first of the month, you shall have a rest, a memorial with trumpets; it shall be designated, holy to you. ²⁵You shall do no work of service, and you shall present a whole burnt offering to the Lord.

26 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁷Also on the tenth of this seventh month there is a day of atonement; it shall be designated, holy to you, and you shall humble your souls and present a whole burnt offering to the Lord; ²⁸you shall do no work on this particular day; for this is a day of atonement for you, to make atonement for you before the Lord your God. ²⁹Any soul who does not humble himself on that particular day shall be exterminated from his people. ³⁰And any soul that shall do work on that particular day—that soul shall be utterly destroyed from his people. ³¹You shall do no work; it is a perpetual precept throughout your generations in all your settlements. ³²It shall be to you Sabbata of sabbaths, and you shall humble your souls; from the ninth of the month, from evening to evening you shall sabbatize on your sabbaths.

33 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ³⁴Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: On the fifteenth day of this seventh month and lasting seven days is the feast of tents to the Lord. ³⁵And the first day is designated, holy; you shall not do any work of service. ³⁶Seven days you shall present whole burnt offerings to the Lord, and the eighth day shall be designated, holy to you, and you shall present a whole burnt offering to the Lord; it is a finale; you shall not do any work of service.

37 These are the feasts to the Lord, which you shall call designated, holy, for presenting to the Lord offerings—whole burnt offerings and their sacrifices and their libations, each on its proper day—³⁸apart from the sabbaths of the Lord and apart from your gifts and apart from all your vows and apart from your voluntary gifts, which you give to the Lord.

39 Also on the fifteenth day of this seventh month, when you finish the produce of the land, you shall keep a feast to the Lord for seven days, a rest on the first day and a rest on the eighth day. ⁴⁰And on the first day you shall take ripe fruit of a tree, both brushes of palm trees and bushy branches of a tree and branches of willow and of chaste-tree from a wadi, to rejoice before the Lord your God for seven days in the year. ⁴¹It is a perpetual precept throughout your generations. You shall keep it as a feast in the seventh month. ⁴²You shall live in tents for seven days; everyone who is a native in Israel shall live in tents, ⁴³so that your generations may know that I made the sons of Israel settle in tents when I brought them out of the land of Egypt; I am the Lord your God.

44 And Moyses declared to the sons of Israel the feasts of the Lord.

24 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Command the sons of Israel, and let them take for you oil, pure olive, beaten, for light, to burn a lamp continually ³outside the veil in the tent of witness. And Aaron and his sons shall burn it from evening to morning before the Lord perpetually; it is a perpetual precept throughout your generations. ⁴You shall burn the lamps on the pure lampstand before the Lord until morning.

⁵And you shall take fine flour and make it twelve loaves; two-tenths shall be the one loaf. ⁶And you shall lay them in two piles, six loaves per one pile, on the pure table before the Lord. ⁷You shall put on the pile pure frankincense and salt, and they shall be as loaves for remembrance, set before the Lord. ⁸On the day of the sabbaths he shall set them out before the Lord continually as an everlasting covenant from the sons of Israel. ⁹And they shall be for Aaron and his sons, and they shall eat them in a holy place, for they are holy of holies; this is for him from the things sacrificed to the Lord, a perpetual precept.

¹⁰And a son of an Israelite woman (and he was the son of an Egyptian) came out among the sons of Israel, and the Israelite woman's son and the Israelite person began fighting in the camp. ¹¹And the Israelite woman's son called down a curse while naming the Name. And they brought him to Moyses—now his mother's name was Salomith daughter of Dabri of the tribe of Dan—¹²and they put him away in custody, to decide about him by the ordinance of the Lord.

¹³And the Lord said to Moyses, saying: ¹⁴Take the one who called down the curse outside the camp, and all who heard shall lay their hands on his head, and the whole congregation shall stone him. ¹⁵And speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: If a person, a person should curse God, he shall assume guilt. ¹⁶Whoever names the name of the Lord—by death let him be put to death; let the whole congregation of Israel stone him with stones. Whether a guest or a native, when he names the name, let him die. ¹⁷And a person who strikes a person's soul and he dies, by death let him be put to death. ¹⁸And whoever strikes an animal and it dies—let him repay soul for soul. ¹⁹And if anyone should give a blemish to his neighbor—as he did to him, so also shall it be done to him in return: ²⁰fracture for fracture, eye for eye, tooth for tooth; as one gives a blemish to a person, so shall it be given to him. ²¹Whoever strikes a person, and he dies, by death let him be put to death. ²²There shall be one judgment for the guest and for the inhabitant of the country; for it is I who am the Lord your God. ²³And Moyses spoke to the sons of Israel, and they brought the one who had called down the curse outside the camp and stoned him with stones. And the sons of Israel did as the Lord had instructed Moyses.

25 And the Lord spoke to Moyses on the mountain Sina, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: If you enter the land that I give you, the land which I give you, shall also rest—Sabbata to the Lord. ³Six years you shall sow your field, and six years you shall prune your vine and gather in its fruit, ⁴but in the seventh year there shall be Sabbata—a rest for the land, Sabbata for the Lord; you shall not sow your field, and you shall not prune your vine. ⁵You shall not reap completely that which sprouts by itself of your field or gather in the grapes of what is something made holy for you; it shall be a year of rest for the land. ⁶And the sabbaths of the land shall be food for you and for your male slave and your female slave and your hired laborer and for the resident alien who adheres to you, ⁷for your livestock also and for the wild animals which are in your land all its yield shall be for food.

⁸And you shall count off for yourself seven rests of years, seven times seven years, and they shall be for you seven weeks of years—forty-nine years. ⁹And you shall proclaim with the sound of the trumpet throughout all your land, in the seventh month, on the tenth of the month. On the day of atonement you shall proclaim with the trumpet throughout all your land. ¹⁰And you shall hallow the year, the fiftieth year, and you shall proclaim release on the land to all its inhabitants. It shall be a year of release; a signal this shall be for you, and each one shall depart to his possession, and each shall depart to his clan. ¹¹This is a signal of release: the fiftieth year. It shall be a year for you; you shall not sow or gather its^a spontaneous sprouts, and you shall not harvest its^a consecrated things. ¹²For it is a signal of release; it shall be a holy thing to you; from the plains you shall eat its^a produce.

¹³In the year of release, by its signal, each one shall return to his possession. ¹⁴But if you make a sale to your neighbor, even if you make an acquisition from your neighbor, let a person not oppress his neighbor. ¹⁵You shall acquire from your neighbor according to the number of years since the signal; he shall sell to you according to the number of years of produce. ¹⁶Insofar as there be an increase in years, you shall increase his tenure, and insofar as there be a decrease in years, you shall decrease his tenure, for he shall sell to you a number of yields. ¹⁷Let not a person oppress his neighbor, and you shall fear the Lord your God; it is I who am the Lord your God.

¹⁸And you shall observe all my statutes and all my judgments, and you shall guard yourselves and do them, and you shall dwell on the land feeling confident. ¹⁹And the land will yield its produce, and you will eat to satiety and dwell on it feeling confident. ²⁰But if you say, What shall we eat in this seventh year, if we do not sow or gather in our

crop? ²¹I will also send my blessing to you in the sixth year, and it will yield its crop for three years. ²²And you shall sow in the eighth year, and you will be eating from the old crop until the ninth year. When its produce comes in, you shall eat old of old things. ²³And the land shall not be sold irrevocably, for the land is mine, because before me you are guests and resident aliens. ²⁴And on the basis of all the land of your holding, you shall provide ransom for the land.

²⁵ But if your brother who is with you should become poor and should sell some of what he holds and the next of kin who is nearest should come, then he shall redeem the sale of his brother. ²⁶But if someone does not have one who is next of kin and has plenty in hand and finds for himself what is sufficient for his ransom, ²⁷then he shall compute the years of his sale and give back what he has over to the person who sold it to him, and he shall depart to his holding. ²⁸But if his hand does not find what is sufficient to give it back to him, then the sale shall belong to the one who acquired them until the year of release, and at the release it shall expire, and he shall depart to his holding.

²⁹ But if anyone sells a dwelling house in a walled city, then its redemption shall stand; until a year of days has elapsed, its redemption shall stand. ³⁰But if it is not redeemed until a full year has elapsed, the house that is in a city that has a wall shall be confirmed irrevocably to belong to its purchaser, throughout his generations, and it shall not expire in the release. ³¹But houses in farmsteads, those that have no wall around them, let them be classed as the field of the earth; these shall always be redeemed, and they shall expire in the release. ³²And as for the cities of the Leuites, the houses of the cities of their holding shall always be redeemed for the Leuites. ³³And he who redeems from the Leuites, then the sale of their houses of a city of their holding shall expire in the release, because the dwellings in the cities of the Leuites are their holding among the sons of Israel. ³⁴And the fields bordering on their cities shall not be sold; for this is their holding for all time.

³⁵ Now if your brother is needy and with you becomes weak in his hands, you shall help him as a guest and a resident alien, and your brother shall live with you. ³⁶You shall not take interest from him, not even in any amount, and you shall fear your God; I am the Lord. And your brother shall live with you. ³⁷You shall not give him your money at interest; neither shall you give him your food in excess. ³⁸I am the Lord your God, the one who brought you out from the land of Egypt, to give you the land Chanaan in order to be your God.

³⁹ Now if your brother with you is humbled and is sold to you, he shall not be subject to you with the subjection of a domestic. ⁴⁰He shall be to you as a hired laborer or a resident alien. He shall work with you until the year of the release. ⁴¹And he and his children with him shall go forth at the release, and he shall go away to his kin; he shall depart to his ancestral holding. ⁴²For they are my domestics, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt; he shall not be sold in a sale of a domestic. ⁴³You shall not abuse him with toil, and you shall fear the Lord your God. ⁴⁴And as for a male and female servant whom you may have from the nations that are around you—from them you shall acquire a male and female slave. ⁴⁵Also from the sons of the resident aliens residing among you—from these and from their families who have been born in your land you shall acquire; let them be to you as a possession. ⁴⁶And you shall distribute them to your children after you, and they shall be held in possession by you forever. But of your brothers the sons of Israel, each shall not abuse his brother with toil.

⁴⁷ If the hand of the guest or the resident alien with you finds, and if your brother, having fallen in difficulty, is sold to the guest or to the resident alien with you or to a guest by descent, ⁴⁸after he has been sold to him he shall have redemption; one of his brothers shall redeem him; ⁴⁹a brother of his father or a son of his father's brother shall redeem him, or some of his relatives who are of his own flesh, of his own tribe, shall redeem him, but if he prospers with his hands he shall redeem himself. ⁵⁰He shall compute with his purchaser from the year when he sold himself to him until the year of the release, and the amount of the sale shall be as for a hired laborer. Year by year he shall be with him. ⁵¹But if more years remain to someone, for these he shall pay his ransom from the money of his sale, ⁵²but if few years remain until the year of the release, then he shall compute for him according to his years, and he shall pay his ransom. ⁵³As a hired laborer he shall be with him year by year. You shall not abuse him with toil in your sight. ⁵⁴But if he has not been redeemed in any of these ways, he and his young children with him shall go forth in the year of release. ⁵⁵For to me the sons of Israel are domestics; these are my servants whom I brought out from the land of Egypt.

26 I am the Lord your God. You shall make for yourselves nothing made by hand nor carved, neither erect a stele of your own, nor shall you place a stone as a look-out in your land, to do obeisance to it; it is I who am the Lord your God. ²You shall keep my sabbaths and be respectful of my sanctuaries; I am the Lord.

³ If you walk by my ordinances and observe my commandments and do them, ⁴I will then give you the rain in its season, and the land shall yield its produce, and the trees of the plains shall yield their fruit. ⁵And for you the harvest shall overtake the vintage, and the vintage shall overtake the sowing, and you shall eat your bread to satiety and dwell in safety on your land, and war shall not go through your land. ⁶And I will grant peace in your land, and you shall fall asleep, and there shall be no one making you afraid, and I will destroy bad animals from your land. ⁷And you shall give chase to your enemies, and they shall fall before you by slaughter. ⁸And five of you shall give chase to a hundred, and a hundred of you shall give chase to tens of thousands, and your enemies shall fall before you by dagger. ⁹And I will look attentively upon you and increase you and multiply you, and I will establish my covenant with you. ¹⁰And you shall eat the old and the old things of the old, and you shall bring out the old out of the new. ¹¹And I will place my tent among you, and my soul shall not abhor you. ¹²And I will walk about among you and will be your God, and you shall be ^afor me a nation^a. ¹³It is I who am the Lord your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt since you were slaves, and I have shattered the bond of your yoke and led you with boldness.

¹⁴ But if you do not obey me, neither do these ordinances of mine, ¹⁵but refuse to comply with them, and your soul be angered by my judgments so that you do not carry out all my commandments so that you scatter my covenant to the wind, ¹⁶then I in turn will do thus to you, and I will gather difficulty upon you, both itch and jaundice, and your eyes as being purulent and your life as pining away. And you shall sow your seed in vain, and your adversaries shall eat it. ¹⁷And I will set my face against you, and you shall fall down before your enemies, and those who hate you shall pursue you, and you shall flee though no one pursues you. ¹⁸And if up to this point you do not obey me, then I will do more to discipline you sevenfold for your sins. ¹⁹And I will smash the insolence of your arrogance, and I will make your sky iron and your earth like copper. ²⁰And your strength shall be to no purpose, and your land shall not yield its seed time, and the tree of your field shall not yield its fruit.

²³ And if by these things you are not disciplined but walk sideways with me, ²⁴then I too will walk with you in skewed anger, and I myself will strike you sevenfold for your sins. ²⁵And I will bring against you a dagger avenging the cause of the covenant, and you will flee for refuge to your cities. And I will send death among you, and you shall be delivered into enemy hands. ²⁶When you are hard pressed for want of bread, then ten women shall bake your bread in a single oven, and they shall dole out your bread by weight, and you shall eat and never be satisfied.

²⁷ Now if by these things you do not obey me but walk sideways with me, ²⁸I myself too will walk with you in skewed anger, and it is I who will discipline you sevenfold in accordance with your sins. ²⁹And you shall eat the flesh of your sons, and you shall eat the flesh of your daughters. ³⁰And I will strip bare your steles and utterly destroy your wooden handcrafted objects, and I will place your limbs on the limbs of your idols. And my soul will be very angry with you. ³¹And I will lay your cities waste, will make your sanctuaries quite desolate, and I will not smell the odor of your sacrifices anymore. ³²And I will devastate your land, and your enemies who inhabit it shall be astonished at it. ³³And you I will scatter into the nations, and the dagger, coming by surprise, will utterly destroy you, and your land shall be desolate, and your cities shall be desolate.

³⁴ Then the land shall enjoy its sabbaths all the days of its desolation. And you shall be in the land of your enemies; then the land shall sabbatize and enjoy its sabbaths. ³⁵All the days of its desolation, it shall sabbatize what it did not sabbatize on your sabbaths when you were living on it. ³⁶And onto those of you who are left, I will send faintness into their heart in the land of their enemies, and the sound of a driven leaf shall put them to flight, and they shall flee as those who flee from battle, and they shall fall though no one pursues. ³⁷And brother shall disdain brother as in a war, though no one is running away, and you shall not be able to withstand your enemies. ³⁸And you shall perish among the nations, and the land of your enemies shall devour you. ³⁹And those of you who are left shall be corrupted because of their sins. In the land of their enemies they shall melt away.

⁴⁰ And they shall confess their sins and the sins of their fathers, because they transgressed and disdained me and because they walked sideways before me, ⁴¹and I, in turn, walked in skewed anger with them, and I shall destroy them in the land of their enemies. Then their uncircumcised heart will feel ashamed, and then they will be content with their iniquities. ⁴²And I will remember the covenant of Iakob, and I will remember the covenant of Isaak and the covenant of Abraam, and I will remember the land. ⁴³And the land shall be abandoned by them. Then the land shall accept its sabbaths while it was made desolate by them, and they themselves shall accept their lawlessness on account of which they disdained my judgments and were vexed in their soul by my ordinances. ⁴⁴And not even when they were in the land of their enemies did I ever disdain them or was angered by them so as to destroy them utterly, to scatter to the wind my covenant with them; for it is I who am the Lord their God, ⁴⁵and I will remember their former covenant when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery in the sight of the nations, to be their God; I am the Lord.

⁴⁶ These are the judgments and the ordinances and the law that the Lord established between him and between the sons of Israel on the mountain Sina by the hand of Moyses.

27 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: A person who vows a vow to the Lord, for instance the value of his life, ³the value for a male shall be: from twenty to sixty years of age the value shall be fifty didrachmas^a of silver by the sanctuary standard. ⁴But for a female the valuation shall be thirty didrachmas. ⁵Now if it is from five to twenty years of age, the value of a male shall be twenty didrachmas and of a female, ten didrachmas. ⁶And from one month to five years, the value of a male shall be five didrachmas of silver, but of a female, three didrachmas. ⁷But if from sixty years and over, if the person is a male—the value shall be fifteen didrachmas of silver, but in the case of a female ten didrachmas. ⁸And if he is base with regard to the value, he shall stand before the priest, and the priest shall assess him; in accordance with the strength of the hand of the one making the vow, the priest shall assess him.

⁹ But if a gift to the Lord be from the animals, from those that are being offered, if he gives from these to the Lord, it shall be holy. ¹⁰He shall not exchange it, either good for bad or bad for good. But if by exchanging he exchanges it, animal for animal, both that one and its substitute shall be holy. ¹¹But if a gift to the Lord is any unclean animal, from those that are not brought, he shall set the animal before the priest. ¹²And the priest shall assess it; between good and between bad, as the priest sets the value, so it shall stand. ¹³But if by redeeming, he redeems it, he shall add one-fifth to its value.

¹⁴ If a person consecrates his house holy to the Lord, then the priest shall assess it: whether between good and between bad; as the priest values it, so it shall be fixed. ¹⁵But if the one who consecrates it redeems his house, he shall add to it one-fifth of the money of its value, and it shall be his.

deems the field, then he shall add one-fifth of the money to its value, and it shall be his, ²⁰but should he not redeem the field and should sell the field to another person, he shall no longer redeem it. ²¹But when the release has expired, the field shall be holy to the Lord as the land that has been set aside; it shall be the priest's holding. ²²Now if someone consecrates to the Lord part of the field that he has purchased, which is not a part of the field of his holding, ²³the priest shall assign to it the full amount of the value from the year of release, and he shall pay the value on that day, something sacred to the Lord. ²⁴And in the year of release the field shall be given back to the person from whom he bought it, whose land-holding it had been. ²⁵And every assessment shall be by holy weights: twenty obols shall make a didrachma.

²⁶ And every firstling that may be born among your animals shall belong to the Lord, and no one shall consecrate it; whether calf or sheep, it is the Lord's. ²⁷But if it is of unclean quadrupeds, he shall make an alteration according to its assessment and add one-fifth to it. And it shall be his. But if he does not redeem, it shall be sold at its assessed value.

³⁰ Every tithe of the land from the seed of the ground and of tree-fruit is the Lord's; it^c is holy to the Lord. ³¹But if a person should by redeeming redeem his tithe, he shall add one-fifth to it, and it shall be his. ³²And every tithe of cows and sheep, and everything that may come into the count under the rod—the tithe shall be holy to the Lord. ³³You shall not exchange good for bad. But if by exchanging you exchange it, then its substitute shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS) version of Numbers is based on the critical edition prepared by John William Wevers (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum III.1: Numeri [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1982]). In addition, several of the thirty-five changes to the critical text later proposed by Wevers in his Notes on the Greek Text of Numbers ([SBLSCS 46; Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1998] 608–609) have been incorporated into NETS Numbers where these alterations affect the English translation. In such cases, differences between the critical edition (We^{ed}) and the emended text of Wevers' Notes (We^N) are evident in the footnotes to NETS. For example, in Num 21.11 the translation reads "and camped in ^bAchel Gai^b," although the edition has "and camped in Achelgai." The correction of the Notes is cited at the foot of the page as follows: ^bAchelgai = We^{ed}.

Character of the Translation

LXX Numbers may be described as quite a literal reproduction of the Hebrew that is often wooden. The translator is at times careless or inaccurate, but he can also be skillful in carrying out his task, with successful attempts to achieve consistency and to harmonize passages he is rendering.

In his 1851 analysis of LXX Numbers as a translation,¹ Zacharias Frankel came to the conclusion that it is a chance amalgam without an overall plan or purpose. However, in his Notes on the Greek Text of Numbers, which constitutes the most thorough study of LXX Numbers in modern times, Wevers offers a more balanced assessment.

On the one hand, Wevers considers the Greek translation of Numbers as "without a doubt by far the weakest volume in the Greek Pentateuch" (Notes, p. ix), with numerous examples of incompetence evidenced by gross failures to follow the rules of grammar. On the other, he also views LXX Numbers as the product of "a mind at work, making judgments at times quite astute in its approach to the task of translating holy writ" (Notes, p. xv). Despite his flaws, the translator is actively engaged in the interpretation of Scripture, making strong efforts to clarify obscure passages and sometimes even to correct what he perceives as factual errors or contradictions in the parent text.

Carelessness and Grammatical Inconsistencies

There are many apparent careless renditions and grammatical inconsistencies on the part of the translator.

A striking example of carelessness on the translator's part is at Num 9.22–23, where he omitted two pieces of the text due to homoioteleuton (i.e., his eye skipping from one Hebrew word to the same word later in the text, resulting in the omission of the words in between). In the MT, 9.22 ends with "[the Israelites] would not set out; but when it [i.e., the cloud] lifted they would set out," (וְלֹא יִסְעוּ וּבִהְעֹלְתוֹ יִסְעוּ), and v. 23 continues: "At the command of the LORD (עַל פִּי יְהוָה) they would camp, and at the command of the LORD (וְעַל פִּי יְהוָה) they would set out." LXX Numbers, however, simply reads "[the sons of Israel] . . . shall certainly not set out (καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπαρῶσι). (23) For at the ordinance of the Lord they shall set out" (ὅτι διὰ προστάγματος κυρίου ἀπαρῶσι). In these two verses, the translator's eye most likely skipped from the first "[they] would set out" to the second, resulting in loss of the intervening text ("but when it lifted" in the MT). In similar fashion, his eye seems to have skipped from the first "at the command of the LORD" to the second, resulting in loss of the intervening text ("they would camp" in the MT).

Another example of carelessness is at Num 3.25, where the translator unfortunately uses σκηῆ for both הַמִּשְׁכָּן and אֹהֶל, which gives rise to confusion, since the Hebrew here uses them coordinately: "And the guard duty of the sons of Gedson in the tent (τῆ σκηνῆ) of witness is the tent (i.e., the tabernacle) (ἡ σκηνῆ) and the screen."

Several grammatical inconsistencies are also evident. For example, we find cases where no grammatically fitting antecedent can be found in the context. Thus at 11.10 we read "and before Moyses it was evil," although there is no neuter singular word nearby. We can only presume that Moyses found it evil to hear the people weeping in their divisions, each one at his door. At 22.5 Balak sent ambassadors to Balaam son of Beor "of Pathoura, which is on the river." The translator presumably regards Pathoura as the name of a city, which would normally be feminine. However, he then refers to this noun with a relative neuter pronoun (ὃ ἐστίν, "which is").

Formulaic Patterns

A more positive view of the translator arises when other aspects of his technique are taken into account. In Num 1.2–46, for example, he shows his preference for rigidly following formulaic patterns, regardless of changes in the parent text: "according to their families, according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, according to the number of their names, according to their head, every male from twenty years and above, everyone who goes out in the force."

On occasion, a mini-pattern emerges when the translator's work is compared with the Hebrew of the MT. Num 4.41, for example, ends with a phrase: "(whom Moyses and Aaron enrolled by the voice of the Lord) by the hand of Moyses." Although not found in the MT, "by the hand of Moyses" has apparently been added in conformity to formulas found elsewhere in this chapter (cf. vv. 37, 45, 49).

Consistency and Harmonization

On numerous occasions, the translator's attempts to achieve consistency are evident. At Num 21.3, for example, he makes the account consistent with v. 2, which read: "And Israel vowed a vow to the Lord and said: 'If you deliver to me this people as subject, I will anathematize it and its towns.'" In the MT, however, v. 3 reads: "and they utterly destroyed them and their towns." LXX Numbers makes this verse consistent with the vow in v. 2 by stating: "and he anathematized him and his cities to destruction." The translator also tries to level the text by the use of harmonizations. In Num 27.18, for example, Moyses is ordered to take Iesus as his successor, "and you shall lay your hands (τὰς χεῖρας σου) upon him"—the Hebrew here has the singular "your hand" (יָדְךָ אָשֵׁת). A few verses later, this command is carried out when Moyses "laid his hands (אָשֵׁת יָדָיו) upon him." In the earlier verse the translator used the plural "your hands" in order to harmonize the readings in vv. 18 and 23. Thus, while attempting to translate the Hebrew parent text faithfully, the Greek translator did not hesitate to change specific details in order to achieve consistency and harmonization.

Standard Equivalents and Calques

As is the case for many other books of the Septuagint, LXX Numbers presents several standard equivalents for Hebrew terms. Some examples evident in LXX Numbers are found elsewhere in the Pentateuch; for example: διαθήκη ("covenant") for בְּרִית and ψυχή ("soul/ spirit") for נֶפֶשׁ. More specific to Numbers are προσκυνέω ("bow down/worship") for הִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה Hithpael; παραβολή ("illustration") for מַשָּׁל; υἱοί ("sons") for בְּנֵי (construct state in chapter 26); χίμαρον ἐξ αἰγῶν ("male goat from the goats") for עֵזִים עֵשֶׂר; ἀποσκευή ("chattel") for מַבְרָה; and δύναμις ("army/force") for צֵל.

Another feature of LXX Numbers is the translator's use of calques, i.e., Greek words with Hebrew meanings, or which at least incorporate meanings from the Hebrew parent text (see "TO THE READER OF NETS"). One prominent example of a calque is κύριος ("LORD") for the Hebrew יְהוָה. Another is διαθήκη ("covenant") for בְּרִית, which is also classified as a standard equivalent (see above).

Translation of Difficult Terms

In several cases, the translator of LXX Numbers was faced with difficult or baffling Hebrew terms, and he did his best to render them in an intelligible manner. Five examples are presented here.

Even today there is some disagreement among scholars as to the precise meaning of לֶשֶׁת in Num 11.8; our translator simply contextualized by rendering ἐγκρίς ("cake").

The puzzling words אָשֵׁת תְּנַאֲפִי—possibly meaning "my displeasure"—are found in Num 14.34 (see also Job 33.10). Here LXX Numbers gives a contextualized translation, τὸν θυμὸν τῆς ὀργῆς μου ("the wrath of my anger"), which makes good contextual sense.

The Hebrew term בְּמוֹתַי ("high places") was apparently not understood as an idolatrous place of worship at Alexandria when the translator did his work. In Numbers it is rendered by στήλαι (“steles”) at 21.28; 22.41; 33.52 (thus also Leu 26.20).

In Num 23.14 the Hebrew text tells us that Balak brought Balaam צפיה שדה (“to the field of Zophim”). Since צפיה literally means “watchers,” the translator rendered the phrase by εἰς ἀγροῦ σκοπιόν (“to a look-out [or, watchtower] of a field”).

In Num 32.33 the land of Og is called הארץ לעריה בנגבלת ערי הארץ סביב. The difficulty of providing an accurate translation is evident when the NRSV (“the land and its towns, with the territories of the surrounding towns”) is compared with the more literal Authorized Version (“the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about”). The Greek translator made reasonable sense of the Hebrew by rendering τῆν γῆν καὶ τὰς πόλεις σὺν τοῖς ὀρίοις αὐτῆς, πόλεις τῆς γῆς κυκλῶ (“the land and the cities, together with its borders, cities of the land round about”).

Major Differences in Arrangement or Structure

When LXX Numbers is compared with the MT, several variations in arrangement or structure are evident. Besides affecting verse numbering, which complicates a synoptic reading with the MT, such differences affect exegesis of the sections in which they are found, and in some cases they might affect our understanding of the textual development of the book of Numbers.

First, in the pedigree (MT “census”) of Israel found in Numbers 1, vv. 20–37 deal with the descendants of Jacob’s twelve sons in the following order: Rouben, Simeon, Ioudas, Issachar, Zaboulon, Ephraim (Ioseph’s son), Manasse (Ioseph’s son), Benjamin, Gad, Dan, Aser, and Naphtali. In contrast, the MT covers them in the order of: Reuben, Simeon, Gad, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, Ephraim (Joseph’s son), Manasseh (Joseph’s son), Benjamin, Dan, Asher, and Naphtali. The effect of the sequence in the LXX is to bring Gad into proximity with Aser (ninth and eleventh, respectively), whereas in the MT they are far apart (third and eleventh). This phenomenon is even more striking in the pedigree detailed in Num 26.5–50, where in the MT Gad is third and Asher seventh. In LXX Numbers, however, Gad is sixth and Aser is seventh. An explanation or motivation for the close proximity of Gad and Aser in the two LXX pedigrees is to be found in the list of Num 1.5–15, where Aser is tenth and Gad is eleventh (in both the MT and LXX).

Second, the arrangement of the Priestly Benediction in Num 6.22–27 differs from that in the MT: (22) And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: (23) Speak to Aaron and his sons, saying: Thus you shall bless the sons of Israel, saying to them—24(27 MT) and they shall put my name on the sons of Israel, and I the Lord will bless them—25(24 MT) May the Lord bless you and keep you; 26(25 MT) may the Lord make his face shine upon you and show mercy to you; 27(26 MT) may the Lord lift up his face upon you and give you peace.

The final passage involves another pedigree (MT “census”), this time of the new generation who will live on to conquer the Promised Land. In the Greek, 26.15–47 mention the following descendants of nine of Iacob’s sons: Ioudas, Issachar, Zaboulon, Gad, Aser, Manasse (Ioseph’s son), Ephraim (Ioseph’s son), Benjamin, and Dan. In the MT, however, the order is somewhat different (equivalent to 26.19–27, 15–18, 44–47, 28–43 in the LXX): Gad, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, Manasseh (Joseph’s son), Ephraim (Joseph’s son), Benjamin, Dan, and Asher.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF NUMBERS

Policy on Gender Language and Translating in a Literal Manner

NETS generally follows the gender language policy adopted by the NRSV with respect to human beings. However, departures from the NRSV in this regard are quite common in NETS Numbers, for two main reasons. First, the translation presented here is quite literal, in an attempt to reflect the Greek relationship to its source. Second, in accordance with its stated goal with respect to gender, the NRSV sometimes avoids terms that are clearly masculine in the Hebrew, substituting instead ones that are more neutral. This course has generally not been followed in the NETS translation.

The challenges presented and decisions made are illustrated in Num 1.2. Here NETS reads: “Take a sum total of the whole congregation of the sons of Israel (NRSV: “of Israelites”), according to their families, according to their paternal houses (NRSV: “by ancestral houses”).” The Greek translator rendered וְשָׂרָאֵל with υἱοὶ Ἰσραήλ (“the sons of Israel”) and לְבֵיֵת אֲבוֹתָם with κατ’ οἴκους πατρῶν αὐτῶν (“according to the houses of their paternal families”). While the more literal renderings given here do not accord with the NRSV’s policy with respect to gender neutral language, for this verse and many like it the NETS Numbers is based on the overriding principle of translating what the Greek actually says.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

As indicated above, the New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS) version of Numbers is based on John W. Wevers' critical edition with frequent reference to his Notes on the Greek Text of Numbers. I have also consulted the earlier edition by Alfred Rahlfs (1935). A most helpful research tool has been the Accordance Software for Biblical Studies program (produced by OakTree Software, Inc.). The standard English translation by Brenton has provided many valuable insights. Various scholarly articles in the BIOSCS and some chapters in the Congress volumes of the IOSCS have also provided relevant information and cogent insights.

Personal discussions and interactions with other NETS translators—especially those translating the other four books of the Pentateuch—have been instructive and illuminating.

I especially acknowledge the expert help and input of Albert Pietersma, co-editor (with Benjamin Wright) of the NETS project. By publishing the first translation in the NETS project (The Psalms) as well as the NETS Manual, Professor Pietersma has produced a paradigm and a roadmap for the other translators to follow, each, of course, with his or her own adaptations. Above all, I am most grateful to this leader and mentor in our field for providing detailed communications with me and the other translators as we worked and for helping me avoid several pitfalls by checking this translation with care and in detail.

PETER W. FLINT

1 And the Lord spoke to Moyses in the wilderness of Sina, in the tent of witness, on the first of the second month of the second year after they had come out of the land of Egypt, saying: ²Take a sum total of the whole congregation of the sons of Israel, according to their families, according to their paternal houses, according to number by their names, according to their head—³every male ⁽³⁾from twenty years and above, everyone who goes out in Israel's force. 44 This is the enrollment which Moyses and Aaron and the rulers of Israel, twelve men, enrolled—one man for one tribe, according to the tribe of their paternal houses. ⁴⁵And the whole enrollment of the sons of Israel with their force from twenty years and above, everyone who would go out to do battle in Israel was ⁴⁶six hundred three thousand and five hundred fifty. ⁴⁷But the Leuites from their paternal tribe were not enrolled among the sons of Israel.

48 And the Lord had spoken to Moyses, saying: ⁴⁹See to it that you do not enroll the tribe of Leui and that you do not take their number amidst the sons of Israel. ⁵⁰And you shall appoint the Leuites over the tent of witness and over all its furnishings and over all the things that are in it; they shall carry the tent and all its furnishings, and they shall minister in it, and they shall encamp around the tent. ⁵¹And when the tent sets out, the Leuites shall take it down, and when the tent encamps, they shall erect it. And let the alien who comes near die. ⁵²And the sons of Israel shall encamp, a man in his own unit and a man according to his own rank, together with their force, ⁵³but let the Leuites encamp opposite, around the tent of witness, and there shall be no offense among the sons of Israel. And the Leuites themselves shall keep guard duty over the tent of witness. ⁵⁴And the sons of Israel did according to all that the Lord commanded Moyses and Aaron; so they did.

2 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²Let the sons of Israel encamp—^aa person next to him^a, according to unit, according to ensigns, according to their paternal houses—opposite round about the tent of witness let the sons of Israel encamp. ³And those who encamp first towards the east: the unit of the camp of Ioudas with their force. They shall set out last, according to their unit.

32 This was the enrollment of the sons of Israel according to their paternal houses; the total enrollment of the camps with their forces: six hundred and three thousand, five hundred fifty. ³³But the Leuites were not enrolled among them, just as the Lord had commanded Moyses.

34 And the sons of Israel did everything that the Lord had instructed Moyses. So they encamped according to their unit, and so they set out, each in order according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses.

3 And these are the generations of Aaron and Moyses in the day when the Lord spoke to Moyses in Mount Sina. ²And these are the names of the sons of Aaron: the firstborn Nadab and Abioud, Eleazar and Ithamar. ³These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the anointed priests, whose hands they had validated to serve as priests. ⁴And Nadab and Abioud died before the Lord, when they offered strange fire before the Lord in the wilderness of Sina. But they had no children, and Eleazar and Ithamar served as priests with Aaron their father.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ⁶Take the tribe of Leui, and you shall place them before Aaron the priest, and they shall minister to him, ⁷and they shall keep his guard duties and the guard duties of the sons of Israel before the tent of witness to perform the works of the tent. ⁸And they shall keep all the furnishings of the tent of witness, and the guard duties of the sons of Israel according to all the works of the tent. ⁹And you shall give the Leuites to Aaron and to his sons the priests; these have been given as a gift to me from the sons of Israel. ¹⁰And you shall appoint Aaron and his sons over the tent of witness, and they shall keep guard of their priesthood and all the things pertaining to the based-altar and within the veil, but the alien who touches them shall die.

11 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹²And, behold, I have taken the Leuites from the midst of the sons of Israel in place of every firstborn that opens the womb among the sons of Israel. They shall be their ransom, and the Leuites shall be mine. ¹³For every firstborn is mine; in the day when I struck every firstborn in the land of Egypt, I consecrated to me every firstborn in Israel from human to animal; they shall be mine. I am the Lord.

14 And the Lord spoke to Moyses in the wilderness of Sina, saying: ¹⁵Enroll the sons of Leui according to their paternal houses, according to their divisions, according to their families; every male from a month and above, you shall enroll them. ¹⁶And Moyses and Aaron enrolled them by the voice of the Lord, in which manner the Lord had instructed them. ¹⁷And these were the sons of Leui, by their names: Gedson, Kaath and Merari. ¹⁸And these are the names of the sons of Gedson according to their divisions: Lobeni and Simei. ¹⁹And the sons of Kaath according to their divisions: Amram and Issaar, Chebron and Oziel. ²⁰And the sons of Merari according to their divisions: Mooli and Mousi. These are the divisions of the Leuites according to their paternal houses.

27 For Kaath, the Amramis division and the Isaaris division and the Chebronis division and the Ozielis division; these were the divisions of Kaath. ²⁸According to number, every male from a month and above were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping guard duty over the holy things. ²⁹The divisions of the sons of Kaath shall encamp to the side of the tent towards the southwest. ³⁰And the ruler of the paternal house of the divisions of Kaath is Elisaphan son of Oziel. ³¹And their guard duty is the ark and the table and the lampstand and the altars and the furnishings of the holy place with which they shall minister and the covering and all their tasks. ³²And the ruler over the rulers of the Leuites is Eleazar son of Aaron the priest, having been appointed to keep guard duties over the holy things.

33 For Merari, the Mooli division and the Mousi division; these are the divisions of Merari. ³⁴Their enrollment according to number, every male from a month old and above, is six thousand and fifty. ³⁵And the ruler of the paternal house of the division of Merari is Zouriel son of Abichail; they shall encamp to the side of the tent towards the north. ³⁶The oversight, the guard duty of the sons of Merari, is the capitals of the tent and its bars and its pillars and its bases and all their furniture and their works ³⁷and the pillars of the court all around and their bases and their pegs and their cords.

38 And those encamping before the tent of witness on the east are Moyses and Aaron and his sons, keeping guard duty over the holy place, for the guard duties of the sons of Israel, but the alien who touches it shall die. ³⁹The total enrollment of the Leuites, whom Moyses and Aaron enrolled by the voice of the Lord according to their divisions, every male from a month old and above, is twenty-two thousand.

40 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: Enroll every firstborn male of the sons of Israel from a month old and above, and take their number by name. ⁴¹But you shall take the Leuites for me—I am the Lord—in place of all the firstborn of the sons of Israel, and the flocks of the Leuites in place of all the firstborn in the flocks of the sons of Israel. ⁴²And Moyses enrolled, in which manner the Lord had commanded, every firstborn among the sons of Israel. ⁴³And all the firstborn males from a month and above, according to number by name, from a month old and above, are by their enrollment twenty-two thousand, two hundred seventy-three.

44 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ⁴⁵Take the Leuites in place of all the firstborn of the sons of Israel, and the flocks of the Leuites in place of their flocks, and the Leuites shall be mine. I am the Lord. ⁴⁶And as the ransom of the two hundred seventy-three from the firstborn of the sons of Israel, who exceed the Leuites in number, ⁴⁷you shall also take five shekels per head. You shall take according to the holy didrachma, twenty ty obols to the shekel. ⁴⁸And you shall give the money to Aaron and his sons—ransom of those who exceed in number among them. ⁴⁹And Moyses took the money, the ransom of those who exceeded in number, for the redemption of the Leuites; ⁵⁰from the firstborn of the sons of Israel, he took the money, one thousand three hundred sixty-five shekels, according to the holy shekel. ⁵¹And Moyses gave the ransom of those who exceeded Aaron and his sons in number, by the voice of the Lord, in which manner the Lord had instructed Moyses.

4 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²Take the sum total of the sons of Kaath from amidst the sons of Leui, according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, ³from twenty-five years and above until fifty years, every one who enters in to minister, to perform all the tasks in the tent of witness. ⁴And these are the tasks of the sons of Kaath in the tent of witness, the holy of holies.

5 And Aaron and his sons shall go in, whenever the camp sets out, and shall take down the shadowing veil and cover with it the ark of witness, ⁶and they shall put on it^a a covering of blue leather and throw on it^b a wholly blue cloth above and insert the carrying-poles. ⁷And over the presentation table they shall throw over it a wholly purple cloth, and the bowls and the censers and the ladles and the libation cups, with which he^c libates, and the perpetual loaves shall be on it. ⁸And they shall put over it a scarlet cloth and cover it with a covering of blue leather and insert the carrying-poles through it. ⁹And they shall take a blue cloth and cover the lampstand, which gives light, and its lamps and its snuffers and its pouring vessels and all the vessels of oil with which they minister, ¹⁰and they shall put it and all of its implements into a covering of blue leather and place it upon carrying-poles. ¹¹And over the golden altar they shall cover a blue cloth and cover it with a covering of blue leather and insert its carrying-poles. ¹²And they shall take all the ministry implements with which they minister in the sanctuary^d and put them into a blue cloth and cover them with a covering of blue leather and put them on carrying-poles, ¹³and he^c shall put the cover upon the altar, and they shall cover it with a wholly purple cloth. ¹⁴And they shall put on it all the implements, with as many as they minister with them, and the firepans and the meat hooks and the saucers and the cover and all the implements of the altar, and they shall put on it a cover of blue leather and insert its carrying-poles. And they shall take purple cloth and cover up the washbasin and its base, and they shall put them into a covering of blue leather and place them on poles. ¹⁵And Aaron and his sons shall finish covering the sanctuary^d and all the holy implements, when the camp sets out, and after this the sons of Kaath shall enter to carry them, but they shall not touch the holy things, lest they die. These things in the tent of witness the sons of Kaath shall carry.

16 The overseer is Eleazar son of Aaron the priest—the oil of the light and the incense of the mixture and the daily sacrifice and the anointing oil—the oversight of the entire tent and as many things that are in it in the holy place, in all the works.

17 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ¹⁸You shall not destroy from the tribe the division of Kaath from the midst of the Leuites. ¹⁹You shall do this for them, and they will live and surely not die, when they approach the holy of holies: let Aaron and his sons come forward, and they shall appoint them, each according to his office of bearing—²⁰and they shall by no means enter in suddenly to see the holy things and die.

21 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²²Take the sum total of the sons of Gedson and those according to their paternal houses, according to their divisions; ²³from twenty-five years and above to fifty years enroll them, everyone who goes out to minister and perform his tasks in the tent of witness. ²⁴This is the ministry of the division of Gedson, to minister and to carry, ²⁵and it^a shall carry the skins of the tent, both the tent of witness and its veil and the blue veil which is upon it above and the veil of the door of the tent of witness ²⁶and the curtains of the court, as many as were upon the tent of witness, and the remaining items and all the ministry implements, and they shall handle as many as those with which they minister. ²⁷According to the mouth of Aaron and his sons shall be the ministry of the sons of Gedson, in all their services and in all the things borne through them, and you shall enroll them by name with respect to all the things borne by them. ²⁸This is the ministry of the sons of Gedson in the tent of witness, and their guard duty shall be in the hand of Ithamar son of Aaron the priest.

29 As for the sons of Merari, according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, enroll them; ³⁰from twenty-five years and above to fifty years, enroll them—everyone going in to minister in the tasks of the tent of witness. ³¹And these are the requirements of the things borne by them according to all their tasks in the tent of witness: the capitals of the tent and its bars and its pillars and its bases ³²and the pillars of the court all around and their bases and the pillars of the veil for the gate of the court and their bases and their pegs and their cords and all their implements and all their objects used in worship—enroll them by name, and all the implements of the guard duty of the things borne by them. ³³This is the ministry of the division of Merari's sons in all their tasks in the tent of witness, by the hand of Ithamar son of Aaron the priest.

34 And Moyses and Aaron and the rulers of Israel enrolled the sons of Kaath according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, ³⁵from twenty-five years and above to fifty years—everyone going in to minister and to perform tasks in the tent of witness, ³⁶and their enrollment, according to their divisions, was two thousand seven hundred fifty. ³⁷This was the enrollment of the division of Kaath, everyone who was ministering in the tent of witness, just as Moyses and Aaron enrolled by the voice of the Lord by the hand of Moyses.

38 And the sons of Gedson were enrolled according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, ³⁹from twenty-five years and above to fifty years, everyone going in to minister and perform the tasks in the tent of witness. ⁴⁰And their enrollment, according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, was two thousand six hundred thirty. ⁴¹This was the enrollment of the division of the sons of Gedson, everyone who was ministering in the tent of witness, whom Moyses and Aaron enrolled by the voice of the Lord by the hand of Moyses.

42 And there were enrolled also the division of the sons of Merari according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, ⁴³from twenty-five years and above to fifty years, everyone going in to minister, for the tasks of the tent of witness. ⁴⁴And their enrollment, according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, was three thousand and two hundred. ⁴⁵This was the enrollment of the division of Merari's sons, whom Moyses and Aaron enrolled by the voice of the Lord by the hand of Moyses.

46 All those who were enrolled, whom Moyses and Aaron and the rulers of Israel enrolled—the Leuites according to their divisions, according to their paternal houses, ⁴⁷from twenty-five years and above to fifty years—everyone who was going in for the task of the works and for the tasks that were borne in the tent of witness, ⁴⁸and those enrolled were eight thousand five hundred eighty. ⁴⁹He enrolled them by the voice of the Lord by the hand of Moyses, man by man with regard to their tasks and with regard to the things they were bearing. And they were enrolled, in which manner the Lord had instructed Moyses.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Order the sons of Israel, and let them send away from the camp everyone who is leprous and everyone who has a discharge and everyone who is an unclean person regarding a soul^b. ³From male to female you shall send away outside the camp, and they shall not defile their camps in which I dwell among them. ⁴And the sons of Israel did so and sent them away outside the camp; just as the Lord spoke to Moyses, so the sons of Israel did.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ⁶Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: Man or woman, if anyone commits one of the human sins and in disregarding disregards and that individual commits an offense, ⁷he shall confess the sin which he has committed, and he shall pay back the full sum for the error, and a fifth part of it shall he add to it, and he shall pay the one whom he wronged.⁸ But if the person has no near relative to compensate him for the error to him, the error compensated to the Lord shall be for the priest, except for the ram of atonement through which he shall make atonement by it for him.⁹ And every first fruit with respect to all the sanctified things among the sons of Israel, whatever they offer to the Lord for the priest shall be his.¹⁰ And the sanctified things of each shall be his, and if a man gives to the priest, it shall belong to him.

11 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:¹² Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: ^aMan by man—if his wife goes astray and disregards him, despising him,¹³ and if anyone ^bsleeps with her in a union of seed^b and escapes the notice of her husband's eyes and she conceals it—although she is defiled—and there is no witness with her and she has not been caught¹⁴ and if a spirit of jealousy comes upon him, and he becomes jealous of his wife but she has defiled herself or if a spirit of jealousy comes upon him and he becomes jealous of his wife but she is not defiled,¹⁵ then the man shall bring his wife to the priest, and he shall offer the gift concerning her: one-tenth of an ophi^c of barley flour. He shall pour no oil upon it, nor shall he put frankincense upon it, for it is a sacrifice of jealousy, a sacrifice of remembrance, recalling an offense.

16 And the priest shall bring her forward and place her before the Lord.¹⁷ And the priest shall take pure, living water in an earthen vessel and some of the dust that is on the floor of the tent of witness, and after taking it, the priest shall cast it into the water.¹⁸ And the priest shall set the woman before the Lord and uncover the woman's head and place upon her hands the sacrifice of remembrance, the sacrifice of jealousy—but in the priest's hand shall be the water of this reproof that brings the curse.¹⁹ And the priest shall make her take an oath and say to the woman, "If no one has slept with you, if you have not gone astray to become defiled while under your own husband, be innocent from the water of this reproof that brings the curse."²⁰ But if you have gone astray being under your husband or if you have defiled yourself and someone besides your husband has ^dmade his bed^d with you,²¹ then the priest shall make the woman take an oath by the oaths of this curse, and the priest shall say to the woman, "May the Lord make you as a curse and bound by oath in the midst of your people, when the Lord makes your thigh fall to pieces and your womb swell,²² and this water that brings the curse shall enter your belly, to swell the belly and make your thigh fall to pieces." And the woman shall say, "May it be; may it be!"

23 And the priest shall write these curses on a scroll and shall wipe them out into the water of reproof that brings the curse.²⁴ And he shall have the woman drink the water of reproof that brings the curse, and the curse-bringing water of reproof shall enter her.²⁵ And the priest shall take from the woman's hand the sacrifice of jealousy, and he shall place the sacrifice before the Lord and bring it to the altar.²⁶ And from the sacrifice the priest shall take a handful as its memorial and offer it upon the altar, and afterwards he shall have the woman drink the water.²⁷ And it shall be, if she is defiled and has escaped her husband's notice by stealth, then the water of reproof that brings the curse shall enter her, and she shall be swelled up in her belly, and her thigh shall fall to pieces, and the woman shall become a curse among her people.²⁸ But if the woman was not defiled and is pure, then she shall be innocent and shall ^eseed seed^e.

29 This is the law of jealousy, in case a woman who is under her husband goes astray and is defiled³⁰ or in case a man on whom a spirit of jealousy comes and he becomes jealous of his wife. And he shall place his wife before the Lord, and the priest shall apply this entire law to her.³¹ And the man shall be innocent of sin, but that woman shall bear her sin.

6 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:² Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: Man or woman, whoever especially vows a pure vow to the Lord to purify himself³ from wine and sikera^f, he shall be purified from wine, and vinegar from wine and vinegar from sikera^f he shall not drink. And whatever is prepared from the grape he shall not drink, and he shall not eat fresh grapes and raisins.⁴ All the days of his vow, of all the things that come from the vine, wine from pressed grapes to grape-stone seed he shall not consume.

5 All the days of his vow of purification a razor shall not come upon his head until the days be fulfilled, as many as he vowed to the Lord; he shall be holy, letting the hair of his head grow into a mane.

6 All the days of the vow to the Lord, he shall not enter for any dead souls,⁷ for father and for mother and for brother and for sister; he shall not be defiled for them when they have died, because a vow of his god is upon him, upon his head.⁸ For all the days of his vow, he shall be holy to the Lord.

9 Now if someone dies suddenly nearby him, at once the head of his vow shall be defiled, and he shall shave his head on whatever day he be cleansed; on the seventh day he shall be shaved.¹⁰ And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtledoves or two young doves to the priest at the entrance of the tent of witness.¹¹ And the priest shall offer one for sin and one for a whole burnt offering and the priest shall make atonement on his behalf for the things in which he sinned concerning the souls, and he shall sanctify his head on that day¹² on which he was consecrated to the Lord for the days of the vow, and he shall bring a year-old male lamb for error, and the previous days shall not be reckoned, because the head of his vow was defiled.

13 And this is the rule for the one who has taken a vow. On whatever day he fulfills the days of his vow, he shall personally bring an offering to the entrance of the tent of witness,¹⁴ and he shall bring his gift to the Lord: one year-old male lamb without blemish for a whole burnt offering and one year-old ewe lamb without blemish for sin and one ram without blemish for deliverance¹⁵ and a basket of unleavened bread of fine flour, loaves mixed with oil and unleavened cakes anointed with oil and their sacrifice and their libation.¹⁶ And the priest shall bring an offering before the Lord, and he shall do his victim for sin and his whole burnt offering.¹⁷ And he shall make the ram an offering for deliverance to the Lord, along with the basket of unleavened bread, and the priest shall do his sacrifice and his libation.¹⁸ And the one who made a vow shall shave the head of his vow at the entrance of the tent of witness, and he shall place the hair upon the fire, which is under the sacrifice of deliverance.¹⁹ And the priest shall take the boiled shoulder from the ram and one unleavened loaf from the basket and one unleavened cake, and he shall place them upon the hands of the one who had made a vow, after he has his vow shaved.²⁰ And the priest shall offer them as an addition before the Lord; it shall be holy for the priest beside the breast of the addition and beside the shoulder of the advance deduction; after this, the one who has made a vow shall drink wine.

21 This is the rule for the one who makes a vow, whoever vows his gift to the Lord, concerning his vow, apart from what his hand might find, according to the strength of his vow, which he vows according to the law of purity.

22 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:²³ Speak to Aaron and his sons, saying: Thus you shall bless the sons of Israel, saying to them—²⁴(27) and they shall put my name on the sons of Israel, and I the Lord will bless them—

²⁵(24) May the Lord bless you and keep you;

²⁷(26) may the Lord lift up his face upon you and give you peace.

7 And it came to pass on the day in which Moyses finished so as to set up the tent, and he anointed it and consecrated it and all its furnishings and the altar and all its utensils, and he anointed them and consecrated them.² And the rulers of Israel, twelve rulers of their paternal houses, offered. These were rulers of the tribes; these were the ones who presided over the overseeing.³ And they brought their gift before the Lord: six covered wagons and twelve cattle, a wagon from two rulers and a calf from each, and they advanced before the tent.⁴ And the Lord said to Moyses, saying:⁵ Take from them, and they shall be for the ministry tasks of the tent of witness, and you shall give them to the Leuites, to each one according to his service.⁶ And Moyses took the wagons and the cattle and gave them to the Leuites.⁷ Two wagons and four cattle he gave to the sons of Gedson according to their ministries,⁸ and four wagons and eight cattle he gave to the sons of Merari according to their ministries, through Ithamar son of Aaron the priest.⁹ And to the sons of Kaath he did not give, because they have the objects used in worship of the holy place; they shall carry them upon their shoulders.

10 And the rulers offered for the dedication of the altar in the day on which he anointed it, and the rulers offered their gift before the altar.¹¹ And the Lord said to Moyses: One ruler each day, a ruler each day, they shall offer their gift for the dedication of the altar.

12 And the one offering his gift on the first day was Naasson son of Aminadab, ruler of the tribe of Ioudas.¹³ And he offered his gift: one silver bowl, its weight one hundred and thirty, one silver saucer, seventy shekels according to the holy shekel, both full of fine flour mixed with oil, for a sacrifice,¹⁴ one censer of ten gold pieces, full of incense,¹⁵ one bull calf from the cattle, one ram, one year-old male lamb for a whole burnt offering¹⁶ and one male goat from the goats for sin,¹⁷ and for an offering of deliverance two heifers, five rams, five male goats, five year-old ewe lambs. 89 When Moyses went into the tent of witness to speak with him^c, then he heard the voice of the Lord speaking to him from above the propitiatory, which is upon the ark of witness, between the two cherubim, and he was speaking to him.

8 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Speak to Aaron, and you shall say to him: When you set up the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light from the side in front of the lamp-stand. ³And Aaron did so; from the one side facing the lampstand he lit its lamps, just as the Lord instructed Moyses. ⁴And this is the construction of the lampstand: solid golden, its stem and its lilies, totally solid; according to the pattern that the Lord showed Moyses, so he made the lampstand.

9 And the Lord spoke to Moyses in the wilderness of Sina, in the second year after they went out of the land of Egypt, in the first month, saying: ²Speak, and let the sons of Israel keep the pascha according to its season. ³On the fourteenth day of the first month towards evening, you shall keep it according to appointed times; according to its law and according to its interpretation you shall keep it. ⁴And Moyses told the sons of Israel to keep the pascha. ⁵When the month began, on the fourteenth day, in the wilderness of Sina, just as the Lord instructed Moyses, so the sons of Israel did. ⁶And the men came near, who were unclean regarding a human soul^c, and they were not able to keep the pascha in that day, and they came before Moyses and Aaron in that day. ⁷And those men said to him, "We are unclean regarding a human soul^c. Surely, then, we are not to fail to offer the gift to the Lord according to its appointed time in the midst of Israel's sons?" ⁸And Moyses spoke to them, "Stand here, and I shall hear what the Lord shall command concerning you."

⁹ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁰Speak to the sons of Israel, saying: ^dPerson by person^d—whoever is unclean regarding a human soul^c or is on a journey far off to you or among your families shall also keep the pascha to the Lord. ¹¹In the second month, on the fourteenth day, towards evening they shall keep it; with unleavened bread and bitter herbs they shall eat it. ¹²They shall leave none of it until morning, and they shall not break a bone from it; according to the law of the pascha they shall keep it. ¹³And a person who is pure and is not on a journey far off and fails to keep the pascha, that soul shall be totally destroyed from his people; because he did not offer his gift to the Lord according to its appointed time, that person shall receive his sin. ¹⁴Now if a guest comes to you in your land, he also shall keep the pascha to the Lord; according to the law of the pascha and according to its organization, so shall he keep it; there shall be one law for you and for the guest and for the native of the land.

¹⁵ And on the day on which the tent was set up, the cloud covered the tent, the house of witness, and in the evening upon the tent it was like the appearance of fire until morning. ¹⁶So it was all the time; the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire during the night. ¹⁷And when the cloud rose up from the tent, after that also the sons of Israel departed, and in the place where the cloud stood, there the sons of Israel encamped. ¹⁸At the ordinance of the Lord the sons of Israel shall encamp, and at the ordinance of the Lord they shall set out; all the days in which the cloud casts a shadow over the tent, the sons of Israel shall encamp. ¹⁹And when the cloud is drawn over the tent for rather many days, also the sons of Israel shall keep the guard duty of God, and they shall certainly not set out. ²⁰And it shall be, when the cloud casts a shadow over the tent for days in number, at the voice of the Lord they shall encamp, and at the ordinance of the Lord they shall set out. ²¹And it shall be, when the cloud occurs from evening until morning and the cloud rises up in the morning, then they shall set out by day or by night, and when the cloud rises up, they shall set out. ²²In a day or a month—as a day prolongs while the cloud keeps casting a shadow over it^a, the sons of Israel shall encamp and shall certainly not set out. ²³For at the ordinance of the Lord they shall set out. They kept the guard duty of the Lord at the ordinance of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

10 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Make for yourself two silver trumpets; you shall make them beaten, and they shall be for you to summon the congregation and to remove the camps. ³And you shall trumpet with them^b, and all the congregation shall be gathered together at the door of the tent of witness. ⁴But if they trumpet with one, all the rulers shall come to you, chiefs of Israel. ⁵And you shall trumpet a signal, and the camps encamping on the east shall set out. ⁶And you shall trumpet a second signal, and the camps encamping on the southwest shall set out. And you shall trumpet a third signal, and the camps encamping along the sea shall set out. And you shall trumpet a fourth signal, and the camps encamping towards the north shall set out. They shall trumpet with a signal at their departure. ⁷And whenever you gather the congregation, you shall trumpet, but not with a signal. ⁸And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall trumpet with the trumpets, and it shall be to you a perpetual precept for your generations. ⁹And if you go out to war in your land against the adversaries who oppose you, you shall also give a signal with the trumpets, and you shall be remembered before the Lord, and you shall escape to safety from your enemies. ¹⁰And in the days of your gladness and at your feasts and at your new moons, you shall trumpet with the trumpets over the whole burnt offerings and over your sacrifices of deliverance, and it shall be for you a reminder before your God. I am the Lord your God.

¹¹ And it happened in the second year, in the second month, on the twentieth of the month, the cloud rose up from the tent of witness. ¹²And the sons of Israel set out with their equipment in the wilderness of Sina, and the cloud stood in the wilderness of Pharan. ¹³And the first ones set out by the voice of the Lord, by the hand of Moyses. ¹⁴And a camp unit of Ioudas' sons were the first to set out together with their force, and over their force was Naasson son of Aminadab, ¹⁵and over the force of the tribe of Issachar's sons was Nathanael son of Sogar, ¹⁶and over the force of the tribe of Zaboulon's sons was Eliab son of Chailon.

¹⁷ And they shall take down the tent, and the sons of Gedson and the sons of Merari shall set out, carrying the tent. ¹⁸And a camp unit of Rouben set out together with their force, and over their force was Elisour son of Sediour, ¹⁹and over the force of the tribe of Symeon's sons was Salamiel son of Sourisadai, ²⁰and over the force of the tribe of Gad's sons was Elisaph the son of Ragouel.

²⁹ And Moyses said to Hobab son of Ragouel the Midianite, Moyses' brother-in-law^c, "We are setting out for the place of which the Lord said, 'This I will give to you.' Come with us, and we will treat you well, for the Lord has spoken fine things concerning Israel." ³⁰But he said to him, "I will not go; rather, I will go to my land and to my kindred." ³¹And he said, "Do not leave us, on account of the fact that you were with us in the wilderness, and you will be an elder among us. ³²And it shall be, if you go with us and those good things shall occur with which the Lord benefits us, we will also treat you well."

³⁴⁽³⁵⁾ And it happened when the ark set out, then Moyses said,

"Be aroused, O Lord, let your enemies be scattered;

let all those who hate you flee!"

³⁵⁽³⁶⁾ And when it came to rest he said,

"Turn, O Lord, the thousands, the myriads in Israel."

³⁶⁽³⁴⁾ And the cloud came, overshadowing them by day, when they set out from the camp.

11 And the people were muttering wicked things before the Lord, and the Lord heard and was angered with wrath. And fire was kindled among them from the Lord, and it devoured a certain part of the camp. ²And the people cried out to Moyses, and Moyses prayed to the Lord, and the fire abated. ³And the name of that place was called Burning, because fire was kindled among them from the Lord.

⁴ And the rabble^a among them craved with desire, and after they sat down, they wept—also the sons of Israel—and said, “Who shall feed us with meat? ⁵We remembered the fish that we used to eat in Egypt for nothing, and the cucumbers and the melons and the leeks and the onions and the garlic. ⁶But now our soul is parched; our eyes are towards nothing except the manna.”

¹⁰ And Moyses heard them weeping in their divisions, each one at his door. And the Lord was greatly angered with wrath, and before Moyses it was evil. ¹¹And Moyses said to the Lord, “Why have you mistreated your attendant, and why have I not found favor before you, to lay the onslaught of this people upon me? ¹²Was it I who carried in the womb all this people, or was it I who gave birth to them, that you are saying to me, ‘Take them to your bosom, as a nurse might take up the sucking child,’ into the land, which you swore to their fathers? ¹³From where do I get meat to give to all this people? For they are weeping to me, saying, ‘Give us meat so that we may eat!’ ¹⁴I shall not be able to bear this people alone, because this thing is too heavy for me. ¹⁵But if this is how you are going to treat me, kill me by slaying if I have found mercy with you so that I may not see my suffering.”

¹⁶ And the Lord said to Moyses, “Gather for me seventy men from the elders of Israel, whom you personally know that they are elders of the people and are their scribes, and you shall lead them to the tent of witness, and they shall stand there with you. ¹⁷And I will come down and speak there with you, and I will remove some of the spirit that is upon you, and I will place it upon them, and they shall assist you with the onslaught of the people, and you will not bear them alone. ¹⁸And you shall say to the people: Purify yourselves for tomorrow, and you shall eat meat; for you wept before the Lord, saying, ‘Who shall feed us with meat? For it was well for us in Egypt,’ and the Lord will give you meat to eat, and you shall eat meat. ¹⁹You shall not eat one day, nor two, nor five days, nor ten days, nor twenty days—²⁰up to a month of days you shall eat until it comes out of your nostrils and shall become as cholera to you, because you disobeyed the Lord who is among you and you wept before him, saying, ‘What did we do, to come out of Egypt?’” ²¹And Moyses said, “The people whom I am among are six hundred thousand on foot—and you said, ‘Meat I will give them, and they will eat for a month of days!’ ²²Shall sheep and cattle really be slain for them, and will this be enough for them? Or shall all the food of the sea be gathered together for them, and will this be enough for them?” ²³And the Lord said to Moyses, “Will the Lord’s hand not be sufficient? Now you shall know whether my word will overtake you or not.”

²⁴ And Moyses went out and spoke to the people the words of the Lord, and he gathered seventy men from the elders of the people, and he placed them around the tent. ²⁵And the Lord came down in a cloud and spoke to him and took away some of the spirit that was upon him and put it upon the seventy men who were elders. Now as the spirit rested upon them, they also prophesied, and they no longer added.

²⁶ And two men were left in the camp, the name of the one Eldad and the name of the second Modad, and the spirit rested upon them. And these were among the ones who had been registered, and they did not go to the tent, and they prophesied in the camp. ²⁷And the young man ran out and reported to Moyses and spoke, saying, “Eldad and Modad are prophesying in the camp.” ²⁸And Iesous the son of Naue, the one who stood by Moyses, the chosen one, said, “O Sir Moyses—stop them!” ²⁹And Moyses said to him, “Are you really jealous for me? And who might grant that all the Lord’s people be prophets, when the Lord grants his spirit upon them?” ³⁰And Moyses departed into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

³¹ And a wind went out from the Lord, and it brought quail^b over from the sea, and it cast them upon the camp, a day’s journey on this side and a day’s journey on the other side, all around the camp, about two cubits in height from the ground. ³²And the people rose up all the day and all the night and all the next day and gathered the quail^b. He who gathered little gathered ten kors^c, and they ^ddried them for themselves with dryings^d around the camp. ³³The meat was still between their teeth before it ^eexpired^e, and the Lord became angry against the people, and the Lord struck among the people with a very great plague. ³⁴And the name of that place was called Tombs of Craving, because there they buried the people that craved. ³⁵From Tombs of Craving the people set out for Haseroth, and the people were in Haseroth.

12 And Mariam and Aaron spoke against Moyses on account of the Ethiopian woman whom Moyses had taken, because he had taken an Ethiopian woman. ²And they said, “The Lord has not spoken only to Moyses, has he? Did he not also speak to us?” And the Lord listened.

³And the man Moyses was very meek, more than all the people who were upon the earth. ⁴And the Lord said at once to Moyses and Mariam and Aaron, "Come out, you three, to the tent of witness." ⁵And the three came out to the tent of witness. And the Lord descended in a pillar of cloud and stood at the door of the tent of witness. And Aaron and Mariam were called, and they both came out. ⁶And he said to them, "Hear my words:

If there is a prophet of you for the Lord,
in a vision I will be known to him, and in sleep I will speak to him.

⁷ Not so my attendant Moyses;

in my whole house he is faithful.

⁸ Mouth to mouth I will speak to him, in visible form and not through riddles.

And he has seen the glory of the Lord.

And why were you not afraid to speak against my attendant Moyses?" ⁹And the anger of the Lord's wrath was against them, and he departed.

¹¹And Aaron said to Moyses, "I beg you, Sir, do not lay extra sin upon us, because we were ignorant in that we sinned. ¹²Do not let her be like unto death, like a miscarriage coming out of a mother's womb, and it devours half her flesh."

¹³And Moyses cried out to the Lord, saying, "O God, I beg you, heal her!" ¹⁴And the Lord said to Moyses, "If her father when spitting had spat in her face, would she not be put to shame for seven days? Let her be separated for seven days outside the camp, and afterwards she shall enter." ¹⁵And Mariam was kept apart outside the camp for seven days, and the people did not set out until Mariam was cleansed.

²(1) And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, ³(2) "Send out for yourself men, and let them spy out the land of the Chananites, which I am giving to the sons of Israel as a possession: one man per tribe, according to their paternal divisions you shall send them off, everyone of them a chief."

the tribe of Gad, Goudiel son of Macchi. ¹⁷(16) These are the names of the men whom Moyses sent to spy out the land. And Moyses named Hause son of Naue, Iesus.

¹⁸(17) And Moyses sent them to spy out the land of Chanaan and said to them, "Go up by this wilderness, and you shall go up to the mountain. ¹⁹(18) And you shall see the land, what it is and the people who dwell upon it, if they are rather strong or weak, if they are few or many, ²⁰(19) and what the land is, which they dwell on, whether it is good or bad, and what the cities are which they live in, whether they are walled or unwalled, ²¹(20) and what the land is, if it is rich or untended, if there are trees in it or not. And you shall persevere and take some of the fruit of the land." And the days were days of spring, forerunners of the grape.

²⁶(25) And they turned back from there, having spied out the land, after forty days. ²⁷(26) And they went and came to Moyses and Aaron and to all the congregation of Israel's sons, to the wilderness of Pharan Kades, and they brought back word to them and to all the congregation, and they showed the fruit of the land. ²⁸(27) And they explained to him and said, "We came into the land, into which you sent us, a land flowing with milk and honey—and this is its fruit. ²⁹(28) Except that the nation that is inhabiting ^athe land ^ais bold, and the cities are strong, walled and very large, and we have seen the generation of Enak there. ³⁰(29) And Amalek lives in the land that is towards the south, and the Chettite and the Heuite and the Iebousite and the Amorrhite are living in the hill country, and the Chananite lives by the sea and by the Jordan river."

³¹(30) And Chaleb silenced the people towards Moyses and said to him, "No, but when we go up we shall go up, and we shall obtain it as an inheritance, because being powerful we shall prevail against them." ³²(31) But the men who went up together with him said, "We are not going up, because by no means will we be able to go up against the nation, because they are much stronger than we." ³³(32) And they brought about consternation for the land that they had spied out, to the sons of Israel, saying, "The land that we passed through to spy it out—it is a land that devours those who live upon it. All the people that we saw in it are very tall men, ³⁴⁽³³⁾and we have seen the giants there, and we were before them like grasshoppers—indeed even so we were before them.”

14 And all the congregation lifted up and gave voice, the people also kept weeping that whole night. ²And all the sons of Israel were complaining against Moyses and Aaron, and all the congregation said to them, “Would that we had died in the land of Egypt! Or if we had died in this wilderness! ³And why is the Lord bringing us into this land to fall in war? Our wives and children will become plunder! Now then, it is better for us to turn back into Egypt.” ⁴And they said one to the other, “Let us assign a chief and turn back into Egypt.”

¹⁰And all the congregation said that they would stone them with stones. And the glory of the Lord appeared in a cloud upon the tent of witness among all the sons of Israel. ¹¹And the Lord said to Moyses, “How long is this people going to provoke me, and how long are they not going to believe me amidst all the signs that I have performed among them? ¹²I will strike them with death, and I will destroy them, and I will make you and your father’s house into a great nation and more numerous than this.”

¹³And Moyses said to the Lord, “And Egypt will hear that you brought up this people by your might from them. ¹⁴But also, all those who dwell upon this land have heard that you are Lord among this people—you who are seen with eyes by eyes, O Lord, and your cloud has stood over them, and you go in front of them in a pillar of cloud during the day and in a pillar of fire during the night. ¹⁵And you shall wipe out this people as one person, and the nations, as many as have heard your name, shall speak, saying, ¹⁶‘Because the Lord was not able to bring this people into the land, which he swore to them, he strewed them in the wilderness.’ ¹⁷And now let your strength be exalted, O Lord, in the manner that you spoke, saying, ¹⁸ “The Lord is longsuffering and very merciful and true, removing acts of lawlessness and injustice and sin.

And by cleansing he will not cleanse the guilty, repaying sins of fathers upon children until the third and fourth^b.”

²⁰And the Lord said to Moyses, “I am merciful to them according to your word. ²¹But I live, and my name is living; the glory of the Lord shall also fill all the earth. ²²For all the men who saw my glory and the signs that I performed in Egypt and in this wilderness and tested me this tenth time and did not listen to my voice, ²³surely they shall not see the land that I swore to their fathers. Instead, their children who are with me here, as many as do not know good nor evil, every inexperienced younger person—to these I will give the land, but all those who provoked me shall not see it. ²⁴But as for my servant Chaleb, because there was another spirit in him and he followed me, I too will bring him into the land, there where he entered, and his offspring shall inherit it. ²⁵But Amalek and the Chananite are living in the valley; tomorrow, as for you, return, and set out for the wilderness, by way of the Red Sea.”

²⁶And the Lord said to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²⁷How long—this wicked congregation? I have heard what they themselves are complaining against me, the complaint of the sons of Israel, which they have complained concerning you. ²⁸Say to them, “I live,” says the Lord, “surely in the way you have spoken in my ears, so I will do to you. ²⁹In this wilderness your limbs shall fall, even your entire tally, and those of you who were enumerated from twenty years and above, as many as complained against me. ³⁰If you shall enter into the land upon which I stretched out my hand to make you encamp upon it—except for Chaleb son of Iephonne and Iesous the son of Naue. ³¹And as for the children who you said would be as plunder—I will lead them into the land, and they shall inherit the land, that which you turned away from. ³²And your limbs shall fall in this wilderness. ³³But your sons shall be feeding in the wilderness for forty years, and they shall bear your fornication until your limbs are wasted in the wilderness. ³⁴According to the number of the days, as many as you spied out the land—forty days, a day per year—you shall bear your sins for forty years, and you shall know the wrath of my anger.” ³⁵I the Lord have spoken; surely I will do thus to this evil congregation that has banded together against me. In this wilderness they shall be utterly consumed, and there they shall die.

³⁶And as for the men whom Moyses sent to spy out the land and when they arrived complained against it to the congregation in order to bring about evil words concerning the land—³⁷the men who were saying bad things against the land also died by a blow^c before the Lord. ³⁸And Iesous son of Naue and Chaleb son of Iephonne lived on of those men who had gone to spy out the land.

39 And Moyses spoke these words to all sons of Israel, and the people mourned very much. 40 And early in the morning they went up to the top of the mountain, saying, "Behold, we here will go up to the place which the Lord has said, because we have sinned." 41 And Moyses said, "Why are you transgressing the word of the Lord? It will not be easy going for you. 42 Do not go up, for the Lord is not with you, and you will fall before your enemies. 43 For Amalek and the Chananite are there before you, and you shall fall by dagger; because you have turned away by disobeying the Lord, the Lord will also not be among you." 44 And they acted forcefully and went up to the top of the mountain, but the ark of the covenant of the Lord and Moyses did not move from the camp. 45 And Amalek came down and the Chananite, who was lying in ambush in that mountain, and they routed them and cut them down as far as Herma, and they turned back to the camp.

15 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: 2 Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: When you come into the land of your dwelling, which I am giving you, 3 and you^a will make an offering to the Lord: a whole burnt offering or a sacrifice to magnify a vow or voluntarily or to make an odor of fragrance to the Lord at your feasts, whether from the cattle or from the sheep, 4 he who presents his gift to the Lord shall also present a sacrifice of fine flour, one-tenth of an oiph^b mixed in oil, with a fourth part of a hinc^c. 5 And you shall do wine as a libation, the fourth part of a hinc^c, upon the whole burnt offering or upon the sacrifice; for the one lamb you^a shall make so much as an offering, an odor of fragrance to the Lord. 6 And for the ram, when you do it as a whole burnt offering or as a sacrifice, you^a shall make a sacrifice of two-tenths of fine flour, mixed in oil, the third part of a hinc^c. 7 And you shall present wine as a libation, the third part of a hinc^c, as an odor of fragrance to the Lord. 8 But if you offer one of the cattle as a whole burnt offering or as a sacrifice to magnify a vow or for deliverance to the Lord, 9 he shall also present upon the bull calf a sacrifice of fine flour, three-tenths mixed in oil, half a hinc^c, 10 and wine as a libation, half a hinc^c, as an offering, an odor of fragrance to the Lord.

11 Thus you^a shall do to the one bull calf or to the one ram or to the one lamb from the sheep or from the goats; 12 according to the number of what you might offer, so you shall do to the one, according to their number. 13 Every native shall do such things so, to present offerings as an odor of fragrance to the Lord. 14 But if there is a guest among you in your land or one who is born among you in your generations and he makes an offering, an odor of fragrance to the Lord—in the manner you yourselves do, so (15) the congregation shall do for the Lord. 15 One law shall be for you and for the guests who associate themselves among you, an everlasting law for your generations; as you are, also the guest shall be before the Lord. 16 There shall be one law and one statute for you and for the guest who attaches himself to you.

17 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: 18 Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: When you enter into the land, there where I am bringing you into, 19 and it shall be, when you eat from the loaves of the land, you shall remove an advance deduction as something set apart for the Lord, 20 as the first fruit of your dough, a loaf. As an advance deduction you shall set it apart; as an advance deduction from the threshing floor, so you shall remove it, 21 as the first fruit of your dough, and you shall give to the Lord an advance deduction for your generations.

22 But when you fail utterly and do not perform all these commandments that the Lord spoke to Moyses—²³just as the Lord instructed you by the hand of Moyses, from the day on which the Lord instructed you, and beyond throughout your generations—²⁴and it shall be, if it happens unintentionally outside the eyes of the congregation, all the congregation shall also do one unblemished calf from the cattle as a whole burnt offering, as an odor of fragrance to the Lord, and the sacrifice of this and its libation according to instruction and one male goat from the goats for sin. 25 And the priest shall make atonement for all the congregation of Israel's sons, and it shall be forgiven them because it is unintentional. And they themselves have brought their gift as an offering to the Lord for their sin before the Lord, for their unintentional sins. 26 And it shall be forgiven with respect to all the congregation of Israel's sons and for the guest who attaches himself to you, because for all the people it is unintentional.

27 Now if one soul sins unintentionally, he shall bring forward one year-old female goat for sin. 28 And the priest shall make atonement concerning the soul that acts unintentionally and sins unintentionally before the Lord, to make atonement for him. 29 For the local inhabitant among Israel's sons and for the guest who associates himself among them, there shall be one law for them, whoever might have acted unintentionally. 30 And a soul that shall act with a hand of arrogance, from the natives or from the guests, this one provokes God; that soul shall be completely destroyed from his people, 31 because he despised the word of the Lord and scattered his commandments. That soul shall be wiped out with a wiping; his sin is in him.

32 And the sons of Israel were in the wilderness, and they found a man gathering sticks on the day of the sabbaths. 33 And those who found him gathering sticks brought him to Moyses and Aaron and to all the congregation of Israel's sons. 34 And they placed him in custody, for they did not decide what they should do to him. 35 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, "Let the man by death be put to death; stone him with stones—all the congregation.”³⁶ And all the congregation brought him forth outside the camp, and all the congregation stoned him with stones outside the camp, just as the Lord instructed Moyses.

37 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ³⁸Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall speak to them. And let them make for themselves fringes on the flaps^a of their garments throughout their generations, and you shall put on the fringes of the flaps^a a blue thread. ³⁹And it shall be for you on the fringes, and you shall see them and remember all the commandments of the Lord, and you will do them. And you shall not turn aside after your thoughts and after your eyes, in the things after which you whore, ⁴⁰so that you shall remember and do all my commandments, and you shall be holy to your God. ⁴¹I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your god; I am the Lord your God.

16 And Kore son of Isaar son of Kaath son of Leui spoke, and Dathan and Abiron sons of Eliab and Aun son of Phaleth son of Rouben, ²and they rose up against Moyses, and two hundred fifty men of the sons of Israel, chiefs of the congregation, summoned for council and renowned men, ³stood together against Moyses and Aaron and said, “Enough with you, because the whole congregation—all are holy, and the Lord is among them. And why do you rise up against the congregation of the Lord?” ⁴And when Moyses heard it, he fell face down, ⁵and he spoke to Kore and to all his congregation, saying, “God has enrolled, and he recognized the ones who are his and who are holy, and he brought them to himself, and those whom he chose for himself he brought to himself. ⁶This do: Take for yourselves fire-pans, Kore and all his congregation, ⁷and put fire on them, and put incense on them before the Lord tomorrow. And it shall be, the man whom the Lord chooses, he shall be holy; let it be sufficient for you, sons of Leui!” ⁸And Moyses said to Kore, “Listen to me, sons of Leui! ⁹This is not a small thing for you, is it, that the God of Israel has separated you from the congregation of Israel and brought you to himself to minister in the services of the tent of the Lord and to stand by before the congregation to serve them? ¹⁰And he brought you forward, and all your brothers, the sons of Leui with you—are you also seeking to serve as priests? ¹¹Thus are you and all your congregation that has gathered together against God. And as for Aaron—who is he that you are complaining against him?”

12 And Moyses sent to call Dathan and Abiron, sons of Eliab. And they said, “We are not coming up. ¹³This is not a small thing, is it, that you brought us up from a land flowing with milk and honey to kill us in the wilderness, since you rule over us as a ruler? ¹⁴Even if you had led us into a land flowing with milk and honey and had given us an allotment of land and vineyards, you would have cut out the eyes of those men. We are not coming up!”

15 And Moyses was extremely indignant and said to the Lord, “Pay no attention to their sacrifice; I have not taken what was desired from any one of them, nor did I harm any one of them.”

¹⁶And Moyses said to Kore, “Sanctify your congregation, and be ready before the Lord, you and they and Aaron, tomorrow. ¹⁷And take, each one, his fire-pan, and you shall put incense upon them, and you shall bring forward, each one, his fire-pan before the Lord, two hundred and fifty fire-pans; you also and Aaron, each his fire-pan.” ¹⁸And each man took his fire-pan, and they placed upon them fire, and they laid upon them incense, and they stood near the entrance of the tent of witness, Moyses and Aaron. ¹⁹And Kore banded together against them all his congregation by the door of the tent of witness, and the glory of the Lord appeared to all the congregation.

20 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²¹Be separated from the midst of this congregation, and I will utterly destroy them once and for all. ²²And they fell upon their face and said, “O God, God of the spirits and of all flesh, if one person sinned, is the anger of the Lord upon all the congregation?”

23 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁴Speak to the congregation, saying: Depart from around the congregation of Kore. ²⁵And Moyses arose and went to Dathan and Abiron, and all the elders of Israel went together with him. ²⁶And he spoke to the congregation, saying, “Be separated from the tents of these stubborn men, and do not touch anything of all that is theirs, lest you too perish in all their sin.” ²⁷And they departed from around the tent of Kore, and Dathan and Abiron came out, and they stood by the doors of their tents, and their wives and their children and their chattel. ²⁸And Moyses said, “By this you shall know that the Lord has sent me to do all these works, because it is not of my own accord. ²⁹If these are to die according to death of all people, if also their visitation is to be according to the visitation of all people, the Lord has not sent me. ³⁰But if the Lord will show forth by an omen and the earth opens its mouth and swallows them down and their households and their tents and all that belongs to them and they go down alive into Hades, then you shall know that these men provoked the Lord.”

31 Now as he stopped speaking all these words, the earth underneath them was split apart. ³²And the earth was opened and swallowed them down, and their households and all the men who were with Kore and their cattle. ³³And they went down, they and as much as was theirs, alive into Hades, and the earth covered them, and they perished from the midst of the congregation. ³⁴And all Israel who were around them fled from the sound of them, for they were saying, “Lest the earth swallow us down!” ³⁵And fire went out from the Lord and consumed the two hundred and fifty men who were offering the incense.

36 And the Lord spoke to Moyses³⁷ and to Eleazar the priest the son of Aaron: Take away the bronze fire-pans from the midst of those who have been burned up, and scatter this strange fire there, for they sanctified⁽³⁸⁾ the fire-pans of these sinners with their lives.³⁸ And make them into hammered plates, a covering for the altar, because they were brought forward before the Lord and were sanctified and became a sign to the sons of Israel.³⁹ And Eleazar son of Aaron the priest took the bronze fire-pans, as many as those who had been burned up brought forward, and they added them as a covering for the altar;⁴⁰ a reminder to the sons of Israel so that not one alien should draw near who is not of the offspring of Aaron, to place incense before the Lord. And it shall not be like Kore and his insurrection, just as the Lord spoke by the hand of Moyses.

41 And on the next day the sons of Israel complained against Moyses and Aaron, saying, "You have killed the people of the Lord."⁴² And it came to pass, when the congregation ganged up against Moyses and Aaron, then they rushed headlong to the tent of witness, and this—the cloud covered it and the glory of the Lord appeared.⁴³ And Moyses and Aaron went in, in front of the tent of witness.⁴⁴ And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying,⁴⁵ "Depart from the midst of this congregation, and I will utterly destroy them once and for all." And they fell upon their face.⁴⁶ And Moyses said to Aaron, "Take the fire-pan and place on it fire from the altar, and throw incense on it, and carry it away quickly to the camp, and make atonement for them, for anger has gone out from before the Lord, and it has begun to shatter the people."⁴⁷ And Aaron took it, just as Moyses spoke to him, and he ran into the congregation. And already the shattering had begun among the people, and he threw the incense and made atonement for the people.⁴⁸ And he stood between the dead and the living, and the shattering abated.⁴⁹ And the dead in the shattering were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, apart from those who had died on account of Kore.⁵⁰ And Aaron returned to Moyses at the door of the tent of witness, and the shattering abated.

17 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying:² Speak to the sons of Israel, and take from them a rod, a rod according to the paternal houses from all their rulers, according to their paternal houses, twelve rods, and of each one inscribe his name upon his rod.³ And inscribe Aaron's name upon the rod of Leui, for there is one rod; according to the tribe of their paternal house they shall give.⁴ And you shall place them in the tent of witness opposite the witness, there where I shall be made known to you.⁵ And it shall be: the person, if I choose him, his rod shall sprout forth, and I will strip away from me the complaining of the sons of Israel, which things they are themselves complaining against you.⁶ And Moyses spoke to the sons of Israel, and all their rulers gave to him a rod, a rod for one ruler, according to ruler, according to their paternal houses, twelve rods, and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.⁷ And Moyses deposited the rods before the Lord in the tent of the witness.

8 And it came to pass on the next day that Moyses and Aaron went into the tent of witness, and behold, the rod of Aaron for Leui's house had sprouted, and it had produced a bud and had blossomed flowers and had sprouted almonds.⁹ And Moyses brought out all the rods from before the Lord to all of Israel's sons, and they looked and they took, each his rod.¹⁰ And the Lord said to Moyses, "Deposit the rod of Aaron before the witnesses for safekeeping, as a sign to the sons of the disobedient ones, and let their complaining cease from me, and they will certainly not die."¹¹ And Moyses did—and Aaron—just as the Lord instructed Moyses, so they did.

12 And the sons of Israel spoke to Moyses, saying, "Behold, we have been completely destroyed; we are lost; we are totally ruined."¹³ Everyone who touches the tent of the Lord dies—are we to die totally?"

18 And the Lord spoke to Aaron, saying: You and your sons and your paternal house shall bear the sins of^a the holy things, and you and your sons shall bear the sins of your priesthood.² And bring to yourself your brothers, Leui's tribe, a division of your father, and let them be added to you, and let them minister to you, also you and your sons with you before the tent of witness.³ And they shall keep your guard duties and the guard duties of the^b tent, but they shall not approach the holy furnishings and the altar, and both they and you shall not die.⁴ And they shall be added to you, and they shall keep the guard duties of the tent of witness, according to all the ministries of the tent, and no alien shall approach you.⁵ And you shall keep the guard duties of the holy things and the guard duties of the altar, and there shall not be wrath among the sons of Israel.⁶ And as for me, I have taken your brothers the Leuites from the midst of Israel's sons, as a gift given to the Lord, to minister in the ministries of the tent of witness.⁷ And you and your sons with you shall maintain your priestly office according to the whole manner of the altar and that which is within the veil. And you shall minister in the ministry as a gift of your priesthood, and the alien who comes near shall die.

8 And the Lord spoke to Aaron: And I, behold, I have given to you the safekeeping of the first fruits of all the things consecrated to me by the sons of Israel; to you I have given them as an honor^c and to your sons with you as a perpetual precept.⁹ And let this be for you, from the holy things that are consecrated, the offerings, from all their gifts and from all their sacrifices and from every error of theirs and from all their sins, as many as they give back to me from all the holy things—they shall be for you and for your sons. ¹⁰In the holy of holies you shall eat them; every male shall eat them, you and your sons; they shall be holy to you. ¹¹And this shall be for you a first fruit of their gifts, from all the additions of the sons of Israel; to you I have given them and to your sons and to your daughters with you, as a perpetual precept. Every clean person in your house shall eat them. ¹²Every first fruit of oil and every first fruit of wine and of grain, their first fruit, as much as they may give to the Lord, to you I have given them. ¹³All the first products, as many as are in their land, as many as they may bring to the Lord, shall be yours; everyone who is clean in your house shall eat them. ¹⁴Everything anathematized among Israel's sons shall be yours. ¹⁵And everything that opens the womb from all flesh, which they offer to the Lord, from human to animal, shall be yours, but the firstborn of people shall be redeemed with a ransom, and the firstborn of the unclean animals you shall redeem. ¹⁶And its redemption is from a month old; its evaluation is five shekels, according to the holy shekel; twenty obols there are. ¹⁷But firstborn of calves and firstborn of sheep and firstborn of goats you shall not redeem; they are holy. And you shall pour out their blood against the altar, and the fat you shall offer up as an offering for an odor of fragrance to the Lord, ¹⁸but the meat shall be for you, just as also the breast of the addition and just as the right shoulder shall be for you. ¹⁹Every advance deduction of the holy things, as many as the sons of Israel may deduct for the Lord, I have given to you and to your sons and to your daughters with you, as a perpetual precept; it is a covenant of perpetual salt before the Lord, for you and for your offspring after you. ²⁰And the Lord spoke to Aaron: You shall have no inheritance in their land, and there shall not be a portion for you among them, for I am your portion and your inheritance in the midst of the sons of Israel.

²⁵ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²⁶And you shall speak to the Leuites, and you shall say to them: If you receive from the sons of Israel the tithe that I have given to you from them as an allotment, you shall also deduct from it an advance deduction to the Lord, a tithe from the tithe. ²⁷And your advance deductions shall be reckoned to you as grain from a threshing floor and as an advance deduction from a wine press. ²⁸So you too shall deduct from the advance deductions of the Lord, from all your tithes, as much as you receive from the sons of Israel, and from them you shall give an advance deduction to the Lord, to Aaron the priest. ²⁹From all your gifts you shall deduct an advance deduction to the Lord, or from all the first fruits the sanctified part of it. ³⁰And you shall say to them: When you deduct the first fruit from it, it shall also be reckoned to the Leuites as produce from a threshing floor and as produce from a wine press. ³¹And you shall eat it in every place, you and your households, because this is a wage for you for your ministries in the tent of witness. ³²And you shall not bear sin because of it, when you deduct the first fruit from it, and you shall not profane the holy things of the sons of Israel so that you might not die.

19 And the Lord spoke to Moyses and Aaron, saying: ²This is the requirement of the law, inasmuch as the Lord instructed, saying: Speak to the sons of Israel, and let them take to you an unblemished red heifer, which does not have a blemish on it and which no yoke was put upon. ³And you shall give it to Eleazar the priest, and they shall lead it outside the camp to a clean place, and they shall slaughter it before him. ⁴And Eleazar shall take some of its blood and sprinkle some of its blood seven times opposite the face of the tent of witness. ⁵And they shall burn it up before him, and the skin and its flesh and its blood, together with its dung, shall be burned up. ⁶And the priest shall take cedar wood and hyssop and scarlet, and they shall cast them into the midst of the burning of the heifer. ⁷And the priest shall wash his clothes and bathe his body with water, and afterwards he shall enter into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until evening. ⁸And the one who burns it up shall wash his clothes and bathe his body, and he shall be unclean until evening. ⁹And a clean person shall collect the ashes of the heifer and deposit them outside the camp into a clean place, and they shall be for the congregation of Israel's sons for safekeeping, water for sprinkling. It is a purification. ¹⁰And the one who gathers the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes and shall be unclean until evening.

And it shall be a perpetual precept for the sons of Israel and for the guests who associate themselves. ¹¹The one who touches the dead of any human soul shall be unclean for seven days. ¹²He shall be purified on the third day and on the seventh day, and he shall be clean, but if he is not purified on the third day and on the seventh day, he shall not be clean. ¹³Everyone who touches the dead from a human soul—if he died and was not purified—has defiled the tent of the Lord. That soul shall be wiped out from Israel; because water for sprinkling was not sprinkled upon him, he is unclean; his uncleanness is still in him.

¹⁴ And this is the law: a person, if he dies in a house, everyone who enters into the house and as many things as are in the house shall be unclean for seven days. ¹⁵And every open vessel, as many as

do not have a band tied on it, are unclean. ¹⁶And everyone who, on the surface of the plain, might touch a slain person or a corpse or a human bone or a grave, for seven days he shall be unclean. ¹⁷And they shall take for the unclean some of the burnt ashes of purification, and they shall pour out upon them living water into a vessel. ¹⁸And a clean man shall take hyssop and dip it into the water and sprinkle it upon the house and upon the furnishings and upon the souls, as many as are there, and upon the one who touched the human bone or the slain person or the dead person or the grave. ¹⁹And the clean one shall sprinkle upon the unclean one on the third day and on the seventh day, and he shall be purified on the seventh day. And he shall wash his clothes and bathe himself with water, and he shall be unclean until evening. ²⁰And a person who is defiled and is not purified, that soul shall be completely destroyed from amidst the congregation, because he defiled the holy things of the Lord; because the water for sprinkling was not sprinkled upon him, he is unclean.

²¹ And it shall be for you a perpetual precept, and the one who sprinkles the water for sprinkling shall wash his clothes, and the one who touches the water for the sprinkling shall be unclean until evening. ²²And everything the unclean one touches shall be unclean, and the soul who touches it shall be unclean until evening.

20 And the sons of Israel, the whole congregation, came into the wilderness of Sin in the first month, and the people stayed in Kades, and Mariam died there and was buried there.

² And there was no water for the congregation, and they were gathered together against Moyses and Aaron. ³And the people were reviling Moyses, saying, "If only we had died in the destruction of our brothers before the Lord! ⁴And why did you bring up the congregation of the Lord into this wilderness, to kill us and our animals? ⁵And why is it that you brought us up out of Egypt, to come into this evil place? A place it is where nothing is sown, neither figs nor vines nor pomegranates, nor is there water to drink." ⁶And Moyses went, and Aaron, from before the congregation to the door of the tent of witness, and they fell face down, and the glory of the Lord appeared to them. ⁷And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ⁸Take the rod, and hold an assembly of the congregation, you and your brother Aaron, and speak to the rock before them, and it shall give forth its waters. And you shall bring water out from the rock for them, and you shall provide drink for the congregation and their animals.

⁹ And Moyses took the rod that was before the Lord, just as the Lord instructed. ¹⁰And Moyses and Aaron held an assembly of the congregation before the rock, and he said to them, "Listen to me, you disobedient people; we shall not bring forth water from this rock for you, shall we?" ¹¹And

Moyses lifted up his hand and struck the rock twice with the rod, and much water came out, and the congregation drank, and their animals. ¹²And the Lord said to Moyses and Aaron, "Because you did not believe, to sanctify me before Israel's sons, therefore, you yourselves shall not lead this congregation into the land that I have given to them." ¹³This is a water of dispute, because the sons of Israel reviled before the Lord, and he was sanctified in them.

¹⁴ And Moyses sent messengers from Kades to the king of Edom, saying, "This is what your brother Israel says: You understand about all the trouble that has found us, ¹⁵and our fathers went down into Egypt, and we lived as sojourners in Egypt for rather many days, and the Egyptians mistreated us and our fathers. ¹⁶And we cried out to the Lord, and the Lord listened to our voice, and having sent an angel he led us out of Egypt, and now we are in Kades, a town on the edge of your borders. ¹⁷We shall pass through your land; we shall not traverse fields or vineyards, nor shall we drink water from your cistern. We will travel by the Royal Road; we will not turn aside to the right nor to the left until we have passed through your borders."

¹⁸ And Edom said to him, "You shall not traverse me, and if otherwise, I will come out in war to meet you." ¹⁹And the sons of Israel were saying to him, "We will pass along the mountain, but if we drink of your water, both I and the animals, I will pay you a price. But ^athe matter is nothing^a: we will pass along the mountain." ²⁰But he said, "You shall not traverse me." And Edom went out to meet him with a heavily armed crowd and with a strong hand. ²¹And Edom did not want to grant Israel to go through his borders, and Israel turned away from him.

²² And they departed from Kades, and the sons of Israel, all the congregation, arrived at Hor the mountain. ²³And the Lord said to Moyses and Aaron in Hor the mountain, on the borders of the land of Edom, saying, ²⁴"Let Aaron be added to his people. For you^b shall not enter into the land that I have given to the sons of Israel, because you^b provoked me at the water of reviling. ²⁵Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and make them go up to Hor the mountain before all the congregation. ²⁶And strip Aaron of his cloak, and put it on Eleazar his son, and when Aaron has been added^c let him die there." ²⁷And Moyses did just as the Lord instructed, and he brought them up to Hor the mountain before all the congregation. ²⁸And he stripped Aaron of his clothes and put them on Eleazar his son. And Aaron died on the top of the mountain, and Moyses and Eleazar came down from the mountain. ²⁹And all the congregation saw that Aaron had departed, and they wept for Aaron for thirty days, all the house of Israel.

21 And Chananis, king of Arad, who lived by the wilderness, heard, for Israel came by way of Atharim, and he made war against Israel and carried off a body of captives of them. ²And Israel vowed a vow to the Lord and said, "If you deliver to me this people as subject, I will anathematize it and its towns to destruction." ³And the Lord listened to the voice of Israel and handed over Chananis as subject to^a him, and he anathematized him and his cities. And they called the name of that place Anathema.

⁴ And they set out from Hor the mountain by way to the Red Sea, and they went around the land of Edom. And the people became faint-hearted on the way. ⁵And the people railed at God and against Moyses, saying, "Why have you brought us up out of Egypt to kill us in the wilderness? For there is no bread and no water, and our soul has become weary by this empty food." ⁶And the Lord sent among the people deadly snakes, and they would bite the people; many people of the sons of Israel died. ⁷And the people came to Moyses and said, "We have sinned, for we have railed against the Lord and against you; so pray to the Lord, and let him take away the snake from us." And Moyses prayed to the Lord for the people. ⁸And the Lord said to Moyses, "Make for yourself a snake, and set it on a sign. And it shall be that if a snake bites a person, everyone who is bitten when he looks at it shall live." ⁹And Moyses made a snake of bronze and put it upon a sign, and it came to pass that when a snake bit a person and he looked at the bronze snake, then he lived.

¹⁰ And the sons of Israel set out and camped in Oboth. ¹¹And they departed from Oboth and camped in ^bAchel Gai^b, on the farther side in the wilderness, which is opposite Moab toward sunrise. ¹²From there they set out and camped in the ravine of Zared. ¹³And from there they set out and camped on the farther side of Arnon in the wilderness that extends from the borders of the Amorrites, for Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and between the Amorrite. ¹⁴For this reason it is said in a book:

"A war of the Lord has set on fire Zoob and the wadis of Arnon, ¹⁵ and he has appointed the wadis to settle Er, and it lies near to the borders of Moab."

¹⁶ And from there to the well. This is the well of which the Lord said to Moyses, "Gather the people together, and I will give them water to drink." ¹⁷Then Israel sang this song over the well:

"Take the lead for it!

¹⁸ O Well—rulers dug it; kings of nations hewed it out in their kingdom, when they were in control of them."

And from the well to Manthanain ¹⁹and from Manthanain to Naaliel and from Naaliel to Bamoth ²⁰and from Bamoth to a valley, which is in the plain of Moab, from the top of ^cthe Hewn^c—that which looks down towards the wilderness.

²¹ And Moyses sent ambassadors to Seon king of the Amorrites with peaceful words, saying, ²²"We shall pass through your land; we will travel by the road; we shall not divert into field or vineyard, nor shall we drink water from your well. We will travel by the Royal Road until we have passed through your borders." ²³And Seon did not grant Israel to pass through his borders. And Seon gathered together all his people and went out to array his army for battle against Israel into the wilderness, and he came to Iasa^d and arrayed his army against Israel. ²⁴And Israel struck him with a slaughter of dagger and won complete control of his land, from Arnon to Iabok, as far as Amman's sons, for Iazer is the borders of Amman's sons. ²⁵And Israel took all these cities, and Israel settled in all the cities of the Amorrites, in Hesebon and in all those contiguous to it. ²⁶For Hesebon is a city of Seon, the king of the Amorrites, and he waged war previously against the king of Moab, and they took all his land from Aroer as far as Arnon. ²⁷Therefore, those who speak riddles will say,

"Come to Hesebon so that Seon's city may be built and prepared.

²⁸ For a fire came out from Hesebon, a flame from Seon's city, and it devoured as far as Moab and swallowed up the steles of Arnon.

³⁰ And their offspring shall perish—Hesebon as far as Daibon, and the women yet further ignited a fire against Moab."

³³ And they turned about and went up the road to Basan. And Og, king of Basan, came out for an engagement with them, and all his people, for war to Edrain. ³⁴And the Lord said to Moyses, "Do not be afraid of him, for into your hands I have delivered him and all his people and all his land. And you shall do to him as you did to Seon, king of the Amorrites, who dwelt in Hesebon." ³⁵And he struck him and his sons and all his people until he left none of his as live captives, and they inherited their land.

22 And the sons of Israel set out and encamped on the west of Moab by the Jordan opposite Iericho. ²And when Balak son of Sepphor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorrite, ³also Moab feared the people very much, because they were many, and Moab was vexed because of the presence of Israel's sons. ⁴And Moab said to the council of elders of Madiam, "Now this gathering will lick up all those who are around us, as the bull calf might lick up the greenery of the plain." And

Balak son of Sepphor was king of Moab at that time. ⁵And he sent ambassadors to Balaam son of Beor of ^aPathoura, which is on the river of the land of his people's sons, to call him, saying, "Behold, a people has come out of Egypt, and behold, it has covered the sight of the earth, and it is lying in wait next to me. ⁶And now come, curse for me this people, since it is stronger than we are, if we may be able to strike some of them, and I will cast them out from the land. For I know that whomever you bless are blessed, and whomever you curse are cursed."

⁷ And the council of elders of Moab went, and the council of elders of Madiam, and the instruments of divination were in their hands, and they came to Balaam and said to him the words of Balak. ⁸And he said to them, "Lodge here tonight, and I will answer you matters the Lord may speak to me." And the rulers of Moab stayed with Balaam. ⁹And God came to Balaam and said to him, "What are these people with you?" ¹⁰And Balaam said to God, "Balak son of Sepphor, king of Moab, sent them to me, saying, ¹¹'Behold, a people has come out of Egypt, and behold, it has covered the sight of the earth, and it is lying in wait next to me. And now come, curse it for me, if indeed I shall be able to strike it, and I will cast it out from the land.' "¹²And God said to Balaam, "You shall not go with them, nor shall you curse the people, for it is blessed." ¹³And Balaam rose up in the morning and said to the rulers of Balak, "Run off to your master; God does not permit me to go with you." ¹⁴And the rulers of Moab arose and went to Balak and said, "Balaam does not want to go with us."

¹⁵ And Balak added again to send rulers, more numerous and more distinguished than these. ¹⁶And they came to Balaam and said to him, "This is what Balak son of Sepphor says, 'I beg you, do not hesitate to come to me. ¹⁷For I will honor you honorably, and whatever things you say I will do for you. And come, curse for me this people.' "¹⁸And Balaam answered and said to the rulers of Balak, "If Balak gives me his house full of silver and gold, I shall not be able to transgress the word of the Lord God to do it, whether small or great in my mind. ¹⁹And now remain here, you too, this night, and I will know what the Lord will add to speak to me." ²⁰And God came to Balaam by night and said to him, "If these people are here to call you, rise up, and follow them, but the word that I speak to you—this you shall do." ²¹And Balaam rose up in the morning and saddled his donkey and went with the rulers of Moab.

²² And God was angry with wrath, because he went, and the angel of the Lord rose up to oppose^b him. And he himself was sitting on his donkey, and his two servants were with him. ²³And when the donkey saw the angel of God standing opposed in the road and the sword drawn in his hand, then the donkey turned away from the road and kept going into the plain. And he struck the donkey with his rod to direct it in the road. ²⁴And

the angel of God stood in the furrows of the vineyards, a fence here and a fence there. ²⁵And when the donkey saw the angel of God, it pressed itself against the wall and squeezed Balaam's foot, and he added to whip it again. ²⁶And the angel of God proceeded and went on and stood still in a narrow place in which it was not possible to turn right or left. ²⁷And when the donkey saw the angel of God, it settled down under Balaam, and Balaam was angered and kept beating the donkey with the rod. ²⁸And God opened the mouth of the donkey, and it said to Balaam, "What have I done to you that you have struck me this third time?" ²⁹And Balaam said to the donkey, "Because you have mocked me! And if I had a dagger in my hand, I would already have stabbed you!" ³⁰And the donkey says to Balaam, "Am I not your donkey on which you would ride from your youth to this very day? Disregarding with disregard—I have not done so to you, have I?" And he said, "No!"

³¹ Now God uncovered the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of God standing opposed in the road and the dagger drawn in his hand, and he bowed down and did obeisance to his face. ³²And the angel of God said to him, "Why have you struck your donkey this third time? And behold, I came out to oppose you, because your way was not pretty before me. ³³And when the donkey saw me, it turned away from me this third time. And if it had not turned away, now surely I would have killed you but kept it alive." ³⁴And Balaam said to the angel of the Lord, "I have sinned, for I did not understand that you stood opposed to me on the road for a meeting. And now, if it is not pleasing to you, I will turn back." ³⁵And the angel of God said to Balaam, "Go with the men, but the word that I say to you, this you shall take heed to speak." And Balaam went with the rulers of Balak.

³⁶ And when Balak heard that Balaam had come, he went out to meet him, to a city of Moab, which is on the borders of Arnon, which is on the edge of the borders. ³⁷And Balak said to Balaam, "Did I not send to you to call you? Why did you not come to me? Really, shall I not be able to honor you?" ³⁸And Balaam said to Balak, "Behold, I have come to you. Shall I now be able to speak anything? The word that God puts into my mouth, this I shall speak." ³⁹And Balaam went with Balak, and they came to cities of quarters^c. ⁴⁰And Balak sacrificed sheep and calves and sent them to Balaam and to the rulers who were with him.

⁴¹ And it became morning, and Balak took along Balaam and brought him up to the stele of Baal, and he showed him from there a part of the people.

23 And Balaam said to Balak, "Build for me here seven altars^d, and prepare for me here seven calves and seven rams." ²And Balak did in the manner Balaam told him, and Balak and Balaam offered up a calf and a ram on the altar^d. ³And Balaam said to Balak, "Stand beside your sacrifice, ^ebut as for me^e I will go, if God will appear to me in a meeting. And whatever word he shows me I will report to you." And Balak stood beside his sacrifice, and Balaam went to inquire of God, and he went straight ahead.

4 And God appeared to Balaam, and Balaam said to him, "I prepared the seven altars^a, and I brought up a calf and a ram on the altar^a." 5 And God put a word into Balaam's mouth and said, "When you return to Balak, thus you shall speak." 6 And he returned to him, and the latter stood over his whole burnt offerings, and all the rulers of Moab with him. 7 And a divine spirit was upon him. (7) And he took up his parable and said:

"Out of Mesopotamia Balak sent for me, Moab's king from mountains on the east, saying:

'Come, curse Iakob for me, and come, call down curses upon Israel
for me!'

8 How shall I curse whom the Lord does not curse?

Or how shall I call down curses on whom God does not call down curses?

9 For from a top of mountains I shall see him, and from hills I shall observe him.
Behold, a people shall dwell alone and shall not be reckoned among nations!

10 Who has accurately counted the offspring of Iakob,
and who shall number Israel's divisions?
May my soul die among souls of righteous
ones,
and may my offspring be as their offspring!"

11 And Balak said to Balaam, "What have you done to me? For cursing my enemies have I called you—and behold, you have blessed them with a blessing." 12 And Balaam said to Balak, "No, as much as God puts into my mouth, shall I beware of speaking it?"

13 And Balak said to him, "Come yet with me to another place, from there where you shall not see it^b; rather, some part of it^b you shall see, but all you shall not see. And curse it for me from there." 14 And he took him to a look-out place of a field, on the top of Hewn^c. And he built there seven altars^a and brought up a calf and a ram on the altar^a. 15 And Balaam said to Balak, "Stand beside your sacrifice, but I will go to inquire of God." 16 And God met with Balaam, and he put a word into his mouth and said, "Turn back to Balak, and this is what you shall speak." 17 And he turned back to him, and the latter stood beside his whole burnt offering, and all the rulers of Moab with him. And Balak said to him, "What did the Lord speak?"

18 And he took up his parable and said,

"Rise up, Balak, and hear;
give ear as a witness, O son of Sepphor:

19 God is not to be put upon like man, nor is he to be threatened like a son of man.

When he himself has said, shall he not do?
Shall he speak and not make good?

20 Behold, I have been taken hold of to bless;
I will bless, and I will not turn away.

21 There shall be no trouble in Iakob, nor shall hardship be seen in Israel.

The Lord his God is with him;
the glories of rulers are in him.

22 God was the one who brought them out of Egypt;

like a unicorn's glory he was to him.

23 For there is no omen in Iakob
nor divination in Israel;

opportunistly it shall be told to Iakob and to Israel
what God shall accomplish.

24 Behold, a people shall rise up like a whelp and shall bear itself proudly like a lion!

It will not lie down until it eats prey and will drink blood of mortally wounded."

25 And Balak said to Balaam, "You shall neither curse them with curses for me, nor, when blessing, shall you bless them." 26 And Balaam answered and said to Balak, "Did I not speak to you, saying 'The word that God speaks, this I shall do'?"

27 And Balak said to Balaam, "Come, let me take you to another place, if it shall please God, and curse it^b for me from there." 28 And Balak took Balaam to the top of Phogor, which extends into the wilderness. 29 And Balaam said to Balak, "Build for me here seven altars^a, and prepare for me here seven calves and seven rams." 30 And Balak did just as Balaam told him, and he offered a calf and a ram on the altar^a.

24 And when Balaam saw that it was good before the Lord to bless Israel, he did not go, according to his custom, to meet the omens but turned his face toward the wilderness. 2 And when Balaam raised his eyes, he looked down upon Israel encamped tribe by tribe. And a divine spirit came upon him, 3 and he took up his parable and said:

"Says Balaam son of Beor;

says the man who truly sees.

4 Says one who hears divine oracles, who saw a divine vision, in sleep when his eyes had been uncovered:

5 How beautiful are your dwellings, O Iakob, your tents, O Israel!

6 Like wooded valleys giving shade and like orchards by rivers and like tents that the Lord pitched, like cedar trees beside waters.

7 A person will come forth from his offspring, and he shall rule over many nations, and reign of him shall be exalted beyond

Gog,
and his reign shall be increased.

8 A god guided him out of Egypt;

^aGk = bōmos ^bI.e. the people ^cPossibly a rock formation of a hewn appearance, cf. Num 21.19

like a unicorn's glory he was to him.
He shall devour his enemies' nations and de-marrow their stoutness^a and shall shoot down an enemy with his missiles.

9 He lay down and rested like a lion and like a whelp.

Who will raise him up?

Blessed are those who bless you, and cursed are those who curse you."

10 And Balak became infuriated with Balaam, and he clapped his hands together. And Balak said to Balaam, "I have summoned you to curse my enemy, and behold, in blessing you have blessed him this third time. ¹¹Now then be off to your place! I said, 'I will honor you,' but now the Lord has deprived you of glory." ¹²And Balaam said to Balak, "No, even to your messengers whom you sent to me I spoke, saying, ¹³'If Balak gives me his house full of silver and gold, I will not be able to transgress the word of the Lord to do it, bad or good, of my own accord; whatever God says, that I will speak.' ¹⁴And now, behold, I am going off to my place; come, let me advise you what this people will do to your people at the end of days."

15 And he took up his parable and said:

"Says Balaam son of Beor;
says the man who truly sees,

16 one who hears divine oracles, one who understands knowledge of the Most High and one who sees a divine vision, in sleep when his eyes had been
uncovered:

17 I will point to him, and not now;
I deem him happy, but he is not at hand.

A star shall dawn out of Iakob, and a person shall rise up out of Israel, and he shall crush the chiefs of Moab, and he shall plunder all Seth's sons.

18 And Edom will be an inheritance, and Esau, his enemy, will be an inheritance,
and Israel acted with strength.

19 And one shall arise out of Iakob, and he shall destroy one being saved from a city."

20 And when he saw Amalek and took up his parable, he said:

"Rule of nations is Amalek, but their offspring will perish."

21 And when he saw the Kenite^b and took up his parable, he said:

"Strong is your dwelling place;
even if you set your nest in a rock,

22 even if a nest of cleverness accrues to Beor, Assyrians shall take you away captive."

23 And when he saw Og and took up his parable, he said:

"Alas, alas, who shall live when God ordains
these things?

24 And one shall go forth from the hand of Kiteans, and they shall harm Assour, and they shall harm Ebreans,
and they too shall perish together."

25 And Balaam got up and went away as he returned to his place; Balak too went home.

25 And Israel stayed in Sattim, and the people were profaned by whoring after the daughters of Moab. ²And they invited them to the sacrifices of their idols, and the people ate of their sacrifices and did obeisance to their idols. ³And Israel was initiated to Beel-Phegor, and the Lord was angry with wrath against Israel. ⁴And the Lord said to Moyses, "Take the chiefs of the people, and make an example of them to the Lord before the sun, and the anger of the Lord's wrath shall be turned away from Israel." ⁵And Moyses said to the tribes of Israel, "Each of you kill his family-member who has been initiated to Beel-Phegor."

6 And behold, a man of the sons of Israel came and brought his brother to the Madianite woman before Moyses and before all the congregation of Israel's sons, but they were weeping at the door of the tent of witness. ⁷And when Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the priest saw it, he arose from the midst of the congregation. And he took a barbed lance in his hand, ⁸and he went in after the Israelite man into the alcove and pierced both of them, both the Israelite man and the woman through her womb. And the blow^c stopped from Israel's sons. ⁹And those that died in the blow^c were twenty-four thousand.

10 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying,
¹¹"Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the priest has put a stop to my wrath from Israel's sons when I was jealous with jealousy among them, and I did not utterly destroy the sons of Israel in my jealousy. ¹²Thus I said, 'Behold, I am giving him a covenant of peace. ¹³And there shall be for him and for his offspring after him an everlasting covenant of priesthood, because he was zealous for his God and made atonement for the sons of Israel.' "

14 Now the name of the slain Israelite man who was slain together with the Madianite woman was Zambri son of Salo, ruler of a paternal house of those of Symeon. ¹⁵And the name of the Madi-anite woman who was slain was Chasbi daughter of Sour, ruler of the nation of Ommoth; he^d was of a paternal house of those of Madian.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying,
"Speak to the sons of Israel, saying, ¹⁷'Be at enmity with the Madieneans, and strike them. ¹⁸For they are at enmity with you in deceitfulness, as much as they deceived you on account of Phogor and on account of Chasbi daughter of a ruler of Madian, their sister, who was slain on the day of the blow^c on account of Phogor.' "

26 And it came to pass after the blow^c that the Lord spoke to Moyses and to Eleazar the

priest, saying, ²“Take the sum total of the whole congregation of the Israelites, from twenty years and above, according to their paternal houses—everyone who goes out to do battle in Israel.” ³And Moyses and Eleazar the priest spoke with them in Araboth of Moab near the Jordan opposite Jericho, saying, ⁴“From twenty years old and above,” in the manner that the Lord instructed Moyses.

And the sons of Israel who came out of Egypt were:

5 Rouben, firstborn of Israel. Now Rouben’s sons: Henoah and a division of Henoah; to Phallou, a division of Phalloui; ⁶to Hasron, a division of Hasroni; to Charmi, a division of Charmi. ⁷These are divisions of Rouben and their enrollment was forty-three thousand and seven hundred and thirty. ⁸And sons of Phallou: Eliab. ⁹And sons of Eliab: Namouel and Dathan and Abiron. 63 And this is the enrollment of Moyses and Eleazar the priest, who enrolled the sons of Israel in Araboth of Moab near the Jordan opposite Iericho. ⁶⁴And among these there was not a person of those enrolled by Moyses and Aaron whom—the sons of Israel—they enrolled in the wilderness of Sina. ⁶⁵For the Lord said to them, "They shall die by death in the wilderness." And there was not left even one of them, except for Chaleb son of Iephonne and Iesous son of Naue.

27 And when the daughters of Salpaad son of Hopher son of Galaad son of Machir of the division of Manasse of the sons of Ioseph came forward—and these were their names: Maala and Noua and Hegla and Melcha and Thersa—²and when they stood before Moyses and before Eleazar the priest and before the rulers and before all the congregation, at the door of the tent of witness, they said, ³"Our father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the midst of the gathering that conspired against the Lord in the gathering of Kore, for he died for his sin, and he had no sons. ⁴Let the name of our father not be wiped out from the midst of his division because he had no son. Give to us a possession in the midst of our father's brothers."

⁵And Moyses brought their case before the Lord. ⁶And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ⁷Salpaad's daughters have spoken correctly. You shall give to them as a gift a possession of inheritance in the midst of their father's brothers, and you shall confer the allotment of their father on them. ⁸And you shall speak to the sons of Israel, saying, "If a person dies, and he has no son, you shall confer his inheritance on his daughter. ⁹Now if he has no daughter, you shall give the inheritance to his brother. ¹⁰Now if he has no brothers, you shall give the inheritance to his father's brother. ¹¹Now if there are no brothers of his father, you shall give the inheritance to his nearest relative from his tribe; he shall inherit what is his. And this shall be for the sons of Israel a requirement of judgment, just as the Lord instructed Moyses."

12 And the Lord said to Moyses, "Go up into the mountain that is on the other side (this Mount Nabau), and see the land Chanaan, which I am giving to the sons of Israel for a possession. ¹³And you shall see it, and you too shall be added to your people, just as your brother Aaron was added in Hor the mountain, ¹⁴because you transgressed my word in the wilderness of Sin, when the congregation resisted to sanctify me. You did not sanctify me at the water before them." (This is water of dispute of Kades in the wilderness of Sin.) ¹⁵And Moyses said to the Lord, ¹⁶"Let the Lord, the God of the spirits and of all flesh, consider a person over this congregation, ¹⁷who shall go out before them and who shall come in before them and who shall bring them out and who shall bring them in, and the congregation of the Lord shall not be like sheep that have no shepherd." ¹⁸And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, "Take to yourself Iesous son of Naue, a person who has a spirit in him, and you shall lay your hands upon him, ¹⁹and you shall have him stand before Eleazar the priest, and you shall command him before all the congregation, and you shall give authorization concerning him before them. ²⁰And you shall give over some of your glory upon him so that the sons of Israel may listen to him. ²¹And before Eleazar the priest he shall stand, and they shall inquire of him^a the decision of the ^bclear ones^b before the Lord. At his mouth they shall go out, and at his mouth they shall come in, he and all the sons of Israel of one accord and all the congregation." ²²And Moyses did just as the Lord commanded him. And he took Iesous and had him stand before Eleazar the priest and before all the congregation, ²³and he laid his hands upon him and introduced him—just as the Lord instructed Moyses.

28 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Command the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them, saying: My gifts, my presents, my offerings as an odor of fragrance you shall take heed to offer to me at my feasts. ³And you shall say to them, These are the offerings, as many as you shall bring to the Lord: two lambs, a year old without blemish, daily, as a whole burnt offering, perpetually. ⁴The one lamb you shall do in the morning, and the second lamb you shall do towards evening, ⁵and you shall do a tenth of an oiph^c, fine flour for a sacrifice, mixed with oil, with a fourth of a hin^d. ⁶It is a whole burnt offering of perpetuity, the sacrifice^e that was done at Mount Sina, as an odor of fragrance to the Lord. ⁷And its libation, a fourth of a hin^d for the one lamb, you shall pour it out, in the holy place, as a libation, sikera^f to the Lord. ⁸And the second lamb you shall do towards evening. According to its sacrifice and according to its libation you shall do it as an odor of fragrance to the Lord.

30 ^(29.40)And Moyses spoke to the sons of Israel according to everything that the Lord commanded Moyses.

2(30.1) And Moyses spoke to the rulers of the tribes of Israel, saying: This is the word that the Lord ordered: ³⁽²⁾^bPerson by person^b—if he vows a vow to the Lord or swears an oath or determines for himself with determination about his soul, he shall not profane his word; everything that proceeds out of his mouth he shall do.

4(3) Now if a woman vows a vow to the Lord or determines for herself a determination in her father's house in her youth ⁵⁽⁴⁾and if her father hears of her vows and her determinations that she determined against her soul and her father makes no mention to her, then all her vows shall stand, and her determinations that she determined against her soul shall remain for her. ⁶⁽⁵⁾But if her father in withholding consent withholds consent from her on the day when he hears of all her vows and the determinations that she determined against her soul, they shall not stand, and the Lord will clear her, because her father withheld consent.

7(6) But if, when she grows up, she becomes a man's and her vows are upon her according to the parting of her lips, ^cas many things ^{as}^c she determined for herself against her soul ⁸⁽⁷⁾and if her husband hears and says nothing to her on the day when he hears, then thereby all her vows shall stand, and her determinations that she determined for herself against her soul—they shall stand. ⁹⁽⁸⁾But if her husband in withholding consent withholds consent from her on the day when he hears, all her vows and her determinations that she determined for herself against her soul shall not remain, because her husband withheld consent from her, and the Lord will clear her. ¹⁰⁽⁹⁾And a vow of a widow and of one cast out^d, whatever things she vows against her soul, shall remain for her. ¹¹⁽¹⁰⁾And if her vow was in her husband's house or her determination against her soul was^e with an oath ¹²⁽¹¹⁾and if her husband hears and says nothing to her and does not withhold consent to her, then all her vows shall stand, and all her determinations which she determined for herself against her soul—they shall stand regarding her. ¹³⁽¹²⁾But if her husband in canceling cancels them on the day when he hears, all the things that proceed out of her lips regarding her vows and regarding her determination that are against her soul shall not remain for her. Her husband canceled them, and the Lord will clear her. ¹⁴⁽¹³⁾Every vow and every oath for binding, to afflict the soul, her husband shall establish for her, and her husband shall cancel. ¹⁵⁽¹⁴⁾But if her husband is silent and says nothing to her from day to day, then he shall establish for her all her vows, and he shall establish for her the determinations that are upon her, because he kept silent to her on the day when he heard. ¹⁶⁽¹⁵⁾But if in canceling he cancels after the day that he heard, then he shall bear his sin.

17(16) These are the statutes, as many as the Lord commanded Moyses, between a man and his wife and between a father and his daughter in youth, in her father's house.

31 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, ²Exact the vengeance of the sons of Israel from the Madianites, and at last you shall be added to your people. ³And Moyses spoke to the people, saying, ⁴Fully arm men from you to do battle before the Lord against Madian, to requite vengeance on Madian from the Lord. ⁵Send ^fa thousand from a tribe by a thousand from a tribe^f from all the tribes of Israel to do battle. ⁶And they numbered from the thousands of Israel, a thousand from a tribe, twelve thousand armed for battle. ⁷And Moyses sent them off, ^fa thousand from a tribe by a thousand from a tribe^f, with their force, and Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the priest. And the holy vessels and the signal trumpets were in their hands. ⁷And they did battle against Madian, just as the Lord had commanded Moyses, and they killed every male. ⁸And the kings of Madian they killed together with their slain: even Euis and Sour and Rokom and Hour and Robok, five kings of Madian. And Balaam son of Beor they killed with a sword together with their slain. ⁹And the Israelites plundered the women of Madian and their chattel and their cattle and all their possessions, and they plundered their army. ¹⁰And all their cities, those in their settlements, and their quarters, they burned with fire. ¹¹And they took all the plunder and all their spoils, from human to animal. ¹²And they brought to Moyses and to Eleazar the priest and to all of Israel's sons the body of captives and the spoils and the plunder to the camp, to Araboth of Moab, which is at the Jordan opposite Jericho.

¹³ And Moyses went out, and Eleazar the priest and all the rulers of the congregation, to meet them outside the camp. ¹⁴And Moyses was angry with the overseers of the force, with the officers of thousands and with the officers of hundreds, who had come from the battle line of the war. ¹⁵And Moyses said to them, "Why did you take every female alive? ¹⁶For these were for the sons of Israel, according to the word of Balaam, for the purpose of removing and despising the word of the Lord, on account of Phogor, and there was the blow^a in the congregation of the Lord. ¹⁷And now, kill every male among all the chattel, and kill every woman, whoever has known a male's bed. ¹⁸And as for all the chattel of the women, whoever has not known a male's bed, capture them alive. ¹⁹And as for you, encamp outside the camp seven days; everyone who kills and who touches the wounded person shall be purified on the third day and on the seventh day, you and your body of captives. ²⁰And you shall purify every garment and every article of skin and every artifact of goatskin and every wood-en article."

²¹ And Eleazar the priest said to the men of the force, who were coming from the battle line of the war, "This is the requirement of the law that the Lord instructed to Moyses: ²²Apart from the gold and the silver and bronze and iron and lead and tin, ²³every object that shall pass through in fire shall also be cleansed. Nevertheless, it shall be purified with the water for purification, and whatever things do not go through fire shall pass through water. ²⁴And you shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and you shall be cleansed, and afterwards you shall come into the camp."

²⁵ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying, ²⁶"Take the sum total of the spoils of the captivity, from human to animal, you and Eleazar the priest and the rulers of the paternal families of the congregation. ²⁷And you shall divide the spoils between the warriors who went out into the battle line and between all the congregation. ²⁸And you shall remove as a levy to the Lord, from the men, the warriors who went out into the battle line, one soul out of five hundred from the humans and from the animals and from the cattle and from the sheep and from the donkeys. ²⁹And you shall take from their half, and you shall give Eleazar the priest the first fruits of the Lord. ³⁰And from the half of the sons of Israel you shall take one out of fifty, from the humans and from the cattle and from the sheep and from the donkeys and from all the animals, and you shall give them to the Leuites who keep the guard duties in the tent of the Lord."

³⁶ And the halved part, the portion of those who went out to war was: from the number of the sheep, three hundred and thirty-seven thousand and five hundred, ³⁷and the levy to the Lord was: from the sheep, six hundred and seventy-five, ³⁸and cattle, thirty-six thousand, and the levy to the Lord, seventy-two, ³⁹and donkeys, thirty thousand and five hundred, and the levy to the Lord, sixty-one, ⁴⁰and human souls, sixteen thousand, and their levy to the Lord, thirty-two souls. ⁴¹And Moyses gave the levy to the Lord, the advance deduction of God to Eleazar the priest, just as the Lord instructed Moyses, ⁴²from the halved part of the sons of Israel, which Moyses separated from the warriors.

⁴⁸ And there came to Moyses all those in charge of the thousands of the force, officers of thousands and officers of hundreds, ⁴⁹and they said to Moyses, "Your servants have received the sum total of the warriors that are with us, and not even one of them is missing. ⁵⁰And we have brought forward the gift to the Lord, a man what golden object he found: an anklet^c and a bracelet and a ring and an armlet for the right arm and a hair-clasp, to make atonement for ourselves before the Lord." ⁵¹And Moyses and Eleazar the priest took the gold from them, every wrought article. ⁵²And all the gold, the advance deduction that they removed for the Lord: sixteen thousand and seven hundred and fifty shekels from the officers of thousands and from the officers of hundreds. ⁵³(And the warriors had taken plunder, each one for himself.) ⁵⁴And Moyses and Eleazar the priest took the gold from the officers of thousands and from the officers of hundreds and brought them into the tent of witness as a memorial of the sons of Israel before the Lord.

32 And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad had a multitude, a great multitude, of cattle. And they saw the country of Iazer and the country of Galaad and the place was a place for cattle. ²And when the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad came forward, they said to Moyses and to Eleazar the priest and to the rulers of the congregation, saying, ³"Ataroth and Daibon and Iazer and Nambra and Hesebon and Eleale and Sebama and Nabau and Baian—⁴the land that the Lord delivered before the sons of Israel—is cattle rearing land and your servants possess cattle." ⁵And they were saying, "If we found favor before you, let this land be given to your domestics for a possession, and do not make us cross the Jordan."

⁶ And Moyses said to the sons of Gad and to the sons of Rouben, "Shall your brothers go to war and you will sit here? ⁷And why are you perverting the minds of the sons of Israel not to cross over into the land that the Lord is giving to them? ⁸Did your fathers not do so, when I sent them from Kades Barne to observe the land? ⁹And they went up to Cluster Ravine and observed the land, and they turned aside the heart of the sons of Israel not to go into the land that the Lord gave them. ¹⁰And the Lord was angry with wrath on that day, and he swore, saying, ¹¹"If these people who came up out of Egypt, from twenty years and above, who know evil and good, shall see the land that I swore to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, for they have not followed along after me. ¹²On the other hand, there are Chaleb son of Iephonne, who had ^aseparated himself, and Iesous the son of Naue, for he followed along after the Lord.' ¹³And the Lord was angry with wrath against Israel, and he made them roam about in the wilderness for forty years until the entire generation, those who were doing evil things before the Lord, was utterly consumed. ¹⁴Behold, you rose up in place of your fathers, as a band of sinful persons, to add further to the wrath of the Lord's anger against Israel, ¹⁵because you will turn away from him to add further to abandon him in the wilderness, and you will act lawlessly against this whole congregation."

¹⁶ And they came forward to him and kept saying, "Let us build quarters for sheep here, for our animals and cities, for our chattels, ¹⁷and, having taken up arms, let us be a vanguard ahead of the sons of Israel until we bring them to their place. And our chattel will settle in walled cities, because of those that inhabit the land. ¹⁸We will not turn back to our homes until all the sons of Israel have been apportioned, each one to his inheritance.

¹⁹And let us no longer inherit among them from the other side of the Jordan and beyond, because we have our allotments on the other side of the Jordan in the east."

²⁰ And Moyses said to them, "If you do according to this word—if you arm yourselves before the Lord for war, ²¹then every armed soldier of you shall pass the Jordan before the Lord until his enemy is wiped out from before him ²²and the land is dominated before the Lord. And after this you shall turn back, and you shall be innocent before the Lord and from Israel, and this land shall be to you as a possession before the Lord. ²³But if you will not do so, you will sin against the Lord, and you will know your sin when misfortunes overtake you. ²⁴And you shall build for yourselves cities for your chattel and quarters for your animals, and what proceeds from your mouth, you shall do."

²⁵ And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad said to Moyses, saying, "Your servants will do just as our lord commands. ²⁶And our chattel and our wives and all our animals shall be in the cities of Galaad, ²⁷but your servants will pass by, all armed and arrayed before the Lord for the war, just as ^bour lord^b says."

²⁸ And Moyses brought together Eleazar the priest and Iesous son of Naue and the rulers of the patriarchal tribes of Israel. ²⁹And Moyses said to them, "If the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad cross over the Jordan with you—everyone armed for war before the Lord—and you gain control of the land before you, then you shall give them the land of Galaad as a possession, ³⁰but if they do not cross over with you armed for the war before the Lord, then you shall carry over their chattel and their wives and their animals, ahead of you into the land of Chanaan. And they shall inherit together among you in the land of Chanaan." ³¹And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad answered, saying, "Whatever ^bour lord^b says to his attendants, so we will do. ³²As for us, we will cross over, armed before the Lord, into the land of Chanaan, and you shall give to us the possession on the other side of the Jordan."

he settled there. ⁴¹And Iair the son of Manasse went and took their homesteads^a and named them Iair's Homesteads^a. ⁴²And Nabau went and took Kanath and its villages and named them Naboth after his name.

33 And these are stations of the sons of Israel as they went out of the land of Egypt together with their force by the hand of Moyses and Aaron. ²And Moyses wrote down their departures and their stations, through the word of the Lord, and these are stations of their journey. ³They set out from Ramesses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the day after the pascha the sons of Israel went out with a high hand before all the Egyptians, ⁴and the Egyptians were burying all those of them who had died, whom the Lord struck down, every firstborn in the land of Egypt. And among their gods the Lord executed vengeance.

⁵ And when the sons of Israel set out from Ramesses, they encamped at Sokchoth. ⁶And they set out from Sokchoth and encamped at Bouthan, which is some part of the wilderness. ⁷And they set out from Bouthan and encamped at Heiroth's mouth, which is opposite Beelsepphon, and they encamped opposite Magdolos. ⁸And they set out from before Heiroth and crossed through the middle of the sea into the wilderness, and they went a journey of three days through the wilderness, and they encamped at Bitternesses. ⁹And they set out from Bitternesses and came to Ailim, and in Ailim there were twelve springs of water and seventy date palm trunks, and they encamped there beside the water. ¹⁰And they set out from Ailim and encamped by the Red Sea. ¹¹And they set out from the Red Sea and encamped in the wilderness of Sin. ¹²And they set out from the wilderness of Sin and encamped at Raphaka. ¹³And they set out from Raphaka and encamped in Ailous. ¹⁴And they set out from Ailous and encamped in Raphidin, and there was no water for the people to drink there. ¹⁵And they set out from Raphidin and encamped in the wilderness of Sina. ¹⁶And they set out from the wilderness of Sina and encamped in Tombs of Craving. ¹⁷And they set out from Tombs of Craving and encamped in Haseroth. ¹⁸And they set out from Haseroth and encamped in Rathama. ¹⁹And they set out from Rathama and encamped in Remmon Phares. ²⁰And they set out from Remmon Phares and encamped in Lebona. ²¹And they set out from Lebona and encamped at Dessa. ²²And they set out from Dessa and encamped at Makelath. ²³And they set out from Makelath and encamped at Saphar. ²⁴And they set out from Saphar and encamped at Charadath. ²⁵And they set out from Charadath and encamped at Makeloth. ²⁶And they set out from Makeloth and encamped at Kataath. ²⁷And they set out from Kataath and encamped at Tarath. ²⁸And they set out from Tarath and encamped at Matekka. ²⁹And they set out from Matekka and encamped at Hasel-

mona. ³⁰And they set out from Haselmona and encamped at Masourouth. ³¹And they set out from Masourouth and encamped at Banaiakkan. ³²And they set out from Banaiakkan and encamped at the mountain of Gadgad. ³³And they set out from the mountain of Gadgad and encamped at Etebatha. ³⁴And they set out from Etebatha and encamped at Ebrona. ³⁵And they set out from Ebrona and encamped at Gesion Gaber. ³⁶And they set out from Gesion Gaber and encamped in the wilderness of Sin. And they set out from the wilderness of Sin and encamped in the wilderness of Pharan; this is Kades. ³⁷And they set out from Kades and encamped at Hor, the mountain near the land of Edom.

³⁸ And Aaron the priest went up by the ordinance of the Lord and died there in the fortieth year of the departure of the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt, in the fifth month, on the first of the month. ³⁹And Aaron was a hundred and twenty-three years old when he died on Hor the mountain.

⁵⁰ And the Lord spoke to Moyses at the west of Moab by the Jordan opposite Iericho, saying: ⁵¹Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: As for you, you are crossing the Jordan into the land of Chanaan, ⁵²and you shall destroy all those who live in the land before you, and you shall remove their look-outs^b, and as for all their molten idols you shall destroy them, and all their steles you shall remove. ⁵³And you shall destroy the^c inhabitants of the land, and you shall settle in it, for to you I have given their land as an allotment. ⁵⁴And you shall obtain their land as a possession by lot according to your tribes; to the more numerous ones you shall increase their possession, and to the less numerous ones you shall decrease their possession. ^dTo what his name goes out there^d, his shall it be. According to your paternal tribes you shall inherit. ⁵⁵But if you do not destroy those living on the land from before you, then it shall be that whomever of them you leave shall be thorns in your eyes and missiles in your sides, and they shall act with hostility upon the land on which you will settle. ⁵⁶And it shall be, just as I had resolved to do to them, I will do to you.

34 And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ²Command the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: As for you, you are entering into the land of Chanaan (this shall be to you for an inheritance, the land of Chanaan together with its borders). ³And the side that is to the southwest shall be for you from the wilderness of Sin as far as next to Edom, and the borders to the southwest shall be for you from the part of the Salt Sea on the east. ⁴And your borders shall go around you from the southwest to the ascent of Akraḇin, and they shall pass along Senna, and its outlet shall be to the southwest of Kades of Barne, and it shall go out to the steading of Arad, and that shall pass along Asemona, ⁵and the borders shall go around from Asemona to the Wadi of Egypt, and the outlet shall be the Sea^a.

⁶ And the boundaries of the Sea shall be for you; the Great Sea shall determine the border. This shall be for you the boundaries of the Sea.

¹³ And Moyses commanded the sons of Israel, saying: This is the land that you shall obtain as a possession by lot, in the manner that the Lord instructed Moyses to give it to the nine tribes and to the half-tribe of Manasse. ¹⁴For Rouben's sons' tribe and Gad's sons' tribe received according to their paternal houses, and the half-tribe of Manasse accepted their allotments; ¹⁵two tribes and a half-tribe received their allotments beyond the Jordan opposite Iericho from the south, towards the east.

¹⁶ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁷These are the names of the men who shall inherit the land for you: the priest Eleazar and Iesous the son of Naue. ¹⁸And you shall take one ruler from a tribe to obtain for you the land as a possession. ¹⁹And these are the names of the men: Of the tribe of Ioudas, Chaleb son of Iephonne. ²⁰Of the tribe of Symeon, Salamiel son of Emioud.

35 And the Lord spoke to Moyses to the west of Moab, by the Jordan opposite Iericho, saying: ²Instruct the sons of Israel, and they shall give to the Leuites from the allotments of their possession cities to live in, and the suburbs^f of the cities around them they shall give to the Leuites—(³and the cities shall be for them to live in, and their areas set apart shall be for their cattle and for all their quadrupeds. ⁴And the areas adjoining the cities that you shall give to the Leuites shall be from the city wall and outwards, two thousand cubits all around. ⁵And you shall measure outside the city, the side towards the east, two thousand cubits, and the side towards the southwest, two thousand cubits, and the side towards the Sea, two thousand cubits, and the side towards the north, two thousand cubits, and the city in the midst of this shall be for you, and the contiguous areas of the cities—) ⁶even the cities that you shall give to the Leuites, the six cities of places of refuge that you shall give to the murderer to flee there, and in addition to these, forty-two cities; ⁷all the cities that you shall give to the Leuites are forty-eight cities—they and their suburbs^f; ⁸even the cities that you shall give from the possession of Israel's sons, ⁹many from those with many and fewer from those with fewer^g. They shall give of their cities to the Leuites, each one according to his inheritance that they shall inherit.

⁹ And the Lord spoke to Moyses, saying: ¹⁰Speak to the sons of Israel, and you shall say to them: As for you, you are crossing the Jordan into the land of Chanaan, ¹¹and you shall set aside for yourselves cities; they shall be places of refuge for you for the murderer to flee there, everyone who strikes a soul unintentionally. ¹²And the cities shall be for you places of refuge from one ^bdoing the relative's blood duty^h, and the one that commits murder will not die until he stands before the congregation for judgment.

¹³ And the cities that you give as the six cities shall be places of refuge for you. ¹⁴Three cities you shall give beyond the Jordan, and three cities you shall give in the land of Chanaan. ¹⁵They shall be an asylumⁱ for the sons of Israel and for the guest and for the resident alien among you. These cities shall be a place of refuge for everyone to flee there when he strikes a soul unintentionally.

16 But if he strikes him with an iron instrument and he dies, he is a murderer; let the murderer be put to death by death. 17 Now if he strikes him with a stone out of hand—by which he may die—and he dies, he is a murderer; let the murderer be put to death by death. 18 Now if he strikes him with a wooden instrument out of hand—from which he may die—and he dies, he is a murderer; let the murderer be put to death by death. 19 As for the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a, he shall kill the one that committed murder; when he meets up with him, he shall kill him. 20 Now if out of enmity he pushes him and hurls at him any object from an ambush and he dies ²¹or out of rage he struck him with the hand and he dies, let the one who struck be put to death by death—he is a murderer; let the murderer be put to death by death; the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a shall strike the one that committed murder when he meets him.

22 But if he pushes him suddenly, not out of enmity, or throws at him any object not from an ambush ²³or with any stone—by which he may die—unknowingly, and it falls upon him and he dies but he was not his enemy nor was he seeking to harm him, ²⁴then the congregation shall judge between the striker and between the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a, according to these judgments, ²⁵and the congregation shall rescue the one that committed murder from the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a. And the congregation shall restore him to the city of his place of refuge, where he fled for refuge. And he shall live there until the great priest dies, him whom they anointed with the holy oil. ²⁶But if he that commits murder by an exit leaves the bounds of the city, there where he fled for refuge, ²⁷and the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a finds him outside the bounds of the city of his refuge, and the one ^adoing the relative's blood duty^a kills the one that committed murder, he is not liable. ²⁸For let him live in the city of refuge until the great priest dies, and after the great priest dies, he that committed murder shall return to the land of his possession.

29 And these things shall be for you a requirement of judgment for your generations in all your settlements.

30 Every one, when he strikes a soul, through witnesses you shall kill the murderer, and one witness shall not bear witness against a soul that he should die. ³¹And you shall not receive ransom for a soul from the one that committed murder, liable to be killed, for he shall be put to death by death. ³²And you shall not receive ransom to flee to a city of places of refuge to live again on the land until the great priest dies. ³³And you shall not kill by murder the land on which you live. For this blood kills^b the land by murder, and the land shall not be atoned for from the blood that was shed upon it, except by the blood of the one who shed it. ³⁴And you shall not defile the land that you live upon, on which I will encamp among you, for I am the Lord, encamping in the midst of the sons of Israel.

36 And the rulers of the tribe of Galaad's sons—son of Machir son of Manasse, from the tribe of Joseph's sons—came forward and spoke before Moyses and before Eleazar the priest and before the rulers of the paternal houses of the sons of Israel. ²And they said, "The Lord commanded our lord to give back the land of the inheritance by lot to the sons of Israel, and the Lord instructed the lord to give the inheritance of Salpaad our brother to his daughters. ³And they shall become wives to one of the tribes of Israel's sons, and their allotment will be taken away from the possession of our fathers and added to the inheritance of the tribe to whom they may become wives; then it will be taken away from the allotment of our inheritance. ⁴But if the release of the sons of Israel takes place, then their inheritance shall be added to the inheritance of the tribe to whom they may become wives, and from the inheritance of our paternal tribe their inheritance shall be taken away."

DEUTERONOMION

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of Deuteronomion has been based on the edition by John William Wevers (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum III.2: Deuteronomium [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1977]). This fully critical edition is the best available. Its printed text was modified only where Wevers himself, in Appendix A of his Notes on the Greek Text of Deuteronomy (SBLSCS 39; Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1995), proposed that changes be made. Most of the forty-four suggested modifications involve matters of punctuation or accentuation. Others consist of variation in pronouns due to itacisms (ὑμῶν/ἡμῶν, etc.), changes in the form of the nomina sacra, the odd omission of a possessive or a copula and so on. Only a single reading in the list (the metathesis of lambda and alpha in λᾶόν 28.9) was a genuine printing error. But in one or two cases such as 28.62 or 30.13, readings that the editor initially considered secondary and therefore placed in the apparatus, he deemed on further reflection to be primary. In every instance, such changes that can be shown are noted in the brief apparatus to NETS Deuteronomion, where We^N is made to contrast with We^{ed}.

General Comment

The aim here is not to present a complete picture of the character of the translation of Greek Deuteronomy within the constraints of a brief introduction. What follows, rather, is a discussion of some features that might interest the NETS reader conversant with Hebrew and Greek and interested in the relationship of the latter to the former. It may be assumed that the translator of Greek Deuteronomy (hereafter Deut^{Tr}) had before him a text similar in the main to the printed text of BHS and that the printed text of We^{ed} (as modified by We^N) is representative of the original Greek translation.

Every translation must be examined, of course, for its own peculiarities, and each translator evaluated in relation to the content of the material on which he worked. Statistical representations are relevant only when judged against patterns and practices of a particular translator and the choices he faced. Deuteronomy is noted for its hortatory style and repetitive content. Thus its study, even though tedious, can be instructive to a textual critic evaluating whether and when formulaic expressions are accurately transmitted. But Deuteronomy also repeats legal material found in earlier books of the Pentateuch and contains more sustained poetry than any of the others. Furthermore, if we assume that the Pentateuch was translated sequentially, Deuteronomy, given its position, might reflect knowledge of the work of previous translators, and so we might look for evidence along those lines. These factors add a unique dimension to the task of evaluating Greek Deuteronomy. It is fair to say that Deut^{Tr} typically maintains a very close relationship to his source text, though, within a linguistically rather constricting framework, one can nevertheless speak of an interpretative dimension. I discuss each aspect in turn.

Formal Correspondence and Representation

The indicators of a close connection between a Greek translation and a Hebrew source text are well established. Some are attested throughout the Pentateuch, others in the larger corpus of LXX translation Greek and even in the NT. These include for example: fixed lexical equivalents on the content side (verbs and nouns) and even non-content elements—particles, prepositions and the like; the use of λέγων as a consistent translation for אָמַר; ὅτι as a translation for כִּי irrespective of contextual concerns; καί for ἐν; the use of a Greek conjunctive participle with a cognate finite verb to represent the Hebrew free infinitive (absolute) used for emphasis before a cognate finite verb; the (related) practice of using a participle plus finite verb to represent two successive Hebrew verbs describing the same or related activity; ἐν τῷ + infinitive + pronoun for כִּי + bound infinitive (construct); the ubiquitous καί for ו even in places where standard Greek would opt for postpositive δέ and so forth. Beyond these lie matters of quantitative representation—the tendency to represent one word in Hebrew by one in Greek as far as possible, often down to the morphemic level—and matters of strict adherence to Hebrew word order at the expense of standard Greek style.

A translation that conforms regularly to these patterns exhibits formal correspondence with its source text—the conventions and demands of that source being dominant throughout. One that takes seriously the needs and expectations of the reader—the target audience—might be expected to deviate from these patterns regularly and demonstrate what is termed dynamic equivalence. Few translations exhibit one or the other pattern exclusively; Deuteronomion is no different in this respect. Each of the above examples of formal correspondence can be demonstrated, though some are more worthy of attention than others. I discuss a few below.

The first chapter should provide representative examples since it would presumably show Deut^{Tr}'s initial approach to his task. Indeed, a look at the very first verse demonstrates a number of Deut^{Tr}'s characteristic features. One will note: (1) an almost isomorphic relationship to the source text; (2) identical word order to the source text; (3) occasional translation of names; (4) at times excessive focus on individual items; (5) a certain freedom vis-à-vis the source text.

Deut^{Tr} selected πέραν to represent בְּעֵבֶר and maintained it throughout the book even though he seemed unsure at that stage whether the ב should be represented discretely or not; by verse 5 he has decided that it should be, since there (and in 3.20, 4.46) he preceded πέραν with ἐν τῷ. In all but two (30.13 2x) of thirteen places, the reference is to the Jordan. The preposition מִן here is a hapax as pointed in BHS; its variant form מִן occurs rarely in BHS and only four more times in Deuteronomy (2.19; 3.29; 4.46; 34.6). Of course, it cannot be known whether or not Deut^{Tr} read his unpointed text just as the Masoretes did, since the meaning of both forms of the preposition remains the same. It may be entirely coincidental but noteworthy, however, that only in 1.1, where the variant Masoretic vocalization appears, does πλησίον appear and there in relation to the Red Sea. But πλησίον is never used again as a translation of מִן; by the time Deut^{Tr} next encountered it in 2.19, he had decided that ἔγγυς or σύνεγγυς = מִן and that either πέραν or ἐν τῷ πέραν = בְּעֵבֶר. Thus, by 4.46 when בְּעֵבֶר and מִן appear in the same verse, he rendered them ἐν τῷ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, . . . ἐγγυς οἴκου Φογῶρ "beyond the Jordan . . . near the house of Phogor." The variation in the gloss for מִן, however, can be accounted for on contextual grounds. Towards the end of the first verse, Deut^{Tr} seemed confident that Pharan, Tophol, and Lobon were place names because they were clearly set off by בִּין, even though the second is left untranslated (cf. infra), but he seems unsure that הַצֵּרֶת and הַרְרֵי were. He therefore translated them as faithfully as he could—Αὐλῶν "Courts" and Καταχρύσεια "Goldplaces." Oddly, though, the last named is in the wrong case to be a constituent of the preceding series. Consequently, it dangles rather uncertainly at the end.

One well-established marker of a translator's dependence on his source is the treatment of clause connectors. A. Aejmelaeus has noted the importance of this issue in several publications.¹ If a translator selected ὅτι instead of γάρ (even when standard Greek style would suggest the latter) to render כִּי, it is one of many signs that the source text controlled the process. She cites 4.6 "because this is your wisdom," 16.3 "because you came out . . . in haste," and 22.5 "for anyone doing these things is an abhorrence to the Lord your God," and especially 30.11 ὅτι ἡ ἐντολὴ αὐτή, ἣν ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι σοι σήμερον = NETS: "because this commandment that I command you today" as examples where the ὅτι stands first in its clause under Hebrew influence but a postpositive γάρ would seem perfectly warranted in the contexts.

Another clear example of Deut^{Tr}'s heavy dependence on the source is his literal rendering of pleonastic expressions—"the land which you are crossing the Jordan there to inherit it." This type of syntactical structure is typical and frequent in Deuteronomion. Full lexeme-for-lexeme representation is always evident in Greek. Likewise, free infinitives are juxtaposed before or after cognate verbs frequently in Deuteronomion. Deut^{Tr} made no attempt to interpret the sense of such Hebraistic expressions but rendered them quite literally, word for word, striving to imitate his source text by utilizing cognate roots in Greek. Singular and plural forms of address in Hebrew are almost religiously followed in Greek, and the few variations can usually be explained reasonably.

Neologisms

Throughout Deuteronomion one finds new words (neologisms) or instances of known words combined in new ways. Some are unique to the Pentateuch; almost forty appear for the first time in ¹ See for example her collection of essays on this subject On the Trail of the Septuagint Translators (Kampen, The Netherlands: Kok Pharos, 1993) and particularly the essays on OTI.

Deuteronomion. These illustrate certain decisions Deut^{Tr} made when confronting Hebrew expressions for which he knew of no Greek equivalent quite close enough to his source text. For example, a Hebrew root may have only a noun equivalent in Greek but no verb equivalent. As a result, a translator, if he is intent on matching the source text word class for word class, might need to coin a Greek verb. So, while coining a neologism may reflect literary creativity, it can equally well indicate rigid adherence to the source text. The vast majority of Deut^{Tr}'s creations are best placed in the latter category.

The noun שׁוֹטְרִים occurs less than ten times in the book, the first being in 1.15. In this context it describes specific officials connected to judges. Rather than replacing the Hebrew with a contextually suitable Greek term, Deut^{Tr} apparently coined a word by fusing two known Greek functionaries: a γραμματεὺς "a scribe" and an εἰσαγωγεὺς "one who brings cases to court" into γραμματοεἰσαγωγεὺς "one who records things for judges." He also used it elsewhere (16.18; 29.10; 31.28), but in three other places (20.5, 8, 9) he rendered שׁוֹטְרִים more simply as γραμματεῖς "scribes."

The idiom "to be long of days," אָרַךְ יָמַי, is variously translated by πολυχρονίζω "to prolong time" (4.26), μακροήμερος/-ρεύω "to have long days" (4.40; 5.33; 6.2; 11.9; 32.47) or μακροχρονίζω "to have a long time" (17.20) and so on. Components of these words were already in use. For example, the adjective πολυχρόνιος rendering the same Hebrew occurs in Gen 26.8. What Deut^{Tr} does in these instances then is make a verb out of a known adjective as a way of remaining close to the source text without being too slavishly literal.

The neologism δευτερονόμιον itself provides a final example. Neither δεύτερος nor νόμος were new Greek words. With the suffixing of -ιον, however, they together constituted an interpretation, not simply a translation of מִשְׁנֵה הַתּוֹרָה in 17.18 that in time was adopted as the name of the book. The Hebrew phrase could be understood as describing either a copy, a repetition of or another, a second, law. This latter sense is clearly the intent of Deut^{Tr}; he makes this even more explicit in 31.26 by speaking of "the book of this law" rather than of "this book of the law" (=MT). "This law" seems in his mind to stand in contrast to the first law (Exodus-Numbers).

Dynamic Equivalence and Interpretation

All the foregoing notwithstanding, Deut^{Tr} often shows that he is not invariably wedded to formal correspondence, at least not to a rigid one-to-one equivalency. Accordingly, one finds in Deut^{Tr} both semantic leveling (the use of one Greek word for several in Hebrew) and semantic differentiation (the use of two or more Greek words to render the same Hebrew). I discuss a few examples of each.

Deut^{Tr} had previously translated the simple verb נָשָׂא "to lift up" by φέρω "to bear/carry," but in 1.31 he contextualized its meaning by choosing τροφοφορέω "to nurse." He seems to have had in mind the image of the people of Israel being nurtured by their god with food in the desert, as analogous to a father nursing his son to adulthood, presumably in difficult circumstances. The noun σπέρμα(τα) regularly translates זָרַע but also בֵּן (25.5). The very popular verb ἐξολεθερεύω translates six Hebrew roots—שָׁרַף 5x (4.38; 7.17; 9.4, 5; 18.12); חָרַם 3x (2.34; 3.6 2x); אָבַר, 2x (7.10; 28.63); שָׁחַת 4x (9.26; 10.10; 20.19; 20.20); כָּרַת (12.29); שָׁמַד 18x.

As for semantic differentiation, Deut^{Tr} offers numerous examples; his treatment of גָּר is representative. The default rendering προσήλυτος describes in the Pentateuch and certainly in Deuteronomion someone clearly not yet a proselyte, a convert, but more like a guest of the community who receives preferential treatment alongside the orphan and the widow. He should be treated fairly and paid a just wage. That he is an outsider is not in doubt. But he is not just any passing outsider, nor as yet fully an insider. He has "come over" to the community and is treated as its guest, with all the privileges that such a status implied. However, Deut^{Tr} also used πάροικος for גָּר in two instances (14.20 [21] and 23.7[8]) to describe someone who is not a permanent resident and does not enjoy special privileges. By differentiating, he evidently intended to highlight a distinction.

The word פֵּרוֹת (NRSV: "fruit") modifies nouns three times in 28.4 and 30.9, and twice in 7.13 and 28.11. In 28.4, it becomes ἔκγονα, γενήματα, βουκόλια (NETS: "progeny," "produce," "herds"), whereas in 30.9 ἔκγονα, γενήματα, ἔκγονα (NETS: "progeny," "produce," "progeny"). In 7.13 it becomes ἔκγονα and κάρπον (NETS: "progeny" and "fruit"), while in 28.11 it is ἔκγονα, ἔκγονα (NETS: "progeny, progeny"). Thus one Hebrew word פֵּרוֹת is rendered in this small sample by four Greek words, in view of the difference in semantic range between Hebrew פֵּרוֹת and Greek κάρπος (its most common equivalent throughout the LXX).

Though Deut^{Tr} at times "solved" problems in his source text, he also sometimes unwittingly created problems that the source text did not have. So, for example, in 1.43 he chose παραβιάζομαι "to act forcefully" to translate זָדָה "to act with arrogance." But since the context clearly speaks of obedience to God's word transmitted by Moyses, παραβιάζομαι is scarcely an obvious fit. (Note that in 17.13 and 18.20 he uses ἀσεβέω.)

The entire verse in 19.3 may be an example of contextual interpretation. Three separate Hebrew verbs are rendered in unusual ways vis-à-vis the text of BHS. Hebrew תְּכַיֵּן (imperfect of כָּוַן) “you must prepare” is read differently from the Masorettes as an imperative of a root תְּכַן (as P. Dion has suggested² and as the NRSV has adopted) and becomes in Greek στόχασαι “estimate for yourself.” Deut^{Tr} may have misread or interpreted a text like the Masoretic text, but it seems more probable that תְּכַן was in his Vorlage. The verb שַׁלֶּשְׁתָּ “you will make three of” is more explicitly rendered as τριμεριείς “you shall make (or divide) into three portions.” The very popular verb נָחַל (Hiphil) “to give as a possession/inheritance,” usually translated as κληρονομέω, is only in this context translated as καταμερίζω “to divide into sections/to apportion.” Either by design or by inadvertence Deut^{Tr} ends up with a verbal repetition: τριμερίζω . . . καταμερίζω.

Deut^{Tr} made explicit that when (as in 13.5[6]; 17.7, 12; 19.19; 21.21; 22.21, 22, 24; 24.7) the source text suggests, ambiguously, that הָרַע “the evil” is to be removed from among the people of Israel, evil is to be understood concretely. For him, it is the evil person τὸν πονηρόν, not evil as an abstraction τὸ πονηρόν that is the intent of the source; that person must be removed.

In terms of style, he usually utilized classical reflexive pronouns when speaking of the extirpation of these community evildoers; see for example 13.5[6]; 19.19; 21.21; 22.21, 24; 24.7. In these cases, the selection of ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν rather than ἐξ ἑαυτῶν “from among yourselves” or even of ἐξ ὑμῶν “from you” may possibly signal a heightened sense of outrage, but more likely is indicative of the relatively early date of Deuteronomion.

Deut^{Tr} judged the expression in 10.16, עֲרֵלַת לִבְבְּכֶם “the foreskin of your heart,” perhaps too graphic and made a moral/theological judgment to render it as σκληροκαρδῖαν ὑμῶν “your hardheartedness.” It is also quite clear that he deliberately sought to avoid translating מֶלֶךְ as βασιλεύς when the referent could possibly be construed as a king of Israel. In those five instances (17.14, 15(2x); 28.36; 33.5), he chose the word ἄρχων “ruler.” For him, it seems there could only be one βασιλεύς in Israel and that would be κύριος their god.

These brief comments should suffice to demonstrate that Deut^{Tr} was, on the one hand, a translator who often slavishly mimicked his source text but who, on the other hand, from time to time slipped in some exegesis. He does not make unwarranted changes, but when he deems them necessary, he does not hesitate to act.

ISSUES OF THE PARENT TEXT

We turn now to examples of variance between Greek and Hebrew Deuteronomy whether occasioned by misreading, misunderstanding or, as seems clear in a few places, a source text different from BHS. The well-known “shema” in 6.4 consists in Hebrew of six words. In Greek the verse is prefaced with: Καὶ ταῦτα τὰ δικαιώματα καὶ τὰ κρίματα, ὅσα ἐντείλατο κύριος τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἐξεληθόντων αὐτῶν ἐκ γῆς Αἰγύπτου “And these are the statutes and the judgments, which the Lord commanded to the sons of Israel in the wilderness as they were coming out from the land of Egypt.” Given Deut^{Tr}’s preoccupation with quantitative representation of his source in undisputed areas, there is no reason to think that the Hebrew equivalent of this passage was absent from his Vorlage. The initial introductory remarks in 6.1 in the Greek tradition are directed to Moyses; those in 6.4 to the sons of Israel.

The case in 30.15, 16 is similar but less debatable. The Hebrew of BHS is both illogical and deficient, the Greek quite clear. Hebrew verse 15 indicates that what Moses set before the people was “the life and the good, the death and the evil.” The following verse begins with רָעָה, the logical antecedent of which is הָרַע. As the text stands, it would be translated “the evil (16) which I command you today to love the Lord your God”—clearly an untenable text. The Greek reads: Ἰδοὺ δέδωκα πρὸ προσώπου σου σήμερον τὴν ζωὴν καὶ τὸν θάνατον, τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ τὸ κακόν. 16. ἐὰν δὲ εἰσακούσῃς τὰς ἐντολάς κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ σου, ὅσας ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι σοι σήμερον, ἀγαπᾶν κύριον τὸν θεόν σου “See, I have given before you today life and death, good and evil. 16. Now if you listen to the commandments of the Lord your God that I command you today, to love the Lord your God.” Though it might be argued in this and other places that the smoother text derives from an attempt to correct the perceived difficulty in the original, that seems unlikely. Only an inclination to privilege BHS on other grounds would lead one to set aside the LXX Vorlage in this instance and argue for a shorter text.

In 32.43, the Greek is twice as long as the extant Hebrew text—eight lines to four hemistichs. The longer text is not merely an elaboration of the Hebrew but adds significant details (including a reference to “all the angels of God”), which, given the generally conservative attitude of Deut^{tr}, are best explained as text-based. A text from Qumran representing in part the source text of the LXX is extant.³ Let it suffice to note that the next verse (44) is also longer in Greek than in BHS, preposing the equivalent of “And Moses wrote this song in that day and taught it to the sons of Israel.” BHS is not identically rendered either. BHS’s equivalent of “all the words of this song” appear in Greek as “all the words of this law,” producing two subscriptions to the narrative. Indeed, throughout this entire chapter and the following one, there are notable differences between the Greek and the Hebrew.

Variance between the verse numbers of BHS and Greek exists in some chapters. Chapter 5 provides a good example. The order of the apodictic commandments is adultery, murder, theft, unlike the Hebrew (murder, adultery, theft) and unlike Exodus (adultery, theft, murder). Likewise, the list of clean and unclean food in chapter 14 shows variation in the number of some verses vis-à-vis BHS.

Less important, but equally intriguing, are the instances where, for reasons not always apparent, Deut^{tr} chose to translate rather than transliterate place names or vice versa. Examples appear throughout with no observable pattern. In 34.6, “in the valley” (בַּגַּיִן) is read as a proper name “in Gai” (ἐν Γαί); Abib (אֲבִיב) and Pesach (פֶּסַח) are rendered respectively as τὰ νέα “of new things” and τὸ πάσχα “the pascha (= passover)” in 16.1.ff. The oft-quoted passage in 26.5 אֲרַמְיָא אֲבִי אֲבוֹתֵינוּ “a wandering Aramean was my father” becomes in Greek Συρίαν ἀπέβαλεν ὁ πατήρ μου “my ancestor abandoned Syria.” The difference might simply be due to wrong word division of an unpointed Hebrew text, or may be a contextualized interpretation to connect with “going down into Egypt.”

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF DEUTERONOMION

The problems inherent in “translating a translation” assume unique dimensions in each specific translation unit when one tries, in line with NETS policy, to achieve not only semantic fidelity to the Greek but at the same time reflect something of the style in which it has been translated. Vis-à-vis the NRSV as base text for NETS, this can mean that the former has been altered for either one or both of the above reasons.

Deut^{tr}, as has been noted, is closely tied to his source text both in terms of what he understands the text to mean and in terms of its text linguistics. Therefore, when variation is present in the translation of common expressions, it seems fair to conclude that he was acting intentionally. I have striven to reflect this consistency in NETS Deuteronomion in order to signal precisely what is present in Greek. For example, ἔκγονα and σπέρμα(τα) are both acceptably translated as “offspring”; indeed, the NRSV translates some of their Hebrew equivalents (צֶרֶף/σπέρμα(τα) and יָצָא/υἱός) in this way. I have, however, reserved “offspring” as the translation of only σπέρμα(τα) and have chosen “progeny” consistently to translate ἔκγονα; υἱός is, of course, “son.” What is relevant here for the NETS reader is that progeny will always indicate a particular word choice of Deut^{tr} without indicating his decision about the Hebrew text; offspring, when found in the same place in NETS and the NRSV, may point to different Hebrew/Greek originals.

The reader will also find certain seemingly inelegant renderings for the Hebraisms so prominent throughout Deuteronomion. For instance, in expressions like φυλάξασθε ποιεῖν, ἀκούσατε ποιεῖν, and so forth, I have regularly chosen “to perform” as a translation for the infinitive ποιεῖν, and “guard” rather than “keep” for the imperative, making for the awkward “be watchful to perform” or “listen to perform.” I have also sought to reflect the imitative style of Deut^{tr}’s treatment of Hebrew free infinitives juxtaposed to cognate verbs. So rather than translating εἰν ἀκοῇ ἀκούσητε as “if you will only hear” (cf. NRSV), NETS displays “in/with hearing you will hear” and similar expressions throughout. Similarly, pleonastic expressions, as mentioned earlier, have generally been translated in full. The reason for this approach is not a desire for dogged literalism, but a recognition of the fact that Deut^{tr} under the influence of his source text produced non-idiomatic Greek.

The treatment of the formulaic language should be easy to decode, but a few popular choices follow: κλῆρος = “allotment,” ἐν κλήρῳ = “as an allotment,” κληρονομία = “possession” or “inheritance,” φυλάγματα = “orders,” προστάγματα = “ordinances,” δικαιώματα = “statutes,” κρίματα = “judgments,” μαρτυρία = “testimonies.” Such stereotyping is, of course, not always the case. This is particularly true of the frequently recurring verbal forms of κληρονομέω. This verb and its cognates almost always translate

שׂר' irrespective of its Hebrew stem. Thus the appearance of κληρονομέω in the Greek text signals, in the first instance, only that the translator was formally reflecting the Hebrew before him. Following Deut^{Tr}'s approach to his Hebrew, I have utilized the English word "inherit" as a sort of default rendering of κληρονομέω in Deuteronomion. The NETS reader may thus find some degree of tension at times between the word "inherit" and its context. When the choice of "inherit" would produce not simply tension but ambiguity in English, I have employed words like "possess," "dispossess" or "take possession of" as alternatives.

Again, I have routinely retained NRSV's choice of "to bring" (whether in or out) as a translation for the Hebrew verb (נָבַח mostly in the Hiphil) underlying both εισάγω and ἐξάγω, although in some instances "to lead" seemed more appropriate. The simplex form of the verb ἄγω, however, was always translated "to lead." Consistent with NETS principles, the NRSV's reading was retained when the Greek text is equivalent to the Hebrew, with deviations occurring only when the NRSV's word choice would violate NETS objectives on other grounds. I have chosen "guest" as the translation for Greek προσήλυτος even though NRSV's "resident alien" might suffice. Also, where Deut^{Tr} used πάροικος, I have chosen the word "sojourn(er)," reserving "foreigner" for the translation of ἀλλότριος and cognates.

Similarly, while in the NRSV "slave" is used without distinction to translate Hebrew עַבְד and its cognates, Deut^{Tr} differentiated types of servitude and servants. Thus, when οἰκέτης appears in Greek, I have generally chosen "domestic" as the translation, reserving "slave" for δούλος, and "male slave" and "female slave" respectively as the translations for παῖς and παιδίσκη. When the gender of the male slave is not in doubt, παῖς is translated in some instances simply as "slave."

Of the same nature is the undifferentiated use of the verb "destroy" throughout the NRSV to translate a number of Hebrew verbs. By far the most frequently used verb for "destruction" in Greek Deuteronomy is ἐξολεθρεύω, a neologism shared with other Pentateuchal books. I have chosen "utterly destroy" as its default translation. The unqualified word "destroy" was reserved for the next most frequently used Greek verb, ἀπολλύω and its cognates. In the handful of instances when ἀναλίσκω and its cognates are used, I have chosen "eliminate," "consume," or "devour" depending on context, whereas for ἐκτρίβω, I routinely select "wipe out" or perhaps "rub out" in keeping with its sense in Greek. I generally have been spare with footnotes, assuming that readers who know Greek will check the original and those who do not will only be bogged down by excessive details.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Work of this kind depends on any number of resources, and I am happy to recognize my debts. Beyond the standard grammars and lexical aids, I was helped especially by the CATSS resources, notably the Parallel Aligned Text of Deuteronomy, by Wevers' Text History of the Greek Deuteronomy (=MSU XIII; Göttingen; Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1978), particularly chapter 7 dealing with the critical text of Deuteronomy, by his article on "The Attitude of the Greek Translator of Deuteronomy toward his Parent Text" (Beiträge zur alttestamentlichen Theologie: Festschrift für W. Zimmerli zum 70. Geburtstag [H. Donner, R. Hanhart, R. Smend, eds.; Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1977] 498–505) and his Notes on the Greek Text of Deuteronomy cited above. This latter was unusually helpful when obscure lexical items or unusual Greek expressions made for ambiguous or impossible readings. In addition, C. Dogniez and M. Harl's French translation, Le Deutéronome BA (1992), though translating primarily Rahlfs' edition and operating on different principles from NETS, took account of the Göttingen apparatuses and thus was of inestimable value in many ways. Until a commentary on NETS Deuteronomion is available, the reader is well advised to consult the extensive introduction and copious notes of this edition. Older English translations of Brenton and Thomson provided occasional assistance, but given their respective dates and their diplomatic nature, their help was not as valuable.

It remains then for me only to thank formally Albert Pietersma, general co-editor of the NETS project, whose insightful critique of a few sample pages of this translation helped sharpen my understanding of the finer nuances of the project on which we were jointly embarking. Whatever infelicities and inconsistencies remain are, however, entirely my own.

MELVIN K. H. PETERS

1 These are the words that Moyses spoke to all Israel beyond the Jordan—in the wilderness, towards the west near the Red Sea, among Pharan, Tophol and Lobon and Courts^a—and Goldplaces^b—2(a route of eleven days from Choreb, by way of Mount Seir, up to Kades Barne). ³And it happened in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first of the month, that Moyses spoke to all the sons of Israel according to all that the Lord had commanded him for them. ⁴After he struck Seon king of the Amorrites, who lived in Hesebon, and Og king of Basan, who lived in As-taroth and in Edrain, ⁵across from the Jordan, in the land of Moab, Moyses began to clarify this law, saying:

6 The Lord our God spoke to us at Choreb, saying, “Let it be sufficient for you to live at this mountain. ⁷Turn, and depart, you, and go into the mountain of the Amorrites and to all those who live around Araba, to mountain and plain and to the south and seacoast, the land of Chananites and Anti-Lebanon, as far as the great river Euphrates. ⁸See, I have given the land before you; when you have gone in, inherit the land that I swore to your fathers, to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, to give to them and to their offspring after them.”

9 And I said to you in that time, saying: “I will not be able alone to bear you. ¹⁰The Lord your God has multiplied you, and look, you are today like the stars of the sky in number. ¹¹May the Lord, the God of your fathers, add to you, as you are, a thousand times and bless you, as he has spoken to you! ¹²How will I be able alone to bear your hardship and your substance and your disputes? ¹³Assign for yourselves men, wise and discerning and prudent for your tribes, and I will appoint them as your leaders.” ¹⁴And you answered me and said, “The word which you have spoken to do is good.” ¹⁵And I took from you men, wise and discerning and prudent, and appointed them to be leaders over you—officers of thousands and officers of hundreds and officers of fifties and officers of tens and recorders for your judges. ¹⁶And I commanded your judges at that time, saying: “Give a full hearing among your brothers, and judge rightly between a man and between his brother and between his guest. ¹⁷You shall not recognize the person when judging: like the small so you shall judge the great; you shall not shrink from the face of a person, for the judgment is God’s. And the matter, if it be too hard for you, you will bring it to me, and I will hear it.” ¹⁸And I commanded you in that time all the things that you should do.

19 And after we departed from Choreb, we went through all that great and terrible wilderness that you saw, by route of the mountain of the Amorrite, just as the Lord our God had commanded us, and we came as far as Kades Barne. ²⁰And I said to you, “You have come as far as the mountain of the Amorrite, which the Lord our God is giving you. ²¹See, the Lord your God has given over to you the land before you. After you have gone up, inherit, as the Lord, the God of your fathers, said to you; do not fear, neither be afraid.”

22 And all of you came to me and said, “Let us send men ahead of us, and let them explore the land for us, and let them report to us a decision regarding the route through which we shall go up on it and the cities into which we will come into them.” ²³And the matter was pleasing to me, and I took from you twelve men, one man a tribe. ²⁴And after they had set out, they went up into the mountain and went as far as Cluster Ravine and surveyed it. ²⁵And they took in their hands some of the fruit of the land and brought it down to us and said, “The land is good that the Lord our God is giving us.”

26 And you did not want to go up. And you disobeyed the word of the Lord your God, ²⁷and you grumbled in your tents and said, “It is because the Lord hates us that he brought us out of the land of Egypt, to give us into the hands of the Amorrites to destroy us utterly. ²⁸Where are we going up? Our brothers have disquieted our hearts, saying, ‘A great and numerous nation and more powerful than we, and cities, large and walled up to the sky! Nay, even sons of giants we have seen there!’ ” ²⁹And I said to you, “Do not be alarmed, neither be afraid of them. ³⁰The Lord your God, who goes before you, he will fight them together with you, according to all which he did for you in the land of Egypt ³¹and in this wilderness which you saw, how the Lord your God nursed you, as some person would nurse his son, along all the way that you went until you came to this place. ³²And in this matter you did not believe the Lord your God, ³³who went before you on the way to choose a place for you, leading you by fire at night, showing you the route whereby you should go upon it, and in a cloud by day.”

34 And the Lord heard the sound of your words and, being provoked, he swore, saying: ³⁵“If one of these men shall see this good land that I swore to your fathers! ³⁶Except Chaleb son of Iephonne, he shall see it, and to him I will give the land on which he trod, and to his sons, because he followed closely the things of the Lord.” ³⁷Even with me the Lord was angry on your account, saying, “Not even you shall enter there. ³⁸Iesous son of Naue, who stands beside you, he shall enter there; strengthen him, for he will take possession of it for Israel. ³⁹And every young child, who today does not know good or evil, they shall enter there, and to them I will give it, and they shall inherit it. ⁴⁰And when you have turned, march into the wilderness, by the route toward the Red Sea.”

41 And you answered and said to me, “We have sinned against the Lord our God! Let us go up and fight, in accordance with all that the Lord our God commanded us.” And, each of you, when you had strapped on your battle gear and had gathered, went up into the mountain. ⁴²And the Lord said to me, “Say to them, ‘You shall not go up, neither shall you fight, for I am not with you, and you shall not be wiped out before your enemies.'"⁴³And I spoke to you, but you did not listen to me. And you transgressed the word of the Lord, and ^aby force^a you went up into the mountain. ⁴⁴And the Amorrite who lived in that mountain came out to meet you and chased you as bees might do. And they were wounding you from Seir as far as Herma. ⁴⁵And when you sat down, you were weeping before the Lord, and the Lord neither listened to your voice nor paid you any attention. ⁴⁶And you stayed at Kades for many days, however many days you stayed.

2 And after we had turned, we departed into the wilderness by way of the Red Sea, as the Lord had told me, and went around Mount Seir for many days. ²And the Lord said to me: ³"Let it be sufficient for you to go around this mountain. Turn therefore to the north, ⁴and command the people, saying: You are passing through the borders of your brothers, the sons of Esau, who live in Seir. And they will be afraid of you, and they will be very cautious. ⁵Do not engage in battle with them, for I will not even give you a foot's pace of their land, since I have given Mount Seir to Esau as an allotment. ⁶Purchase food from them, and you will eat, and you shall also take water by measure from them for money, and you will drink. ⁷For the Lord our God has blessed you in every work of your hands. Consider how you crossed this great and terrible wilderness. Look, for forty years the Lord your God has been with you; you have not been in need of a thing."⁸And we passed by our brothers, the sons of Esau who live in Seir, along the route of the Araba, from Ailon and from Gasion Gaber.

And after we had turned, we went along the wilderness route of Moab, ⁹and the Lord said to me: "Do not act with enmity against the Moabites, and do not engage in battle with them, for I will not give you any of their land as an allotment, for I have given Aroer to the sons of Lot to inherit."¹⁰(The erstwhile Ommin—a nation large and numerous and mighty like the Enakim—had settled in it. ¹¹Like the Enakim, these also shall be reckoned as Rephain, and the Moabites name them Ommin. ¹²And the Chorrite had formerly lain couched in Seir, and the sons of Esau destroyed them and wiped them out from before them, and they were settled in their place, as Israel did with the land of its inheritance that the Lord gave them.) ¹³"Now then, rise up, and depart, and go alongside the ravine of Zared."

So we passed along the ravine of Zared. ¹⁴And the days which we had gone alongside from Kades Barne until we passed along the ravine of Zared were thirty-eight years until the entire generation of the men, warriors of the camp, had fallen away, as the Lord had sworn to them. ¹⁵And the hand of God was against them, to eliminate them from the camp until they fell away.

¹⁶And it happened, when all the men, the warriors, had fallen away, since they were dying off from among the people, ¹⁷that the Lord spoke to me, saying, ¹⁸"Today you are going to pass the boundary of Moab at Aroer, ¹⁹and you will draw near to the sons of Amman. Do not act with enmity against them, and do not engage them in battle, for I will not give any of the land of the sons of Amman to you as an allotment, because I have given it to the sons of Lot as an allotment."²⁰(It will be reckoned as a land of Rephain, for the Rephain formerly inhabited it, and the Ammanites name them Zomzommin, ²¹a nation, great and numerous and rather powerful, just as the Enakim, and the Lord destroyed them from before them, and they took possession and were settled in place of them. ²²Just as they^b did to the sons of Esau, who live in Seir, as they^c wiped out the Chorrite before them, so they took possession and were settled in their place even to this day. ²³As for the Heuites, who live in Haseroth as far as Gaza, and the Cappadocians, who came from Cappadocia, they wiped them out and were settled in their place.) ²⁴"Now then, arise, and depart, and pass through the ravine of Arnon. See, I have given into your hands King Seon the Amorrite of Hesebon and his land. Begin to inherit; engage him in battle. ²⁵On this day begin to put your trembling and your fear upon all the nations beneath the sky who, when they hear your name, will be troubled and have pains because of you."

²⁶And I sent ambassadors from the wilderness of Kedmoth to King Seon of Hesebon with words of peace, saying: ²⁷"I will pass by through your land; I will travel along the road; I will turn neither right nor left. ²⁸You will sell me food for money, and I will eat, and you will sell me water for money, and I will drink. Only that I will pass by on foot—²⁹just as the sons of Esau who live in Seir did for me and likewise the Moabites who live in Aroer—until I pass the Jordan into the land that the Lord our God is giving us."³⁰And King Seon of Hesebon did not want to let us pass by him, for the Lord our God had hardened his spirit and prevailed over his heart in order that he might be delivered into your hands, as it is on this day.

³¹And the Lord said to me, "See, I have begun to give King Seon the Amorrite of Hesebon and his land over before you. Begin to inherit his land."³²And Seon came out to meet us, he and all his people for battle at Iasa, ³³and the Lord our God gave him over before us, and we struck him down, and his sons and all his people. ³⁴And we captured all the cities at that time, and we utterly destroyed every city in order, and their women and their children we did not leave alive. ³⁵Only the cattle we plundered, and the spoils of the cities we took: ³⁶from Aroer, which is along the edge of the Wadi Arnon, and the city that is in the ravine, even as far as the mountain of Galaad. There was not a city which escaped us. The Lord our God gave over all of them into our hands. ³⁷We did not enter, however, into the land of the sons of Amman, all the regions bordering the Wadi Iabok as well as the cit-

3 And after we had turned, we went up the road to Basan. And King Og of Basan came out to meet us, he and all his people, for battle at Edrain. ²And the Lord said to me, "Do not fear him, for I have given him over into your hands, and all his people and all his land. And you shall do to him as you did to King Seon of the Amorrites, who used to live in Hesebon." ³And the Lord our God delivered him into our hands, even King Og of Basan and all his people. And we struck him down until we did not leave him offspring. ⁴And at that time we captured all his cities; there was no city that we did not take from them—sixty cities, all the environs of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Basan. ⁵All these were strong cities, high walls, gates and bars, besides the very many cities of the Pherezites. ⁶We utterly destroyed them, as we did King Seon of Hesebon, and we utterly destroyed every city in order, and the women and the children. ⁷And all the cattle and the spoils of the cities we plundered for ourselves.

8 And at that time we took out of the hands of the two Amorrite kings who were beyond the Jordan the land from the Wadi Arnon up to Haermon ⁹(the Phoenicians named Haermon Sanior, and the Amorrite named it Sanir). ¹⁰All were cities of Misor and all of Galaad and all of Basan, as far as Selcha and Edrain, cities of Og's kingdom in Basan. ¹¹(Because only King Og of Basan was left from the Raphain. Look, his bed was an iron bed; look, it is in the citadel of the sons of Amman. By ^aa man's forearm^a it is nine cubits long and four cubits wide.) ¹²And we took possession of that land at that time, from Aroer, which is along the edge of the Wadi Arnon, and half of the mountainous area of Galaad and its cities I gave to Rouben and to Gad. ¹³And I gave to the half-tribe of Manasse the rest of Galaad and all of Basan, Og's kingdom, and all the environs of Argob, all of said Basan. (It will be reckoned a land of Raphain.) ¹⁴And Jair son of Manasse took all the environs of Argob as far as the borders of Gargasi and Homachathi, and he named them after his name—Basan Hauoth Jair—until this day. ¹⁵And to Machir I gave Galaad. ¹⁶And to Rouben and to Gad I gave from Galaad as far as the Wadi Arnon, the middle of the wadi being a boundary, and up to the Iabok, the wadi being the boundary for the sons of Amman, ¹⁷the Araba also and the Jordan, being a boundary of Machanarath even up to the sea of Araba, the Salt Sea, under Asedoth of Phasga on the east.

18 And at that time I commanded you, saying: "The Lord your God gave you this land as an allotment; proceed fully armed before your brothers, the sons of Israel, every mighty one of you. ¹⁹Only your wives and your children and and your cattle—I know that you have much cattle—let them settle in your cities that I have given to you ²⁰until

the Lord your God gives your brothers rest, as also you and they too will inherit the land that the Lord your God is giving them beyond the Jordan, and you will return, each one to his inheritance that I have given to you." ²¹And I commanded Iesous at that time, saying: "Your eyes have seen everything that the Lord your God has done to these two kings; so the Lord will do to all the kingdoms which you are about to cross into there. ²²You shall not be fearful of them, for the Lord your God himself will fight for you."

23 At that time, too, I entreated the Lord, saying: ²⁴"O Lord, Lord, you have begun to show your attendant your strength and your power and your strong hand and your high arm. For what god is there in the sky or on the earth who will do as you have done, and according to your strength? ²⁵After I cross over, therefore, I will see this good land, which is beyond the Jordan, this good mountainous area and the Anti-Lebanon." ²⁶And the Lord ignored me on your account and did not listen to me. And the Lord said to me, "Let it be sufficient for you! Do not continue any longer to speak to me of this matter! ²⁷Go up to the top of Hewn, and look with your eyes to the sea and the north and the southwest and the east, and see with your eyes, for you shall not cross over this Jordan. ²⁸And command Iesous, and strengthen him, and encourage him, because he will cross over ahead of this people, and it is he who will secure for them the possession of the land that you have seen." ²⁹And we remained in a glen near the house of Phogor.

4 And now, Israel, hear the statutes and judgments that I am teaching you to do today so that you may live and, after you have entered, may inherit the land that the Lord, the God of your fathers, is giving you. ²You shall not add to the word I command you, and you shall not take away from it. Keep the commandments of the Lord your God with which I command you today. ³Your eyes have seen all that the Lord your^b God did to Beelphegor—that, every person who went after Beelphegor, the Lord your God wiped him out from among you, ⁴but those of you who held fast to the Lord your God are all alive today.

5 See, I have shown you statutes and ordinances, as the Lord has commanded me, to do so in the land into which you are entering there to inherit it. ⁶And you shall keep and do them, because this is your wisdom and discernment before all the nations, as many as might hear all these statutes, and they will say, "Look, this great nation is a wise and understanding people!" ⁷For what sort of great nation has a god for itself so near to them as the Lord our God is in everything whenever we invoke him? ⁸And what sort of great nation has for itself statutes and righteous judgment in accord with all this law that I am giving before you today?

9 Take heed to yourself, and guard your soul closely, lest you forget all the things that your eyes have seen, and let them not be far from your heart all the days of your life, and you shall direct your sons and your sons' sons ¹⁰about the day when you stood before the Lord your God at Choreb, on the day of the assembly when the Lord said to me, "Assemble the people to me, and let them hear my words so that they may learn to fear me all the days as long as they live on the earth and may teach their sons," ¹¹ and you approached and stood at the foot of the mountain, and the mountain was burning with fire up to the sky: darkness, gloom, tempest. ¹² And the Lord spoke to you from the midst of the fire. You heard the sound of words but you did not notice a likeness, only a voice. ¹³ And he announced to you his covenant, which he commanded you to do, the ten words, and he wrote them on two stone tablets. ¹⁴ And the Lord commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and ordinances for you to do them in the land into which you are entering there to inherit it.

²¹ And the Lord was angry with me because of the things being said by you, and he swore that I would not cross this Jordan and that I would not enter into the land that the Lord God is giving to you as an allotment. ²² For I am going to die in this land, and I am not crossing over this Jordan, but you are going to cross over, and you will take possession of this good land. ²³ As for you, take care, lest you forget the covenant of the Lord your God, which he made with you, and make for yourselves an engraved likeness of all of the things that the Lord your God has instructed you. ²⁴ For the Lord your God is a devouring fire, a jealous god.

²⁵ Now if you bear sons and sons' sons and live long in the land and you act lawlessly and make an engraved likeness of anything and do what is evil before the Lord your God, to provoke him to anger, ²⁶ I call sky and earth to witness against you today that by destruction you will perish from the land that you are crossing the Jordan to inherit there; you will not prolong days on it but will be wiped out with a wiping. ²⁷ And the Lord will scatter you among all the nations, and you will be left few in number among the nations into which the Lord will bring you there. ²⁸ And there you will serve other gods, works of human hands, wood and stone, who will neither see nor hear nor eat nor smell. ²⁹ And there you will seek the Lord your God, and you will find him when you seek him out with your whole heart and with your whole soul, ⁽³⁰⁾ in your distress. ³⁰ And all these words shall find you in the end of days, and you will return to the Lord your God and listen to his voice. ³¹ Because the Lord your God is a compassionate god, he will neither abandon you nor wipe you out; he will not forget the covenant with your fathers that he swore to them.

³² Ask of former days which occurred long before your own, from the day that God created a human being on the earth; ask^a at the end of the sky up to the end of the sky whether a thing this great has ever happened, whether such a thing has been heard of; ³³ whether any nation has ever heard the voice of a living god speaking from the midst of the fire, as you have heard, and you lived, ³⁴ whether a god ever attempted to go and take a nation for himself from the midst of a nation, by trial and by signs and by wonders and by war and by a strong hand and a high arm and by great exhibits, like all which the Lord your God did in Egypt before you, as you were looking on ³⁵ so that you might know that the Lord your God he is God, and there is no other besides him. ³⁶ From the sky his voice became audible to discipline you, and on earth he showed you his great fire, and you heard his words coming from the midst of the fire. ³⁷ Because he loved your fathers, he also chose you, their offspring after them, and himself brought you out of Egypt, by his great power, ³⁸ to destroy utterly before you great nations, and mightier than yourselves, to bring you in, to give you their land to inherit, as you have today. ³⁹ And you will know today and bear in mind that the Lord your God, he is God in the sky above and on the earth beneath, and there is no other besides him. ⁴⁰ And you will keep his statutes and his commandments, which I command you today, so that it may be well with you and with your sons after you so that you may be long-lived in the land that the Lord your God is giving you for all your days.

⁴¹ Then Moyses set apart three cities beyond the Jordan toward the rising of the sun ⁴² for the murderer to flee there, whoever might unintentionally kill his neighbor, and he did not hate him before yesterday and the third day, and he shall flee to one of these cities and live: ⁴³ Bosor in the wilderness on the plain country belonging to Rouben and Ramoth in Galaad belonging to Gaddi and Gaulon in Basan belonging to Manasse.

⁴⁴ This is the law that Moyses set before the sons of Israel. ⁴⁵ These are the testimonies and the statutes and the judgments that Moyses spoke to the sons of Israel when they had come out of the land of Egypt, ⁴⁶ beyond the Jordan in the valley near the house of Phogor, in the land of King Seon of the Amorrites, who used to live in Hesebon, whom^a Moyses and the sons of Israel defeated when they had come out of the land of Egypt.⁴⁷ And they took possession of his land and the land of King Og of Basan, two kings of the Amorrites who were beyond the Jordan toward the rising of the sun,⁴⁸ from Aroer, which is on the edge of the Wadi Arnon, and to Mount Seon (that is, Haermon),⁴⁹ all the Araba beyond the Jordan toward the rising of the sun, east under Asedoth quarried from rock.

5 And Moyses called all Israel and said to them: Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments that I am speaking in your ears this day, and you shall learn them and be watchful to perform them.² The Lord your God established a covenant with you at Choreb.³ Not with your fathers did the Lord establish this covenant, but with all of you here alive today.⁴ The Lord spoke with you face-to-face at the mountain, from the midst of the fire,⁵ and I stood between the Lord and you at that time, to report to you the words of the Lord, for you were afraid because of the fire and did not go up into the mountain, saying:

6 I am the Lord your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery.⁷ You shall have no other gods before me.

8 You shall not make for yourself a carved object or likeness of anything whatever is in heaven above and whatever is in the earth beneath and whatever is in the waters under the earth.⁹ You shall not do obeisance to them, nor are you to serve them, because I am the Lord your God, a jealous god, repaying the sins of fathers upon children to the third and fourth generation to those who hate me,¹⁰ and doing mercy unto thousands, for those who love me and keep my ordinances.

11 You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain. For the Lord will never acquit the one who takes his name in vain.

12 Keep the day of the sabbaths to consecrate it, as the Lord your God commanded you.¹³ Six days you shall labor and do all your labor,¹⁴ but on the seventh day there is Sabbata to the Lord your God; you shall not do in it any labor—you and your son and your daughter, your male slave and your female slave, your ox and your draft animal and any animal of yours and the guest within your gates so that your male slave and your female slave may rest as well as you.¹⁵ And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of Egypt, and the Lord your God brought you out from there with a strong hand and with a high arm; therefore, the Lord your God instructed you to keep the day of the sabbaths and to consecrate it.

16 Honor your father and your mother, as the Lord your God commanded you, so that it may be well with you and that you may be long-lived in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

17(18) You shall not commit adultery.

18(17) You shall not murder.

19 You shall not steal.

20 You shall not testify falsely against your neighbor with a false testimony.

21 You shall not covet your neighbor's wife; you shall not covet your neighbor's house or his field or his male slave or his female slave or his ox or his draft animal, or any animal of his or whatever belongs to your neighbor.

22 These words the Lord spoke to your whole gathering at the mountain, from the midst of the fire—darkness, blackness, tempest, a loud voice—and he did not add. And he wrote them on two stone tablets and gave them to me.²³ And it happened, when you heard the voice from the midst of the fire and the mountain was burning with fire, that you approached me, all the leaders of your tribes and your council of elders,²⁴ and you said, "Look, the Lord our God has shown us his glory, and we have heard his voice from the midst of the fire. This day we have seen that God will speak to a person, and he will live."²⁵ And now let us not die. For this great fire will consume us; if we continue to hear the voice of the Lord our God any longer, then we will die.²⁶ For what flesh, which has heard the voice of the living God when he speaks from the midst of fire, as we have, shall also live?²⁷ Go you near, and hear whatever the Lord our God may say. And you shall speak to us all things, whatever the Lord our God may speak to you, and we will hear and do it."

28 And the Lord heard the sound of your words when you were speaking to me, and the Lord said to me: "I have heard the sound of the words of this people, what they have spoken to you; all that they have spoken^b they have spoken^b correctly.²⁹ Who shall grant that their heart be in them in such a way that they fear me and keep my commandments in all their days so that it might go well with them and with their sons forever!"³⁰ Go, say to them, 'Return to your houses.'³¹ But you, stand here with me, and I will speak to you the commandments and the statutes and the judgments that you shall teach them, and let them do them in the land that I am giving them as an allotment."³² And you shall be watchful to do as the Lord your God has commanded; you shall not turn right or left,³³ to go according to all the way that the Lord your God has commanded so that he may give you rest and that it may go well with you and that you may prolong your days upon the land that you shall inherit.

6 And these are the commandments and the statutes and the ordinances that the Lord your God commanded to teach you to do so in the land which you are entering there to inherit² so that you may fear the Lord your God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments that I command you today, you and your sons and your sons' sons, all the days of your life so that you may be long-lived.³ Now hear, O Israel, and be watchful to perform so that it may be well with you and that you may multiply greatly, just as the Lord, the God of your fathers, has spoken, to give you a land flowing with milk and honey.

4 And these are the statutes and the judgments, which the Lord commanded to the sons of Israel in the wilderness as they were coming out from the land of Egypt. Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord. ⁵And you shall love the Lord your God with the whole of your mind and with the whole of your soul and with the whole of your power. ⁶And these words that I command you today shall be in your heart and in your soul. ⁷And you shall teach them to your sons and talk on them while sitting at home and going on the road and lying down and rising up. ⁸And you shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be ^athings unshakable^a before your eyes, ⁹and you shall write them on the doorposts of your houses and of your gates.

10 And it shall be, whenever the Lord your God brings you into the land that he swore to your fathers, to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, to give you large and fine cities that you did not build, ¹¹houses full of all sorts of goods that you did not fill, dug cisterns that you did not dig out, vineyards and olive groves that you did not plant. And when you eat and become full, ¹²take care for yourself, lest you forget the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery. ¹³The Lord your God you shall fear, and him you shall serve, and to him you shall cling, and by his name you shall swear. ¹⁴Do not go after other gods from the gods of the nations around you, ¹⁵because the Lord your God, who is present with you, is a jealous god. Lest the Lord your God, ^bbeing angered with wrath against you^b, destroy you utterly from the face of the earth.

16 You shall not tempt the Lord your God, as you tempted in the Temptation. ¹⁷By guarding, you shall keep the commandments of the Lord God, the testimonies and the statutes that he has commanded you. ¹⁸And you shall do what is pleasing and good before the Lord your God, so that it may be well for you and that you may go in and inherit the good land that the Lord swore to your fathers, ¹⁹to chase out all your enemies before you, as he said.

20 And it shall be, when your son asks you tomorrow, saying, "What are the testimonies and the statutes and the judgments that the Lord our God has commanded you?" ²¹that you shall say to your son, "We were domestics to Pharao in the land of Egypt, and the Lord brought us from there with a strong hand and with a high arm. ²²And the Lord gave before us signs and wonders, great and evil in Egypt, against Pharao and against his household. ²³And he brought us out from there in order to bring us in, to give to us this land that he swore to give to our fathers. ²⁴And the Lord commanded us to perform all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, so that it may be well for us all our days so that we may live, as it is today. ²⁵If we are watchful to perform all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he has commanded us, there will also be mercy for us."

7 Now if the Lord your God brings you into the land that you are entering there to inherit and shall clear away great and numerous nations before you—the Chettite and the Gergesite and the Amorrite and the Chananite and the Pherazite and the Heuite and the Iebousite, seven nations numerous and mightier than you—²and the Lord your God shall deliver them into your hands and you shall strike them, by annihilation you shall annihilate them. You shall not establish a covenant with them, neither shall you have mercy on them. ³Neither shall you intermarry with them. You shall not give your daughter to his son, and you shall not take his daughter for your son, ⁴for she^d will turn away your son from me, and he will serve other gods. And the Lord will be angered with wrath against you and will utterly destroy you quickly. ⁵But thus you shall do to them: you shall break down their altars^e and smash their steles and cut down their groves and burn the carved objects of their gods with fire. ⁶For you are a people holy to the Lord your God, and the Lord your God has chosen you to be for him an exceptional people, more than all the nations on the face of the earth.

7 It was not because you are more numerous than all nations that the Lord chose you and picked you—for you are very few in comparison with all the nations. ⁸Rather, because the Lord loved you, and since he was keeping the oath that he swore to your fathers, the Lord brought you out with a strong hand and with a high arm and redeemed you from a house of slavery, from the hand of Pharao king of Egypt. ⁹And you shall know that the Lord your God, he is God, the faithful God, who keeps the covenant and mercy with those who love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations, ¹⁰and who repays those who hate him to their face, to destroy them utterly. And he will not delay with those who hate him; to their face he will repay them. ¹¹And you will keep the commandments and the statutes and these judgments—that I command you today to do.

12 And it shall be, whenever you hear all these statutes and keep and do them, that the Lord your God will guard closely for you the covenant and the mercy as he swore to your fathers, ¹³and he will love you and bless you and multiply you, and he will bless the progeny of your belly and the fruit of your land, your grain and your wine and your oil, the herds of your oxen and the flocks of your sheep, in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give you. ¹⁴Blessed you shall be among all the nations; there shall not be an impotent one nor a sterile one among you or your cattle. ¹⁵And the Lord will remove from you every illness, and all the dread diseases of Egypt that you have seen and that you experienced he will not inflict on you, but he will inflict them on all who hate you. ¹⁶And you shall eat all the spoils of the nations that the Lord your God is giving to you; your eye shall not be sparing to them, and you shall not serve their gods, for this is a stumbling block to you.

¹⁷ But if you say in your mind, "This nation is more numerous than I; how will I be able to destroy them utterly?" ¹⁸you shall not be afraid of them. With remembrance you shall remember what the Lord your God did to Pharaoh and to all the Egyptians, ¹⁹the great trials that your eyes saw, the signs and those great wonders, the strong hand and the high arm as the Lord your God brought you out. The Lord our God will do thus to all the nations of whose faces you are afraid. ²⁰And the Lord your God will send the hornets against them until even the ones who have been left and those hidden ^afrom you are wiped out^a. ²¹You shall not be wounded before them, for the Lord your God with you is a great and strong god. ²²And the Lord your God will consume these nations before you little by little; you will not be able to consume them quickly, lest the land become a wilderness and the wild animals be multiplied against you. ²³And the Lord your God will deliver them into your hands, and he will destroy them with a great destruction until he has destroyed them utterly. ²⁴And he will deliver their kings into your hands, and you shall destroy their name from that place; no one will be able to stand up against you until you have destroyed them utterly. ²⁵The carved objects of their gods you shall burn with fire. You shall not desire silver and gold from them, and you shall not take for yourself, lest you stumble by means of it, for it is an abomination to the Lord your God. ²⁶And you shall not bring an abomination into your house, or you will be an anathema like it. With an offense you shall take offense, and with abhorrence you shall abhor it, for it is an anathema.

8 All the commandments that I command you today you shall be watchful to perform so that you may live and increase and go in and inherit the land that the Lord swore to your fathers. ²And you shall remember all the way that the Lord your God has led you in the wilderness so that he might distress you and test you and discern the things in your heart, whether you would keep his commandments or not. ³And he distressed you and let you hunger and fed you with manna with which your fathers were not acquainted in order to announce to you that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that goes out through the mouth of God man shall live. ⁴Your clothes were not worn off you; your feet did not become hard; look, for forty years! ⁵And you shall know in your heart that as a certain person might discipline his son, so the Lord your God will discipline you. ⁶And you shall keep the commandments of the Lord your God, to go in his ways and to fear him.

⁷For the Lord your God is bringing you into a good and extensive land in which there are wadis of waters, springs of underground waters, flowing out through the plains and through the mountains, ⁸a land of wheat and barley, vines, figs, pomegranates, a land of olive trees of oil and of honey, ⁹a land in which you will eat your bread without poverty and will not be in need of anything therein, a land whose stones are iron and from its mountains you will mine copper. ¹⁰And you shall eat and be filled and bless the Lord your God on the good land that he gave you.

¹¹ Take heed for yourself lest you forget the Lord your God, so as not to keep his commandments and his judgments and his statutes, which I command you today. ¹²Lest, when you have eaten and been filled and, having built fine houses and lived in them, ¹³and when your oxen and sheep have multiplied and when silver and gold have been multiplied to you and when all that you own has been multiplied to you, ¹⁴you become exalted in heart and forget the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery, ¹⁵who led you through that great and fearsome wilderness, where there was a biting snake and a scorpion and thirst, where there was no water, who brought out for you from flint rock a spring of water, ¹⁶who fed you with manna in the wilderness that your fathers did not know so that he might distress you and test you, that you might do well at your end. ¹⁷Do not say in your heart, "My strength and the mastery of my hand have produced for me this great power." ¹⁸And you shall remember the Lord your God, for it is he who gives you strength to produce power—and so that he may uphold his covenant that he swore to your fathers, as today. ¹⁹And it shall be, if by forgetting you forget the Lord your God and go after other gods and serve them and do obeisance to them, I ^bcall you to witness^b today that with destruction you shall perish. ²⁰As also the remaining nations, which the Lord is destroying before you, so shall you perish, because you have not heard the voice of the Lord your God.

9 Hear, O Israel! You are crossing the Jordan today, to go in to dispossess nations rather larger and mightier than you, cities great and walled up to the sky, ²a great people, both numerous and tall, sons of Enak, whom you know and of whom you have heard: "Who can stand up against sons of Enak?" ³And you shall know today that the Lord your God—he proceeds before you; a devouring fire is he; he will destroy them utterly, and he will divert them before you, and you will destroy them quickly, as the Lord has said to you.

⁴ When the Lord your God eliminates these nations before you, do not say in your heart, saying: "It is because of my righteousness that the Lord has brought me in to inherit this good land," but because of the impiety of these nations the Lord will destroy them utterly before you. ⁵It is not because of your righteousness or the holiness of your heart that you are going in to inherit their land, but because of the impiety of these nations the Lord will destroy them utterly before you, and in order that he may uphold the covenant that the Lord swore to your fathers, to Abraam and Isaak and Iakob.

6 And you shall know, today, that it is not because of your righteousness the Lord your God is giving you this good land to inherit, for you are a stiff-necked people. 7 Remember, do not forget how you provoked the Lord your God in the wilderness; from the day you came out of Egypt until you came into this place, you have continued being disobedient regarding things concerning the Lord.

8 Even at Choreb you provoked the Lord, and the Lord was angry enough with you to destroy you utterly, 9 when I was going up the mountain to receive the stone tablets, the tablets of the covenant that the Lord established with you, and I stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights; I did not eat bread nor did I drink water. 10 And the Lord gave me the two stone tablets written with the finger of God, and on them had been written all the words that the Lord had spoken to you at the mountain. 11 And it happened, throughout forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave to me the two stone tablets, tablets of covenant. 12 And the Lord said to me, "Get up, go down quickly from here, for your people whom you brought from the land of Egypt have acted lawlessly. They have digressed quickly from the way that you commanded them; they have made for themselves a molten image." 13 And the Lord said to me, "I have spoken to you once and twice, saying: I have seen this people, and look, it is a stiff-necked people. 14 Permit me to destroy them utterly, and I will blot out their name from beneath the sky, and I will make of you a nation great and strong and more numerous than this one."

15 And after I had turned, I went down from the mountain, and the mountain was burning with fire, and the two tablets were in my two hands. 16 And when I saw that you had sinned against the Lord your God and had made for yourselves a molten image and had digressed from the way that the Lord had commanded you, 17 then having taken hold of the two tablets, I flung them from my two hands and smashed them before you. 18 And I petitioned before the Lord a second time as also the first, forty days and forty nights; I did not eat bread, and I did not drink water on account of all your sins that you had sinned, by doing what was evil before the Lord your God, to provoke him. 19 And I was terrified on account of the wrath and the anger, because the Lord had been provoked against you to destroy you utterly. And the Lord listened to me this time also. 20 And the Lord was very full of wrath against Aaron to destroy him utterly, and I prayed also on behalf of Aaron at that time. 21 And your sin which you had made, the bull calf, I took it and burned it with fire and crushed it, grinding thoroughly, until it became fine and it was as dust, and I threw the dust into the wadi that runs down from the mountain.

22 And at The Burning also and at The Temptation and at The Graves of Lusta, you were provoking the Lord by our God^b. 23 And when the Lord sent you from Kades Barne, saying, "Go up, and inherit the land that I am giving you," then you disobeyed the word of the Lord your God and did not trust him and did not listen to his voice. 24 You were disobedient in regard to things concerning the Lord from the day he knew you.

25 And I petitioned before the Lord, for forty days and for forty nights that I petitioned, for the Lord said that he would destroy you utterly. 26 And I prayed to God and said, "O Lord, Lord, king of the gods, do not utterly destroy your people and your possession whom you redeemed by your great strength, whom you brought out of the land of Egypt with your great strength and with your strong hand and your high arm. 27 Remember Abraam and Isaac and Iakob your attendants to whom you swore by yourself; do not look upon the stubbornness of this people and upon the impieties and upon their sins, 28 lest the inhabitants of the land from whence you have brought us say, saying: 'Because the Lord was not able to bring them into the land that he mentioned to them and because he hates them, he brought them out to kill them in the wilderness.' 29 And these are your people and your allotment whom you brought out of the land of Egypt by your great strength and by your high arm."

10 At that time the Lord said to me, "Carve out for yourself two tablets of stone like the former ones, and come up to me on the mountain, and you will make for yourself an ark of wood. 2 And I will write on the tablets the words that were on the former tablets, which you smashed, and you shall put them in the ark." 3 And I made an ark of indestructible boards and carved the two tablets of stone like the former ones and went up the mountain with the two tablets in my hands. 4 And he wrote on the tablets, in accord with the first writing, the ten words that the Lord had spoken to you on the mountain from the midst of the fire, and the Lord gave them to me. 5 And I turned and came down from the mountain and put the tablets in the ark that I had made, and they were there, as the Lord commanded me.

6 (And the sons of Israel departed from Bereth of the sons of Iakim Misadai. There Aaron died, and there he was buried, and his son Eleazar became priest instead of him. 7 From there they departed to Gadgad and from Gadgad to Itebatha, a land with a wadi of waters. 8 At that time the Lord set apart the tribe of Leui to carry the ark of the covenant of the Lord, to stand before the Lord to minister and to pray in his name, to this day. 9 Therefore, for the Leuites there is not a part or allotment among their brothers; the Lord himself is his allotment, as he said to him.)

10 And I stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights. And the Lord listened to me in that time also. And the Lord did not want to destroy you utterly. ¹¹And the Lord said to me, "Go, depart before this people, and let them go in and inherit the land that I swore to their fathers to give them."

12 And now, O Israel, what does the Lord your God ask from you but to fear the Lord your God, to go in all his ways and to love him and to serve the Lord your God with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul, ¹³to keep the commandments of the Lord your God and his statutes that I command you today so that it may be well with you? ¹⁴Look, the sky and the sky of the sky belong to the Lord your God, the earth and all that is in it. ¹⁵Yet, your fathers, the Lord chose to love them, and he picked you, their offspring after them, you, among all the nations, as it is this day. ¹⁶And you shall circumcise your hardheartedness and shall not harden your neck any longer. ¹⁷For the Lord your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, mighty and fear-inspiring, who does not marvel at a person, neither will he take a bribe, ¹⁸doing justice to the guest and orphan and widow and loving the guest, to give him food and clothing. ¹⁹You shall also love the guest, for you were guests in the land of Egypt. ²⁰You shall fear the Lord your God, and him you shall serve, and to him you shall hold fast, and by his name you shall swear. ²¹He is your boast, and he is your God, who did among you these great and glorious things that your eyes have seen. ²²Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons, and now the Lord your God has made you as the stars in the sky in number.

11 And you shall love the Lord your God and keep his orders and his statutes and his commandments and his judgments always. ²And you shall know today that it was not your children who have not known or seen the discipline of the Lord your God and his magnificent works and his strong hand and his high arm ³and his signs and his wonders that he did in the midst of Egypt to Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and to all his land, ⁴and what he did to the force of the Egyptians, to their chariots and their horses, how he made the water of the Red Sea flow over them as they pursued you from your rear, and the Lord has destroyed them to this very day, ⁵and what he did for you in the wilderness until you came to this place, ⁶and what he did to Dathan and Abiron sons of Eliab son of Ruben whom the earth having opened its mouth swallowed them up, along with their households and their tents and all their substance which was with them in the midst of all Israel ⁷For it is your eyes that saw all the great deeds of the Lord that he did for you today.

⁸ And you shall keep all his commandments that I command you today so that you may live and be multiplied and go in and inherit the land into which you are crossing over the Jordan to take possession of it there, ⁹so that you may live long in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give them and their offspring after them, a land flowing with milk and honey. ¹⁰For the land into which you are about to enter there to inherit it is not like the land of Egypt, whence you are coming from there, when they sow the seed and water it with the feet like a garden of vegetables. ¹¹But the land into which you are entering there to inherit it is a hilly land and flat; it will drink water from the rain of the sky, ^{12a}land that the Lord your God regards it. The eyes of the Lord your God are always on it, from the beginning of the year even until the end of the year.

¹³ Now if by hearing you hear all his commandments that I command you today—to love the Lord your God and to serve him with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul—¹⁴he too will give the rain for your land in season, early rain and later rain, and you will gather in your grain and your wine and your oil, ¹⁵and he will give fodder in your fields for your cattle. ¹⁶And, when you have eaten and been filled, ⁽¹⁶⁾take care to yourself, lest your heart be expanded, and you turn away and serve other gods and do obeisance to them, ¹⁷and the Lord, being wrathful, be angry against you and shut up the sky, and there will be no rain, and the land will not give its fruit, and you will perish quickly off the good land that the Lord gave you.

¹⁸ And you shall put these words in your heart and in your soul, and you shall bind them as a sign on your hand, and they shall be things unshakable before your eyes. ¹⁹And you shall teach your children to say them when they are sitting at home and going on the way and lying down and rising. ²⁰And you shall write them on the doorposts of your houses and of your gates ²¹so that you may be long-lived, and the days of your sons, in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give them, may be as the days of the sky above the earth.

²² And it shall be, if by hearing you hear all these commandments that I command you today to do—to love the Lord your God, to go in all his ways and to hold fast to him—²³the Lord too will drive out all these nations before you, and you will dispossess nations great and rather stronger than you. ²⁴Every place, wherever you may plant the trace of your foot, shall be yours, from the wilderness and Anti-Lebanon and from the great river, the river Euphrates, and up to the western sea shall be your borders. ²⁵No one will stand against you; the Lord your God will put the trembling of you and fear of you on the face of all the land on which you may go upon it, as the Lord spoke to you.

²⁶ See, I am giving before you today a blessing and a curse: ²⁷the blessing, if you hear the commandments of the Lord your God that I command you today, ²⁸and the curse, if you do not hear the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you today and if you wander from the way that I command you, having gone to serve other gods that you do not know.

²⁹ And it shall be, when the Lord your God has brought you into the land into which you are crossing there to inherit it, you shall give the blessing on Mount Garizin and the curse on Mount Gaibal. ³⁰Look, are these not across the Jordan beyond, by the way of the setting of the sun, in the land of Chanaan, that which is situated to the west, near Golgol, beside the high oak?

31 For you are crossing the Jordan when you go in to inherit the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment, for all days, and you will inherit it and live in it. ³²And you shall be watchful to perform all these ordinances and these judgments that I am giving before you today.

12 And these are the ordinances and the judgments that you shall be watchful to perform in the land that the Lord, the God of your fathers, is giving you as an allotment all the days that you live on the earth.

2 You shall with destruction destroy all the places, there where the nations whom you are about to dispossess serve their gods on the high mountains and on the dunes and beneath every leafy tree. ³And you shall chop down their altars^a and smash their steles and cut down their groves and burn with fire the carved objects of their gods and blot out their name from that place. ⁴You shall not do so to the Lord your God. ⁵But the place which the Lord your God may choose in one of your tribes, to designate that his name be called there, you too will seek and enter there. ⁶And you will bring there your whole burnt offerings and your sacrifices and your first fruits and your votive gifts, your freewill gifts and the firstlings of your oxen and sheep. ⁷And you shall eat there in the presence of the Lord your God and shall rejoice in all things to which you put your hands, you and your households, as the Lord your God has blessed you.

8 You shall not do all things that we are doing here today, each one doing what is pleasing before him, ⁹for you have not come until now into the rest and into the inheritance that the Lord your God is giving you. ¹⁰And you shall cross over the Jordan and live in the land that the Lord your God is allotting to you, and he will give you rest from all your enemies around, and you will live in safety. ¹¹And it shall be that the place, wherever the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there, there you shall bring all that I command you today—your whole burnt offerings and your sacrifices and your tithes and the first fruits of your hands and your gifts and every choice one of your gifts, whatever you may vow to your God. ¹²And you shall be joyful before the Lord your God, you and your sons and your daughters, your male and female slaves and the Leuite who is at your gates (since he has no part or allotment with you).

13 Take care to yourself lest you bring your whole burnt offerings at any place where you may look. ¹⁴But at the place, that which the Lord your God may choose in one of your tribes—there you shall offer your whole burnt offerings, and there you shall do everything I command you today.

15 Yet at your every desire you shall slaughter and eat meat, according to the blessing of the Lord your God which he has given you within any city; the unclean one among you and the clean together shall eat of it, as ^bthey would^b gazelle or deer. ¹⁶The blood, however, you shall not eat; you shall pour it out on the ground like water. ¹⁷You shall not be able to eat within your cities the tithe of your grain and of your wine and of your oil, the firstlings of your oxen and of your sheep and all votive gifts that you may vow and your agreements and the first fruits of your hands. ¹⁸But these you shall eat in the presence of the Lord your God at the place, that which the Lord your God may choose, you and your son and your daughter, your male slave and your female slave and the guest in your cities, and you shall be joyful in the presence of the Lord your God in all things where you may put your hand. ¹⁹Take care to yourself lest you neglect the Leuite all the time that you may live in the land.

20 Now if the Lord your God enlarges your borders, as he has said to you, and you shall say, "I am going to eat meat," if your soul desires to eat meat, in every desire of your soul, you shall eat meat. ²¹But if the place the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there is rather far away from you, then you shall slaughter from your oxen and from your sheep that God may give you as I have commanded you, then you shall eat within your cities according to the desire of your soul. ²²Just as the gazelle is eaten and the deer, so you shall eat it; the unclean one among you and the clean alike shall eat it. ²³Take great care not to eat blood, because its blood is life; the life shall not be eaten with the meat. ²⁴You shall not eat it; you shall pour it out on the ground like water. ²⁵You shall not eat it so that it may go well with you and your sons after you, if you do what is good and pleasing before the Lord your God. ²⁶But when you have taken your sacred things, whatever you may have, and your votive gifts, you shall come to the place which the Lord your God may choose for himself for his name to be called there. ²⁷And you shall make your whole burnt offerings; the meat you will offer on the altar of the Lord your God, but the blood of your sacrifices you will pour out at the base of the altar of the Lord your God, but the meat you shall eat.

28 Keep, and hear, and you will do all the words that I command you so that it may go well with you and with your sons forever, if you do what is good and pleasing before the Lord your God.

29 Now if the Lord your God utterly destroys from before you the nations among which you may enter there to inherit their land, and you dispossess them and live in their land, ³⁰take care to yourself lest you seek to follow them, after they have been utterly destroyed from before you: you shall not seek their gods, saying, "How do these nations act toward their gods? I will do the same.”

³¹You shall not do thus to the Lord your God, for the abominations to the Lord, which he hates, they have done for their gods. For they burn their sons and their daughters in fire to their gods. ³²Every word that I command you today, this you shall be watchful to perform; you shall not add to it or take from it.

13 Now if a prophet or one who divines by a dream should appear among you and give you a sign or a wonder, ²and the sign or the wonder should come about, which he spoke to you, saying: “Let us go and serve other gods (whom you have not known),” ³you shall not hear the words of that prophet or diviner by that dream, for the Lord God is testing you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul. ⁴Go after the Lord your God, and him you shall fear, and his commandments you shall keep, and his voice you shall hear, and to him you shall be joined. ⁵And that prophet or that diviner by dream shall die, for he spoke to lead you astray from the Lord your God—who brought you out of the land of Egypt, who redeemed you from slavery—to thrust you from the way that the Lord your God commanded you to go upon it. And you shall eliminate the evil one from yourselves.

⁶ Now if your brother from your father or from your mother or your own son or daughter or the wife in your bosom or the friend who is like your own soul secretly entreats you, saying, “Let us go and serve other gods,” whom you do not know, you nor your fathers, ⁷from the gods of the nations that are around you, those near you or far away from you, from an end of the earth up to an end of the earth, ⁸you shall not yield to him and listen to him. And your eye shall not be sparing toward him; you shall not have a longing for him, neither shall you shield him. ⁹Reporting, you shall report concerning him, and your own hands shall be first against him to kill him, and afterwards the hands of all the people. ¹⁰And they shall stone him with stones, and he shall die because he sought to turn you away from the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of a house of slavery. ¹¹And all Israel, when they have heard, will be afraid and never do again according to this evil thing among you.

¹² Now if you hear in one of the cities that the Lord your God is giving you to live therein, saying: ¹³“Lawless men have gone out from among you and led all the inhabitants of their city astray, saying, ‘Let us go and serve other gods,’” whom you have not known, ¹⁴then you shall examine and ask and make a thorough investigation, and look, the charge is clearly true, this abomination has been done among you, ¹⁵wiping out, you shall wipe out all the inhabitants of that city by slaughter by dagger; with an anathema, you shall anathematize it, and everything in it. ¹⁶And all of its spoil you shall gather into its streets, and you shall burn with fire the city and all its spoil with its population, before the Lord your God. It shall remain uninhabited forever, never to be rebuilt. ¹⁷Nothing from that which is anathema shall stick to your hand so that the Lord may turn from the heat of his anger, and he shall give you mercy and be merciful to you and multiply you, as the Lord swore to your fathers, ¹⁸if you hear the voice of the Lord your God to keep all his commandments that I command you today, to do what is good and pleasing before the Lord your God.

14 You are sons of the Lord your God. You shall not ^apractice purification rites^a; you shall not place a baldness between your eyes for a corpse. ²For you are a people holy to the Lord your God, and it is you the Lord your God has chosen to be an exceptional people to him out of all the nations on the face of the earth.

⁹ And of all that live in water you shall eat these: whatever has fins and scales you shall eat. ¹⁰And whatever does not have fins and scales you shall not eat; these are unclean for you.

¹¹ You shall eat any clean bird. ¹²And these, you shall not eat from them: the eagle and the bearded vulture and the osprey ¹³and the vulture and the kite and those like it, ¹⁴and every raven and those like it, ⁽¹⁵⁾and ostrich and little owl and sea gull and hawk and those like it, ¹⁵⁽¹⁶⁾and heron and swan and ibis ¹⁶⁽¹⁷⁾and diving petrel and hoopoe and long-eared owl ¹⁷⁽¹⁸⁾and pelican and water plover and those like it, and water hen and bat. ¹⁸⁽¹⁹⁾All ^bcreeping ones of those that fly^b—these are unclean for you; you shall not eat from them. ¹⁹⁽²⁰⁾You shall eat any clean winged creature.

²⁰⁽²¹⁾ And you shall not eat any carcass; it shall be given to the resident alien in your cities, and he will eat, or you shall sell to a stranger. For you are a people holy to the Lord your God.

You shall not boil a lamb in its mother's milk.

²¹⁽²²⁾ You shall tithe a tithe of all the yield of your seed, the yield of your field, year by year. ²²⁽²³⁾And you shall eat it in the presence of the Lord your God, in the place that the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there you shall bring the tithes of your grain and of your wine and of your oil, the firstlings of your cows and of your sheep so that you may learn to fear the Lord your God all your days. ²³⁽²⁴⁾But if the distance is far from you and you are unable to transport them, because the place which the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there is far away from you, because the Lord your God will bless you, ²⁴⁽²⁵⁾you shall then convert them into money and take the money in your hands and go to the place, that which the Lord your God may choose, ²⁵⁽²⁶⁾and you shall give the money for whatever your soul may desire—for oxen or for sheep, for wine or for siker^a or for whatever your soul desires. And you shall eat there in the presence of the Lord your God, and you and your household shall be joyful, ²⁶⁽²⁷⁾and the Leuite in your cities, because he has no part or allotment with you.

²⁷⁽²⁸⁾ After three years you shall bring out every tithe of your yield; in that year, you shall store it within your cities, ²⁸⁽²⁹⁾and the Leuite shall come, because he has no part or allotment with you, and the guest and the orphan and the widow in your cities, and they shall eat and shall be filled so that the Lord your God may bless you in all the works whatever you may do.

15 Through seven years you shall make a remission. ²And thus is the ordinance of the remission: you shall remit every personal debt which your neighbor owes you, and you shall not ask it back of your brother, because a remission to the Lord your God has been proclaimed. ³Of a stranger you may ask back whatever he has that belongs to you; to your brother you must make a release of the debt to you. ⁴For there will be no one in need among you, because by blessing the Lord your God will bless you in the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment to inherit it. ⁵But if by hearing you listen to the voice of the Lord your God by keeping and doing all these commandments that I command you today— ⁶because the Lord your God has blessed you, as he said to you—you will even lend to many nations, but you will not borrow, and you will rule over many nations, but they will not rule over you.

⁷ Now if there is among you anyone of your brothers in need in one of your cities within the land that the Lord your God is giving you, you shall not rid your heart of love, neither shall you close up your hand from your needy brother. ⁸By opening, you shall open your hands to him; you shall lend a loan to him whatever he may need, in accord with what he needs. ⁹Be careful to yourself, lest a secret word is in your heart, something lawless, saying, "The seventh year, a year of release, is near," and your eye be evil towards your needy brother, and you will not give to him, and he will cry out to the Lord against you, and it will be for you a great sin. ¹⁰Giving you shall give to him, and you shall lend him a loan whatever he needs, and you shall not be grieved in your heart when you give to him, because through this thing the Lord your God will bless you in all your works and in all to which you may put your hand. ¹¹For the needy shall not fail from the earth; I therefore command you to do this thing, saying, "By opening, you shall open your hands to your brother who is poor and to the needy in your land."

¹² But if your brother is sold to you, whether a Hebrew man or a Hebrew woman, he shall be subject to you six years, and in the seventh year you shall send him out a free person from you. ¹³And when you send him out from you a free person, you shall not send him out empty. ¹⁴You shall provide provisions to him from your sheep and from your grain and from your wine press; as the Lord your God has blessed you, you will give to him. ¹⁵And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of Egypt, and the Lord your God redeemed you from there; for this reason I command you to do this thing. ¹⁶But if he says to you, "I will not go out from you," because he loved you and your household, since it is good for him with you, ¹⁷you shall then take an awl and pierce his ear against the door, and he shall be a domestic to you forever.

And you shall do likewise with regard to your female slave.

¹⁸ It shall not be hard on you when they are being sent out from you as free persons, because for six years he was a slave to you in lieu of an annual wage for the hired laborer, and the Lord your God will bless you in all that you may do.

¹⁹ Every firstling that may be born among your cows and among your sheep, you shall consecrate the males to the Lord your God; you shall not do work with your firstling calf, and you shall not shear the firstling of your sheep. ²⁰In the presence of the Lord your God you shall eat it, year by year at the place that the Lord your God may choose, you and your household. ²¹But if there is a defect in it—be it lame or blind—or even any serious defect, you shall not sacrifice it to the Lord your God; ²²within your cities you shall eat it; the unclean and the clean alike shall eat, like gazelle or deer. ²³But its blood you shall not eat; you shall pour it out on the ground like water.

16 Observe the month of new things, and you shall perform the pascha^b for the Lord your God, for in the month of new things you came out of Egypt by night. ²And you shall sacrifice the pascha for the Lord your God, sheep and cows, at the place that the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there. ³You shall not eat leaven with it. For seven days you shall eat unleavened with it—bread of affliction—because you came out of Egypt in haste so that all the days of your life you may remember the day of your departure from the land of Egypt. ⁴Leaven shall not be seen with you in all your borders for seven days, and none of the meat of what you may sacrifice in the evening on the first day shall lie until morning. ⁵You shall not be able to offer the pascha within any of your cities that the Lord your God is giving you. ⁶But at the place that the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there, you shall offer the pascha, in the evening at sunset, the time when you departed from Egypt. ⁷And you shall boil and roast and eat it at the place that the Lord your God may choose, and you shall return the next morning and go back to your houses. ⁸For six days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day there shall be a finale, a feast for the Lord your God; you shall do no work on it except that which shall be done for life.

⁹ You shall count for yourself seven complete weeks; when you have started the sickle on the standing grain, you shall begin to count seven weeks. ¹⁰And you shall make the feast of weeks for the Lord your God, according as your hand is able, whatever he may give to you, as the Lord your God has blessed you. ¹¹And you shall be joyful before the Lord your God—you and your son and your daughter, your male slave and your female slave and the Leuite who is in your cities, as well as the guest and the orphan and the widow who is among you—at the place that the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there. ¹²And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of Egypt, and you shall keep and do these commandments.

¹³ You shall make for yourself a feast of tents for seven days, when you have gathered in from your threshing floor and from your wine press. ¹⁴And you shall be joyful at your feast, you and your son and your daughter, your male slave and your female slave and the Leuite and the guest and the orphan and the widow in your cities. ¹⁵Seven days you shall feast for the Lord your God at the place, that which the Lord your God may choose. Now if the Lord your God blesses you in all your yield and in every work of your hands, then you shall be joyful.

¹⁶ Three times a year every male among you shall appear before the Lord your God at the place, that which the Lord may choose: at the feast of unleavened bread and at the feast of weeks and at the feast of tent pitching. You shall not appear before the Lord your God empty-handed, ¹⁷each according to the strength of your hands, according to the blessing of the Lord your God that he gave you.

¹⁸ You shall appoint for yourselves judges and recorders in all your cities that the Lord your God is giving you, by tribe, and they shall render just decisions for the people. ¹⁹They shall not bend justice; they shall not recognize a person, neither shall they take gifts. For gifts blind the eyes of the wise and nullify the words of the righteous. ²⁰You shall pursue justice fairly so that you may live, and when you have entered, you may inherit the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

²¹ You shall not plant for yourself a grove, any tree beside the altar of the Lord your God which you will make for yourself; ²²you shall not set up for yourself a stele—things which the Lord your God hated.

17 You shall not sacrifice to the Lord your God a calf or a sheep, that in which there is a defect, anything wrong, for it is an abomination to the Lord your God.

² Now if there be found among you, in one of your cities that the Lord your God is giving you, a man or woman who will do what is evil in the sight of the Lord your God, to transgress his covenant, ³and, having gone out, they should serve other gods and do obeisance to them—whether the sun or the moon or any of what belongs to the adornment of the sky, which I have not ordered—⁴and if it be reported to you and you will make a thorough inquiry and behold, the matter has truly occurred, this abomination has occurred in Israel, ⁵then you shall bring out that man or that woman and stone them with stones, and they will die. ⁶On two witnesses or upon three witnesses, the one who is to die shall die; he shall not die on the basis of one witness. ⁷And the hand of the witnesses shall be the first against him to put him to death, and the hand of all the people last. And you shall remove the evil one from yourselves.

¹⁴ Now if you come into the land that the Lord your God is giving you and take possession of it and live in it and you say, "I will set a ruler over me, like the rest of the nations that are around me," ¹⁵by appointing, you shall appoint over you a ruler, him whom the Lord your God may choose. One of your own brothers you shall appoint as ruler over you; you shall not have power to appoint a strange person over you, because he is not your brother. ¹⁶For he shall not multiply cavalry for himself or return the people to Egypt in order to multiply cavalry for himself, but the Lord has said to you, "You shall never add to return that way." ¹⁷And he shall not multiply wives for himself, neither shall his heart turn away; also silver and gold he shall not multiply exceedingly for himself. ¹⁸And it shall be, when he has sat upon the seat of his rule, that he shall write for himself this second law in a book from the priests, the Levites. ¹⁹And it shall be with him, and he shall read from it all the days of his life so that he may learn to fear the Lord his God, to keep all these commandments and these statutes to do them ²⁰so that his heart may not be exalted above his brothers so that he not turn aside from the commandments, right or left, in order that he be long-lived in his rule, he and his sons among the sons of Israel.

18 There shall not be for the priests, the Levites, the whole tribe of Leui, a part or allotment with Israel. The offerings of the Lord are their allotment; they shall eat of them, ²but he shall have no allotment among his brothers; the Lord himself is his allotment, as he said to him.

³ And this is the judgment for priests, things due from the people, from those offering sacrifices, whether a calf, whether a sheep, and he shall give to the priest the shoulder and the cheeks and the paunch^a. ⁴And the first fruits of your grain and your wine and your oil and the first of the fleeces of your sheep you shall give him. ⁵For the Lord has chosen him out of all your tribes, to stand before the Lord your God to minister and to bless in his name, he and his sons all the days.

⁹ Now if you enter into the land that the Lord your God is giving you, you shall not learn to act according to the abominations of those nations. ¹⁰There shall not be found among you one who cleanses his son or his daughter by fire, one who practices divination, one who acts as diviner, one who practices ornithomancy, a sorcerer, ¹¹one who casts spells, a ventriloquist^c and one who observes signs and one who inquires of the dead. ¹²For anyone who does these things is an abomination to the Lord your God, for it is because of these abominations that the Lord your God will destroy them utterly from before you. ¹³You shall be perfect before the Lord your God. ¹⁴For these nations that you are about to dispossess, these will hear omens and divinations, but as for you, the Lord your God has not granted you to do so.

¹⁵ The Lord your God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among your brothers; you shall hear him. ¹⁶According to all that you requested of the Lord your God at Choreb on the day of the assembly, saying: "We shall not any more hear the voice of the Lord our God and again see this great fire—and we shall not die." ¹⁷And the Lord said to me: "They are right in all that they have said. ¹⁸I will raise up for them a prophet just like you from among their brothers, and I will give my word in his mouth, and he shall speak to them whatever I command him. ¹⁹And the person who does not hear his words, whatever the prophet may speak in my name, I will exact vengeance from him. ²⁰But the prophet who acts impiously by speaking a word in my name that I have not ordered to speak and who speaks in the name of other gods, that prophet shall die." ²¹But if you say in your heart, "How will we know the word that the Lord has not spoken?" ²²whatever the prophet might speak in the name of the Lord but the thing does not take place and does not happen, this is the word that the Lord has not spoken. That prophet has spoken it in impiety; you shall not spare him.

19 Now if the Lord your God annihilates the nations whose land your God is giving you and you dispossess them and live in their cities and in their houses, ²you shall set apart three cities for yourself in the midst of your land that the Lord your God is giving you. ³Calculate for yourself the distance, and you shall divide into three regions your land that the Lord your God apportions you, and there shall be a refuge there for every murderer.

⁴ Now this is the ordinance for a murderer who flees there and shall live: He who strikes his neighbor unintentionally and he did not hate him before yesterday and before the third day, ⁵and he who goes into the forest with his neighbor to gather wood and his hand is knocked aside when he cuts the wood with the ax, and the iron slips from the wood and happens to strike his neighbor, and he dies, this one shall flee to one of these cities and live, ⁶lest the avenger of blood pursue after the murderer, because his heart is hot, and overtake him—if the road was rather long—and he strike his soul, and he dies, and to this one there is not a death sentence, since he did not hate him before yesterday and before the third day. ⁷Therefore I command you this thing, saying: You shall set apart three cities for yourself.

⁸ But if the Lord your God enlarges your borders, as he swore to your fathers, and he gives you all the land that he said he would give your fathers, ⁹—if you give heed to do all these commandments that I command you today, to love the Lord your God and to walk in all his ways all the days—then you shall add for yourself three more cities to these three, ¹⁰and innocent blood shall not be shed in your land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment, and there shall not be among you one guilty of blood.

¹¹ But if there be a person hating his neighbor

^ai.e. fourth stomach of ruminating animals ^bPossibly due to inheritance ^ci.e. one who gives oracles from the belly and he lies in wait for him and attacks him and strikes his life and he dies and flees into one of these cities, ¹²then the council of elders of his city shall send and take him from there and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, and he shall die. ¹³Your eye shall not be sparing toward him, and you shall cleanse the innocent blood from Israel, and it shall be well with you.

¹⁴ You shall not move your neighbor's boundaries, which your fathers have set up on the inheritance you were allotted in the land that the Lord your God is giving you to inherit.

¹⁵ One witness shall not suffice against a person in any injustice and in any wrongdoing and in any sin that he may sin. By the mouth of two or three witnesses shall any word be sustained. ¹⁶But if an unjust witness comes forward against a person, alleging impiety against him, ¹⁷then the two persons between whom is the dispute shall stand before the Lord and before the priests and before the judges, who may be in those days, ¹⁸and if the judges make a thorough inquiry and, look, an unjust witness has testified unjustly, he has stood up against his brother, ¹⁹then you shall do to him just as he connived to do to his brother. And you shall remove the evil one from yourselves. ²⁰And the rest, when they hear, shall be afraid and will not add to act again according to this evil thing among you. ²¹Your eye shall not be sparing against him: soul for soul, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

20 Now if you go out to war against your enemies and see horse and rider and a people more numerous than you, you shall not be afraid of them, for the Lord your God is with you, who made you go up from the land of Egypt. ²And it shall be when you draw near for battle, then the priest, when he has come forward, shall speak to the people ³and say to them: "Hear, O Israel! Today you are advancing to battle against your enemies. Let your heart not be undone; be not afraid, nor be shattered, nor turn aside from before them, ⁴for it is the Lord your God who advances with you, to fight with you against your enemies, to save you." ⁵Then the scribes shall speak to the people, saying, "Who is the person who built a new house and did not dedicate it? Let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another person will dedicate it. ⁶And who is the person who planted a vineyard and has not had enjoyment from it? Let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle and another person will have enjoyment from it. ⁷And who is the person who became engaged to a woman but has not yet taken her? Let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle and another person will take her." ⁸And the scribes shall add to speak to the people and will say, "Who is the person fearful and cowardly in heart? Let him go and return to his house, lest he cause the heart of his brother to be cowardly like his own." ⁹And it shall be when the scribes have ceased speaking to the people, then they shall appoint commanders of the army, as leaders for the people.

¹⁰ Now if you draw near to a city to fight against it, then you shall call them out with peace. ¹¹If they respond to you peaceably and open to you, it shall be that all the people found in it shall be bearers of tribute and be subject to you. ¹²But if they do not respond to you and make war against you, then you shall besiege it, ¹³and the Lord your God will deliver it into your hands, and you shall strike every male in it with slaughter by dagger, ¹⁴except the women and the baggage. And all the livestock and all which is in the city and all the spoil you shall take as plunder for yourself, and you shall eat all the plunder of your enemies, which the Lord your God is giving you. ¹⁵Thus you shall do to all the cities that are very far from you, which are not of the cities of these nations. ¹⁶But look, of the cities of these nations that the Lord your God is giving you to inherit their land, you shall not let anything of them that breathes remain alive. ¹⁷But with anathema, you shall anathematize them—the Chettite and the Amorrite and the Chananite and the Perezite and the Heuite and the Iebousite and the Gergesite—as the Lord your God has commanded you, ¹⁸lest they teach you to do all their abominations that they did for their gods and you sin before the Lord your God.

¹⁹ But if you besiege a city for rather many days, to make war against it in order to take it, you shall not utterly destroy its trees by wielding iron against them; rather you shall eat from it, but you shall not cut it down. Is the tree in the field a human being that it should enter into the palisade from before you? ²⁰But a tree that you know does not produce edible fruit, this one you shall utterly destroy and cut down, and you shall build siege works against the city that makes war with you until it be delivered up.

21 Now if, in the land that the Lord your God is giving you to inherit, someone wounded is found having fallen on the plain, and they do not know who struck him down, ²the council of elders and the judges shall come out and measure out to the cities that surround the wounded. ³And it shall be the city nearest the wounded, and the council of elders of that city shall take a heifer from the cows that has not been worked and which has not pulled in a yoke, ⁴and the council of elders of that city shall make the heifer go down to a rugged ravine, which is neither worked nor sown, and shall hamstring the heifer in the ravine. ⁵And the priests, the Leuites, shall come forward, for the Lord God has chosen them to stand by him and to bless in his name, and by their mouth every dispute and every assault shall be. ⁶And the entire council of elders of that city, those nearest the wounded, shall wash their hands over the head of the heifer that was hamstringed in the ravine, ⁷and in reply they shall say: "Our hands did not shed

this blood, and our eyes have not seen. ⁸Be merciful to your people Israel, whom you redeemed, O Lord, so that innocent blood may not be among your people Israel." And the blood will be propitiated for them. ⁹But you shall remove innocent blood from yourselves, if you do what is pleasing and good in the sight of the Lord your God.

¹⁰ Now if you go out to war against your enemies and the Lord your God delivers them into your hands and you take as plunder their booty ¹¹and you see among the booty a woman, beautiful in appearance, and you desire her and take her for yourself as wife, ¹²then you shall bring her inside your house, and you shall shave her head and pare her nails, ¹³and you shall remove her clothes of captivity from her, and she shall settle in your house and mourn for her father and her mother ¹⁴days of a month^a, and after that you shall go in to her and live together with her, and she shall be your wife. ¹⁴And it shall be, if you do not want her, you shall send her away free, and by a sale she shall not be sold for money. You shall not break faith with her, since you have humbled her.

¹⁵ Now if a man has two wives, one of them loved and one of them hated, and if both the loved and the hated bear him children and the firstborn son is of the one who is hated, ¹⁶it shall be, then, on the day when he wills his possessions to his sons, he shall not be able to treat the son of the loved as the firstborn by ignoring the son of the hated who is the firstborn. ¹⁷On the contrary, he shall acknowledge the firstborn son of the one who is hated by giving him a double portion of all things which he is found to have, since he is the first issue of his children and to this one belongs the right of the firstborn.

¹⁸ Now if someone has a disobedient and contentious son who does not obey the voice of his father and the voice of his mother, and they discipline him, and he does not listen to them, ¹⁹then his father and his mother, after they have taken hold of him, shall also bring him out to the council of elders of his city and to the gate of his place. ²⁰And they shall say to the men of his city, "This son of ours is disobedient and contentious. He does not obey our voice. Being disposed to feasting, he is a drunkard." ²¹And the men of his city shall stone him with stones, and he shall die. And you shall remove the evil one from yourselves and the others, when they hear, will be afraid.

²² Now if there is in someone sin, a judgment of death, and he dies and you hang him on a tree, ²³his body shall not sleep upon the tree, but with burial you shall bury him that same day, for anyone hanging on a tree is cursed by a god. And you shall not defile the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment.

22 When you see your brother's bull calf or his sheep straying away on the road, do not overlook them; by restoring, you shall restore them to your brother. ²Now if your brother is not near you or you do not know him, you shall bring them inside in your house, and they shall be with you until your brother seeks them; then you shall give them back to him. ³So you shall treat his donkey, and so you shall treat his garment, and so you shall act in every loss of your brother, whatever may be lost by him and you find; you shall not be able to overlook.

⁴ You shall not see your brother's donkey or his bull calf fallen on the road. Do not overlook them; raising, you shall raise them up with him.

⁶ Now if you come on a nest of birds before you on the road or in any tree or on the ground, with fledglings or eggs, and the mother is brooding on the fledglings or on the eggs, you shall not take the mother with the young ones. ⁷By release, you shall release the mother, but the young you shall take for yourself in order that it may go well with you and you may live long.

⁸ Now if you build a new house, you shall make a parapet for your building, and you will not do murder in your house, if one who falls should fall from it.

¹⁰ You shall not plow with an calf and a donkey together.

¹¹ You shall not wear something adulterated—wool and linen combined.

²⁰ But if this charge is true and the evidence of the young woman's virginity was not found, ²¹then they shall bring the young woman out to her father's doors, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones, and she will die, because she did folly in Israel by prostituting her father's house. And you shall remove the evil one from yourselves.

22 Now if a man is found lying with a woman married to a man, you will kill both of them, the man who lay with the woman and the woman. And you shall remove the evil one from Israel.

23 But if there is a girl, a virgin engaged to a man, and a man finding her in the city should lie with her, ²⁴bring both of them to the gate of their city, and they shall be stoned with stones, and they shall die—the young woman, because she did not cry out in the city, and the man, because he humbled his neighbor's woman. And you shall remove the evil one from yourselves.

25 But if a man finds the engaged girl in the field and, having forced her, should lie with her, you shall kill only the man who lay with her. ²⁶And you shall do nothing to the young woman; the young woman has not committed an offense punishable by death, because it is as if some man would rise up against his neighbor and murder his soul; so is this deed. ²⁷Since he found her in the field, the engaged young woman cried for help, but there was no one to help her.

28 But if someone finds the girl, the virgin, who is not engaged, and, after he forces her, lies with her and he^a is discovered, ²⁹the man who lay with her shall give fifty silver didrachmas to the young woman's father, and she shall become his wife. Because he humbled her, he shall not be able to send her away for all time.

30 A man shall not take his father's wife, and he shall not uncover his father's cover.

23 A castrated male and one made a eunuch shall not enter the assembly of the Lord.

2 One from a prostitute shall not enter the assembly of the Lord.

3 No Ammanite and Moabite shall enter into the assembly of the Lord. Even to the tenth generation, he shall not enter into the assembly of the Lord, even forever, ⁴due to the fact that they did not meet you with bread and water on the way when you were coming out of Egypt and because they hired against you Balaam son of Beor, from Mesopotamia, to curse you. ⁵(And the Lord your God did not want to listen to Balaam, and the Lord your God turned the curses into blessings, because the Lord your God loved you.) ⁶You shall not address things of peace to them and things of profit to them all your days, forever.

7 You shall not abhor an Idumean, for he is your brother. You shall not abhor an Egyptian, because you were a resident alien in his land. ⁸If sons are born to them in the third generation, they shall enter into the assembly of the Lord.

9 Now if you go out to encamp against your enemies, you shall guard against any evil thing.

10 If there is a person among you who is not clean from his flow at night, he shall go outside the camp, and he shall not enter into the camp. ¹¹And it shall be, at evening, that he shall wash his body with water, and when the sun has set, he shall enter into the camp.

12 And you shall have a place outside the camp, and you shall go there outside. ¹³On your belt you shall have a pin^b, and it shall be, when you sit down apart outside, that you shall dig a hole with it and then, returning the earth, you shall cover up your disgrace with it. ¹⁴Because the Lord your God walks about in your camp, to deliver you and to hand over your enemy before you, and your camp shall be holy, and there shall not be seen a disgrace of a matter among you, and he shall turn away from you.

15 You shall not hand over to an owner a servant who has been added to you from his owner. ¹⁶He shall reside with you; among you he shall live, in every place wherever he may please; you shall not oppress him.

17 There shall not be a prostitute among the daughters of Israel; there shall not be one that practices prostitution among the sons of Israel. There shall not be an initiate among the daughters of Israel, and there shall not be anyone initiated among the sons of Israel. ¹⁸You shall not bring the fee of a prostitute or the exchange for a dog into the house of the Lord your God for any vow, for it is an abomination to the Lord your God—in fact both.

19 You shall not charge interest to your brother, interest on money and interest on provisions and interest on any thing that may be lent. ²⁰To a stranger you shall charge interest but to your brother you shall not charge interest, so that the Lord your God may bless you in all your works in the land into which you are entering there to inherit it.

21 Now if you vow a vow to the Lord your God, you shall not delay to pay it. For the Lord your God, when he requires, will require it of you, and it will be a sin with you. ²²But if you do not want to vow, it will not be a sin to you. ²³The things that proceed from your lips you shall guard, and you shall do as you have vowed a gift to the Lord your God, which you said with your mouth.

24(25) Now if you go into your neighbor's standing grain, then you shall collect ears with your hand, and you shall not cast a sickle on your neighbor's standing grain.

25(24) And if you go into your neighbor's vineyard, you shall eat grapes, as much as to fill your soul, but you shall not put any in a container.

24 Now if anyone takes a wife and lives with her, and it shall be, if she does not find favor before him because he found a shameful thing in her, then he shall write her a bill of divorce and shall give it into her hands and shall send her out of his house, ²and if, having gone out, she becomes another man's ³and the last man hates her, then he will write her a bill of divorce and give it in her hands and send her out of his house, or if the last man who took her for himself as wife dies, ⁴the former man, who sent her away, shall not be able, having returned, to take her for himself as his wife after she has been defiled, for it is an abomination before the Lord your God, and you shall not defile the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment.

⁵ But if anyone should have taken a wife recently, he shall not go out to war, and he shall not be charged with any matter. He shall be innocent in his house one year; he shall make joyful his wife whom he has taken.

⁶ No one shall take a mill or the upper millstone in pledge, for this one is taking a soul in pledge.

⁸ Guard yourself against the attack of leprosy; you shall be very watchful to do according to all the law, whatever the priests, the Leuites, may announce to you. As I have commanded you, be watchful to perform. ⁹Remember what the Lord God did to Mariam on the way, when you were coming out of Egypt.

¹⁰ Now if there is a debt with your neighbor, a debt of any kind, you shall not go into his house to take the pledge. ¹¹You shall stand outside, and the person from whom your debt is due shall bring the pledge to you outside. ¹²If the person is poor, you shall not sleep in his pledge. ¹³By giving back you shall give his pledge back by sunset, and he shall sleep in his garment and bless you, and to you shall be mercy before the Lord your God.

¹⁴ You shall not unjustly withhold the wages of a needy and indigent person from your brothers or from the guests in your cities. ¹⁵You shall pay his wages daily; the sun shall not set upon it, because he is needy and on it he has his hope, and he shall not cry to the Lord against you, and it shall be sin for you.

¹⁶ Fathers shall not die for their children, and sons shall not be put to death for fathers; each one shall die for his own sin.

¹⁷ You shall not divert the justice of a guest and an orphan and a widow, and you shall not take a widow's garment in pledge. ¹⁸And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of Egypt, and the Lord your God redeemed you from there; on account of this, I command you to do this thing.

¹⁹ Now if you harvest a harvest in your field and forget a sheaf in your field, you shall not return to take it; it shall be for the guest and the orphan and the widow so that the Lord your God may bless you in all the works of your hands. ²⁰And if you gather olives, you shall not return to glean what is behind you; it shall be for the guest and the orphan and the widow. And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of

Egypt; on account of this, I command you to do this thing.

²¹ And if you harvest your vineyard, you shall not re-harvest it for things behind you; it shall be for the guest and the orphan and the widow. ²²And you shall remember that you were a domestic in the land of Egypt; on account of this, I command you to do this thing.

25 Now if a dispute occurs between people and they enter into litigation and they^a judge and justify the righteous one and condemn the impious, ²then it shall be, if the impious is worthy of lashes, that you shall make him sit down before the judges, and they shall beat him in their presence according to his impiety. ³They shall beat him with the number forty; they shall not add, but if they add to beat him more, beyond these lashes, your brother will be shamed before you.

¹³ There shall not be in your bag weight and weight, large or small. ¹⁴There shall not be in your house measure and measure, large or small. ¹⁵You shall have only a true and just weight, and you shall have only a true and just measure so that you may be long-lived in the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment. ¹⁶For every one who does these things, every one who acts unjustly, is an abomination to the Lord.

¹⁷ Remember what Amalek did to you on the way, when you were coming out of the land of Egypt, ¹⁸how he withstood you on the way and cut off your tail, all those who lagged behind you, but you were hungry and weary, and he did not fear God. ¹⁹And it shall be, when the Lord your God gives you rest from all your enemies who surround you, in the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment to inherit, you shall blot out the name of Amalek from under the sky, and you shall not forget.

26 And it shall be, if you come into the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an allotment and you take possession of it and live in it, ²that you shall take from the first fruit of the fruits of your land that the Lord your God is giving you and put in a basket and go to the place that the Lord your God may choose for his name to be called there. ³And you shall go to the priest who shall be in those days and say to him, "Today I declare to the Lord my God that I have come into the land that the Lord swore to our fathers to give us." ⁴And the priest shall take the basket from your hands and set it down before the altar of the Lord your God. ⁵And in reply, you shall say before the Lord your God: "My ancestor abandoned Syria and went down into Egypt and sojourned there, few in number, and there he became a nation, great and numerous, many and great. ⁶And the Egyptians did us ill and humbled us and imposed hard work on us, ⁷and we cried to the Lord, the God of our fathers, and the Lord listened to our voice and saw our humiliation and our toil and our oppression. ⁸And the Lord brought us out of Egypt with great strength and with a strong hand and a high arm and with great spectacles and with signs and with wonders, ⁹and he brought us into this place and gave us this land, a land flowing with milk and honey. ¹⁰And now look, I have brought the first fruit of the produce of the land that you, O Lord, have given me, a land flowing with milk and honey." And you shall leave them before the Lord your God and do obeisance before the Lord your God. ¹¹And you shall rejoice in all the goods that the Lord your God gave to you and to your house and the Leuite and the guest who is among you.

¹² Now if you finish paying all the tithes of your produce in the third year, you shall give the second tithe to the Leuite and the guest and the orphan and the widow, and they shall eat within your cities and be filled. ¹³And you shall say before the Lord your God: "I have cleansed the sacred portions from my house, and I gave them to the Leuite and the guest and the orphan and the widow, in accordance with all the commandments that you commanded me; I have not transgressed your commandment, nor have I forgotten, ¹⁴and I have not eaten from them in my grief; I have not enjoyed the fruits from them for something unclean; I have not given any of them to the dead. I have obeyed the voice of the Lord my God; I did just as you commanded me. ¹⁵Look down from your holy house, from the sky, and bless your people Israel and the land that you gave them, as you swore to our fathers to give us—a land flowing with milk and honey."

¹⁶ This very day the Lord your God is commanding you to do all these statutes and judgments, and you shall keep and do them with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul. ¹⁷Today you have chosen God to be your God and to walk in his ways and to keep his statutes and his judgments and to obey his voice. ¹⁸Today also the Lord has chosen you to be his exceptional people, as he said, to keep all his commandments, ¹⁹and that you be high above all nations, as he has made you renowned and a boast and glorified, that you be a people holy to the Lord your God, as he spoke.

27 And Moyses and the council of elders of Israel gave orders, saying: Keep all these commandments that I command you today. ²And it shall be, on the day when you cross over the Jordan into the land that the Lord your God is giving you, that you shall set up for yourself large stones and plaster them with plaster. ³And you shall write on the stones all the words of this law when you cross over the Jordan, when you enter the land that the Lord, the God of your fathers, is giving you, a land flowing with milk and honey, as the Lord, the God of your fathers, said to you. ⁴And it shall be, when you cross over the Jordan, that you shall set up these stones about which I command you today, on Mount Gaibal, and you shall plaster them with plaster. ⁵And you shall build an altar there to the Lord your God, an altar of stones. You shall not place an iron tool on them. ⁶You shall build the altar to the Lord your God of whole stones, and you shall offer up whole burnt offerings on it to the Lord your God ⁷and sacrifice a sacrifice of deliverance and eat and be filled there and be joyful before the Lord your God. ⁸And you shall write on the stones all of this law very clearly.

⁹ And Moyses and the priests, the Leuites, spoke to all Israel, saying: Keep silence, and hear, O Israel! This day you have become a people to the Lord your God. ¹⁰And you shall listen to the voice of the Lord your God and do all his commandments and his statutes that I command you today.

¹⁵ "Cursed be the person who shall make a carved and a cast image, an abomination to the Lord, a work of the hands of an artisan and shall set it up in secret." And all the people, in reply, shall say, "May it be!"

¹⁶ "Cursed be he who dishonors his father or his mother." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

¹⁷ "Cursed be he who moves a neighbor's boundaries." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

18 "Cursed be he who misleads a blind person on the road." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

19 "Cursed be he if he deprive guest and orphan and widow of justice." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

20 "Cursed be he who lies with his father's wife, because he has uncovered the cover of his father." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

21 "Cursed be he who lies with any animal." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

22 "Cursed be he who lies with his sister, whether from his father or from his mother." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

23 "Cursed be he who lies with his mother-in-law." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

24 "Cursed be he who strikes down a neighbor with treachery." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

25 "Cursed be he if he take gifts to strike a soul of innocent blood." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

26 "Cursed be any person who does not remain in all the words of this law to do them." And all the people shall say, "May it be!"

28 And it shall be, if by hearing you hear the voice of the Lord your God, to be watchful and to perform all his commandments that I command you today, that the Lord your God will render you high above all the nations of the earth,² and all these blessings shall come upon you and find you, if you hear the voice of the Lord your God:

3 Blessed be you in the city, and blessed be you in the field.

4 Blessed be the progeny of your belly and the produce of your land, the herds of your cows and the flocks of your sheep.

5 Blessed be your storehouses and your reserves.

6 Blessed be you when you come in, and blessed be you when you go out.

7 May the Lord your God hand over your enemies who have risen against you, when they have been crushed before you; they shall come out against you by one way and flee from before you by seven ways.⁸ May the Lord send the blessing upon you in your storerooms and in all things to which you put your hand in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.⁹ May the Lord raise you up for himself as a holy people, as he has sworn to your fathers, if you listen to the voice of the Lord your God and walk in his ways.¹⁰ And all the nations of the earth shall see you that the name of the Lord has been surnamed to you, and they shall be afraid of you.¹¹ And the Lord your God will make you abound with good things, in the progeny of your belly and in the progeny of your livestock and in the produce of your land in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give you.¹² May the Lord open for you his good treasury, the sky, to give the rain to your land in its season, to bless all the works of your hands. And you will lend to many nations, but you will not borrow. And you will rule over many nations, but they shall not rule over you.¹³ May the Lord your God set you up as a head and not as a tail, and you shall then be on top, and you shall not be underneath—if you hear the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you today, to guard and to perform.¹⁴ You shall not turn aside from all of the words that I command you today, right or left, to go after other gods to serve them.

15 And it shall be, if you do not listen to the voice of the Lord your God to keep and to do all his commandments, which I command you today, that all these curses shall come upon you and overtake you:

16 Cursed be you in the city, and cursed be you in the field.

17 Cursed be your storehouses and your reserves.

18 Cursed be the progeny of your belly and the produce of your land, the herds of your cows and the flocks of your sheep.

19 Cursed be you when you come in, and cursed be you when you go out.

20 May the Lord send you lack and hunger and exhaustion in everything to which you may put your hand, whatever you might do until he utterly destroys you and until he ruins you quickly, on account of your evil deeds, because you have forsaken me.²¹ May the Lord make death cling to you until it consumes you off the land that you are entering there to inherit it.²² May the Lord strike you with difficulty and fever and cold and irritation and murder and with blight and paleness^a, and they shall pursue you until they destroy you.²³ And the sky over your head shall be bronze for you, and the earth under you iron.²⁴ May the Lord render the rain of your land as powder, and dust from the sky shall come down upon you until it wipes you out and until it destroys you.

25 May the Lord give you slaughter before your enemies; you shall go out against them by one way and flee from them by seven ways. And you shall be in dispersion in all the kingdoms of the earth.²⁶ And your corpses will be food for the birds of the sky and for the wild animals of the earth, and there shall be no one to frighten them away.²⁷ May the Lord strike you with an Egyptian festering sore in the seats and with severe itch and scratching so that you cannot be healed.²⁸ May the Lord strike you with derangement and blindness and distraction of mind,²⁹ and you shall be groping about at midday as a blind person would grope in the darkness, and he will not prosper your ways, and you will then be wronged and plundered all the days, and there shall be none to help you.³⁰ You shall take a wife^b, but another man shall have her. You shall build a house, and you shall not live in it. You shall plant a vineyard and not harvest it.³¹ Your bull calf is butchered before you, but you shall not eat of it. Your donkey is seized from you, and it shall not be given back to you. Your sheep is given to your enemies, and there shall be none to help you. ³²Your sons and daughters are given to another nation, and your eyes, being purulent, shall look for them^a, and your hand shall not be strong. ³³A nation whom you do not know shall eat up the produce of your land and all your labors, and you shall be wronged and shattered all the days. ³⁴And you shall be driven mad because of the sights of your eyes, which you shall see. ³⁵May the Lord strike you on the knees and on the legs with a grievous festering sore so that you cannot be healed, from the sole of your feet to your crown. ³⁶May the Lord lead away you and your rulers whom you may set over yourself to a nation that you and your fathers do not know, and you shall serve there other gods, of wood and stone. ³⁷And there you shall become an enigma and an illustration^b and a tale among all the nations into which the Lord may lead you away there.

⁴⁵ And all these curses shall come upon you and pursue you and overtake you until it utterly destroy you and until it ruin you, because you did not listen to the voice of the Lord your God, to keep his commandments and his statutes that he commanded you. ⁴⁶And there shall be signs and wonders among you and among your offspring forever, ⁴⁷because you did not serve the Lord your God with rejoicing and with a good heart for the abundance of everything. ⁴⁸And you shall serve your enemies whom the Lord will send against you, with famine and with thirst and with nakedness and with lack of everything. And he will put an iron collar on your neck until he utterly destroys you. ⁴⁹The Lord will bring upon you a nation from far away, from the end of the earth, like the swoop of an eagle, a nation whose speech you will not hear, ⁵⁰a nation shameless in face, which will not marvel at the face of an elder and have no mercy on the young. ⁵¹And it shall consume the progeny of your livestock and the produce of your land so that there remains for you no grain, wine, oil, the herds of your cows and the flocks of your sheep, until it destroys you. ⁵²And it shall wipe you out in all your cities until your high and fortified walls, in them in which you trusted, be pulled down in all your land, and it shall afflict you in all your cities that the Lord your God has given you. ⁵³And in your desperate straits and in your affliction with which your enemy shall afflict you, you will eat the progeny of your belly, the flesh of your sons and your daughters whom the Lord has given you. ⁵⁴The gentle among you and the very soft will begrudge with his eye his brother and the wife in his bosom and the remaining children who are left, ⁵⁵so as to give to one of them from the flesh of his children whom he may be eating, because nothing remains to him in your desperate straits and affliction by which your enemies afflict you in all your cities. ⁵⁶And she who is gentle among you and soft, the foot of whom did not make an attempt to tread on the ground, because of delicacy and gentleness, will begrudge with her eye her husband, who is in her bosom, and her son and daughter, ⁵⁷even her afterbirth that comes out from between her thighs, and the child that she might bear. For she will devour them in secret for want of all things, in desperate straits and in affliction with which your enemy will afflict you in your cities.

⁵⁸ If you do not listen to perform all the words of this law that are written in this book, to fear this honorable and marvelous name, the Lord your God, ⁵⁹then the Lord will make exceptional your plagues and the plagues upon your offspring, great and marvelous plagues and evil and constant maladies. ⁶⁰And he will bring back upon you all the evil pains of Egypt of which you were in dread before them, and they shall cling to you. ⁶¹And every malady and every plague not recorded in the book of this law the Lord will bring on you until he utterly destroys you. ⁶²And you shall be left few in number, instead of the fact that you were as the stars of the sky in multitude, because you did not listen to the voice of the Lord your God. ⁶³And it shall be, just as the Lord took delight in you that you might do well and that you multiply, so the Lord will take delight in you to destroy you utterly, and you shall be removed from the land that you are entering there to inherit it. ⁶⁴And the Lord your God will disperse you to all nations, from an end of the earth to an end of the earth, and there you shall be subject to other gods, of wood and stone, which you and your fathers did not know. ⁶⁵But also among those nations he shall not give you rest, nor will there be a station for the trace of your foot. And there the Lord will give you a discouraged heart and failing eyes and a molten soul. ⁶⁶And your life shall be hanging before your eyes, and night and day you shall be afraid, and you shall not be sure of your life. ⁶⁷In the morning you shall say, "If only evening might come!" and at evening you shall say, "If only morning might come!"—because of the fear of your heart with which you shall fear and because of the sights of your eyes which you shall see. ⁶⁸And the Lord will bring you back in ships to Egypt by a route that I said: You shall never see it again, and there you shall be put up for sale to your enemies as male and female slaves, and there will be no buyer.

29 These are the words of the covenant, which^a the Lord commanded Moyses to establish for the sons of Israel in the land of Moab, besides the covenant that he had made with them at Choreb.

2 And Moyses called all the sons of Israel and said to them: You have seen all that the Lord did before you in the land of Egypt, to Pharaoh and to his attendants and to all his land, ³the great trials that your eyes saw, the signs and those great wonders. ⁴But to this day the Lord God has not given you a heart to know and eyes to see and ears to hear. ⁵And he led you forty years in the wilderness. Your garments have not grown old, and your sandals have not worn from your feet; ⁶you have not eaten bread, you have not drunk wine and sikers^b—so that you may know that he is the Lord your God. ⁷And you came as far as this place, and King Seon of Hesebon and King Og of Basan came out to meet us for battle, and we struck them down. ⁸And we took their land, and I gave it as an allotment to Rouben and to Gaddi and to the half-tribe of Manasse. ⁹And you shall be watchful to perform all the words of this covenant in order that you may understand everything that you shall do.

10 You stand today, all of you, before the Lord your God—the leaders of your tribes and your council of elders and your judges and your recorders, every man of Israel, ¹¹your women and your progeny and the guest who is in the midst of your camp, from your woodcutter even up to your water bearer—¹²so that you may enter in the covenant of the Lord your God, and in his imprecations, which the Lord your God is making with you today ¹³in order that he may establish you for himself as a people, and he in turn shall be your god, as he said to you and as he swore to your fathers Abraam and Isaak and Jakob. ¹⁴And I am establishing this covenant and this imprecation, not with you alone ¹⁵but also with those who are here with us today before the Lord our God (¹⁵)and with those who are not here with us today, ¹⁶because you know how we lived in the land of Egypt and how we passed through the midst of the nations through which you passed. ¹⁷And you have seen their abominations and their idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, that were among them. ¹⁸Who is there among you, man or woman or family or tribe, whose mind has turned away from the Lord our God, to go to serve the gods of those nations? Who among you is a root growing up with gall and bitterness? ¹⁹And it shall be, if he hears the words of this imprecation and declares in his heart, saying: “May holy things become mine, because I shall walk in the wandering of my heart,” lest the sinner destroy the sinless as well, ²⁰God will not want to pardon him, but the Lord’s anger and his zeal will then blaze out against that person. And all the imprecations of this covenant, written in the book of this law will attach themselves to him, and the Lord will blot out his name from the earth beneath the sky. ²¹And the Lord will single him out for evil from all the sons of Israel, in accordance with all the imprecations of the covenant, which are written in the book of this law. ²²And the next generation will say, your sons who will rise up after you and the stranger who may come from a land far away, and they will see the plagues of that land and its diseases which the Lord has sent upon it: ²³sulfur and burnt salt; its whole land shall not be sown, nor shall it sprout, neither will any vegetation spring up on it, just as Sodoma was overturned, and Gomorra, Adama and Seboim, which the Lord overturned in wrath and anger. ²⁴And all the nations will say, “Why has the Lord done thus to this land? What was this great vehemence of anger?” ²⁵And they will say, “Because they abandoned the covenant of the Lord, the God of their fathers, which he made with their fathers when he brought them out of the land of Egypt. ²⁶And having gone, they served other gods and did obeisance to them whom they had not known, neither had he allotted to them, ²⁷and the Lord became angry with wrath against that land, to bring on it according to all the curses written in this book. ²⁸And the Lord removed them from their land in wrath and anger and very great provocation and cast them into another land, as it is now.” ²⁹The secret things belong to the Lord our God, but the revealed things belong to us and to our children forever, to do all the words of this law.

30 And it shall be, when all these words come upon you, the blessing and the curse that I gave before you, that you shall receive them into your heart among all the nations wherever the Lord may scatter you there, ²and you shall return to the Lord your God and obey his voice regarding everything I command you today, with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul. ³And the Lord will heal your sins and have mercy on you and gather you again from all the nations among whom the Lord has scattered you there. ⁴If your dispersion be from an end of the sky to an end of the sky, from there the Lord your God will gather you, and from there he will take you. ⁵And the Lord your God will bring you into the land that your fathers inherited, and you will inherit it, and he will make you well, and he will make you numerous beyond your fathers.

6 And the Lord will purge your heart and the heart of your offspring, to love the Lord your God with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul in order that you may live. ⁷And the Lord your God will give these imprecations on your enemies and on those who hate you, who pursued you. ⁸And you shall turn and listen to the voice of the Lord your God, and you shall do his commandments that I command you today, ⁹and the Lord your God will treat you with care in every work of your hands, in the progeny of your belly and in the produce of your land and in the progeny of your livestock. For the Lord your God will turn to be joyful toward you for good things, just as he was joyful over your fathers,¹⁰ if you listen to the voice of the Lord your God, to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments that are written in the book of this law, if you turn to the Lord your God with the whole of your heart and with the whole of your soul,¹¹ because this commandment that I command you today is not excessive nor is it far from you.¹² It is not in the sky, saying, "Who will go up to the sky and get it for us? And when we hear it, we shall do it."¹³ Neither is it beyond the sea, saying, "Who will cross to the other side of the sea for us and get it for us? And when we hear it,^a we shall also do it."¹⁴ The word is very near to you, in your mouth and in your heart and in your hands, to do it.

15 See, I have given before you today life and death, good and evil.¹⁶ Now if you listen to the commandments of the Lord your God that I command you today, to love the Lord your God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes and his commandments and his judgments, then you shall live and become many, and the Lord your God will bless you in all the land into which you are entering there to inherit it.¹⁷ And if your heart turns away and you do not listen but having been led astray you do obeisance to other gods and serve them,¹⁸ I declare to you today that by destruction you shall perish, and you shall not have many days in the land into which you are crossing the Jordan there to inherit it.¹⁹ I call both sky and earth to witness against you today: I have given before you life and death, blessing and curse. And choose life so that you and your offspring may live,²⁰ to love the Lord your God, to listen to his voice and to hold fast to him, for this is life for you and the length of your days so that you may live in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers Abraam and Isaac and Jakob to give to them.

31 And Moses finished speaking all these words to all the sons of Israel,² and he said to them: "I am today one hundred twenty years old. I shall not be able any more to come in and to go out. Now the Lord said to me, 'You shall not cross over this Jordan.'³ The Lord your God who goes before you, he will utterly destroy these nations from before you, and you shall dispossess them. Iesus also is the one crossing over before you, as the Lord spoke.⁴ And the Lord will do to them as he did to Seon and Og, the two kings of the Amorites who were beyond the Jordan, and to their land, as he utterly destroyed them.⁵ And the Lord has delivered them before you, and you shall do to them as I have commanded you.⁶ Be manly and strong; have no fear, nor be frightened, nor be terrified from before them, because the Lord your God, he who goes with you among you, will not forsake you or abandon you."

7 And Moses called Iesus and said to him before all Israel: "Be manly and strong, for you will go before this people into the land that the Lord has sworn to our fathers to give to them, and you will take possession of it for them.⁸ And the Lord, the one who goes with you, will not forsake you or abandon you. Do not fear, nor be frightened."

9 And Moses wrote down the words of this law in a book and gave to the priests, the sons of Leui, who carry the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and to the elders of the sons of Israel.¹⁰ And Moses commanded them in that day, saying: "After seven years, in the time of the year of release, during the feast of tent pitching,¹¹ when all Israel comes together to appear before the Lord your God at the place that the Lord may choose, you shall read this law before all Israel in their ears,¹² having assembled the people—men and women and progeny and the guest in your cities—so that they may hear and so that they may learn to fear the Lord your God, and they shall listen to perform all the words of this law,¹³ and their sons, who do not know, shall hear and learn to fear the Lord your God, all the days which they themselves live in the land into which you are crossing over the Jordan there to inherit it."

14 And the Lord said to Moses, "Look, the days of your death have come near; call Iesus, and stand by the entrance of the tent of witness, and I will command him." And Moses went, and Iesus, into the tent of witness, and they stood by the entrance of the tent of witness,¹⁵ and the Lord descended in a cloud, and he stood at the entrance of the tent of witness, and the pillar of cloud stood at the entrance of the tent.

16 And the Lord said to Moses, "Look, you are lying down with your fathers. And this people, having risen up, will prostitute after foreign gods of the land into which it is going there into it, and they will forsake me and break my covenant that I have established with them.¹⁷ And I shall be angry with wrath against them in that day, and I will abandon them and turn away my face from them, and it will become food, and many evils and afflictions will find it. And in that day it will say, 'Because the Lord my God is not with me, these evils have found me.'¹⁸ But I by turning will turn my face from them on that day, on account of all the evils they have done, because they turned to foreign gods.¹⁹ And now write the words of this song, and teach it to the sons of Israel, and put it in their mouth in order that this song may be to me a witness among the sons of Israel.²⁰ For I will bring them into the good land which I swore to their fathers, a land flowing with milk and honey, and they shall eat and, filled, shall be sated and will turn to foreign gods and serve them and provoke me and break my covenant.²¹ And this song will confront them, by witnessing contrariwise, for it will not be forgotten from the mouth of their offspring. For I know their evil, what they are doing here today, before I have brought them into the good land that I swore to their fathers.”²² And on that day Moyses wrote this song and taught it to the sons of Israel.

23 And he commanded Iesus and said, “Be manly and strong, for you shall bring the sons of Israel into the land that the Lord swore to them, and he will be with you.”

24 Now when Moyses had finished writing down in a book all the words of this law, to the very end,²⁵ then he commanded the Leuites, who carry the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying,²⁶ “Having taken the book of this law, you shall put it beside the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, and it shall be there as a witness against you.²⁷ For I know your rebelliousness and your hard neck. For, while I am still alive among you today, you are being fractious concerning the things of God, how not also after my death?”²⁸ Assemble to me all the leaders of your tribes and your elders and your judges and your recorders so that I may speak all these words in their ears and call sky and earth to witness against them.²⁹ For I know that, after my demise, with lawlessness you will act lawlessly and turn aside from the way that I have commanded you. And the evils will come upon you at the end of days, because you will do what is evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him through the works of your hands.”

30 And Moyses spoke the words of this song, to the very end, in the ears of the whole assembly of Israel:

32 Give heed, O sky, and I will speak, and let the earth hear words from my mouth.
2 Let my utterance be awaited like rain, and let my words come down like dew,
like a rainstorm on dog’s tooth grass, and like a snowstorm on grass.
3 For I have called out the name of the Lord;
ascribe greatness to our God!
4 God—his works are genuine, and all his ways are justice.
A faithful god, and there is no injustice,
^aa righteous and holy Lord;
5 blemished children, not his, have sinned,
a generation, crooked and perverse.
6 Do you thus repay the Lord these things,
O people, foolish and not wise?
Did not he himself, your father, acquire you and make you and create you?
7 Remember days of old;
consider years of a generation of generations;
ask your father, and he will inform you,
your elders, and they will tell you.
8 When the Most High was apportioning
nations,
as he scattered Adam’s sons,
he fixed boundaries of nations
according to the number of divine sons,

9 and his people Iakob became the Lord’s portion,
Israel a measured part of his inheritance.
10 He made him self-sufficient in a desert land, in thirst of heat, in a waterless place;
he encircled him and educated him and guarded him as the apple of his eye.
11 Like an eagle to protect his brood, he too yearned for his young;
spreading his wings, he received them and bore them aloft on his back; 12 the Lord alone was leading them, and no foreign god was with them.
13 He made them ascend onto the strength of the land,
fed them with produce of the fields;
they sucked honey from a rock and oil from solid rock, 14 butter of cows and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs and rams;
of the sons of bulls and of goats, with fat of kidneys of wheat—and they drank wine, blood of grapes.
15 And Iakob ate and was filled, and the beloved one kicked.
He grew fat; he became heavy; he became broad!
And he abandoned God who made him, and he departed from God his savior.
16 They provoked me with foreign things;
by their abominations they embittered me.
17 They sacrificed to demons and not to God, to gods they did not know.
New, recent ones have come,
whom their fathers did not know.
18 You abandoned God who bore you, and you forgot God who nurtures you.
19 And the Lord saw it and was jealous, and he was provoked on account of the wrath of his sons and daughters.
20 And he said: I will turn away my face from them,
and I will show what will happen to them at the end, for it is a perverse generation, sons who have no faithfulness in them.
21 They made me jealous with what is no god, provoked me with their idols.
So I will make them jealous with what is no nation, provoke them with a nation lacking understanding.
22 For a fire has lit up from my anger and will burn as far as Hades below;
it will devour earth and its produce and will light up foundations of mountains.
23 I will gather evils against them and will spend my arrows against them:
24 when they are being wasted by famine

^aOr righteous and holy is the Lord and by devouring of birds—and recurvation beyond cure.

Teeth of beasts I will send against them, with rage of things that drag on the ground.
25 From outside a dagger shall bereave them, and from the inner chambers fear, young man together with maiden, nursing child with one grown old.
26 I said, I will disperse them; indeed, I will cause their memory to cease from among humans; 27 were it not for wrath of the enemies so that they may not last long and so that their adversaries not collaborate,
let them not say, "Our hand is high, and it was not the Lord who did all these things."
28 For it is a nation that has lost counsel, and there is no understanding in them.
29 They had no sense to understand these things.
Let them accept them for the time to come.
30 How shall one pursue thousands and two remove myriads unless God sold them and the Lord delivered them up?
31 For not like our God are their gods, but our enemies are without understanding.
32 For their vine is from the vine of Sodoma, and their branch from Gomorra;
their cluster is a cluster of bile;
it is a bunch of bitterness to them;
33 their wine is the wrath of dragons, and the wrath of asps beyond cure.
34 Look, have not these things been gathered with me and sealed up in my treasuries?
35 In a day of vengeance, I will repay, in a time when their foot slips, because near is the day of their destruction and things prepared for you are at hand.
36 For the Lord will judge his people and be comforted over his slaves.
For he saw them paralyzed,
both failed under attack and enfeebled.
37 And the Lord said: Where are their gods,
they in whom they trusted, 38 the fat of whose sacrifices you were eating and were drinking the wine of their libations?
Let them rise up and help you,
and let them be protectors for you!
39 See, see that I am,
and there is no god except me.
I will kill, and I will make alive;
I will strike, and I will heal, and there is no one who will deliver from my hands.

40 For I will lift up my hand to the sky, and I will swear by my right hand,
and I will say: I live forever, 41 because I will sharpen my dagger like lightning, and my hand will take hold on judgment, and I will repay my enemies with a sentence,
and those who hate me I will repay.
42 I will make my arrows drunk with blood—and my dagger shall devour flesh—with the blood of the wounded and of captives, from the head of the commanders of the enemies.

43 Be glad, O skies, with him, and let all the divine sons do obeisance to him.
Be glad, O nations, with his people, and let all the angels of God prevail for him.
For he will avenge the blood of his sons and take revenge and repay the enemies with a sentence,
and he will repay those who hate, and the Lord shall cleanse the land of his people.

44 And Moses wrote this song in that day and taught it to the sons of Israel. And Moses entered and spoke all the words of this law in the ears of the people, he and Iesous the son of Naue. ⁴⁵And Moses finished speaking to all Israel, ⁴⁶and he said to them: "Pay heed with your heart to all these words that I am testifying against you today, which things you shall command your sons, to guard and to perform all the words of this law. ⁴⁷Because this is not an empty word for you, since it is your very life, and through this word you shall live long in the land into which you are crossing over the Jordan there to inherit."

48 And on this day the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: ⁴⁹"Ascend the mountain, this Abarim, Mount Nabau, which is in the land of Moab, across from Iericho, and view the land of Chanaan, which I am giving to the sons of Israel as a possession, ⁵⁰and die on the mountain upon which you are ascending there, and be added to your people as your brother Aaron died on Hor the mountain and was added to his people, ⁵¹because you both disobeyed my word among the sons of Israel at the water of dispute at Kades in the wilderness of Sin, because you both did not sanctify me among the sons of Israel. ⁵²Because you shall view the land from a distance, but you shall not enter there.

33 And this is the blessing with which Moses, man of God, blessed the sons of Israel before his death. ²And he said:
The Lord has come from Sina and appeared to us from Seir

- and hasted from Mount Pharan with myriads of Kades;
at his right, angels with him.
- 3 And he spared his people, and all of the sanctified ones were under your hands—
even these are under you, and it^a accepted from his words ⁴a law,
which Moyses commanded us, an inheritance for the congregations of Iakob.
- 5 And he shall be a ruler in^b the beloved one, when rulers of peoples have been gathered together with the tribes of Israel.
- 6 Let Rouben live and not die out, and let him be many in number.
- 7 And this^c of Ioudas:
Listen, O Lord, to the voice of Ioudas, and you could enter into his people;
his hands will decided^d for him, and you will be a helper from his enemies.
- 8 And to Leui he said:
Give Leui his ^eclear ones^e and his truth to the devout man, whom they tempted him with temptation.
They reviled him at the water of dispute.
- 9 He who was saying to his father and his mother,
“I have not seen you,”
and he did not acknowledge his brothers and did not acknowledge his sons—he guarded your oracles and kept your covenant.
- 10 They shall show Iakob your statutes and Israel your law;
they shall place incense ^fin your wrath^f continually on your altar.
- 11 Bless, O Lord, his strength, and accept the works of his hands;
shatter the loins of his enemies that have risen up against him, and those that hate him, let them not rise up.
- 12 And to Benjamin he said:
Beloved by the Lord he shall encamp in confidence—and God overshadows him all the days—and he rested between his shoulders.
- 13 And to Ioseph he said:
His land is from the Lord’s blessing, from the seasons of the sky and of dew and from unfathomable springs below and in a season of produce of the sun’s changes
- and from conjunctions of months 15 and from the top of mountains of yore and from the top of the everlasting hills
- 16 and in a season of earth’s fullness.
And may the things acceptable to him who appeared in the bush
come on the head of Ioseph and on his crown, when he was glorified among brothers.
- 17 A firstborn of a bull—his beauty!
His horns are horns of a unicorn;
with them he will gore nations,
all at once as far as earth’s end.
These are the myriads of Ephraim;
these the thousands of Manasse.
- 18 And to Zaboulon he said:
Be glad, Zaboulon, in your going out, and, Issachar, in his coverts.
- 19 They shall utterly destroy nations, and you^g shall invoke there, and you^g shall sacrifice a sacrifice of righteousness,
for the riches of the sea will suckle you and the trade of those living by the seacoast.
- 20 And to Gad he said:
Blessed be the one who expands Gad!
He rested like a lion,
having broken arm and ruler.
- 21 And he saw his first fruit, for there was apportioned a land of rulers, gathered together with chiefs of peoples,
the Lord executed righteousness and his judgment with Israel.
- 22 And to Dan he said:
Dan is a lion’s whelp,
and he shall leap forth from Basan.
- 23 And to Nephthali he said:
Nephthali has a fullness of things acceptable, and let him be filled with blessing from the Lord;
he shall inherit the sea and the southwest.
- 24 And to Aser he said:
Blessed of children be Aser, and he shall be acceptable to his brothers;
he shall dip his foot in oil.
- 25 His sandal will be iron and bronze, and as your days, so is your strength.
- 26 There is none like the God of the beloved;
he who rides upon the sky is your helper

- and the magnificent one of the firmament.
- 27 And there is divine protection of yore and under the strength of the everlasting arms,
and he will drive out the enemy before you,
saying, "May you perish!"
- 28 And Israel will encamp in confidence, alone in Jakob's land
with grain and wine, and the sky is cloudy with dew for him.
- 29 Happy are you, O Israel! Who is like you,
a people saved by the Lord?
Your helper will shield you, and the dagger will be your boast!
And your enemies shall speak falsely to you, and you shall tread on their neck.

34 And Moyses went up from Araboth of Moab to Mount Nabau, to the top of Phas-ga, which is opposite Iericho, and the Lord showed him all the land: Galaad as far as Dan ²and all the land of Nephthali and all the land of Ioudas as far as the last sea ³and the wilderness and the environs of Iericho, a city of palm trees—as far as Segor. ⁴And the Lord said to Moyses, "This is the land of which I swore to Abraam and Isaak and Jakob, saying, 'I will give it to your offspring, I showed it to your eyes, but you shall not enter there.'" ⁵And Moyses, the domestic of the Lord, died there in the land of Moab, through the word of the Lord. ⁶And they buried him in Gai, in the land of Moab, near the house of Phogor, but no one knows his grave to this day. ⁷Now Moyses was one hundred twenty years old when he died; his eyes were neither dimmed nor were they ruined.

⁸And the sons of Israel wept for Moyses in Araboth of Moab, near the Jordan, opposite Iericho, thirty days, and the days of mourning of the weeping for Moyses were ended.

⁹ And Iesous son of Naue was filled with the spirit of understanding, because Moyses had laid his hands on him, and the sons of Israel listened to him and did as the Lord had commanded Moyses.

¹⁰ And there has not again arisen a prophet in Israel like Moyses whom the Lord knew face-to-face, ¹¹with all the signs and wonders, whom the Lord sent to do them in the land of Egypt, against Pharao and his attendants and his entire land ¹²and the great wonders and the strong hand which Moyses exhibited before all Israel.

IESOUS

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

For this translation I have made use of the edition of A. Rahlfs, Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935). I did not deviate from its text or punctuation. At three places—in chapters 15, 18, and 19—Rahlfs presented the texts of Codex Vaticanus (B) and Codex Alexandrinus (A) in separate columns. Each of these instances involves lists of place names, often obscure ones. I have followed Rahlfs by translating these columns separately.

An earlier edition of Greek Joshua was prepared by Max L. Margolis in the 1920s and early 1930s and published as The Book of Joshua in Greek: Parts I – IV (Paris: Geuthner, 1931–1938 [repr. 1974]) and The Book of Joshua in Greek: Part V; Joshua 19.39–24.33 (preface E. Tov; Philadelphia: Annenberg Research Institute, 1992). Margolis and Rahlfs agree that the text of Iesous as preserved in Codex B is in many respects a close approximation of the Old Greek (OG) version as it left the hands of the original translator(s). But they often differ, both in small points and in their approach to the frequently enigmatic way in which the many place names of Hebrew Joshua are represented in the Greek traditions. My decision to follow Rahlfs should not be taken to mean that I agree with Rahlfs over Margolis in every instance. The easier accessibility of the Rahlfs version makes it prudent to give it precedence in NETS. In any case, Rahlfs will be superseded by the Göttingen edition, which is in the process of preparation.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE LXX OF JOSHUA

General Character

The Greek of LXX Joshua has been variously described as “one of the most interesting books of the Greek Bible,” “a thoughtful version” and “[striking] a balance between literalness and freedom.” By and large, it, like the corresponding Hebrew, is fairly easy to read.

Comparison with LXX Pentateuch

There are few, if any, indications of the specific date or locale in which the LXX of Joshua was produced; recently the case has been made for a mid-third century BCE date. There is indeed much evidence to commend the view that the person(s) responsible for LXX Joshua, while not feeling bound by the Greek translation of the Pentateuch, did make extensive use of this earlier text. Particularly instructive is LXX Joshua’s use of θυσιαστήριον, possibly to distinguish a “licit” altar from one the text condemns. So, for example, at 22.19 Hebrew מִזְבֵּחַ מַבְלַעְדֵי מִזְבֵּחַ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ (“an altar other than the altar of the LORD our God”), LXX Joshua has βωμὸν ἕξω τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν (“an altar other than the altar of the Lord our God”).

Variation in Translation

The Greek translator of Joshua, although maintaining standard renderings for a number of terms, also shows a marked tendency to vary them—and not just in instances of potential exegetical importance, as at 22.19 above. Another example of such variation is provided at 5.2 and 3. In both verses the Hebrew reads צְרִים צִרְיִם; the LXX has μαχαίρας πετρίνας [ἐκ πέτρας ἀκροτόμου] in v. 2 but μαχαίρας πετρίνας [ἀκροτόμους] in v. 3. It should be noted, however, that in both cases the words I have placed in square brackets have no counterpart in MT and may be textual rather than translational. The Hebrew idiom “to blow the horn” always requires the preposition בְּ, as in 6.13: וַתִּקְרָע בְּשׁוֹפְרוֹתָם. On occasion, LXX Joshua follows suit, as in this same verse: καὶ οἱ ἱερεῖς ἐσάλπισαν ταῖς σάλπιγξι, though without explicitly reproducing the Hebrew preposition. Elsewhere and even in close proximity (v. 16), however, the Greek verb alone is made to suffice (ἐσάλπισας οἱ ἱερεῖς). The former I have translated as “sounded with the trumpets” but the latter as “trumpeted”. Among individual and recurring words that the Greek translator handled differently throughout the book of Joshua are עַבְדֵּךְ (δούλος, θεράπων, παῖς) and צֹוֹן (ἐντέλλομαι, συντάσσω).

Relationship between MT and LXX

The determination of the relationship between the MT and the OG of Joshua has attracted considerable scholarly debate in the last few decades. Overall, it has been estimated, the Greek version of Joshua is 4–5% shorter than the MT.

This percentage should not obscure the variety of differences between the Greek and Hebrew. (1) In many small details (which are often qualitative rather than quantitative), the two traditions differ. Three examples from proper names are instructive in this regard: throughout chapter 7, עכב becomes Αχαρ; אֲדֹנֵי צָדָק is Αδωνιβεξεκ in chapter 10; and the site where Iesous/Joshua assembles the Israelites for the last time (in chapter 24) is שכש in the MT, Σηλω in the LXX.

(2) Substantial differences of meaning occur, for example, in chapter 5, even when the number of words is nearly the same. In this regard, none is more dramatic than the LXX statement (5.4) that there were uncircumcised males among the Israelites who left Egypt: καὶ ὅσοι ποτὲ ἀπερίτμητοι ἦσαν τῶν ἐξεληλυθότων ἐξ Αἰγύπτου—in the face of the MT affirmation (5.5) that all the people who came out [of Egypt] had been circumcised: כִּי־מִלִּים הָיוּ כָל־הָעָם הַיִּצְאִים. Also of considerable interest is the variation in the number of years the Israelites were in the wilderness (v. 6): forty-two in the LXX; forty in the MT.

(3) In chapter 6, the LXX is 10% shorter than the MT, and in chapter 20, three verses from the MT are absent in the LXX. Fairly typical is this regard is 6.15 in the LXX: καὶ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδόμῃ ἀνέστησαν ὄρθρου καὶ περιήλθοσαν τὴν πόλιν ἑξάκις (“And on the seventh day they rose at dawn and marched around the city seven times”), in comparison with the MT of the same verse. In chapter 20, vv. 1–2 and 7–9 are parallel in the LXX and MT; what follows in the MT as vv. 3–7 appears far more succinctly in v. 3 of the LXX.

(4) On occasion, the LXX has material not found in the MT, specifically in chapters 21 and 24. Especially notable is the reference in 21.42d to “the flint knives”: καὶ ἔλαβεν Ἰησοῦς τὰς μαχαίρας τὰς πετρίνας, which reappears at 24.31a as τὰς μαχαίρας τὰς πετρίνας. (It is worth observing that this wording differs from the renderings in chapter 5, noted above.) LXX Joshua concludes with two verses (33a–b) that form a distinctive link (vis-à-vis the MT) with the following book of Judges.

The majority of contemporary scholars locate many, if not most, of these differences, especially the larger ones, in a Hebrew Vorlage of the LXX that differed from the MT in these respects. Other scholars would allow a far greater role for interpretive activity on the part of those responsible for LXX Joshua. My translation does not depend on the acceptance of one or the other view or any permutation of them.

Hebraisms

In working through LXX Joshua, I have come to acknowledge what I would term the translator’s (translator’s) strengths and weaknesses. Preeminent among the strengths, as I see them, is a sincere desire on the part of the translator to convey to his (original) audience the sense and the structure of his Hebrew Vorlage as he understood them. His retention of some Hebraisms may well have made his version tough going for all but those who were truly bilingual, but his dedication to the base text does not seem to have flagged, except perhaps in the long and involved lists of place names that predominate in the book’s mid-section.

In addition to several Hebraisms mentioned earlier, I highlight here two other instances, one found only once in Iesous, the other, recurrent. At 14.9, MT כִּי בַל־אָתָּה אָחֲרַי יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי is rendered, somewhat freely, by the NRSV as “because you have wholeheartedly followed the LORD my God.” Initially I had translated the corresponding Greek—ὅτι προσετέθης ἐπακολουθήσῃς ὀπίσω κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν—as “because you have continued to follow closely after the Lord our God.” Since προστίθμι regularly renders סָס with the meaning “continue to”—although the Greek verb does not have this meaning outside of the LXX—I determined that “continue to,” rather than “add to” (the common, non-LXX meaning) would be appropriate. I finally settled on “apply oneself to” (so, “because you have applied yourself to”) as the rendering that best suited the context.

The Hebrew at 24.13, אֲרֶץ אֲשֶׁר לֹא־יָנַעַתָּ בָּהּ (“land on which you had not labored”), would be adequately and effectively rendered into Greek by γῆν ἐφ’ ἣν οὐκ ἐκοπίασατε; the fuller LXX, with ἐπ’ αὐτῆς, is clearly not a “natural” or “normal” koine idiom and can only be explained as a reflex of בָּהּ in the source text. The NETS translation, “a land, that on which you did not labor,” is an attempt to reflect the awkwardness of the Greek.

Transliteration

To illustrate the difficulties faced by the modern researcher—as well, I suspect, as the ancient translator and those who transmitted his words—we may look at a small section of the several chapters and many verses devoted to lists, specifically chapter 19.3–4 (describing a portion of the territory allotted to Symeon [LXX] or Simeon [MT]). What follows in transcription is Codex Vaticanus (B), Codex Alexandrinus (A), and the MT (as rendered in the NRSV):

B	A	MT
3 And Harsola and Bola and Asom	3 and Hasersoul and Bathoul and Bola and Asom	3 Hazar-shual, Balah, Ezem,
4 and Elthoula and Boula and Herma	4 and Elthoulad and Herma	4 Eltolad, Bethul, Hormah,

In his version, Max Margolis (see above) reconstructed the oldest Greek of these verses in this way: 3 και Ασαρ Σωαλ και Βωλα και Ασεμ 4 και Ελθωλαδ και Βεθουλ και Ερμα.

In arriving at these transcriptions he relied heavily on the Onomasticon of Eusebius, resorting to conjecture (only) in the case of Ασεμ. It was Margolis' judgment that Codex Alexandrinus, as a chief exemplar of his Constantinopolitan group, was on the whole a better witness than Codex Vaticanus to the earliest forms of place names, especially rare ones, although (as can be seen here) its testimony is far from faultless.

Other Translation Issues

I have wrestled with several other practices on the part of LXX Joshua. In particular, I decided, in accordance with NETS policy, not to smooth out the many rough edges of the translation. Where sentences lack syntactic cohesion, I indicate this, often with one or more dashes. An example of this is found at 7.14: και ἔσται ἡ φυλή, ἣν ἂν δείξει κύριος, προσάξετε κατὰ δήμους, "And it shall be that the tribe that the Lord shows—you shall bring it near by districts."

In one case, I would have wished to part company with my NETS colleagues. It seems to me that, in the majority of cases, LXX Joshua's πρὸς (or ἐπὶ) θάλασσαν should be translated "westward" (or "to the West"), rather than "seaward" or "to the sea." This is especially the case when the translator clearly understood other, parallel terms as directional, as in 18.12ff, where ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν and πρὸς θάλασσαν are in parallel with ἀπὸ βορρά, ἀπὸ λιβός and similar terms. The use of "sea" as a directional designation is without parallel in extra-LXX contexts, thus precluding my use of directional terminology in my translation for this expression.

THE BOOK OF IESOUS (JOSHUA) IN NETS AND IN THE NRSV

The NRSV's rendering of the book of Joshua is not as literal as that of its predecessor, the RSV. On a number of occasions, this can give the impression that the MT and the LXX of Joshua are more at variance than they actually are. Especially in the earlier chapters, I made a conscious effort to retain NRSV wording when it was a possible equivalent for the Greek; as time went on, I tended to up the ante, as it were, to probable equivalent. I sensed the need to reflect my perception of Greek nuances over against the collective responsibility to prepare an English rendering of the LXX that can be used synoptically with the NRSV.

EARLIER RENDERINGS OF THE LXX INTO ENGLISH

Although there are problems with both its Greek base text and the accompanying English-language version, it is still useful to consult Brenton.

LEONARD J. GREENSPOON

1 And it happened after the death of Moyses that the Lord spoke to Iesous son of Naue, Moyses' assistant, saying, ²"Moyses my attendant is dead. Now then rise up to cross the Jordan, you and all this people, into the land that I am giving to them. ³Every place upon which you tread with the sole of your feet, to you I will give it, as I promised to Moyses, ⁴the wilderness and Anti-Lebanon as far as the great river, the river Euphrates, and as far as the farthest sea; from the setting of the sun shall be your boundaries. ⁵No person shall stand against you^a all the days of your^b life. And just as I was with Moyses, so I will also be with you, and I will not forsake you or overlook you. ⁶Be strong and manly, for you shall divide for this people the land that I swore to your ancestors to give to them. ⁷Be strong, therefore, and manly, to observe and act as Moyses my servant commanded you, and you shall not turn aside from them to the right or to the left so that you may be perceptive in everything you do. ⁸And the book of this law shall not depart out of your mouth, and you shall meditate on it day and night so that you may understand how to do all that is written. Then you shall prosper and make your ways prosperous, and then you shall be perceptive. ⁹Look, I have commanded you: Be strong and manly; do not be cowardly or frightened, for the Lord your God is with you in all places where you go."

10 And Iesous commanded the scribes of the people, saying, ¹¹"Go into the midst of the camp of the people, and command the people, saying: 'Prepare provisions, for yet three days and you are crossing over this Jordan, when you go in to take possession of the land that the Lord, God of your ancestors, gives you.'"

12 And to Rouben and to Gad and to the half-tribe of Manasse Iesous said, ¹³"Remember the word of the Lord that Moyses the servant of the Lord commanded you, saying, 'The Lord your God has given you rest and has given you this land.' ¹⁴Let your wives and your little ones and your livestock settle in the land he gave you. But you shall cross over well-equipped before your kindred, every strong man, and you shall fight on their side ¹⁵until the Lord your God gives rest to your kindred, as also to you, and they too inherit the land that the Lord your God is giving them. And each of you shall depart to his inheritance, which Moyses gave to you beyond the Jordan, from the rising of the sun."

16 And in reply to Iesous, they said: "All that you have commanded us we will do, and to every place you send us we will go. ¹⁷Just as we obeyed Moyses in all things, we will obey you. Only let the Lord our God be with you, as he was with Moyses. ¹⁸But the person who is disobedient towards you and whoever disobeys your words, as you command him, let him die. But be strong and manly."

2 And Iesous son of Naue sent two young men from Sattin to spy, saying, "Go up, and view the land, especially Iericho." And the two young men went and entered Iericho, and they entered the house of a prostitute whose name was Raab and lodged there. ²And it was reported to the king of Iericho, saying, "Men of the sons of Israel have come here to spy out the land." ³And the king of Iericho sent and spoke to Raab, saying, "Bring out the men who entered your house tonight, for they have come to spy out the land." ⁴And the woman took the men and hid them, and she said to them, saying, "The men came to me. ⁵But when the gate was closed at dark, then the men went out. Where they went I do not know. Pursue after them, if you can overtake them." ⁶She had, however, brought them up upon the roof and hid them in the flax-straw that she had laid out upon the roof. ⁷And the men pursued after them on the way by the Jordan to the fords, and the gate was closed.

And it happened, when those who were pursuing after them had gone out ⁸and before they too went to sleep, she too came up on the roof to them ⁹and said to them, "I know that the Lord has given you the land, for the dread of you has fallen on us. ¹⁰For we have heard that the Lord God dried up the Red Sea before you when you came out of the land of Egypt and what he did to the two kings of the Amorrites that were beyond the Jordan, to Seon and Og, those whom you utterly destroyed. ¹¹And when we heard it, we were distraught in our heart, and there was no spirit left in any of us from before you, for the Lord your God is God in heaven above and on earth below. ¹²And now, since I am showing you pity, swear to me by the Lord God that you also in turn will show pity in the house of my father ¹³and spare the house of my father and my mother and my brothers and all my house and all that belong to them and deliver my soul from death." ¹⁴And the men said to her, "Our soul for yours unto death." And she said, "When the Lord hands over to you the city, you shall show me pity and truth."

15 And she let them down through the window. ¹⁶And she said to them, "Depart into the hill country so that the pursuers may not come upon you. And you shall be hidden there three days until those who pursue after you have returned, and afterward you shall depart on your way." ¹⁷And the men said to her, "We are free from this oath of yours. ¹⁸Look, we are entering a part of the city, and you shall set in place the sign. You shall tie this scarlet cord in the window through which you let us down, and you shall gather to yourself, into your house, your father and your mother and your brothers and all your father's family. ¹⁹And it shall be that everyone who goes out of the door of your house into the street, he shall be liable on his own account, and we will be free from this oath of yours. And any who are with you in your house, we shall be liable. ²⁰But if anyone wrongs us or also discloses this business of ours, we shall be free from this oath of yours." ²¹And she said to them, "According to your word, so let it be." And she sent them away.

22 And they departed and went into the hill country and stayed there three days. And the pursuers searched all the roads and did not find them. ²³And the two young men returned and came down from the mountain. And they crossed over to Iesous son of Naue and told him all that had happened to them. ²⁴And they said to Iesous, "The Lord has given all the land into our hand, and everyone who inhabits that land covers because of us."

3 And Iesous rose early in the morning and departed out of Sattin, and they came as far as the Jordan and lodged there before crossing over. ²And it happened after three days that the scribes went through the camp ³and commanded the people, saying, "When you see the ark of the covenant of the Lord our God and our priests and the Leuites carrying it, you shall depart from your places. And go after it. ⁴But let there be a distance between you and it, as much as two thousand cubits. You shall stand still. Do not approach it so that you may know the way whereby you will go, for you have not gone the way from yesterday and the third day." ⁵And Iesous said to the people, "Purify yourselves for tomorrow; for tomorrow among you the Lord will do wonders." ⁶And Iesous said to the priests, "Take up the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and go before the people." And the priests took up the ark of the covenant of the Lord and went in front of the people.

⁷ And the Lord said to Iesous, "On this day I am beginning to exalt you before all the sons of Israel so that they may know that as I was with Moses, so will I be also with you. ⁸And now command the priests who bear the ark of the covenant, saying, 'When you enter upon a part of the water of the Jordan, then you shall stand still in the Jordan.'" ⁹And Iesous said to the sons of Israel, "Draw near here, and hear the word of the Lord your God. ¹⁰By this you shall know that a living god is among you, and with destruction he will destroy from before us the Chananite and the Chetite and the Pherezite and the Heuite and the Amorrite and the Gergesite and the Iebousite: ¹¹Look, the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth passes through the Jordan. ¹²Select for yourselves twelve men from the sons of Israel, one from each tribe. ¹³And it will be, when the feet of the priests who bear the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth rest in the water of the Jordan, that the water of the Jordan shall cease, and the water coming down shall stand still."

apart very, very far off, as far as part of Kariathairim, and that which came down came down to the sea of Araba, the salt sea, until it completely ceased. And the people stood opposite Iericho. ¹⁷And the priests who bore the ark of the covenant of the Lord stood on dry ground in the middle of the Jordan—and all the sons of Israel were crossing over on dry land—until all the people finished crossing over the Jordan.

4 And when all the people finished crossing over the Jordan, then the Lord said to Iesous, saying, ²"Take along men from the people, one from each tribe; ³instruct them, saying, 'Take twelve stones at hand out of the middle of the Jordan, and when you have carried these over with you, lay them down in your camp, there where you make camp for the night.'" ⁴And when Iesous had summoned twelve men of the honored from the sons of Israel, one from each tribe, ⁵he said to them, "Pass on before me, before the Lord, into the middle of the Jordan, and when each has taken up a stone from there, let him carry it on his shoulders, according to the number of the twelve tribes of Israel, ⁶so that these may exist as a sign for you, in place for all time; so that when your son asks you tomorrow, saying, 'What are these stones to you?' ⁷then you shall explain to your son, saying, 'Because the river Jordan failed from before the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth, when it crossed over it. And these stones shall be to you a memorial, to the sons of Israel forever.'"

⁸ And the sons of Israel did so, as the Lord commanded Iesous. And they took up twelve stones out of the middle of the Jordan, as the Lord instructed Iesous at the completion of the crossing over of the sons of Israel, and they carried them over with them to the camp and laid them down there. ⁹Now Iesous also set up another twelve stones in the Jordan itself, in the place that was under the feet of the priests who bore the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and they are there until this very day.

¹⁰ Now the priests who bore the ark of the covenant stood in the Jordan until Iesous finished everything the Lord commanded him to tell the people. And the people hastened, and they crossed over. ¹¹And it happened, as soon as all the people had finished crossing over, that the ark of the covenant of the Lord passed over, and the stones in front of them. ¹²And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse crossed over equipped before the sons of Israel, as Moyses had commanded them. ¹³Forty thousand well girded for battle passed over before the Lord for war against the city of Iericho.

¹⁴ On that day the Lord exalted Iesous before the whole race of Israel, and they feared him, as they had Moyses, for as long a time as he lived.

¹⁸And it happened, as soon as the priests who bore the ark of the covenant of the Lord came up out of the Jordan and set their feet on the land, that the water of the Jordan rushed headlong into place and went as yesterday and the third day throughout all its banks.

¹⁹ And the people went up out of the Jordan on the tenth of the first month, and the sons of Israel encamped in Galgala in the part toward sunrise, from Iericho. ²⁰And those twelve stones, which he had taken out of the Jordan, Iesous set up in Galgala, ²¹saying, "When your sons ask you, saying, 'What are these stones?' ²²proclaim to your sons, 'Israel crossed over the Jordan on dry ground, ²³when the Lord our God dried up the water of the Jordan from before them until they crossed over, as the Lord our God did to the Red Sea, which the Lord our God dried up before us until we passed by, ²⁴so that all the nations of the earth may know that the power of the Lord is mighty and in order that you may worship the Lord your God for all time.'"

5 And it happened, when the kings of the Amorites, who were beyond the Jordan, and the kings of Phoenicia by the sea heard that the Lord God had dried up the Jordan river from before the sons of Israel when they crossed over, that their hearts melted, and they were panic-stricken, and there was no understanding in them, from before the sons of Israel.

² Now about that time, the Lord said to Iesous, "Make for yourself flint knives out of sharp rock, and sit down, and circumcise the sons of Israel." ³And Iesous made sharp flint knives and circumcised the sons of Israel at the place called Hill of Foreskins. ⁴And how Iesous completely purified the sons of Israel—as many as were born on the way and as many as were uncircumcised of those who had come out of Egypt—⁵all these Iesous circumcised. ⁶For Israel had gone about in the wilderness of Madbaritis for forty-two years, wherefore most of their warriors who had come out of the land of Egypt were uncircumcised, those who disobeyed God's ordinances, concerning whom he also determined that they would not see the land that the Lord had sworn to their forefathers to give to us, a land flowing with milk and honey. ⁷And in their place he raised up their sons, whom Iesous circumcised because they remained uncircumcised on the way.

⁸ Now when they had been circumcised, they kept quiet there, remaining in the camp until they were healed. ⁹And the Lord said to Iesous son of Naue, "On this very day I have taken away the reproach of Egypt from you." And he called the name of that place Galgala.

¹⁰ And the sons of Israel kept the pascha on the fourteenth day of the month from evening at sunset at Iericho on the opposite side of the Jordan in the plain. ¹¹And they ate from the grain of the land, things unleavened and fresh. On this day ¹²the manna ceased, after they had eaten from the grain of the land, and the sons of Israel no longer had manna, and they enjoyed the fruit of the country of the Phoenicians in that year.

¹³ And it happened, when Iesous was at Iericho, that he looked up with his eyes and saw a person standing before him, and his sword was drawn in his hand. And Iesous approached and said to him, "Are you one of us or on the side of our adversaries?" ¹⁴Then he said to him, "As commander-in-chief of the force of the Lord I have now come." And Iesous fell facedown onto the earth, and he said to him, "Master, what do you order your domestic?" ¹⁵And the commander-in-chief of the Lord said to Iesous, "Loosen the sandal from your feet, for the place where you stand is holy."

6 And Iericho was completely closed up and fortified, and no one came out from it nor went in. ²And the Lord said to Iesous, "Look, I am delivering Iericho into your control, and its king in it, mighty ones in strength. ³And you, station around it the warriors in a circle. ⁵And it shall be as soon as you sound with the trumpet, let all the people shout together. And when they shout, the walls of the city will fall spontaneously, and all the people shall enter, each one rushing headlong into the city." ⁶And Iesous the son of Naue went in to the priests ⁷and spoke to them, saying, "Charge the people to go around and surround the city. And let the warriors pass by in arms before the Lord.

¹⁵ And on the seventh day they rose at dawn and marched around the city seven times. ¹⁶And on the seventh circuit the priests trumpeted, and Iesous said to the sons of Israel, "Cry out, for the Lord has given you the city. ¹⁷And the city shall be devoted, it and all that is in it, to the Lord Sabaoth. Only keep safe Raab the prostitute, her and what is in her house. ¹⁸But you, keep well away from what is devoted so that you yourselves do not covet and take any of what is devoted and make the camp of the sons of Israel a devoted thing and annihilate us. ¹⁹And all silver or gold or bronze or iron shall be sacred to the Lord; it shall be carried into the treasury of the Lord.”²⁰ And the priests sounded with the trumpets. And as soon as the people heard the sound of the trumpets, all the people at the same time raised a great and strong shout, and the whole wall fell down all around. And all the people went up into the city.²¹ And with the edge of the sword Iesous devoted it and all that was in the city, from man even to woman, from young man even to old, and even to calf and draft animal.

22 And Iesous said to the two young men who had served as spies, “Go into the woman’s house, and bring her out from there and all that is hers.”²³ And the two young men who had spied out the city went into the house of the woman and brought out Raab the prostitute and her father and her mother and her brothers and all that was hers and her kindred. And they set her outside the camp of Israel.²⁴ And the city was burned with burning with all that was in it. Only things of silver and gold and bronze and iron did they give, to be brought into the treasury of the Lord.²⁵ And Raab the prostitute and all her father’s house Iesous kept alive, and it has dwelled in Israel until this very day. For she hid the spies whom Iesous sent to spy out Iericho.

26 And Iesous swore on that day before the Lord, saying, “Cursed be the person who shall build that city.

At the cost of his firstborn he shall find it, and at the cost of his youngest he shall set up its gates.”

And thus did Ozan of Baithel; at the cost of Abiron, his firstborn, he founded it, and at the cost of his youngest, although he escaped, he set up its gates.

27 And the Lord was with Iesous, and his name was in all the land.

7 And the sons of Israel committed a major offense and appropriated for themselves part of what was devoted. And Achar son of Charmi son of Zambri son of Zara, of the tribe of Ioudas, took from what was devoted, and the Lord was furiously angry with the sons of Israel.

2 And Iesous sent men to Gai, which is near Baithel, saying, “Spy out Gai.” And the men went up and spied out Gai.³ And they returned to Iesous and said to him, “Let not all the people go up, but let about two or three thousand men go up and take the city by siege. Do not lead up there the whole people, for they are few.”⁴ And about three thousand men went up, and they fled before the men of Gai.⁵ And of them the men of Gai killed up to thirty-six men. And they pursued them from the gate, and they crushed them on the slope. And the heart of the people was terrified and became like water.

6 And Iesous tore his clothes, and Iesous fell on the ground facedown before the Lord until evening, he and the elders of Israel, and they threw dust on their heads.⁷ And Iesous said, “I pray, Lord, why has your servant brought this people across the Jordan, to hand them over to the Amorite so as to destroy us? If only we had remained and been settled beyond the Jordan.”⁸ And what shall I say, since Israel has turned its neck before its enemy?⁹ And when the Chananite and all the inhabitants of the land hear, they will surround us and wipe us out from the land. And what will you make of your great name?”

10 And the Lord said to Iesous, “Stand up. Why is it that you have fallen upon your face?”¹¹ The people have sinned and transgressed the covenant that I made with them. And they have stolen from what is devoted and put it into their own belongings.¹² The sons of Israel shall not be able to stand before their enemies; they shall turn their neck before their enemies, because they have become what is devoted. I will be with you no longer, unless you remove what is devoted from yourselves.¹³ Stand up, sanctify the people, and tell them to be sanctified for tomorrow. This is what the Lord God of Israel says, ‘What is devoted is among you. You will be unable to withstand before your enemies until you remove what is devoted from among you.’¹⁴ And all of you shall be gathered together in the morning by tribes. And it shall be that the tribe that the Lord shows—you shall bring it near by districts. And the district that the Lord shows you shall bring near by household. And the household that the Lord shows you shall bring near by man.¹⁵ And the one who is indicated shall be burned with fire, and all that he has, because he has transgressed the covenant of the Lord and has committed lawlessness in Israel.”

16 And Iesous rose early and brought the people near by tribes, and the tribe of Ioudas was shown.¹⁷ And it was brought near by districts, and the Zarai district was shown. And it was brought near by man,¹⁸ and Achar son of Zambri son of Zara was shown.¹⁹ And Iesous said to Achar, “Give glory today to the Lord, God of Israel, and make the confession. And tell me what you have done, and do not hide it from me.”²⁰ And Achar answered Iesous and said, “Truly I have sinned against the Lord, God of Israel. Thus and so have I done.²¹ I saw in the spoil a beautiful, many-colored carpet and two hundred didrachmas of silver and one golden tongue-shaped object of fifty didrachmas, and I coveted them and took them. And look, they are hidden in the ground in my tent, and the silver is hidden underneath them.”

22 And Iesous sent messengers, and they ran to the tent into the camp, and these things were hidden in the tent, and the silver was underneath them.²³ And they brought them out of the tent and brought them to Iesous and the elders of Israel, and they set them before the Lord.²⁴ And Iesous took Achar son of Zara and brought him up to the ravine of Achor, and his sons and his daughters and his bull calves and his draft animals and all his sheep and his tent and all his belongings—and all the people with him. And he brought them up to Emekachora.²⁵ And Iesous said to Achar, “Why have you destroyed us? May the Lord destroy you as also today." And all Israel stoned him with stones. ²⁶And they set up over him a great heap of stones. And the Lord ceased from burning anger. Therefore he named it Emekachora^a until this day.

8 And the Lord said to Iesous, "Do not fear, nor be afraid. Take with you the men, all the military men, and get up, go up to Gai. See, I have given into your hands the king of Gai and his land. ²And you shall do to Gai as you did to Jericho and its king. And the spoil of the cattle you shall carry away as spoil for yourself. Now set for yourself an ambush against the city, behind."

3 And Iesous and all the military people got up to go up against Gai. And Iesous picked out thirty thousand men mighty in strength and sent them off by night. ⁴And he commanded them, saying, "You, lie in ambush behind the city; do not be far from the city, and all of you shall be ready. ⁵And I and all those with me will approach the city. And it shall be that when the inhabitants of Gai come out against us, as also before, then we shall flee from before them. ⁶And when they come out after us, we will draw them away from the city. And they will say, 'They are fleeing from before us, as also previously.' ⁷And you shall rise up out of the ambush and go into the city. ⁸And you shall act according to this word; see, I have commanded you." ⁹And Iesous sent them off, and they went to the ambush, and lay between Baithel and between Gai, from the sea of Gai.

10 And Iesous early in the morning mustered the people, and they went up, he and the elders, before the people to Gai. ¹¹And all the military people with him went up, and as they went, they came opposite the city to the east. ¹²And the ambush of the city was at the sea. ¹⁴And it happened, when the king of Gai saw this, that he hurried and went out to meet them directly in battle, he and all the people who were with him, and he did not know that there was an ambush against him behind the city. ¹⁵And Iesous and Israel saw it and retreated from before them. ¹⁶And they closely pursued after the sons of Israel, and they themselves went away from the city. ¹⁷There was no one left in Gai who did not closely pursue after Israel, and they left the city open and closely pursued after Israel.

18 And the Lord said to Iesous, "Stretch out your hand with the javelin that is in your hand toward the city, for I have given it into your hands. And the ambush shall rise up quickly out of its place." And Iesous stretched out his hand, the javelin, toward the city. ¹⁹And the ambush rose up quickly out of its place, and they came out when he stretched out his hand. And they went to the city and took it, and they hurried and set the city on fire with fire. ²⁰And when the inhabitants of Gai looked around behind them, then they beheld smoke rising up out of the city to the sky. And they no longer had anywhere to flee this way or that way. ²¹And Iesous and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city and that the smoke of the city rose up to the sky. And they changed course and struck down the men of Gai. ²²And these^b came out from the city to meet them, and they^c were between the camp, some on one side and some on the other side, and they struck them down until no one was left of them who survived and escaped. ²³And they took the king of Gai alive and brought him to Iesous.

24 And when the sons of Israel had finished slaying all those in Gai, those in the plains and on the mountain on the descent, there where they fully pursued them, then Iesous turned back to Gai and struck it with the edge of the sword. ²⁵And those who fell that day, from man even to woman, were twelve thousand—all the inhabitants of Gai. ²⁷Except for the livestock and the spoils that were in the city, all things that the sons of Israel took as spoil, according to the ordinance of the Lord, as the Lord had instructed Iesous. ²⁸And Iesous burned the city with fire; he made it an uninhabited mound forever until this day. ²⁹And he hanged the king of Gai on a forked tree, and he was on the tree until evening. And when the sun set Iesous gave instructions, and they took his body down from the tree and threw him into the hole and set over him a heap of stones until this day.

9 Now when the kings of the Amorrites, who were on the other side of the Jordan, who were in the hill country and who were in the plain and who were in all the coast of the great sea, and who were near Anti-Lebanon, and the Chettites and the Chananites and the Pherezites and the Heuites and the Amorrites and the Gergesites and the Iebousites heard, ²they gathered together, all of them with one accord, to make war against Iesous and Israel.

2a(8.30) Then Iesous built an altar to the Lord, the God of Israel, on Mount Gaibal, ^{2b(31)}as Moyses the attendant of the Lord had commanded the sons of Israel, as it is written in the law of Moyses, "an altar of whole stones on which iron was not applied," and he brought up there whole burnt offerings to the Lord and an offering of deliverance. ^{2c(32)}And Iesous wrote on the stones Deuteronomion^d, a law of Moyses, which he wrote in the presence of the sons of Israel. ^{2d(33)}And all Israel and their elders and their judges and their scribes passed on one side and on the other side of the ark, opposite, and the priests and the Leuites took up the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the guest and the native-born. Half of them were near Mount Garizin and half of them were near Mount Gaibal, as Moyses the attendant of the Lord commanded at first, to bless the people. ^{2e(34)}And after these things Iesous thus read all the words of this law, the blessings and the curses, according to all things written in the law of Moyses. ^{2f(35)}There was not a word of all that Moyses commanded Iesous that Iesous did not read in the ears of all the assembly of the sons of Israel, to the men and the women and the children and the guests who attached themselves to Israel.

3 And the inhabitants of Gabaon heard all that the Lord did to Jericho and to Gai. 4And indeed they on their part acted with cunning, and they went, prepared provisions and got themselves ready. And they put old sacks on their donkeys and old and torn, bound-up wineskins. 5And the hollows of their shoes and their sandals were old and clouted on their feet, and their garments were worn out upon them, and the bread of their provision was dry and moldy and bug-infested. 6And they came to Iesous into the camp of Israel to Galgala, and they said to Iesous and Israel, "We have come from a land far away; now then make a covenant with us." 7And the sons of Israel said to the Chorrite, "Take heed, lest you live with me, and how am I to make a covenant with you?" 8And they said to Iesous, "We are your domestics." And Iesous said to them, "From where are you? And from where have you come?" 9And they said, "Your servants have come from a land very far away in the name of the Lord your God; for we have heard his name and what he did in Egypt 10and what he did to the kings of the Amorrites who were on the other side of the Jordan, to Seon, king of Hesebon, and to Og, king of Basan, who lived in Astaroth and in Edrain. 11And when they heard, our elders and all the inhabitants of our land spoke to us, saying, 'Take provision for yourselves for the journey, and go to meet them, and you shall say to them, "We are your domestics; now then make a covenant with us.'" 12These are the loaves; we took them for our journey when they were hot on the day on which we set out to come to you, but now they are dried and have become bug-infested. 13And these are the skins of wine that we filled when they were new, and they are burst. And our garments and our shoes are worn out because of the very long journey." 14And the leaders took of their provision and did not ask the Lord. 15And Iesous made peace with them, and they made a covenant with them, to preserve them, and the leaders of the congregation swore an oath to them.

16 And it happened three days after they had made a covenant with them that they heard that they were close by them and that they were living among them. 17And the sons of Israel set out and came to their cities. And their cities were Gabaon and Kephira and Berot and Iarin-City. 18But the sons of Israel did not fight against them, because all the leaders had sworn to them by the Lord, the God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the leaders. 19And the leaders said to all the congregation, "We have sworn to them by the Lord, the God of Israel, and now we shall not be able to touch them. 20This we will do: take them alive, and we will preserve them. And there shall not be wrath against us because of the oath that we swore to them. 21They shall live and shall be hewers of wood and drawers of water for all the congregation"—as the leaders said to them.

22 And Iesous called them together and said to them, "Why have you misled me, saying, 'We live very far from you,' but you are fellow dwellers, those who live among us? 23And now you are cursed; there shall not be lacking from you a slave or a hewer of wood for me and my God." 24And they answered Iesous, saying, "It was reported to us what the Lord your God instructed his servant Moyses, to give you this land and to destroy us and all its inhabitants from before you, and we greatly feared for our lives before you and did this thing. 25And now, see, we are in your power; do to us as it is pleasing to you and as it seems right to you." 26And thus they did to them, and Iesous rescued them on that day out of the hands of the sons of Israel, and they did not kill them. 27And Iesous made them on that day hewers of wood and drawers of water for the whole congregation and for the altar of God. Therefore the inhabitants of Gabaon became hewers of wood and drawers of water of the altar of God until this very day, and in the place that the Lord should choose.

10 And when Adonibezek, king of Ierousalem, heard that Iesous had taken Gai and had utterly destroyed it—as they did to Jericho and its king, so they did to Gai and its king—and that the inhabitants of Gabaon had deserted to Iesous and to Israel, 2then they became greatly frightened by means of them, for he knew that Gabaon was a large city, like one of the mother-cities, and all its men were strong. 3And Adonibezek, king of Ierousalem, sent to Ailam, king of Chebron, and to Phidon, king of Ierimouth, and to Iephtha, king of Lachis, and to Dabir, king of Odollam, saying, 4"Come up here to me, and help me, and let us go to war with Gabaon, for they have deserted to Iesous and to the sons of Israel." 5And the five kings of the Iebousites—the king of Ierousalem and the king of Chebron and the king of Ierimouth and the king of Lachis and the king of Odollam—went up, they and all their people, and surrounded Gabaon and besieged it.

6 And the inhabitants of Gabaon sent to Iesous into the camp of Israel to Galgala, saying, "Do not relax your hands from your servants. Come up to us quickly, and rescue us, and help us, for all the kings of the Amorrites who live in the hill country are gathered together against us." 7And Iesous went up out of Galgala, he and all the military people with him, every one mighty in strength. 8And the Lord said to Iesous, "Do not fear them, for I have delivered them into your hands; not one of them shall be left before you." 9And Iesous came upon them suddenly; he entered all night out of Galgala. 10And the Lord confounded them before the sons of Israel, and the Lord shattered them with great destruction at Gabaon, and they pursued them by the way of the ascent of Horonin and cut them down as far as Azeka and as far as Make-da. 11Now as they fled from before the sons of Israel, upon the descent of Horonin, then the Lord threw down upon them hailstones from heaven as far as Azeka, and there were more who died through the hailstones than those whom the sons of Israel killed by dagger in the battle.

12 Then Iesous spoke to the Lord, on the day when God delivered the Amorrite into the control of Israel, when he shattered them at Gabaon, and they were shattered before the sons of Israel, and Iesous said,

“Let the sun stand at Gabaon, and the moon at the ravine of Ailon.”

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon was in position until God avenged himself on their enemies, and the sun stood in midheaven; it did not go forward to set ^auntil the end of ^aone day. ¹⁴And there was not such a day either before or after so that a god heeded a human being, because the Lord fought alongside Israel.

16 And those five kings fled and hid themselves in the cave that was in Makeda. ¹⁷And it was told Iesous, saying, “The five kings have been found, hidden in the cave that is in Makeda.” ¹⁸And Iesous said, “Roll stones against the mouth of the cave, and set men to guard over them. ¹⁹But you, do not stand in pursuing after your enemies, and lay hold of their rear guard. And do not let them enter into their cities, for the Lord our God has given them into our hands.” ²⁰And it happened, when Iesous and every son of Israel finished smiting them with a very great slaughter, all the way to the end, that those who survived sought survival in the strong cities. ²¹And all the people returned sound to Iesous to Makeda, and no one of the sons of Israel grumbled with his tongue.

22 And Iesous said, “Open the cave, and bring these five kings out of the cave.” ²³And they brought the five kings out of the cave—the king of Ierousalem and the king of Chebron and the king of Ierimouth and the king of Lachis and the king of Odollam. ²⁴And when they brought them out to Iesous, then Iesous called together all Israel and the chiefs of war who went with him, saying to them, “Come forward, and put your feet on their necks.” And they came forward and put their feet on their necks. ²⁵And Iesous said to them, “Neither fear them, nor be cowardly; be manly and strong; for thus the Lord will do to all your enemies against whom you fight.” ²⁶And Iesous killed them, and he hung them on five trees. And they hung upon the trees until evening. ²⁷And it happened towards sunset that Iesous commanded, and they took them down from the trees and threw them into the cave, there where they had fled for refuge, and they rolled stones against the cave until this very day.

28 And they took Makeda on that day, and they slew it with the edge of the rapier, and they utterly destroyed everything breathing in it, and there was no one left in it that survived and had escaped. And they did to the king of Makeda as they did to the king of Iericho.

29 And Iesous departed out of Makeda, and all

Israel with him, to Lebna, and he besieged Lebna. ³⁰And the Lord delivered it into the hands of Israel, and they took it and its king, and they slew it with the edge of the rapier, and everything breathing in it, and there was not left in it one that survived and had escaped. And they did to its king as they did to the king of Iericho.

31 And Iesous departed out of Lebna, and all Israel with him, to Lachis, and surrounded it and besieged it. ³²And the Lord delivered Lachis into the hands of Israel, and he took it on the second day, and they slew it with the edge of the rapier, and they utterly destroyed it as they did to Lebna.

33 Then Ailam, king of Gazer, came up to help Lachis, and Iesous smote him with the edge of the rapier, and his people, until there was not left of them any who survived and had escaped.

34 And Iesous departed out of Lachis, and all Israel with him, to Odollam, and surrounded it and besieged it. ³⁵And the Lord delivered it in the hand of Israel, and he took it on that day and slew it with the edge of the rapier, and they slew everything breathing in it, as they did to Lachis.

36 And Iesous and all Israel with him departed to Chebron and surrounded it. ³⁷And he smote it with the edge of the rapier, and everything breathing, as many as were in it; there was not anyone who survived; as they did to Odollam, they utterly destroyed it and as many as were in it.

38 And Iesous and all Israel returned to Dabir, and when they had surrounded it, ³⁹they took it and its king and its villages, and they smote it with the edge of the rapier, and they utterly destroyed it and everything breathing in it, and they did not leave it anyone who survived; as they did to Chebron and its king, so they did to Dabir and its king.

40 And Iesous smote all the land of the hill country and the Nageb and the plain and Asedoth and its kings; they did not leave any of them who survived, and they utterly destroyed everything that breathed with life, as the Lord, the God of Israel, commanded, ⁴¹from Kades Barne as far as Gaza, all Gosom as far as Gabaon. ⁴²And Iesous smote, once for all, all their kings and their land, because the Lord, the God of Israel, fought alongside Israel.

11 Now when Iabin, king of Hasor, heard, he sent to Iobab, king of Marron, and to the king of Symoon and to the king of Aziph ²and to the kings who were by Sidon the great, to the hill country and to Raba opposite Keneroth and to the plain and to Napheddor ³and to the coast-dwelling Chananites on the east and to the coast-dwelling Amorrite and the Heuites and the Iebousites and the Pherезites in the mountain and the Chettites, those under Haermon in the land of Massepha. ⁴And they came out, they and their kings with them, as the sand of the sea in multitude, and horses and very many chariots. ⁵And all these kings gathered and came to the same place and encamped at the water of Marron, to fight with Israel.

6 And the Lord said to Iesous, “Do not be afraid before them, for tomorrow at this time I will deliver them, routed before Israel; you shall hamstring their horses and burn their chariots with fire.⁷ And Iesous—and all the military people—came upon them at the water of Marron suddenly, and they fell upon them in the hill country.⁸ And the Lord delivered them into the power of Israel, and as they smote them, they pursued them as far as Sidon the great and as far as Maseron and as far as the plains of Massoch to the east. And they cut them down until not one of them was left who survived.⁹ And Iesous did to them as the Lord commanded him; he hamstrung their horses and burned their chariots with fire.

^aOr completely within

10 And Iesous turned back at that time and took Hasor and its king. And Hasor was earlier chief of all those kingdoms.¹¹ And they slew everything breathing in it with the rapier and utterly destroyed them all, and nothing breathing was left in it, and they burned Hasor with fire.¹² And all the cities of the kings and their kings, Iesous took and killed them with the edge of the rapier and utterly destroyed them, as Moyses the servant of the Lord instructed.¹³ But all the cities fortified with mounds Israel did not burn, but Iesous burned only Hasor.¹⁴ And the sons of Israel appropriated all its spoils for themselves, but they completely destroyed all people with the edge of the rapier until he demolished them; they did not leave anything of them breathing.¹⁵ As the Lord instructed Moyses his servant, Moyses also commanded Iesous in like manner, and so Iesous did; he did not transgress anything of all that Moyses instructed him.

16 And Iesous took all the land: the hill country and all the Nageb and all the land of Gosom and the plain and that toward the west and the mountain of Israel and the low regions¹⁷ by the mountain, from mount Hachel, and that which rises up to Seir and as far as Baalgad and the plains of Lebanon, under Mount Haermon. And all their kings he took and destroyed and killed them.¹⁸ And for rather many days Iesous made war with these kings.¹⁹ And there was not a city that Israel did not take; they took everything in war.²⁰ For it was through the Lord to strengthen their heart to meet for war against Israel in order that they might be utterly destroyed, that mercy not be given to them, but that they be utterly destroyed, just as the Lord said to Moyses.

21 And at that time Iesous came and utterly destroyed the Enakim out of the hill country, out of Chebron and out of Dabir and out of Anaboth and out of all the race of Israel and out of all the mountain of Ioudas with their cities, and Iesous utterly destroyed them.²² And none of the Enakim was left by the sons of Israel, but only in Gaza and in Geth and in Asedoth was anyone left.²³ And Iesous took all the land, as the Lord commanded Moyses, and Iesous gave them as an inheritance of Israel by allotment according to their tribes, and the land stopped being at war.

12 And these are the kings of the land, whom the sons of Israel slew, and they inherited their land beyond the Jordan from the rising of the sun, from the ravine of Arnon to Mount Haermon and all the land of Araba on the east:² Seon, the king of the Amorrites, who lived in Hesebon, ruling from Aroer, which is in the ravine, along part of the ravine, and half of Galaad as far as Iabok, the boundaries of the sons of Ammon;³ and Araba as far as the sea of Chenereth eastward and as far as the sea of Araba; the sea of salt on the east along the way of Hasimoth, from Thaiman, which is under Asedoth Phasga.⁴ And Og, king of Basan, was left of the giants, he who lived in Astaroth and in Edrain,⁵ ruling from Mount Haermon and from Selcha and all the land of Basan as far as the boundaries of Gesouri and Machati and half of Galaad as far as the boundaries of Seon, king of Hesebon.⁶ Moyses, the servant of the Lord, and the sons of Israel smote them, and Moyses gave it as an inheritance to Rouben and Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse.

7 And these are the kings of the Amorrites whom Iesous slew, and the sons of Israel, beyond the Jordan by the sea of Baalgad in the plain of Lebanon and as far as the Mount Chelcha, as they rise to Seir, and Iesous gave it to the tribes of Israel to inherit according to their allotment,⁸ in the mountain and in the plain and in Araba and in Asedoth and in the wilderness and in the Nageb; the Chettite and the Amorrite and the Chananite and the Pherezite and the Heuite and the Iebousite:⁹ the king of Iericho and the king of Gai, which is near Baithel,¹⁰ king of Ierousalem, king of Chebron,¹¹ king of Ierimouth, king of Lachis,¹² king of Ailam, king of Gazer,¹³ king of Dabir, king of Gader,¹⁴ king of Hermath, king of Arath,¹⁵ king of Lebna, king of Odollam,¹⁶ king of Make-da,¹⁷ king of Taphoug, king of Hopher,¹⁸ king of Aphek of Saron,¹⁹ king of Hasor,²⁰ king of Symoon, king of Marron, king of Aziph,²¹ king of Kades, king of Tanach,²² king of Magedon, king of Iekonam of Chermel,²³ king of Dor of Napheddor, king of Goim of Galilee,²⁴ king of Tharsa; all these, twenty-nine kings.

13 And Iesous was rather old, advanced in days, and the Lord said to Iesous, "You are advanced in days, and there is much land left to inherit.² And this is the land that is left: the boundaries of Phylistiim, Gesiri and the Chananite,³ from the uninhabited region before Egypt, as far as the boundaries of Akkaron, to the left of the Chananites, it is reckoned to the five satrapies of the Phylistiim—to the Gazean and to the Azotian and to the Ascalonite and to the Geththite and to the Akkaronite—and to the Heuite,⁴ from Thaiman, and to all the land of Chanaan before Gaza and the Sidonians as far as Aphek, as far as the boundaries of the Amorrites,⁵ and all the land of Gabli of Phylistiim and all Lebanon, toward the rising of the sun, from Galgal under Mount Haermon as far as the entrance of Hemath,⁶ everyone who inhabits the hill country from Lebanon as far as Maserephothmaim. All the Sidonians, I will utterly destroy them from before Israel, but pass it on as an allotment to Israel, as I commanded you. ⁷And now divide this land as an inheritance for the nine tribes and for the half-tribe of Manasse. From the Jordan as far as the great sea toward the setting of the sun you shall give it; the great sea shall be the boundary."

8 But to the two tribes and to the half-tribe of Manasse, to Rouben and to Gad, Moyses gave beyond the Jordan toward the rising of the sun; Moyses the servant of the Lord has given it ⁹from Aroer, which is on the edge of the wadi of Arnon, and the city in the middle of the ravine and all Misor from Maidaba as far as Daiban, ¹⁰all the cities of Seon, king of the Amorrites, who reigned in Hesebon, as far as the boundaries of the sons of Ammon, ¹¹and Galaaditis and the boundaries of Gesiri and of Machati, the entire Mount Haermon, and all Basanitis as far as Selcha, ¹²all the kingdom of Og in Basanitis, he who reigned in Astaroth and in Edrain; he was left of the giants, and Moyses smote and utterly destroyed him. ¹³And the sons of Israel did not utterly destroy Gesiri and Machati and the Chananite, and Gesiri's king and Machati kept living among the sons of Israel until this very day.

14 With the exception of the tribe of Leui—no inheritance was given; the Lord God of Israel, he is their inheritance, as the Lord said to them, and this is the division that Moyses divided for the sons of Israel in Araboth Moab^a beyond the Jordan opposite Iericho.

15 And Moyses gave to the tribe of Rouben according to their districts. ¹⁶And their boundaries were from Aroer, which is opposite the valley of Arnon, and the city that is in the ravine of Arnon and all the land of Misor, ¹⁷as far as Hesebon, and all the cities that are in the land of Misor and of Daibon and of Bamoth-Baal and of the house of Beelmon ¹⁸and Iassa and Kedemoth and Mephath ¹⁹and Kariathaim and Sebama and Serada and Sior on the mountain of Emak^b ²⁰and Baithphogor and Asedoth^c Phasga and Baithasimoth ²¹and all the cities of Misor and all the kingdom of Seon, king of the Amorrites, whom Moyses smote, him and the leaders of Madian, and Eui and Rokom and Sour and Hour and Robe, rulers alongside Seon, and the inhabitants of the land. ²²And Balaam the son of Beor, the diviner, they slew at the decisive moment. ²³And it^d became the boundaries of Rouben. Jordan was a boundary. This was the inheritance of the sons of Rouben according to their districts, their cities and their farmsteads.

24 And Moyses gave to the sons of Gad according to their districts. ²⁵And their boundaries were Iazer, all of the cities of Galaad and half of the land of the sons of Ammon, as far as Aroer, which is before Rabba, ²⁶and from Hesebon as far as Ramoth by Massepha and Botanin and Maanain as far as the boundaries of Dabir ²⁷and in Emek^b Baitharam and Baithanabra and Sokchotha and Saphan and the rest of the kingdom of Seon, king of Hesebon, and the Jordan shall be the boundary as far as part of the sea of Chenereth beyond the Jordan eastward. ²⁸This is the inheritance of the sons of Gad according to their districts, their cities and their farmsteads.

29 And Moyses gave to the half-tribe of Manasse according to their districts. ³⁰And their boundaries were from Maanaim and all the kingdom of Basani and all the kingdom of Og, king of Basan, and all the villages of Iair, which are in Basanitis, sixty cities, ³¹and half of Galaad and in Astaroth and in Edrain, cities of the kingdom of Og in Basanitis, and they were given to the sons of Machir son of Manasse and to half the sons of Machir son of Manasse according to their districts.

32 These are the ones whom Moyses caused to inherit beyond the Jordan in Araboth Moab^a, beyond the Jordan by Iericho eastward.

14 And these are the inheritors from the sons of Israel in the land of Chanaan to whom Eleazar the priest and Iesous the son of Naue and the chiefs of the paternal families of the tribes of the sons of Israel gave inheritances. ²By lots they inherited, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Iesous to the nine tribes and to the half-tribe, ³from beyond the Jordan. And to the Leuites he did not give an allotment among them. ⁴For the sons of Ioseph were two tribes, Manasse and Ephraim, and a portion was not given in the land to the Leuites, rather, cities to live in and areas marked off for their cattle and their cattle. ⁵As the Lord commanded Moyses, so the sons of Israel did, and they distributed the land.

6 And the sons of Ioudas came to Iesous at Galgal, and Chaleb the son of Iephonne the Kenezite said to him, "You know the word that the Lord spoke to Moyses man of God concerning you and me at Kades Barne. ⁷For I was forty years old when Moyses the servant of God sent me out of Kades Barne to spy out the land, and I answered him a word according to his mind. ⁸And my brothers who went up with me changed the heart of the people, but I added to follow closely the Lord my God. ⁹And Moyses swore on that day, saying, 'The land upon which you have tread shall be yours as an allotment and your children's forever, because you have applied yourself to follow closely after the Lord our God.' ¹⁰And now the Lord has sustained me, as he said; this is the forty-fifth year from when the Lord spoke this word to Moyses, and Israel journeyed in the wilderness, and now, look, I am today eighty-five years old. ¹¹I am still strong today, as when Moyses sent me; I am now just as strong to go out and to go into war. ¹²And now I ask you for this mountain, as the Lord said on that day; for you have heard this word on that day. But now the Enakim are there, cities strong and great; if then the Lord is with me, I will utterly destroy them, as the Lord said to me."

13 And Iesous blessed him and gave Chebron to Chaleb son of Iephonne son of Kenez as an allotment. ¹⁴Therefore Chebron became an allotment for Chaleb the son of Iephonne the Kenezite to this day, because he followed closely the ordinance of the Lord, God of Israel. ¹⁵And the name of Chebron formerly was city of Arbok; this is the mother-city of the Enakim, and the land abated from war.

15 And the boundaries of the tribe of Ioudas according to their districts were from the boundaries of Idumea from the wilderness of Sin as far as Kades to the southwest. ²And their boundaries were from the southwest as far as part of the salt sea from the ridge that stretches southwestward. ³And they pass through before the ascent of Akrabin and go out around Senna and go up from the southwest to Kades Barne and go out to Hasoron and go up to Addara and go around toward the west of Kades ⁴and proceed to Asemona and pass through as far as the ravine of Egypt, and the outlet of its boundaries shall be to the sea. This is their boundaries from the southwest. ⁵And the boundaries from the east: the whole salt sea as far as the Jordan. And their boundaries from the north, both from the ridge of the sea and from the part of the Jordan, ⁶the boundaries go to Baithagla, and they go past from the north to Baitharaba, and the boundaries go higher to the stone of Baion son of Rouben, ⁷and the boundaries go higher to the fourth part of the ravine of Achor and go down to Galgal, which is before the approach of Addamin, which is to the southwest of the valley, and pass through to the water of the fountain of the sun, and its outlet shall be the fountain of Rogel, ⁸and the boundaries go up to the ravine of Honom at the ridge of Iebous (this is Ierousalem), and the boundaries pass through to the mountain top that is before the ravine of Honom toward the sea, which is by the side of the land of Raphain northward, ⁹and the boundary passes through from the top of the mountain to the spring of the water of Naphtho and passes through to Mount Ephron, and the boundary will lead out to Baal (this is the city of Iarim), ¹⁰and the boundary will go around from Baal to the sea and will go alongside to Mount Assares at the ridge, the city of Iarim from the north (this is Chaslon) and will go down to Sun-City and will go alongside to the southwest, ¹¹and the boundary will go out toward the ridge of Akkaron northward, and the boundaries will go out to Sakcharona and will pass alongside to Mount Bala and will go out to Iabnel, and the outlet of the boundaries shall be to the sea. ¹²And their boundaries from the sea: the great sea shall be the boundary. These are the boundaries of the sons of Ioudas round about according to their districts.

¹³ And to Chaleb son of Iephonne he gave a portion among the sons of Ioudas, according to the ordinance of God, and Iesous gave him the city of Arbok, the mother-city of Enak (this is Chebron). ¹⁴And Chaleb son of Iephonne completely destroyed from there the three sons of Enak: Soudi and Tholmi and Achima. ¹⁵And Chaleb went up from there against the inhabitants of Dabir; now the name of Dabir formerly was City of Letters. ¹⁶And Chaleb said, "Whoever takes City of Letters and gains power over it, to him I will give Achsa my daughter as wife." ¹⁷And Gothoniel son of Kenez, the younger brother of Chaleb, took it, and he gave him Achsa his daughter as his wife. ¹⁸And it happened, when she came in, that she advised him, saying, "I will ask my father for a field." And she cried out from the donkey, and Chaleb said to her, "What do you wish?" ¹⁹And she said to him, "Give me a blessing, since you have placed me in the land of Nageb; give me Golathmain." And Chaleb gave her upper Golathmain and lower Golathmain.

²⁰ This is the inheritance of the tribe of the sons of Ioudas. ²¹And these were their cities, foremost city of the tribe of the sons of Ioudas at the boundaries of Edom at the wilderness:

63 And the Iebousite dwelled in Ierusalem, and the sons of Ioudas were not able to destroy them, and the Iebousites dwelled in Ierusalem to that day.

16 And the boundaries of the sons of Ioseph were from the Jordan near Iericho from the east, and they will go up from Iericho into the hill country, the wilderness, into Baithel Louza, ²and they will go out into Baithel and will proceed to the boundaries of Chatarothi, ³and they will go across to the sea, to the boundaries of Aptalim, as far as the boundaries of Lower Baithoron, and their outlet shall be to the sea.

4 And the sons of Ioseph, Ephraim and Manasse, received their inheritance.

5 And the boundaries of the sons of Ephraim were according to their districts, and the boundaries of their inheritance were from the east Ataroth and Erok, as far as Upper Baithoron and Gazara, ⁶and the boundaries will go across to the sea, into Ikasmon from the north of Therma; they will go around eastward into Thenasa and Sella, and they will proceed from the east into Ianoka ⁷and into Macho and Ataroth, and these are their villages, and they will go to Iericho and will pass through and out to the Jordan. ⁸And from Taphou the boundaries shall proceed to the sea, to Chelkana, and their outlet shall be to the sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of Ephraim according to their districts. ⁹And the cities marked off for the sons of Ephraim were in the midst of the inheritance of the sons of Manasse, all the cities and their villages. ¹⁰And Ephraim did not destroy the Chananite living in Gazer, and the Chananite lived in Ephraim until this day, until Pharao, king of Egypt, went up and took it, and he burned it with fire, and they massacred the Chananites and the Perezites and those living in Gazer, and Pharao gave it as a dowry to his daughter.

17 And the boundaries of the tribe of the sons of Manasse, for he was the firstborn to Ioseph, were: to Machir, firstborn of Manasse, father of Galaad, for he was a military man, in Galaaditis and in Basanitis. ²And to the remaining sons of Manasse, according to their districts they were: to the sons of Iezer and to the sons of Kelez and to the sons of Ieziel and to the sons of Sychem and to the sons of Symarim and to the sons of Hopher; these are the males, according to their districts.

³ And to Salpaad son of Hopher—he did not have sons but daughters, and these are the names of the daughters of Salpaad: Maala and Noua and Hegla and Melcha and Thersa. ⁴And they stood before Eleazar the priest and before Iesous and before the leaders, saying, “God commanded through the hand of Moyses, to give us an inheritance in the midst of our brothers.” And there was given to them through the ordinance of the Lord an allotment among the brothers of their father. ⁵And their portion fell from Anassa and the plain of Labek, out of Galaad, which is beyond the Jordan, ⁶because the daughters of the sons of Manasse inherited an allotment in the midst of their brothers, but the land of Galaad was for the remaining sons of Manasse.

¹⁴ Now the sons of Ioseph disputed with Iesous, saying, “Why have you caused us to inherit a single allotment and a single portion, for I am a numerous people, and God has blessed me?” ¹⁵And Iesous said to them, “If you are a numerous people, go up into the thicket, and clear it for yourself, if Mount Ephraim is cramped for you.” ¹⁶And they said, “Mount Ephraim is not enough for us, and the Chananite dwelling on it, in Baithsan and in its villages, in the valley of Iezrael, has choice cavalry and iron.” ¹⁷And Iesous said to the sons of Ioseph, “If you are a numerous people and if you have great strength, you shall not have a single allotment. ¹⁸For the thicket shall be yours, because there is a thicket, and you shall clear it, and it shall be yours, and when you utterly destroy the Chananite, because he has choice cavalry; for you are stronger than he.”

18 And the whole congregation of the sons of Israel was assembled at Selo, and they pitched there the tent of witness, and the land was subdued by them.

² And the sons of Israel who had not received their inheritance remained, seven tribes. ³And Iesous said to the sons of Israel, “How long will you be slack about inheriting the land that the Lord our God has given you? ⁴Provide from yourselves three men from a tribe, and let them rise up and go throughout the land, and let them map it out before me, as it will be necessary to divide it.” And they came to him, ⁵and he divided for them seven portions: “Ioudas shall stand for them as a boundary from the southwest, and the sons of Ioseph shall stand for them from the north. ⁶Now you, apportion the land into seven portions, and bring word to me here, and I will cast a lot for you before the Lord our God. ⁷For the sons of Leui have no portion among you, for the priesthood of the Lord is his portion, and Gad and Rouben and the half-tribe of Manasse have received their inheritance beyond the Jordan eastward, which Moyses the servant of the Lord gave them.”

⁸ And the men rose up and went on their way, and Iesous commanded the men who went to survey the land, saying, “Go, and survey the land, and come to me, and I will cast a lot for you here before the Lord in Selo.” ⁹And they went and surveyed the land, and they viewed it, and they wrote it in a book according to its cities, seven parts, and they brought it to Iesous. ¹⁰And Iesous cast a lot for them in Selo before the Lord.

⁴⁸And the sons of Ioudas proceeded and fought against Lachis, and they took it and smote it with the edge of the dagger, and they inhabited it and called its name Lasendak. ^{48a}And the Amorrite continued to dwell in Elom and in Salamin, and the hand of Ephraim was heavy upon them, and they became as tribute to them.

49 And they proceeded to come into possession of the land according to their boundary, and the sons of Israel gave an allotment to Iesous the son of Naue among them, ⁵⁰by God's ordinance, and they gave him the city that he asked for, Thamasarach, which is in Mount Ephraim, and he built the city and dwelt in it.

51 These are the divisions that Eleazar the priest assigned as inheritances, and Iesous the son of Naue and the chiefs of the paternal families among the tribes of Israel, according to allotments, at Selo before the Lord by the doors of the tent of witness. And they proceeded to come into possession of the land.

20 And the Lord spoke to Iesous, saying, ²"Speak to the sons of Israel, saying, 'Give the cities of places of refuge of which I spoke to you through Moyses, ³a place of refuge for the slayer who has smitten a soul involuntarily, and the cities shall be for you a place of refuge, and the slayer shall not die by the next of kin in blood until he stands before the congregation for judgment.'"

7 And he set apart Kades in Galilee in the mountain of Nephthali. And Sychem in the mountain of Ephraim and the city of Arbok (this is Chebron) in the mountain of Ioudas. ⁸And beyond the Jordan he gave Bosor in the wilderness on the plain, out of the tribe of Rouben, and Aremoth in Galaad, out of the tribe of Gad, and Gaulon in Basanitis, out of the tribe of Manasse. ⁹These were the cities designated for the sons of Israel and for the guest abiding among them, that anyone who smites a soul involuntarily may flee there so that he will not die by the hand of the next of kin in blood until he stands before the congregation for judgment.

21 And the chiefs of the paternal families of the sons of Leui approached Eleazar the priest and Iesous the son of Naue and the tribal chiefs of the families out of the tribes of Israel, ²and they said to them at Selo in the land of Chanaan, saying, "The Lord commanded through the hand of Moyses to give us cities to occupy and surrounding lands for our cattle." ³And the sons of Israel gave to the Leuites, as they were inheriting by ordinance of the Lord, the cities and their surrounding lands round about.

4 And the allotment went out to the district of Kaath, and the sons of Aaron, the priests, the Leuites, had by lot thirteen cities from the tribe of Ioudas and from the tribe of Symeon and from the tribe of Benjamin.

5 And the remaining sons of Kaath had by lot ten cities out of the tribe of Ephraim and out of the tribe of Dan and out of the half-tribe of Manasse.

6 And the sons of Gedson had thirteen cities from the tribe of Issachar and from the tribe of Aser and from the tribe of Nephthali and from the half-tribe of Manasse in Basan.

8 And the sons of Israel gave to the Leuites the cities and their surrounding lands, as the Lord commanded Moyses.

9 And the tribe of the sons of Ioudas and the tribe of the sons of Symeon and part of the tribe of the sons of Benjamin gave the cities, and they were assigned ¹⁰to the sons of Aaron from the district of Kaath of the sons of Leui, because theirs was the allotment. ¹¹He gave to them Kariatharbok, the mother-city of those of Enak (this is Chebron) in the mountain of Ioudas and the surrounding lands. ¹²And the fields of the cities and its villages Iesous gave to the sons of Chaleb son of Iephonne as a possession.

13 And to the sons of Aaron he gave the city as a place of refuge for the one who slays, Chebron and the lands set apart with it and Lemna and the lands set apart near it ¹⁴and Ailom and the lands set apart for it and Tema and the lands set apart for it ¹⁵and Gella and the lands set apart for it and Dabir and the lands set apart for it ¹⁶and Asa and the lands set apart for it and Tany and the lands set apart for it and Baithsamys and the lands set apart for it—nine cities from these two tribes. ¹⁷And from the tribe of Benjamin: Gabaon and the lands set apart for it and Gatheth and the lands set apart for it ¹⁸and Anathoth and the lands set apart for it and Gamala and the lands set apart for it—four cities. ¹⁹All the cities of the sons of Aaron the priests were thirteen.

20 And the districts, the sons of Kaath, the remaining Leuites from the sons of Kaath, also had a city of their boundaries from the tribe of Ephraim, ²¹and they gave them the city of a place of refuge of the one who slays, Sychem and the lands set apart for it and Gazara and the lands by it and the lands set apart for it ²²and Kabsaim and the lands set apart near it and Upper Baithoron and the lands set apart for it—four cities. ²³And out of the tribe of Dan: Elkothaim and the lands set apart for it and Gethedan and the lands set apart for it ²⁴and Ailon and the lands set apart for it and Geth-eremmon and the lands set apart for it—four cities. ²⁵And from the half-tribe of Manasse: Tanach and the lands set apart for it and Iebatha and the lands set apart for it—two cities. ²⁶All the cities and the lands set apart near them belonging to the remaining districts of the sons of Kaath were ten.

27 And to the sons of Gedson, the Leuites out of the half-tribe of Manasse, the cities set apart for those who slay, Gaulon in Basanitis and the lands set apart for it and Bosoran and the lands set apart for it—two cities. ²⁸And out of the tribe of Issachar: Kison and the lands set apart for it and Debba and the lands set apart for it ²⁹and Remmath and the lands set apart for it and the Fountain of Letters and the lands set apart for it—four cities. ³⁰And out of the tribe of Aser: Basellan and the lands set apart for it and Dabbon and the lands set apart for it ³¹and Chelkat and the lands set apart for it and Raab and the lands set apart for it—four cities. ³²And out of the tribe of Nephthali: the city set apart for the one who slays, Kades in Galilee and the lands set apart for it and Hemmath and the lands set apart for it and Themmon and the lands set apart for it—three cities.³³ All the cities of Gedson according to their districts were thirteen cities.

34 And to the district of the sons of Merari, the rest of the Leuites, out of the tribe of the sons of Zaboulon: Maan and its surrounding lands and Kades and its surrounding lands³⁵ and Demna and its surrounding lands and Sella and its surrounding lands—four cities.³⁶ And beyond the Jordan opposite Iericho, out of the tribe of Rouben: the city as a place of refuge of the one who slays, Bosor in the wilderness of Misor and its surrounding lands and Iazer and its surrounding lands³⁷ and Dekmon and its surrounding lands and Mapha and its surrounding lands—four cities.³⁸ And from the tribe of Gad: the city of a place of refuge of the one who slays, Ramoth in Galaad and its surrounding lands and Kamin and its surrounding lands³⁹ and Hesebon and its surrounding lands and Iazer and its surrounding lands—all the cities were four.⁴⁰ All cities belonging to the sons of Merari according to the districts of those remaining from the tribe of Leui, and the boundaries were twelve cities.

41 All the cities of the Leuites within the possession of the sons of Israel were forty-eight cities and their surrounding lands⁴² round about these cities—a city and the surrounding lands round about the city, pertaining to all these cities.^{42a} And Iesous ceased dividing the land in their boundaries.^{42b} And the sons of Israel gave a portion to Iesous according to the ordinance of the Lord. They gave him the city that he asked for; they gave him Thamnasarach in Mount Ephraim.^{42c} And Iesous built the city and lived in it.^{42d} And Iesous took the flint knives with which he circumcised the sons of Israel born on the way in the wilderness, and he put them in Thamnasarach.

43 So the Lord gave to Israel all the land that he swore to give to their fathers, and they inherited it and settled in it.⁴⁴ And the Lord gave them rest round about just as he swore to their fathers; no one of all their enemies rose against them; the Lord delivered all their enemies into their hands.⁴⁵ None failed of all the good words that the Lord spoke to the sons of Israel; all came to pass.

22 Then Iesous summoned the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse² and said to them, "You have heard all that Moyses the servant of the Lord commanded you, and you have obeyed my voice according to all that I have commanded you.³ You have not forsaken your brothers all these days and more until this day. You have kept the ordinance of the Lord your God.⁴ And now the Lord our God has given rest to our brothers, as he said to them; now then return, and depart to your homes and to the land of your possession that Moyses gave to you on the other side of the Jordan.⁵ But take great care to do the ordinances and the law that Moyses the servant of the Lord commanded you to do: to love the Lord your God, to walk by all his ways, to keep his ordinances and to hold fast to him and to serve him with all your mind and with all your soul."⁶ And Iesous blessed them and sent them away, and they went to their homes.

7 And to one half of the tribe of Manasse Moyses gave land in Basanitis, and to one half Iesous gave land with his brothers on the other side of the Jordan toward the sea. And when Iesous sent them away to their homes and blessed them,⁸ then they departed with much wealth to their homes, and they divided the spoil of the enemies with their brothers: both very large herds of cattle and silver and gold and iron and a great quantity of clothing.⁹ And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of the sons of Manasse went from the sons of Israel out of Selo in the land of Chanaan, to depart to the land of Galaad, to the land of their possession, which they inherited through the ordinance of the Lord by the hand of Moyses.

10 And they came to Galgala of the Jordan, which is in the land of Chanaan, and the sons of Gad and the sons of Rouben and the half-tribe of Manasse built there an altar^a by the Jordan, a large altar^a to see.¹¹ And the sons of Israel heard people saying, "Look, the sons of Gad and the sons of Rouben and the half-tribe of Manasse have built an altar^a at the boundaries of the land of Chanaan at Galaad of the Jordan, on the other side of the sons of Israel."¹² And all the sons of Israel gathered together at Selo, to go up to make war against them.

13 And the sons of Israel sent to the sons of Rouben and to the sons of Gad and to the half-tribe of Manasse into the land of Galaad both Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the high priest¹⁴ and ten of the chiefs with him, one chief from each paternal house from all the tribes of Israel—chiefs of paternal houses they were, officers of thousands of Israel.¹⁵ And they came to the sons of Gad and to the sons of Rouben and to the halves of the tribe of Manasse into the land of Galaad, and they spoke to them, saying,¹⁶ "This is what the whole congregation of the Lord says, 'What is this trespass that you have committed against the God of Israel, to turn away today from the Lord by building for yourselves an altar^a so that you become rebels from the Lord?'¹⁷ Is the sin of Phogor insignificant for you, that we have not been cleansed from it until this day and there was a plague in the congregation of the Lord?¹⁸ And shall you turn away today from the Lord? And it shall be if you rebel today from the Lord, that tomorrow there shall be anger upon all Israel.¹⁹ And now if the land of your possession is small, cross over to the land of the possession of the Lord, there where the tent of the Lord encamps, and take your inheritance among us, but do not become rebels from God, and do not rebel from the Lord by your building an altar^a other than the altar of the Lord our God.²⁰ Look! Did not Achar the son of Zara commit a trespass from what was devoted, and there was anger upon the whole congregation of Israel? And he was not one lone person. Did he alone die for his own sin?"

21 And the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse answered, and they spoke to the officers of thousands of Israel, saying, 22 "God is Lord God, and God, Lord God, he himself knows, and Israel itself shall know: If in rebellion we have trespassed against the Lord, may he not deliver us in this^a. 23 And if we built an altar^b for ourselves so as to rebel from the Lord our God, so as to offer upon it a sacrifice of whole burnt offerings or so as to make upon it a sacrifice of deliverance, the Lord shall seek it out. 24 But we have done this for the sake of a matter of caution, saying, 'Lest tomorrow your children say to our children, "What have you to do with the Lord God of Israel?" 25 And the Lord set boundaries between us and you, the Jordan, and you do not have a portion of the Lord.'" And your sons shall alienate our sons, that they not worship the Lord. 26 And we said to do thus, to build this altar^b not for produce offerings nor for sacrifices, 27 but that this may be a witness between us and you and between our descendants after us, to serve a service to the Lord before him with our produce offerings and our sacrifices and our sacrifices of deliverance, and your children will not say to our children tomorrow, 'You do not have a portion of the Lord.' 28 And we said, if it should ever happen that they speak to us and to our descendants tomorrow, then they shall say, 'See a likeness of the altar of the Lord, which our fathers made, not for produce offerings nor for sacrifices, but it is a witness between you and between us and between our sons.' 29 May it not be therefore that we turn away from the Lord in these very days, to rebel from the Lord, so as to build an altar for produce offerings and for the sacrifices of salamin^c and for the sacrifice of deliverance, other than the altar of the Lord that is before his tent."

30 And when Phinees the priest and all the chiefs of the congregation of Israel who were with him heard the words that the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse spoke, then it pleased them. 31 And Phinees the priest said to the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse, "Today we know that the Lord is with us, because you have not committed a trespass against the Lord and that you have delivered the sons of Israel out of the hand of the Lord."

32 And Phinees the priest returned, and the chiefs, from the sons of Rouben and from the sons of Gad and from the half-tribe of Manasse, out of the land of Galaad into the land of Chanaan, to the sons of Israel, and they reported the words to them. 33 And it pleased the sons of Israel, and they spoke to the sons of Israel and blessed the God of the sons of Israel, and they said that they would no longer go up against them for war, to utterly destroy the land of the sons of Rouben and the sons of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse, and they^d settled upon it. 34 And Iesous named the altar^b of those of Rouben and those of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasse, and he said: "It is a witness between them that the Lord is their God."

23 And it happened, after rather many days after the Lord had given Israel rest from all their enemies round about and Iesous was old, advanced in days, 2 that Iesous summoned all the sons of Israel and their council of elders and their chiefs and their scribes and their judges, and he said to them, "I am old and advanced in days. 3 Now you have seen what the Lord your God has done to all these nations before you, for it is the Lord your God who has fought for you. 4 See that I have cast upon you by the allotments to your tribes these nations that remain to you, from the Jordan all the nations that I have utterly destroyed, and from the great sea it shall be the boundary toward the setting of the sun. 5 And the Lord your God, he shall utterly destroy them from before you until they perish, and he shall send wild beasts against them until he utterly destroys them and their kings from before you, and inherit their land, as the Lord your God spoke to you. 6 Therefore be very steadfast to observe and to do all the things written in the book of the law of Moyses so that you do not turn aside to the right or the left, 7 that you not go into these nations that are left, and the names of their gods shall not be named among you; neither do obeisance to them nor serve them, 8 but you shall hold fast to the Lord your God, as you have done until this day. 9 And the Lord utterly destroyed them from before you, great and strong nations, and no one has withstood you until this day. 10 One of you has put to flight thousands, since the Lord your God was fighting for you, as he said to you. 11 And take great care to love the Lord your God. 12 For if you turn away and attach yourselves to these nations remaining with you and make marriages with them and intermingle with them and they with you, 13 know that the Lord will not continue to utterly destroy these nations from before you, but they shall be snares and traps for you and nails in your heels and arrows in your eyes until you are destroyed from this good land that the Lord your God has given you.

14 But I am going the way, as also all who are on earth, and you shall know in your heart and in your soul, because not one word has crumbled of all the words that the Lord our God spoke concerning all that involves you; not one out of them failed. 15 And it shall happen that, as all the good things that the Lord spoke concerning you have come upon you, so the Lord God will bring upon you all the evil things until he utterly destroys you from this good land that the Lord has given you, 16 when you transgress the covenant of the Lord your God, which he commanded you, and go to serve other gods and do obeisance to them."

24 And Iesous gathered all the tribes of Israel to Selo and summoned their elders and their scribes and their judges and set them before God. ²And Iesous said to all the people, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: 'Your fathers at first lived beyond the river, Thara the father of Abraam and the father of Nachor, and they served other gods. ³And I took your father Abraam from beyond the river and led him in all the land and made his offspring many and gave him Isaak, ⁴and to Isaak, Iakob and Esau. And I gave to Esau Mount Seir for him to inherit. And Iakob and his sons went down into Egypt and became there a great and populous and mighty nation, ⁵and the Egyptians afflicted them.' And the Lord smote Egypt with things he did to them, and afterwards he brought you out ⁶of Egypt. And you came into the Red Sea, and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and with horses into the Red Sea. ⁷And we cried out to the Lord, and he gave a cloud and darkness between us and between the Egyptians, and he brought the sea upon them and covered them, and your eyes saw what the Lord did in the land of Egypt. And you were in the wilderness rather many days. ⁸And he brought you into the land of the Amorrithes, who lived beyond the Jordan, and they fought against you, and the Lord handed them over into your hands, and you inherited their land and utterly destroyed them from before you. ⁹And Balak the son of Sepphor, king of Moab, rose up and set himself against Israel, and he sent and invited Balaam to curse you. ¹⁰And the Lord your God would not destroy you, and he blessed you with a blessing and rescued you out of their hands and delivered them. ¹¹And you crossed over the Jordan and came to Iericho, and the inhabitants of Iericho fought against you, the Amorrite and the Chananite and the Pherezite and the Heuite and the Iebousite and the Chettite and the Gergesite, and the Lord handed them over into your hands. ¹²And he sent forth the hornet ahead of you, and he drove them out from before you, the twelve kings of the Amorrithes, not by your sword or by your bow. ¹³And he gave you a land, that on which you did not labor, and cities that you did not build, and you were settled in them, and you shall eat of vineyards and olive yards that you did not plant.

¹⁴ "And now fear the Lord, and serve him in straightness and in righteousness, and put away the foreign gods that your fathers served beyond the river and in Egypt, and serve the Lord. ¹⁵But if it does not seem good to you to serve the Lord, choose for yourselves today whom you will serve, whether the gods of your fathers that were beyond the river or the gods of the Amorrithes among whom you live upon their land, but I and my household will serve the Lord, because he is holy."

¹⁶ And the people answered and said, "May it not be that we forsake the Lord so as to serve other gods. ¹⁷The Lord our God, he is God; he brought us and our fathers up out of Egypt, and he protected us on all the way on which we went and among all the nations through whom we passed. ¹⁸And the Lord drove out from before us the Amorrite and all the nations that inhabited the land. But we also will serve the Lord, for he is our God."

¹⁹ And Iesous said to the people, "You will not be able to serve the Lord, for he is a holy god. And since he is jealous, he will not forgive your sins and your acts of lawlessness. ²⁰Whenever you forsake the Lord and serve other gods, then he will come upon you and do you harm and consume you, instead of having done you good." ²¹ And the people said to Iesous, "No, but we will serve the Lord." ²² And Iesous said to the people, "You are witnesses against yourselves that you have chosen the Lord, to serve him. ²³And now put away the foreign gods that are among you, and direct your heart toward the Lord, God of Israel." ²⁴ And the people said to Iesous, "We will serve the Lord and hearken to his voice." ²⁵ And Iesous made a covenant with the people that day and gave them law and judgment at Selo before the tent of the God of Israel. ²⁶ And he wrote these words in the book as the law of God, and he took a large stone, and Iesous set it under the terebinth tree before the Lord. ²⁷ And Iesous said to the people, "Look, this stone shall be in your midst as a witness; for it has heard all the things spoken to it by the Lord, whatever he spoke to us today, and this shall be in your midst as a witness at the last of days, whenever you deal falsely with the Lord my God." ²⁸ And Iesous sent the people away, and they went each to his place.

³³ And it happened after these things that Eleazar son of Aaron, the high priest, died and was buried in Gabaath of Phinees his son, which he gave him in Mount Ephraim. ^{33a} On that day the sons of Israel took the ark of God and carried it around in their midst. And Phinees served as priest in the place of Eleazar his father until he died, and he was interred in Gabaath, which was his own. ^{33b} And the sons of Israel departed each to their place and to their own city. And the sons of Israel worshiped Astarte and Astaroth and the gods of the nations round about them. And the Lord delivered them into the hands of Eglom, the king of Moab, and he dominated them eighteen years.

EDITION OF GREEK TEXT

To date there is no fully critical edition of LXX Judges. The Göttingen edition has not yet appeared, and the edition of Brooke and Maclean is a “diplomatic” edition in which the main text is basically that of Codex Vaticanus (B). The NETS translation of Judges, therefore, is based on A. Rahlfs, Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935).

In Judges Rahlfs based his edition on the readings of about twenty manuscripts. He identified two main textual traditions, which he believed were so diverse that they amounted to separate recensions (editions) of the book. He printed these as separate texts, designated A and B. NETS Judges, accordingly, offers a translation of both the A and the B texts.

Rahlfs based his A text upon Codex Alexandrinus (A) and two groups of manuscripts representing the recensions of the LXX associated, respectively, with Origen (c. 185–253 CE) and Lucian (c. 250–312 CE). His B text was based upon Codex Vaticanus (B).

OVERVIEW OF THE TEXT(S) OF JUDGES

Subsequent scholarship has refined Rahlfs’ classifications. The manuscripts which are seen as witnesses to an A-type of text are now divided into three groups, AI, AII and AIII, of which AI corresponds fairly closely to Rahlfs’ “Origenic” manuscripts, and AII to his “Lucianic” manuscripts. Similarly, the B-type of text is now held to be represented by two related but distinct manuscript groups.

It is generally held that the “Old Greek” (OG) of Judges is to be found within AII (the Lucianic group), particularly in a subgroup of AII formed by the manuscripts glnw. (The Old Latin, a translation made from an early form of LXX Judges, is also an important witness to the OG.) The two main reasons for this view are that AII and the Old Latin show less “kaige influence” than the other manuscript groups and that they show less evidence of “Hexaplaric contamination.”

“Kaige,” or “kaige revision,” is shorthand in Septuagint studies for a tendency, already observable in the first century CE, for earlier forms of the LXX to be revised towards a proto-Masoretic text (MT). This tendency is held to have reached its fullest expression in the Greek translation produced by Aquila (c. 140 CE). The revision towards the MT is notable for its use of “quantitative equivalents,” stock renderings of particular Hebrew words and phrases that seem to be chosen primarily to give Greek readers a sense of what was in the original Hebrew, with little concern for whether the resulting translation was idiomatic Greek. Of these the best known is the use of καί γε, “and indeed,” as the equivalent for כִּי (“also”) and כִּי וְ (“and also”) after which the entire revising tendency has been named. Other characteristic translations linked with it are: ἀνὴρ < אָדָם (“man”) in its distributive sense of “each”; ἐγώ εἰμι < אֲנִי (“I am”), even with another finite verb; οὐκ ἔστιν < לֹא (“there is not”). All of these translations occur in the A and B texts of Judges (though B alone has ἐγώ εἰμι + finite verb: cf. 5.3; 6.18; 11.27, 35).

“Hexaplaric contamination” takes its name from Origen’s Hexapla, a work set out in six columns for comparative purposes. It is the conflating into one LXX manuscript of readings, which originally belonged in separate columns of the Hexapla, and the clearest sign of it is the presence of doublets, or double translations of words and phrases. For doublet translations in the manuscripts (including mss A and B) see Schreiner, pp. 90–104. Doublets are not entirely absent even from the AII group or from the subgroup glnw, which is why the Old Latin is important in Judges as offering independent testimony to the OG.

Neither the A nor the B text consistently represents the OG. The A text stands somewhat closer to it but still contains many examples of kaige revision and Hexaplaric contamination. What is more, whereas scholarship in the decades before Rahlfs tended to stress the independence of the textual traditions represented by A and B, the large amount of common ground between them should not be overlooked: in many passages A and B are very similar, if not normally identical. The A and B traditions probably derive from a single archetype, of which they represent different degrees of revision. It is likely, then, that the Göttingen edition, when it appears, will print only one main text, which will not be identical to either Rahlfs' A or B texts. Textually, therefore, NETS Judges is as provisional as the book's Greek text(s).

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

In what follows, a reference to either LXX A or B is always specified (e.g., 1.6A; 2.15B); references not so qualified apply to both A and B.

The Hebrew of Judges

MT Judges mostly consists of straightforward, clearly structured narrative, although it does contain occasional obscure words, e.g., מַחֲצֵנֶה in 1.14 (NRSV, "she dismounted") or verses, e.g., 18.7, and there are some sections of narrative where the nature of the action described is unclear (e.g., Ehud's escape, 3.23–25; Gideon's attack on the Midianite camp, 7.16–22). But in general there is little that one would expect to cause a translator great difficulties. The one exception is the Song of Deborah in Judges 5, written in poetry generally thought to represent a more archaic form of Hebrew than that found in most parts of the Hebrew Bible and containing a number of rare words.

LXX Judges and its Vorlage

As it stands, LXX Judges (A and B) mainly represents a form of text very close to MT. In some cases, however, it is possible that LXX Judges is based on a different Vorlage.

So, for example:

- 1.14: "he urged her" (A), "Gothoniel urged her" (B), instead of "she urged him" (MT). MT is less logical.
 16.13–14: LXX has several lines lacking in MT (see NRSV footnote).
 19.2: LXX A "became angry," possibly < מַחֲצֵנֶה (= NRSV) in place of MT's הִרְזִינָה "played the harlot."
 19.30: LXX A includes the Levite's instructions to those who carry the dismembered limbs of his concubine throughout Israel (see NRSV footnote; in LXX A, however, these instructions are illogically inserted after the Israelites' response to this horrible message and not where NRSV might be taken to imply).

On other occasions the translator seems to have had a consonantal text identical to MT, but he apparently divided the consonants differently or supplied different vowels:

- 14.14: מִדְּאֹכֵל, "from the eater" = τί βρωτόν, "what edible thing?" (LXX B) = מִדְּאֹכֵל.
 18.25: אַל תִּשְׁמַע קוֹלְךָ, "do not make your voice heard" = μὴ ἀκουσθήτω δὴ ἡ φωνή σου, "your voice had better not be heard" (LXX AB). Possibly תִּשְׁמַע has been vocalized as a Niphal, not a Hiphil.

Occasionally LXX has sentences in a different order compared to MT: e.g., the notice of Aod's (Ehud's) death in 3.30–4.1, especially in LXX A; the note about the location of the Ark at 20.26–28 in LXX B. In these cases the Vorlage was likely enough identical to MT, and the translation simply rearranges the sentences to produce what seemed to be a clearer or more logical presentation. Sometimes there are repeated elements or other dislocations in the text, which may be due to a scribal slip (e.g., in 18.8–9A; 18.16–20A).

Some of the cases where LXX Judges seems to offer a reading different from MT are probably due to inner-Greek corruption: ἐπόρνευον, "would prostitute themselves" (2.15A) has probably arisen as a mis-copying of ἐπορεύοντο, "would go" or ἐξεπορεύοντο, "marched out" (LXX B); ἐξικνούμενοι, "reaching" (5.15B) is probably a corruption of an earlier reading ἐξιχνεύόμενοι, "searching out" (cf. the reading of LXX A ἀκριβασμένοι, "inquiries"). Other examples are: 6.34B ἐφοβήθη, "was seized by fear" for ἐβόηθη, "called out"; 8.32B ἐν πόλει αὐτοῦ, "in his city" for ἐν πολιᾷ ἀγαθῇ, "with a good head of grey hair"; 9.7B ἐκλαυσεν, "he wept" for ἐκάλεσεν, "he called out"; 15.18B εὐδόκησας, "you have approved," by error for ἔδωκας "you granted."

Selected Words and Phrases

LXX Judges is generally accurate, and it stays close to the sense of the Hebrew. But names and obscure words sometimes seemed to have caused the translator problems:

- 1.15: גַּלְתַּיִם מַיִם, "Gulloth-mayim" (NRSV; fn. "Basins of Water") becomes "redemption of water," as though גַּלְתַּיִם were related to גָּאֵל "redeem."

4.11: אֵלֹן בְּצַעֲנַיִם, “Elon-bezaananim” (NRSV) becomes “Oak-of-the-Resters” in LXX A, as though בְּצַעֲנַיִם were related to שָׁנַן, “undisturbed.” LXX B translates it as “Oak-of-the-Greedy,” seemingly linking בְּצַעֲנַיִם with the root בָּצַע, “make a profit.”

These translations are perhaps due not to simple error but to a desire to find theologically significant meanings in names by a kind of wordplay. But when LXX A translates בָּלַח, the Hiphil participle of a rare root meaning “burst forth” (cf. NRSV “rushed”), as “was struggling,” this is probably no more than a guess. There are many such cases in Judges 5, where not only individual words but entire phrases seem to have caused difficulties. Thus, a comparison between 5.1–11 in NRSV and NETS reveals the following differences:

- 5.2: “When locks are long in Israel” (NRSV); “when chiefs take the lead in Israel” (= LXX A); “an unveiling was unveiled in Israel” (= LXX B)
- 5.7: “The peasantry prospered in Israel, they grew fat on plunder” (NRSV); “a spokesman was lacking in Israel; he was lacking” (= LXX A); “mighty ones were lacking in Israel; they were lacking” (= LXX B)
- 5.8 “When new gods were chosen, then war was in the gates” (NRSV); “they chose new gods, like barley bread” (= LXX A); “they chose new gods; then the cities of the rulers fought” (= LXX B)
- 5.10: “Tell of it, you who ride on white donkeys, you who sit on rich carpets” (NRSV); “mounted upon draft animals, sitting on covered chariots . . .” (= LXX A); “mounted upon a female donkey at midday, sitting on tribunal . . .” (= LXX B)

Some of the LXX translations in these verses seem little short of nonsense. The translator has made his best guess at the meaning of individual words (and in this it may be said that he shows his intent to be faithful to the Hebrew), but these guesses taken together do not yield coherent sense. In most cases it is rare Hebrew words that have caused the problem. Things become a little better as the chapter proceeds, because many of the difficulties are found in the opening section. But it is impossible to read a modern, philologically informed translation of Judges 5 such as the NRSV without feeling that it has come closer to what the Hebrew likely meant.

Transliterations

Occasionally LXX Judges simply transliterates the Hebrew. Sometimes this may be because there was no obvious equivalent to the Hebrew: the rendering of הַבַּעַלִּים “the Baals” as Baalim (2.11; 3.7; 8.33; 10.6, 10) may fall into this category. At other points transliteration may have been the translator’s last resort in dealing with difficult Hebrew: 5.16A, μσοφασθαιμ (NRSV “sheepfolds”); 5.22A, αμοδαρωθ (NRSV “galloping”); 8.7A, βαρκονιμ, Β βαρκητιν (NRSV “thorns”); 20.6B, ζεμα (NRSV “outrage”). At 5.7, φραζων (“spokesman”) is a recognizable Greek word, but one probably chosen because it resembled the Hebrew פִּרְיָוֹן (NRSV “peasantry”) in sound. LXX B’s otherwise obscure translation of שָׁרִיד (“dead”) at 5.27 by ἐξοδευθείς (“gone”) may have a similar explanation.

Word-for-Word Approach

It would be unfair, however, to focus only on the treatment of difficult words and passages. By and large LXX Judges conveys the sense of the Hebrew, sometimes with considerable skill. But it does so in a form of Greek that, by the standards of most ancient Greek literature, is not fully idiomatic. LXX Judges consistently reproduces in Greek constructions, which, while they are good Hebrew, are not attested in other forms of Greek or are only rarely attested. This is true of both LXX A and LXX B. In general LXX Judges follows a “word-for-word” translational model. Examples of this include the following:

(1) Particles

(i) MT’s standard connective ו (“and”) is typically glossed as καί (“and”) and only rarely by other particles one would expect to find in other forms of Greek. δέ (“but/and/nor”) occurs 18x in LXX A and 12x in LXX B; ἀλλά (“but”) occurs 8x in LXX A and 3x in LXX B; οὖν (“so/therefore”) 2x in LXX A and 3x in LXX B; γάρ (“for”) 2x in LXX A and never in LXX B.

(ii) LXX Judges generally translates the relative particle אֲשֶׁר (“who/which/where,” etc.) well, using the appropriate form of relative clause. But in some cases the אֲשֶׁר clause involves “relative resumption,” ending with a word that refers back to the clause’s antecedent. In these cases LXX Judges regularly translates word for word, yielding a kind of double translation of the relative particle. Thus אֲשֶׁר תֵּלַכְוּ בָהּ, “who/which/where, etc.,”

“the mission you are on” (18.6), in which בָּהּ, “in it,” picks up דַּרְכְּכֶם, “your mission,” becomes in LXX A ἡ ὁδὸς ὑμῶν καθ’ ἣν ὑμεῖς πορεύεσθε ἐν αὐτῇ, “your journey, on which you are going in it.” This is as clumsy in Greek as in English. (LXX B has a slightly varied but equally inelegant translation.) Making a slight concession to English usage, NETS translates LXX A at this point as “your journey, that upon which you are going.” Other examples of the same phenomenon are: 6.10A; 14.17A; 16.11B, 26, 29; 18.5, 6, 10A; 20.22A.

(2) Prepositions

(i) Hebrew can use the preposition בְּ to mean either “into” or “in/among,” depending on the context. Greek normally distinguishes εἰς followed by the accusative (“into”) and ἐν followed by the dative (“in/among”), but LXX Judges uses ἐν + dative as a standard equivalent for Hebrew בְּ in either sense. This frequently produces what by the standards of most forms of ancient Greek amounts to an illiteracy. See for example, 1.2 (“in his hand”) and 1.3 (“in your allotment”).

(ii) A related point concerns Hebrew verbs followed by the preposition בְּ, such as בַּשְּׂאֵל, “inquire of.” At 1.1 LXX A renders this ἐπηρώτων οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ ἐν κυρίῳ, “the sons of Israel were inquiring by the Lord”; LXX B has διὰ τοῦ κυρίου “through the Lord,” which is not much better. See also 18.5; 20.18, 23, 27.

(iii) The Hebrew preposition בֵּין “between” is characteristically repeated in phrases of the type “between X and Y.” An example is בֵּין רָמָה וּבֵין בַּיִת לָאֵל (4.5), which LXX A renders ἀνὰ μέσον Ραμα καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον Βαιθηλ. This can only be rendered (unidiomatically) as “between Rama and between Baithel.” LXX B has something very similar. See also 4.17; 9.23; 11.27; 13.25; 16.31.

(iv) Another preposition that is sometimes repeated is כְּ, “as/like,” in phrases of the type “X and Y alike.” Thus at 8.18 we read כְּמִוֶּדֶךָ כְּמוֹהֶם (NRSV, “as you are, so were they”). LXX A renders this ὅμοιος σοί, ὅμοιος αὐτῶν, “one like you was like (of) them.”

(3) Verbs

(i) The Hebrew infinitive absolute is used to represent simultaneous action in a phrase such as וַיֵּלֶךְ וַאֲכַל הַלֶּחֶם in 14.9 (NRSV, “and went on, eating as he went”). LXX A renders this phrase καὶ ἐπορεύθη καὶ πορευόμενος καὶ ἔσθων, “and went on, going and eating” (cf. LXX B). See also 4.24.

(ii) The infinitive absolute is also used to reinforce a finite verb from the same root. NRSV translates such phrases in a variety of ways: 7.19: “they had just set the watch”; 8.25: “we will willingly give”; 11.30: “if you will give”; 13.22: “we shall surely die.” LXX Judges translates such expressions in one of two ways: either reinforcing the verb with a cognate noun in the dative (7.19A ἐγέρσει ἡγείρειν, “he roused . . . with a rousing”; 13.22: θανάτω ἀποθανούμεθα “we shall die by death”) or reinforcing it with a participle (7.19B ἐγείροντες ἡγείραν, “rousing they roused”; 8.25 διδόντες δώσομεν, “giving we will give”). Neither is good Greek. See also 15.2; 15.13; 16.11; 17.3; 21.5.

(iii) Biblical Hebrew uses סָף (Qal or Hiphil) followed by the infinitive construct of another verb to denote “doing something again”: וַיַּסְפוּ בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לַעֲשׂוֹת “the Israelites again did” (3.12), or, negatively וְאִסְיִף לְהוֹרִישׁ “I shall no longer drive out” (2.21). LXX translates this idiom literally, using προστίθημι followed by an infinitive: 3.12 καὶ προσέθεντο οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ ποιῆσαι, “and the sons of Israel added to do”; 2.21 οὐ προσθήσω τοῦ ἐξῆρα, “I will not add to remove.” See also 4.1; 8.28; 9.37; 10.6, 13; 13.1, 23; 20.22, 23, 28. See also the translation of the analogous construction מִפְּלֵא לַעֲשׂוֹת at 13.19 as καὶ διεχώρισεν ποιῆσαι, “and he separated to act” (LXX B).

(4) Idioms with “Man” and “Woman”

(i) In Hebrew אִישׁ, “man” (singular) is used in a distributive sense, e.g., אִישׁ לְנַחֲלוֹ, “each to his inheritance” (2.6). LXX generally translates this construction word for word: ἀνὴρ εἰς τὴν κληρονομίαν αὐτοῦ, “a man . . . to his inheritance” (2.6B; see also 7.22; 10.18; 16.5; 21.1, 21–22, 25B). On four occasions, however, LXX A translates this construction more idiomatically, with ἕκαστος, “each,” at 2.6; 7.21; 9.49; and 21.25.

(ii) The singulars of אִישׁ and אִשָּׁה, “woman” can also be used in a collective sense to denote a group of men or women; for instance: אִישׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל (NRSV, “the men of Israel,” “the Israelites”); נְשֵׁי בְנֵי מִנְיָן (21.16; NRSV, “there are no women left in Benjamin”). LXX Judges sometimes translates such phrases literally, using the singular in contexts that demand the plural, with awkward effect (7.23; 20.15B, 36, 39A; 21.1A, 16). On other occasions the plural is used: אַרְבַּע מֵאוֹת אִישׁ at 20.17 is rendered τετρακόσσια χίλιδες ἀνδρών, “four hundred thousand men”; cf. 20.15A. At 20.39 and 21.1 LXX B translates אִישׁ collective with οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ, “the sons of Israel,” which suits the context better than the literal translation of LXX A.

(5) Miscellaneous

Here is a further selection of unidiomatic phrases and odd-seeming translations in LXX Judges behind which a particular Hebrew word or idiom may be recognized:

- 2.1: "I will not scatter my covenant" = LXX; NRSV, "I will never break my covenant."
 3.22: "he even drove the hilt in after the flame" = LXX; NRSV, "after the blade."
 6.13, 15: "by me, Lord" = LXX; NRSV, "but sir."
 7.17: "you will see from me" = LXX; NRSV, "look at me."
 8.35: "they did not do mercy with" = LXX; NRSV, "they did not exhibit loyalty to."
 9.17: "cast his life in opposition" = LXX A; "cast forth his life in opposition" = LXX B; NRSV, "risked his life."
 14.7: "she was pleasing before Sampson" = LXX A; "she was made straight in Sampson's sight" = LXX B; NRSV, "she pleased Samson."
 16.20: "I will go out as once and once" = LXX B; NRSV, "I will go out as at other times."
 18.19: "you will be to us for a father and for a priest" = LXX A; "become for a father and for a priest to us" = LXX B; NRSV, "be to us a father and a priest."
 19.1: "the thighs of the hill country of Ephraim" = LXX; NRSV, "the remote parts of the hill country of Ephraim."
 19.24: "the thing of this madness" = LXX; NRSV "such a vile thing."
 20.16: "All these were slingers of stones at a hair, and not missing" = LXX B; NRSV, "every one could sling a stone at a hair, and not miss."
 20.40: "and see, the annihilation of the city went up" = LXX; NRSV, "and there was the whole city going up in smoke."
 20.42: "overtook upon them" = LXX B; NRSV "overtook them."
 20.48: "and the cities that were found they sent off with fire" = LXX A; NRSV, "also the remaining towns they set on fire."
 21.19: "from days to days" = LXX A; NRSV "yearly."

Translations such as these, it is important to note, reflect a deliberate choice on the translator's part (or in some cases, on the part of those who have corrected an earlier text towards the Hebrew). It is not that the translator/reviser knew no better than to write pidgin-Greek. Rather, his consistent aim was that the translation should mirror its Vorlage as closely as possible, and so he has left within the translation many signals as to the nature of the Hebrew original. LXX Judges well exemplifies the "interlinear" paradigm, which informs NETS as a whole.

The translation here offered, in accordance with the principles of NETS, attempts to capture this aspect of LXX Judges by using English which, while grammatical, is at points unidiomatic, inelegant or illiterate. This happens literally hundreds of times. But the reader should not draw inappropriate conclusions about the LXX translator's competence from this aspect of the translation.

"Theological" Renderings

At points within LXX Judges there may be a theological issue underlying the translation. The addition at the end of 4.8 ("for I do not know the day in which the Lord will send his angel on a good journey with me") is an example: LXX speaks of God as intervening through a mediating figure rather than directly accompanying Barak, a type of interpretation that is more common in the Targum of Judges. (E.g., at 4.14 the Targum has "Is not the angel of the Lord going forth to ensure success before you?" in place of MT's "the LORD is indeed going out before you.") Something similar may apply to the narrative of Gideon and the angel of the Lord in Judg 6.11–24. MT speaks sometimes of "the angel of the LORD/God" (vv. 11, 12, 20–22), and sometimes of "the LORD" (vv. 14, 16, 23). LXX has "the angel of the Lord" throughout, except at v. 23, where it seems that Gideon only hears God's voice and no longer sees any manifestation of God's presence. LXX seems to go beyond MT in safeguarding God's transcendence. Compare also 2.1: the form of the angel's words in MT leaves it ambiguous whether he speaks as the Lord's representative or in some sense as the Lord himself, but LXX A and B in different ways remove the ambiguity.

At 5.23 MT has: "they did not come to the help of the LORD, to the help of the LORD against the mighty." LXX A translates this "because they did not come to the help of the Lord; the Lord is our helper, mighty among warriors." The second part of this translation echoes Psalms in which God is described as Israel's or an individual's helper (e.g., 18[19].15; 27[28].7; 113.17–19[115.9–11]), and that may partly explain LXX A's deviation from MT. Additionally, it may be that the translator felt unease at words which seemed to suggest that God stood in need of human aid and so translated the second half of the line in a way that made clear that God is Israel's helper, and not the other way around. (Targum, "they did not come to the aid of the people of the Lord, to the aid of the people of the Lord," seems to have been similarly motivated, though its approach is different.) LXX B is closer to MT.

In Iotham's parable, the olive tree speaks of "my rich oil by which gods and mortals are honored" (9.9 NRSV), and the vine speaks of "my wine that cheers gods and mortals" (9.13 NRSV). In these verses אֱלֹהִים could instead be translated as "God." LXX A at these points has "my fattiness which God and men extol in me" (v. 9) and "my wine, the good cheer of men, which comes from God" (v. 13), translations which avoid any suggestion of polytheism and perhaps also the idea that wine might make God merry (v. 13). LXX B has "my fattiness by which men extol God" at v. 9, an even more "theologically sound" translation than LXX A, but at v. 13 translates "my wine, that cheers God [or "god," for there is no article] and men," this last translation illustrating the point that tendencies in LXX Judges are not usually consistently attested.

Lastly, mention should be made of the bizarre translation of בעל־ים/בעל as "she-Baal/she-Baalim" at four points in LXX A: 2.13; 3.7; 10.6, 10. Whether this arose through simple error (2.13 and 10.6 also refer to "the [female] Astartes") or as part of an inconsistently applied policy of denigration of Baal, it is impossible at this distance to decide.

Judges A

1 And it came about after the death of Iesous that the sons of Israel were inquiring by the Lord, saying, "Who shall go up for us against the Chananite as leader, to fight against him?" ²And the Lord said, "Ioudas shall go up. See, I have given the land in his hand." ³And Ioudas said to his brother Symeon, "Come up with me in my allotment, and let us fight against the Chananite, and indeed I will go with you in your allotment." And Symeon went with him. ⁴And Ioudas went up, and the Lord gave the Chananite and the Pherezite in his hand, and he struck them down at Bezek, ten thousand men. ⁵And they found Adonibezek at Bezek and fought against him and struck down the Chananite and the Pherezite. ⁶And Adonibezek fled, and they went in pursuit after him and caught him and cut off the tips of his hands and his feet. ⁷And Adonibezek said, "Seventy kings with the tips of their hands and their feet cut off used to gather the scraps under my table; therefore, as I have done, so God has paid me back." And they brought him to Ierousalem, and he died there.

Judges B

1 And it came about after the death of Iesous that the sons of Israel were inquiring through the Lord, saying, "Who shall go up for us against the Chananites as leader, to fight with them?" ²And the Lord said, "Ioudas shall go up. See, I have given the land in his hand." ³And Ioudas said to his brother Symeon, "Come up with me in my allotment, and let us deploy against the Chananites, and I too will go with you in your allotment." And Symeon went with him. ⁴And Ioudas went up, and the Lord gave the Chananite and the Pherezite up into their hands, and they cut them down at Bezek, fully ten thousand men. ⁵And they came upon Adonibezek at Bezek and deployed against him and cut down the Chananite and the Pherezite. ⁶And Adonibezek fled, and they chased after him and captured him and cut off the tips of his hands and the tips of his feet. ⁷And Adonibezek said, "Seventy kings with the tips of their hands and the tips of their feet cut off used to gather the scraps under my table; therefore, as I have done, so God has paid me back." And they brought him to Ierousalem, and he died there.

Judges A

8 And the sons of Ioudas fought against Ierousalem and took it. And they struck it down with the edge of the sword and set the city on fire with fire. ⁹And after that the sons of Ioudas went down to fight against the Chananite who lived in the hill country and the south and the lowland. ¹⁰And Ioudas went against the Chananite who lived in Chebron, and Chebron came out in opposition (now the name of Chebron was formerly Kariatarboksepher), and he struck down Sesi and Achiman and Tholmi, offspring of Enak.

11 And from there they went against the inhabitants of Dabir (and the name of Dabir was formerly City of Letters). ¹²And Chaleb said, "Whoever strikes a blow against the City of Letters and captures it first, I will give him my daughter Ascha for a wife." ¹³And Gothoniel son of Kenez, Chaleb's younger brother, captured it first, and he gave him his daughter Ascha for a wife. ¹⁴And it came about, when she entered, that he urged her to ask for the field from her father. And she grumbled upon her draft animal and cried out from where she was on her draft animal, "You have given me away into the land of the south." And Chaleb said to her, "What do you want?" ¹⁵And Ascha said to him, "Give me a blessing; since you have given me away into the land of the south, you shall also give me redemption of water." And, according to her desire, Chaleb gave her the redemption of the upper and the redemption of the lower.

16 And the sons of Iobab the Kinite, Moyses' father-in-law, went up from the City of Palms to the sons of Ioudas, into the wilderness that is in the south near the descent of Arad. And he went and settled with the people. ¹⁷And Ioudas went with his brother Symeon, and they struck down the Chananite who inhabited Sepheth and anathematized it and destroyed it. And they called the name of the city Destruction. ¹⁸And Ioudas did not inherit Gaza and its territory and Ascalon and its territory and Akkaron and its territory and Azotus and its surrounding lands. ¹⁹And the Lord was with Ioudas, and he inherited the hill country, for he could not inherit the inhabitants of the valley, because Rechab commanded it. ²⁰And he gave Chebron to Chaleb, just as Moyses had said, and from there he inherited the three cities and removed from there the three sons of Enak. ²¹And the sons of Benjamin did not remove the Iebousite who lived in Ierousalem, and the Iebousite has lived with the sons of Benjamin to this day.

22 And the sons of Ioseph, indeed they too went up towards Baithel, and Ioudas with them. ²³And the house of Israel encamped against Baithel (now the name of the city was formerly Louza). ²⁴And those who were keeping watch saw a man coming out of the city, and they captured him and said to him, "Show us the way into the city, and we will do mercy with you." ²⁵And he showed them

And they settled with the people. ¹⁷And Ioudas went with his brother Symeon, and he cut down the Chananite who inhabited Sephek, and they destroyed them. And he called the name of the city Anathema. ¹⁸And Ioudas did not inherit Gaza or its territories or Ascalon or its territories or Akkaron or its territories or Azotus or its surrounding lands. ¹⁹And the Lord was with Ioudas and he inherited the hill country, for they could not destroy the inhabitants of the valley, because Rechab gave orders to them. ²⁰And they gave Chebron to Chaleb, just as Moyses had said, and from there he inherited the three cities of the sons of Enak. ²¹And the sons of Benjamin did not inherit the Iebousite who lived in Ierousalem, and the Iebousite has lived with the sons of Benjamin in Ierousalem to this day.

27 And Manasses did not inherit Baithshan (which is the city of the Scythians) or its daughters or its surrounding lands or Ekthanaad and its daughters or the inhabitants of Dor and its daughters and the inhabitants of Balaam and its daughters and the inhabitants of Magedon and its daughters or the inhabitants of Ieblaam or its daughters, and the Chananite began to live in that land. ²⁸And it came about that when Israel grew strong, he set the Chananite to pay tribute, and removing he did not remove him.

29 And Ephraim did not remove the Chananite who lived in Gazer, and the Chananite was living in his midst in Gazer and became for tribute.

30 And Zaboulon did not remove the inhabitants of Kedron and the inhabitants of Enaala, and the Chananite lived in his midst and became for tribute.

31 And Aser did not remove the inhabitants of Akcho (and it became for tribute to him), and the inhabitants of Dor and the inhabitants of Sidon and the inhabitants of Aalaph and Achazib and the city of Chelba and of Aphek and of Roob ³²and Aser lived in the midst of the Chananite who inhabited the land, for he could not remove him.

33 And Nephthali did not remove the inhabitants of Baithsamys or the inhabitants of Baitheneth, and Israel lived in the midst of the Chananite who inhabited the land; now the inhabitants of Baithsamys and the city of Baitheneth became for tribute to them.

34 And the Amorrite pressed the sons of Dan back into the hill country, for he did not allow him to come down to the valley. ³⁵And the Amorrite began to live in the mountain of the Myrtle-grove, where there are bears and foxes, and the hand of the house of Ioseph rested heavily on the Amorrite, and he became for tribute. ³⁶And the border of the Amorrite was the Idumean above Akra bin, near Petra and above.

2 Now an angel of the Lord went up from Galgal to Weeping and to Baithel and to the house of Israel, and he said to them, "The Lord, the Lord brought you up from Egypt and brought you into the land that he had sworn to your fathers to give to you. And he said to you, 'I will not scatter my covenant with you forever. ²And for your part, you shall not make a covenant with those who have their seat in this land, nor shall you do obeisance to their gods, but you shall destroy their carved objects^a and tear down their altars.' 29 And Ephraim did not remove the Chananite who lived in Gazer, and the Chananite lived in his midst in Gazer and became for tribute.

30 And Zaboulon did not remove the inhabitants of Kedron or the inhabitants of Domana, and the Chananite lived in their midst and became for tribute to him.

31 And Aser did not remove the inhabitants of Akcho (and it became for tribute to him), and the inhabitants of Dor and the inhabitants of Sidon and the inhabitants of Aalaph and Aschazi and Chelba and Nai and Ereo ³²and Aser lived in the midst of the Chananite who inhabited the land, for he could not remove him.

33 And Nephthali did not remove the inhabitants of Baithsamys and the inhabitants of Baithanath, and Nephthali lived in the midst of the Chananite who inhabited the land; now the inhabitants of Baithsamys and the city of Baitheneth became for tribute to them.

34 And the Amorrite pressed the sons of Dan back into the hill country, for they did not allow him to come down to the valley. ³⁵And the Amorrite began to live in the potsherd mountain on which there are bears and on which there are foxes, in the Myrtle-grove and in Thalabin, and the hand of the house of Ioseph rested heavily on the Amorrite, and he became for tribute to them. ³⁶And the border of the Amorrite was from the ascent of Akra bin, from Petra and above.

listen to my voice when you did these things. ³And I said, I will not add to deport the people of whom I spoke, to destroy them from before you, and they shall be for causes of oppression to you, and their gods shall be for an obstacle to you." ⁴And it came about, as the angel of the Lord spoke these words to all Israel, that the people lifted up their voice and wept. ⁵For this reason the name of that place was called Weeping, and there they sacrificed to the Lord.

⁶ And Iesous dismissed the people, and the sons of Israel went away, each to his house and to his inheritance to inherit the land. ⁷And the people were subject to the Lord all the days of Iesous and all the days of the elders, those who prolonged their days after Iesous, those who had known all the Lord's great work that he had done for Israel. ⁸And Iesous son of Naue, slave of the Lord, died, a son of one hundred and ten years. ⁹And they buried him within the bounds of his inheritance in Thamnathares, in the hill country of Ephraim, north of Mount Gaas. ¹⁰And that whole generation was added to their fathers, and another generation arose after them, those who did not know the Lord and the work that he had done for Israel.

¹¹ And the sons of Israel did what was evil before the Lord and were serving the Baalim, ¹²and they abandoned the Lord, god of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt, and they went after other gods from among the gods of the peoples who were all around them and did obeisance to them, and they provoked the Lord to anger. ¹³And they abandoned the Lord and served the she-Baal and the Astartes. ¹⁴And the Lord was furiously angry with Israel, and he delivered them in the hand of plunderers, and they plundered them, and he gave them up in the hand of their enemies all around, and they could not withstand in the presence of their enemies. ¹⁵At every point at which they would prostitute themselves, the Lord's hand also was to them for misfortune, as the Lord had said and as the Lord had sworn, and he oppressed them greatly.

¹⁶ And the Lord raised up judges for them and delivered them out of the hand of those who plundered them. ¹⁷And indeed they did not listen to their judges, for they prostituted themselves after other gods and did obeisance to them and provoked the Lord to anger. And they soon turned aside from the way in which their fathers had walked in obeying the commandments of the Lord; they did not do so. ¹⁸And because the Lord raised up judges for them, the Lord also was with the judge, and he delivered them from the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge, for the Lord was entreated by their groaning from before those who besieged and afflicted them. ¹⁹And it came about when the judge would die that they relapsed and again caused corruption beyond what their fathers had done, going after other gods, serving them and doing obeisance to them. ²⁰And the Lord was furiously angry against Israel, and he said, "Seeing that, inasmuch as this nation has abandoned my covenant that I commanded their fathers and has not obeyed my voice, ²¹I for my part will not add to remove from before them a man from among the nations that Iesus left behind and let be, ²²to test Israel by means of them, whether or not they would keep to the way of the Lord, walking in it, as their fathers had kept to it." ²³And the Lord had let those nations be, not removing them at once, and had not delivered them in Iesus' hand.

Moab by his hand. ¹⁶And Aod made for himself a double-bladed dagger, a span in length, and he fastened it on his right thigh under his cloak. ¹⁷And he presented the gifts to King Eglom of Moab. And Eglom was a very handsome man. ¹⁸And it came about, when Aod had finished presenting the gifts, that he sent those who bore the gifts on their way. ¹⁹And Eglom turned back from the carved objects^a with Galgal. And Aod said, "I have a secret message for you, O king." And Eglom said to everyone, "Away!" and all his attendants went out from him. ²⁰And Aod came in to him, and he was sitting alone, quite by himself in his summer roof-chamber. And Aod said, "I have a divine message for you, O king." And Eglom rose from his seat, near to him. ²¹And it came about just as he rose up that Aod reached with his left hand and took the dagger from his right thigh and thrust it into Eglom's belly, ²²and indeed he even drove the hilt in after the flame, and the fat closed over the flame, for he did not draw the dagger out of his belly. ²³And Aod went out into the vestibule, and he closed the doors of the roof-chamber on him and wedged them.

²⁴ And he had gone out, and his servants came in. And they looked, and see, the doors of the roof-chamber were locked. And they said, "Perhaps he is sitting on the stool in the retreat of his bedroom." ²⁵And they waited, embarrassed. And see, there was no one to open the doors of the roof-chamber, and they took the key and opened, and see, their lord was lying dead on the ground.

²⁶ And Aod escaped while they were in confusion (and there was no one paying attention to him) and he passed beyond the carved objects^a and escaped to Seirotha. ²⁷And it came about when he arrived that he sounded with a horn in the hill country of Ephraim, and the sons of Israel went down with him, and he himself was at their head. ²⁸And he said to them, "Come down after me, for the Lord God has given your enemies, Moab, in your hand." And they went down after him and quickly seized the fords across the Jordan of Moab, and they did not allow a man to cross over. ²⁹And at that time they struck down Moab, about ten thousand men, all the warriors among them, even every man of power, and not a man escaped. ³⁰And Moab was humbled in that day under the hand of Israel. And the land had rest for eighty years. And Aod judged them until he died.

³¹ And after him arose Samegar son of Anath, and he struck down the allophytes, fully six hundred men, as well as calves of cattle. And he himself delivered Israel.

Now Eglom was a very handsome man. ¹⁸And it came about, when Aod had finished presenting the gifts, that he sent those who carried the gifts on their way. ¹⁹And he himself turned back from the carved objects^a that were with Galgal. And Aod said, "I have a secret message for you, O king." And Eglom said to him, "Be quiet!" and he sent all those who stood by him out from him. ²⁰And Aod came into him, and he was sitting alone, quite by himself in his own summer roof-chamber. And Aod went out by the vestibule. ²³And he went out past those who had been stationed, and he closed the doors of the roof-chamber on him and wedged them.

²⁴ And he had gone out, and the servants came in. And they looked, and see, the doors of the roof-chamber were wedged. And they said, "Perhaps he is draining his feet^b in the summer store-room." ²⁵And they waited patiently until they were ashamed. And see, there was no one to open the doors of the roof-chamber, and they took the key and opened, and see, their lord was lying dead on the ground.

²⁶ And Aod escaped while they were in confusion (and there was no one paying attention to him) and he passed beyond the carved objects^a and escaped to Setirotha. ²⁷And it came about when Aod entered the land of Israel that he sounded with a horn in the hill country of Ephraim, and the sons of Israel went down with him from the hill country, and he himself was at their head. ²⁸And he said to them, "Come down after me, for the Lord God has given your enemies, Moab, in your hand." And they went down after him and quickly seized the fords across the Jordan of Moab, and he did not allow a man to cross over. ²⁹And in that day they struck down Moab, about ten thousand men, every sleek man, even every man of power, and not a man escaped. ³⁰And Moab was humbled in that day under the hand of Israel. And the land had rest for eighty years. And Aod judged them until he died.

¹² And they told Sisara that Barak son of Abineem had gone up to Mount Tabor, ¹³and Sisara called out all his chariots, for he had nine hundred iron-clad chariots, and all the people who were with him, from Harisoth-of-the-Nations, to the Wadi Kison. ¹⁴And Debbora said to Barak, "Up! For this is the day in which the Lord has given Sisara in your hand. See, will the Lord not go before you?" And Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand men behind him. ¹⁵And the Lord threw Sisara and all his chariots and all his camp into a panic by the edge of the sword before Barak, and Sisara got down from his chariot and fled away on his feet, ¹⁶and Barak was pursuing after the chariots and after the camp, all the way to Thicket-of-the-Nations. And all the camp of Sisara fell by the edge of the sword; not even one was left.

¹⁷ And Sisara had retreated on his feet to the tent of Iael, wife of Chaber the Kinite, for there was peace between King Iabin of Hasor and between the clan of Chaber the Kinite. ¹⁸And Iael came out

And he came aside to her, into the tent, and she covered him with her skin curtain. ¹⁹And Sisara said to her, "Do but give me a little water to drink, for I am thirsty." And she opened the skin of milk and gave him a drink and covered up his face. ²⁰And he said to her, "Stand at the entrance of the tent, and it shall be, if anybody comes to you and asks you and says to you, 'Is a man within?' that you will say, 'There is not.'" And she covered him up with her skin curtain. ²¹And Iael, wife of Chaber, took the tent peg and placed the hammer in her hand and quietly went in towards him and hammered the peg into his jaw and drove it through in the ground. And as for him, he writhed between her knees, and he breathed his last and died. ²²And see, Barak was pursuing Sisara, and Iael went out to meet him and said to him, "Come here, and I will show you the man whom you are seeking." And he went in to her, and see, Sisara, a fallen corpse, and the tent peg in his jaw.

²³ And the Lord God humbled King Iabin of Chanaan in that day before the sons of Israel. ²⁴And the hand of the sons of Israel went out, going and becoming hard against King Iabin of Chanaan until they destroyed him.

5 And Debbora sang, and Barak son of Abineem, in that day and said:

when people make their free choice,

You, why do you dwell

He spread out with his feet.

To cross over into the territory of Rouben
there were great searchings of heart.

Aser sojourned at the shore of seas

Judges A

6 And the sons of Israel did what was evil before the Lord, and the Lord gave them up in the hand of Madiam seven years. ²And the hand of Madiam prevailed over Israel, and the sons of Israel made for themselves, from before Madiam, shelters in the mountains and in the caves and the strongholds. ³And it came about whenever a man of Israel put in seed that Madiam would come up, and Amalek and the sons of the east, and they would come up against him. ⁴And they would encamp against them, and they destroyed the produce of the land, until one comes to Gaza, and they would not leave support for life in Israel, even flock and calf and donkey. ⁵For they and their livestock would come up, and they would bring their tents, and they would arrive like a grasshopper in great numbers, and there was no number for them or their camels, and they would arrive in the land of Israel to waste it. ⁶And Israel was greatly impoverished from before Madiam, and the sons of Israel cried out to the Lord.

7 And it came about, when the sons of Israel cried to the Lord on account of Madiam, ⁸that the Lord sent a man, a prophet, to the sons of Israel, and he said to them, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I am the one who made you come up from Egypt, and I led you out of a house of slavery, ⁹and I delivered you from the hand of Egypt and from the hand of all who oppressed you, and I drove them out from before you and gave you their land, ¹⁰and I said to you, 'I am the Lord your God; you shall not pay reverence to the gods of the Amorrite, among whom you dwell, in their land.' And you have not given heed to my voice."

11 And an angel of the Lord came and sat under the oak, which was at Ephratha, which belonged to Ioas, father of Abiezzi, and his son Gedeon was beating out wheat in a wine press to escape from before Madiam. ¹²And an angel of the Lord appeared to him and said to him, "The Lord is with you, mighty in strength." ¹³And Gedeon said to him, "By me, Lord? And if the Lord is with us, why have all these evils found us? And where are all his wonders, everything our fathers recounted to us, saying, 'Did not the Lord bring us up from Egypt?' But now he has cast us off and given us up in the hand of Madiam." ¹⁴And the angel of the Lord looked at him and said to him, "Go in your strength and you will deliver Israel, and see, I have sent you forth." ¹⁵And Gedeon said to him, "By me, lord? By what means shall I deliver Israel? See, my thousand is more lowly in Manasses, and I am insignificant in my father's house." ¹⁶And the angel of the Lord said to him, "The Lord will be with you, and you shall strike down Madiam as you would one man." ¹⁷And Gedeon said to him, "And if I have found favor in your eyes and you will perform a sign for me that it is you who speak with me, ¹⁸do not stir from here until I come to 19 And Gedeon entered and prepared a goat kid and unleavened cakes from an oiphi^a of wheat flour, and the meat he placed in the breadbasket, and the broth he poured into a pot and brought it out to him under the oak and did obeisance. ²⁰And the angel of the Lord said to him, "Take the meat and the unleavened cakes, and put them by that rock, and pour out the broth." And he did so. ²¹And the angel of the Lord reached out the tip of the rod that was in his hand and touched the meat and the unleavened cakes, and fire ignited from the rock and consumed the meat and the unleavened cakes, and the angel of the Lord departed from his sight. ²²And Gedeon perceived that it was an angel of the Lord, and Gedeon said, "Ah, ah, Lord, Lord! For I have seen the angel of the Lord face to face." ²³And the Lord said to him, "Peace be to you; do not be afraid that you will die." ²⁴And Gedeon built an altar there to the Lord and called it, Peace of the Lord, it being still at Ephratha of Ezri's father to this day.

25 And it came about in that night that the Lord said to him, "Take your father's fattened calf, the seven-year-old one. And you will pull down the altar of Baal that is your father's and cut down the sacred grove that is beside it, ²⁶and you will build an altar to the Lord your God, who appeared to you on the peak of this Mount Maoz, in proper order, and you will take the calf and offer up a whole burnt offering with the wood of the sacred grove that you shall cut down." ²⁷And Gedeon took thirteen men from among his slaves and did as the Lord had told him, and it came about, since he was afraid of his father's household and the men of the city, so as not to do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 And the men of the city arose early in the morning, and see, the altar of Baal broken down, and the sacred grove beside it cut down, and the fattened calf offered up for a whole burnt offering on the altar that had been built! ²⁹And a man said to his fellow, "Who has done this deed?" And they were searching and seeking, and they said, "Gedeon son of Ioas did this deed." ³⁰And the men of the city said to Ioas, "Bring out your son, and let him die, because he has broken down the altar of Baal and because he has cut down the sacred grove beside it." ³¹And Ioas said to the men who were arrayed against him, "Are you now acting as judges for Baal? Or are you delivering him? He who has sought judgment against him shall die by morning. If he is a god, he will exact justice from him, because he has broken down his altar." ³²And in that day he called it Baal's Court of Justice, because he pulled down his altar.

And he did so. ²¹And the angel of the Lord reached out the tip of the rod that was in his hand and touched the meat and the unleavened cakes, and fire went up from the rock and consumed the meat and the unleavened cakes, and the angel of the Lord went from his sight. ²²And Gedeon perceived that he was an angel of the Lord, and Gedeon said, "Ah, ah, my lord, Lord! And you will pull down the altar of Baal that belongs to your father and destroy the sacred grove that extends up to it, ²⁶and you will build an altar to the Lord your God on the peak of this Maouek, in proper order, and you will take the second calf and offer up a whole burnt offering with the wood of the sacred grove that you shall destroy." ²⁷And Gedeon took ten men from among his own slaves and did it in the way the Lord had told him, and it came about, since he was afraid of his father's household and the men of the city, to do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 And the men of the city arose early in the morning, and see, the altar of Baal had been pulled down, and the sacred grove beside it had been destroyed, and they saw the second calf that he had offered up onto the altar that had been built. ²⁹And a man said to his fellow, "Who has done this thing?" And they sought out and investigated, and they knew that Gedeon son of Ioas had done this thing. ³⁰And the men of the city said to Ioas, "Bring out your son, and let him die, because he has pulled down the altar of Baal and because he has destroyed the sacred grove beside it." ³¹And Ioas said to all the men who rose up against him, "Are you now acting as judges on Baal's behalf? Or will you deliver him? Whoever passes judgment on him, let him be put to death by morning. If he is a god, let him pass judgment on him, because he has pulled down his altar." ³²And in that day he called it Iarbaal, saying, "Let Baal seek justice ^bon it^b, for his altar was pulled down."

of the east gathered together and crossed and encamped in the Valley of Izrael. ³⁴And a divine spirit entered Gedeon, and he sounded with a horn and called out for Abiezer after him. ³⁵And he sent out messengers throughout all Manasses, and he himself called out after him. He also sent out messengers in Aser and in Zaboulon and in Nephthali, and they went up to meet him.

36 And Gedeon said to God, "If you are delivering Israel by my hand, as you have spoken, ³⁷see, I am laying a fleece of wool on the threshing floor, and if there is dew on the fleece alone and there is dryness over all the ground, then I shall also know that you are delivering Israel by my hand, as you have spoken." ³⁸And it was so. And Gedeon rose early the next morning and squeezed the fleece, and the dew flowed out of the fleece, a full basin of water. ³⁹And Gedeon said to God, "Let not your anger be aroused against me, and I will speak one more time, and I will make trial with the fleece one more time, and let there be dryness only on the fleece, but over all the ground let there be dew." ⁴⁰And God did so in that night. And there was dryness on the fleece only, but over all the ground there was dew.

7 And Ierobaal (he is Gedeon) rose early, and all the people that were with him, and encamped beside the land of Aroed, and the camp of Madiam and Amalek was north of him, away from the hill of Abor, in the valley.

2 And the Lord said to Gedeon, "The people with you are numerous; so I will not give up Madiam in their hand. Israel would only boast against me, saying, 'My own hand has delivered me.'" ³And the Lord said to him, "Do proclaim in the hearing of the people, saying, 'Who is faint-hearted and fearful? Let him return home.'" And twenty-two thousand quickly set out from Mount Galaad and returned home from the people, and ten thousand remained.

4 And the Lord said to Gedeon, "The people are still numerous; take them down into the water, and I will test them for you there. And it will be that anyone of whom I say to you, 'This one shall go with you,' he shall go with you, and anyone of whom I say to you that he shall not go with you, he shall not go with you." ⁵And he brought the people into the water, and the Lord said to Gedeon, "Everyone who laps from the water with his tongue as if a dog laps, you shall put him to one side, and every one who kneels down on his knees to drink, you shall put him by himself." ⁶And the full number of those that lapped with their tongue was three hundred men, and all the rest of the people knelt down on their knees to drink water. ⁷And the Lord said to Gedeon, "With the three hundred men that lapped I will deliver you and give Madiam up in your hand. And let all the people depart, a man to his place." ⁸And they took the provisions of the people in their hand, and their horns, and he sent every man of Israel of the East gathered together and encamped in the Valley of Ezereel. ³⁴And a spirit of the Lord empowered Gedeon, and he sounded with a horn, and Abiezer was seized by fear after him. ³⁵And he sent messengers into all Manasses and in Aser and in Zaboulon and Nephthali, and he went up to meet them.

36 And Gedeon said to God, "If it is you who are delivering Israel by my hand, as you have spoken, ³⁷see, I am placing a fleece of wool on the threshing floor; if there is dew on the fleece alone and there is dryness over all the ground, I shall know that you will deliver Israel by my hand, as you have spoken." ³⁸And it was so. And he rose early the next morning and squeezed the fleece, and dew dripped from the fleece, a full basin of water. ³⁹And Gedeon said to God, "Do not let your anger be aroused against me, and I will speak one more time. I will yet indeed make trial with the fleece one more time, and let the dryness be only on the fleece, and over all the ground let there be dew." ⁴⁰And God did so in that night. And there was dryness on the fleece only, and over all the ground there was dew.

7 And Iarbal (he is Gedeon) rose early, and all the people with him, and they encamped by the spring of Arad, and the camp of Madiam was north of him, away from Gabaath Amora, in the valley.

2 And the Lord said to Gedeon, "The people with you are numerous; so I will not give up Madiam in their hand. Israel would only boast against me, saying, 'My own hand has delivered me.'" ³And now, do proclaim in the hearing of the people, saying, 'Who is the one who is fearful and faint-hearted? Let him turn round and leave Mount Galaad.'" And twenty-two thousand of the people turned around, and ten thousand remained.

4 And the Lord said to Gedeon, "The people are still numerous; bring them down to the water, and I will sift them for you there. And it will be that anyone of whom I say to you, 'This one shall go with you,' he shall go with you, and every one of whom I say to you, 'This one shall not go with you,' he shall not go with you." ⁵And he brought the people down to the water, and the Lord said to Gedeon, "Everyone who laps from the water with his tongue as if a dog laps, you shall put him to one side, and so with all those who bend down on their knees to drink." ⁶And the number of those that lapped with their hand to their mouth was three hundred men, and all the remainder of the people bent down on their knees to drink water. ⁷And the Lord said to Gedeon, "With the three hundred men that lapped I will deliver you and give Madiam in your hand. And all the people will go, a man to his place." ⁸And they took the provisions of the people in their hand, and their horns, and he sent every man of Israel away, a man to his away, a man to his dwelling, but retained the three hundred men. Now the camp of Madiam was below him in the valley.

9 And it happened in that night that the Lord said to him, "Get up, go down quickly from here into the camp, for I have given it up in your hand. ¹⁰But if you fear to go down, you and your young servant Phara go down into the camp, ¹¹and you shall hear what they say, and afterward your hands shall be strengthened, and you shall go down into the camp." And he went down, he and his young servant Phara within the bounds of the fifty in the camp. ¹²And Madiam and Amalek and all the sons of the east had encamped in the valley like a grasshopper, in great numbers, and there was no number for their camels, but they were like the sand on the seashore, in great numbers. ¹³And Gedeon entered, and see, a man was telling his dream to his comrade, and he said, "See, the dream which I dreamed, and see, a cake of barley bread was tumbling in the camp of Madiam, and it came to the tent of Madiam and struck it and overturned it, and the tent collapsed." ¹⁴And his comrade answered and said, "This is nothing other than the sword of Gedeon son of Ioas, a man of Israel; the Lord has given up Madiam and all the camp in his hand."

15 And it came, about when Gedeon heard the narration of the dream and its interpretation, that he did obeisance to the Lord, and he returned to the camp of Israel and said, "Get up, for the Lord has given the camp of Madiam in your hands." ¹⁶And he divided the three hundred men into three commands and put horns in the hand of all of them and empty jars and torches in the middle of the jars. ¹⁷And he said to them, "You will see from me and do the same. And see, I am going into the middle of the camp, and it will be that as I do, so you shall do. ¹⁸And I shall sound with the horn, I and all those with me, and you also shall sound with your horns around the camp and say, 'For the Lord and for Gedeon!'"

19 And Gedeon and a hundred men with him entered in the bounds of the camp at the beginning of the midnight watch; however, he roused the guards with a rousing, and they sounded with the horns and shook out the jars that were in their hands. ²⁰And the three commands sounded with the horns and broke the jars and grasped the torches in their left hand, and in their right hand were the horns to sound, and they cried, "A sword for the Lord and for Gedeon!" ²¹And everyone stood in his place all around the camp, and they ran, all the camp, and they gave signals and fled. ²²And the three hundred horns sounded, and the Lord set a man's dagger against his fellow and against all the camp, and the camp fled as far as Baithassetta and was pressed back as far as the edge of Abelmeoula and by Tabath. ²³And a man of Israel sounded the cry from Nephthalim and from Aser and from all Manasses, and they took up the pursuit after Madiam.

9 And it happened in that night that the Lord said to him, "Get up, and go down in the camp, for I have given it up in your hand. ¹⁰And if you fear to go down, you and your young servant Phara go down into the camp, ¹¹and you shall hear what they will say, and after that your hands shall be strengthened, and you shall go down in the camp." And he went down, he and his young servant Phara towards the command of the fifty that were in the camp. ¹²And Madiam and Amalek and all the sons of the east were thrown in the valley like a grasshopper, in great numbers, and there was no number for their camels, but they were like the sand on a seashore, in great numbers. ¹³And Gedeon arrived, and see, a man telling a dream to his comrade, and he said, "A dream, see, I dreamed, and see, a cake of barley bread was spinning round in the camp of Madiam, and it came to the tent and struck it, and it collapsed, and it turned it upside down, and the tent collapsed." ¹⁴And his comrade answered and said, "This is nothing if not the sword of Gedeon son of Ioas, a man of Israel; God has given up Madiam and all the camp in his hand."

15 And it came about, when Gedeon heard the explanation of the dream and its interpretation, that he did obeisance to the Lord, and he returned to the camp of Israel and said, "Get up, for the Lord has given the camp of Madiam in your hand." ¹⁶And he divided the three hundred men into three commands and put horns in the hands of all of them and empty jars and torches in the jars. ¹⁷And he said to them, "You will see from me and do the same. And see, I am entering in the command of the camp, and it will be that as I do, so you shall do. ¹⁸And I shall sound with the horn for my part, and all you with me shall sound with your horns around the entire camp and say, 'For the Lord and for Gedeon!'"

19 And Gedeon and the hundred men with him entered in the command of the camp at the beginning of the middle watch, and rousing they roused the guards, and they sounded with the horns and shook out the jars that were in their hands. ²⁰And the three commands sounded with the horns and broke the jars and seized the torches in their left hands, and in their right hands the horns to sound, and they cried, "A sword for the Lord and for Gedeon!" ²¹And they stood, a man for himself, all around the camp, and all the camp ran, and they gave signals and fled. ²²And they sounded with the three hundred horns, and the Lord set a man's sword against his fellow throughout all the camp, and the camp fled as far as Bethseedta Garagatha, as far as the edge of Abomeoula by Tabath. ²³And they sounded the cry, a man of Israel, from Nephthali and from Aser and from all Manasses, and they pursued after Madiam.

24 And Gedeon sent messengers throughout all the territory of Ephraim, saying, "Come down to meet Madiam, and seize the water for yourselves as far as Baithbera and the Jordan." And every man of Ephraim sounded the cry, and they quickly seized the water as far as Baithbera and the Jordan.²⁵ And they captured the two commanders of Madiam, Oreb and Zeb, and they killed Oreb at Sourin, and Zeb they killed at Iakeph-Zeb, and they pursued Madiam. And they brought the head of Oreb and Zeb to Gedeon, from beyond the Jordan.

8 And a man of Ephraim said to him, "Why have you done this thing to us, not to call us when you were setting out to fight against Madiam?" And they disputed with him forcefully.² And he said to them, "What have I done now as you have? Are not the gleanings of the grapes of Ephraim better things than the vintage of Abiezer?"³ God has given up in your hand the commanders of Madiam, Oreb and Zeb, and what have I been able to do as you have?" And they desisted. Then their spirit abated because of him, when he spoke this word.

4 And Gedeon came to the Jordan and crossed over, he and the three hundred men with him, faint and famished.⁵ And he said to the men of Sokchoth, "Do give some loaves to the people who are with me, for they are famished, but as for me, I am pursuing after Zebee and Salmana, kings of Madiam."⁶ And the rulers of Sokchoth said, "Do you already have in your hand a hand of Zebee and Salmana, that we shall give loaves to your army?"⁷ And Gedeon said, "Not so! When the Lord has given Zebee and Salmana in my hand, I will also cut your flesh to pieces with the thorns of the wilderness and with the barkonnim."⁸ And from there he went up to Phanouel and spoke to them in a similar way, and the men of Phanouel answered him as the men of Sokchoth had answered him.⁹ And he said to the men of Phanouel, saying, "When I come back in peace, I will break down this tower."

10 And Zebee and Salmana were in Karkar, and their camp was with them, about fifteen thousand, those who were left among all the camp of the sons of the east, and those who had fallen were one hundred and twenty thousand men who had drawn a sword.¹¹ And Gedeon went up by the route of those who dwell in tents, east of Nabeth, opposite Zebee, and struck the camp, but the camp was confident.¹² And Zebee and Salmana fled, and he took up the pursuit after them and seized the two kings of Madiam, Zebee and Salmana, and destroyed all their camp.

13 And Gedeon son of Ioas returned from the war, from the ascent of Hares.¹⁴ And they caught a lad, one of the men of Sokchoth, and he questioned him, and he noted down for them the 24 And Gedeon sent messengers throughout all the hill country of Ephraim, saying, "Come down to meet Madiam, and seize the water for yourselves, as far as Baithera and the Jordan." And they brought the head of Oreb and Zeb to Gedeon, from beyond the Jordan.

8 And they said to Gedeon, a man of Ephraim, "Why have you done this thing to us, not to call us when you set out to deploy against Madiam?" And they argued strongly with him.² And he said to them, "What have I done now as you have? Or is not the gleanings of the grapes of Ephraim a better thing than the vintage of Abiezer?"³ God has given up in your hand the commanders of Madiam, Oreb and Zeb, and what have I been able to do as you have?" Then their spirit abated because of him, when he spoke this word.

4 And Gedeon came to the Jordan and crossed over, he and the three hundred men who were with him, famished and pursuing.⁵ And he said to the men of Sokchoth, "Do give some loaves as food for this people which is at my feet, for they are fainting, and see, as for me, I am pursuing after Zebee and Selmana, kings of Madiam."⁶ And the rulers of Sokchoth said, "Do you already have in your hand a hand of Zebee and Selmana? We will not give loaves to your force."⁷ And Gedeon said, "Therefore, when the Lord has given Zebee and Selmana in my hand, then I for my part will thresh your flesh with the thorns of the wilderness and with the abarkenin."⁸ And from there he went up to Phanouel and spoke to them likewise, and the men of Phanouel answered him as the men of Sokchoth had answered.⁹ And Gedeon said to the men of Phanouel, "On my return in peace, I will break down this tower."

10 And Zebee and Selmana were in Karkar, and their camp was with them, about fifteen thousand men, all those who were left out of all the army of foreigners, and those who had fallen were one hundred and twenty thousand men drawing a sword.¹¹ And Gedeon went up by the route of those who camp in tents, to the east of Nabai and Iegebai, and struck the camp, and the camp was confident.¹² And Zebee and Selmana fled, and he took up the pursuit after them and seized the two kings of Madiam, Zebee and Selmana, and threw all the army into panic.

Zebee and Salmana, on whose account you taunted me, saying, 'Do you perhaps already have in your hand a hand of Zebee and Salmana, that we shall give loaves to your men who are exhausted?'" ¹⁶And he took the rulers and the elders of the city, and he cut them to pieces with the thorns of the wilderness and the barakenim^a, and he cut the men of Sokchoth to pieces with them. ¹⁷And he broke down the tower of Phanouel and killed the men of the city.

¹⁸ And he said to Zebee and Salmana, "Where are the men whom you killed at Thabor?" And they said, "As you are: one like you was like them, like the appearance, the form, of kings' sons." ¹⁹And Gedeon said, "They are my brothers and the sons of my mother." And he swore to them: "The Lord lives: if you had brought them to life, I would not have killed you." ²⁰And he said to Iether his firstborn, "Get up, and kill them!" And the lad did not draw his dagger, for he was afraid, because he was too young. ²¹And Zebee and Salmana said, "You then get up and face us, for like a man is his power." And Gedeon got up and killed Zebee and Salmana, and he took the crescents that were on the necks of their camels.

²² And a man of Israel said to Gedeon, "Rule among us, you and your sons, for you have delivered us out of the hand of Madiam." ²³And Gedeon said to them, "I will not rule over you, and my son will not rule over you; the Lord will rule over you." ²⁴And Gedeon said to them, "I will request a request of you, and you, ^{ba man}^b, give me an earring from his booty." (For they^c had many golden earrings, because they were Ismaelites.) ²⁵And they said, "Giving we will give them." And he spread his garment, and ^{ba man}^b cast there a golden earring of his booty. ²⁶And the weight of the golden earrings that he requested was one thousand seven hundred shekels of gold (apart from the siron^d and the small necklaces enphoth^e and the purple cloaks that were on the kings of Madiam and apart from the golden collars that were on the necks of their camels). ²⁷And Gedeon made it into an ephoud and put it in his city, in Ephratha, and all Israel prostituted themselves after it there, and it became for an obstacle to Gedeon and to his house. ²⁸And Madiam was humbled before the sons of Israel, and they did not add to lift up their head. And the land had rest forty years in the days of Gedeon.

²⁹ And Ierobaal son of Ioas went and lived in his own house. ³⁰And Gedeon had seventy sons who came from his thighs, for he had many wives. ³¹And his concubine who was in Sikima, she indeed also bore him a son, and he named his name Abimelech. ³²And Gedeon son of Ioas died with a good head of grey hair and was buried in the tomb of his father Ioas at Ephratha, of Abiezri's father.

33 And it came about as Gedeon died that the sons of Israel turned aside and prostituted themselves after the Baalim and made for themselves Baal-Berith for a covenant that he should be for a god to them. ³⁴And the sons of Israel did not remember the Lord their God, who had rescued them from the hand of all their enemies on every side, ³⁵and they did not do mercy with the house of Ierobaal Gedeon in return for all the goodness that he had done with Israel.

9 And Abimelech son of Ierobaal went to Sikima to his mother's brothers and spoke to them and to the whole clan of his mother's family, saying, ²"Speak now in the hearing of the men of Sikima, 'Which is better, that seventy men, all sons of Ierobaal, rule over you or that one man be lord over you?' 22 And Abimelech ruled over Israel three years. ²³And God sent an evil spirit between Abimelech and between the men of Sikima, and the men of Sikima dealt treacherously in the house of Abimelech, ²⁴that they might bring up the injustice against the seventy sons of Ierobaal, to lay their blood upon their brother Abimelech, who killed them, and upon the men of Sikima, who strengthened his hands so that he killed his brothers. ²⁵And the men of Sikima set ambushes against him on the mountaintops, and they would kidnap all who passed by them along that way, and it was reported to Abimelech.

26 And Gaal son of Abed and his brothers came into Sikima, and the men of Sikima had put confidence in him. ²⁷And they went into the field and gathered grapes from their vineyards and were treading them and did dances. And they went into the house of their god and ate and drank and were cursing Abimelech. ²⁸And Gaal son of Abed said, "What is Abimelech, and who is the son of Sychem, that we shall be subject to him? Is he not a son of Ierobaal? And Zeboul his supervisor is his slave along with the men of Hemmor father of Sychem. And why is it that we shall serve him? ²⁹And who would give this people in my hand? words of Gaal son of Abed, and he was furiously angry. ³¹And he sent messengers to Abimelech with gifts, saying, "Look, Gaal son of Abed and his brothers have arrived in Sikima, and these here are besieging the city against you. ³²Now then, get up by night, you and the people that are with you, and lie in wait in the fields. ³³And it will happen early, as the sun rises, that you will rise early and reach out against the city, and see, he himself and the people that are with him will come out against you, and you will deal with him just as your hand devises."

⁴² And it came about on the following day that the people went out into the plain, and it was reported to Abimelech. ⁴³And he took along the people and divided them into three commands and lay in wait in it. And he looked, and see, people came out of the city, and he rose against them and struck them down. ⁴⁴And Abimelech and the commands that were with him spread out and stood at the gate of the city, and the two commands rushed out at all who were in the fields and struck them down. ⁴⁵And Abimelech was fighting against the city all that day, and they took the city, and he killed the people that were in it, and he razed the city and sowed it with salt.

And he looked, and see, the people came out of the city, and he rose against them and struck them down. ⁴⁴And Abimelech and the chiefs that were with him spread out and stood at the entrance of the gate of the city, and the two commands spread out against all who were in the fields and struck them down. ⁴⁵And Abimelech was deploying against the city all that day, and he took the city, and he killed the people that were in it, and he razed the city and sowed it for salt.

50 And Abimelech went to Thebes, and laid siege against it and quickly seized it. ⁵¹And there was a strong tower in the middle of the city, and all the men and women and all the leaders of the city fled there and shut it on themselves, and they went up to the top of the tower. ⁵²And Abimelech came up to the tower, and they fought him, and Abimelech, came near to the door of the tower, to burn it with fire. ⁵³And one woman threw a piece of a millstone on Abimelech's head and crushed his skull. ⁵⁴And immediately he called out to the young servant, the one who carried his equipment, and said to him, "Draw your dagger, and kill me, so they will not say, 'A woman killed him.'" And his young servant thrust him through, and Abimelech died. ⁵⁵And a man of Israel saw that Abimelech had died, and they departed, a man to his place. ⁵⁶And God turned away the evil of Abimelech, which he committed against his father in killing his seventy brothers, ⁵⁷and God returned all the evil of the men of Sikima on their head, and on them came the curse of Ioatham the son of Ierobaal.

10 And after Abimelech, Thola son of Phoua, son of his father's brother, a man of Issachar, rose to deliver Israel, and he himself lived at Samaria in the hill country of Ephraim. ²And he judged Israel twenty-three years. And he died and was buried at Samaria.

3 And after him arose Iair the Galaadite, and he judged Israel twenty-two years. ⁴And there were born to him thirty-two sons who rode on thirty-two colts, and they had thirty-two cities, and he called them Iair's Hamlets until this day, which are in the land of Galaad. ⁵And Iair died and was buried in Rammo.

6 And the sons of Israel added to do what was evil before the Lord and served the she-Baalim and the Astaroth and the gods of Sidon and the gods of Moab and the gods of the sons of Ammon and the gods of the allophytes. And they abandoned the Lord and were not subject to him. ⁷And the Lord was furiously angry with Israel, and he gave them up in the hand of allophytes and in the hand of the sons of Ammon, ⁸and they undermined and crushed the sons of Israel in that year for eighteen years, all the sons of Israel beyond the Jordan in the land of the Amorrite in Galaaditis. ⁹And the sons of Ammon crossed the Jordan, to wage war both against Ioudas and Benjamin and against the house of Ephraim, and the sons of Israel were greatly distressed.

And his young servant thrust him through, and he died. ⁵⁵And a man of Israel saw that Abimelech had died, and they went, a man to his place. ⁵⁶And God returned the wickedness of Abimelech, which he committed against his father in killing his seventy brothers, ⁵⁷and God returned all the wickedness of the men of Sychem on their head, and on them came the curse of Ioathan son of Ierobaal.

10 And after Abimelech, Thola son of Phoua, son of his father's brother, a man of Issachar, rose to deliver Israel, and he himself dwelled at Samir in the hill country of Ephraim. ²And he judged Israel twenty-three years. And he died and was buried at Samir.

3 And after him arose Iair the one of Galaad, and he judged Israel twenty-two years. ⁴And he had thirty-two sons riding on thirty-two colts, and they had thirty-two cities, and they would call them Iair's Hamlets until this day, in the land of Galaad. ⁵And Iair died and was buried in Ramnon.

6 And the sons of Israel added to do what was evil before the Lord and were subject to the Baalim and the Astaroth and the gods of Arad and the gods of Sidon and the gods of Moab and the gods of the sons of Ammon and the gods of Phylistiim. And they abandoned the Lord and were not subject to him. ⁷And the Lord was furiously angry with Israel, and he gave them up in the hand of Phylistiim and in the hand of the sons of Ammon, ⁸and they oppressed and crushed the sons of Israel at that time for eighteen years, all the sons of Israel who were beyond the Jordan in the land of the Amorri, who is in Galaad. ⁹And the sons of Ammon crossed the Jordan, to deploy against Ioudas and Benjamin and against Ephraim, and Israel was greatly distressed.

10 And the sons of Israel cried to the Lord, saying, "We have sinned against you, because we have abandoned our God and have served the she-Baalim." ¹¹And the Lord said to the sons of Israel, "Did not the Egyptians and the Amorrites and the sons of Ammon and Moab and the allophyles ¹²and Sidonians and Madiam and Amalek oppress you? And you cried to me, and I delivered you out of their hand. ¹³And you have abandoned me and served other gods; therefore I will not add to deliver you. ¹⁴Go away, and cry aloud to the gods whom you have chosen for yourselves, and let them deliver you in the time of your distress." ¹⁵And the sons of Israel said to the Lord, "We have sinned; do to us according to everything that is pleasing before you; only, Lord, deliver us in this day!" ¹⁶And they put away the foreign gods from their midst and served the Lord, and he was not well pleased with the people, and he was worried about the suffering of Israel.

17 And the sons of Ammon went up and encamped in Galaad, and the sons of Israel went out and encamped at Massepha. ¹⁸And the rulers of the people of Galaad said, a man to his fellow, "What man is it who will begin to fight against the sons of Ammon? He will also be for a head to all the inhabitants of Galaad."

11 And Iepththae the Galaadite was powerful in strength, and he himself was a son of a woman who was a prostitute, and she bore Iepththae to Galaad. ²And Galaad's wife bore him sons, and his wife's sons came to maturity and drove Iepththae away and said to him, "You shall not inherit anything in our father's house, for you are the son of woman who is a courtesan." ³And Iepththae fled from before his brothers and lived in the land of Tob. And petty men were coming together to Iepththae and would go out together with him.

⁴ And it happened after days that the sons of Ammon made war with Israel. ⁵And it happened, when the sons of Ammon were making war with Israel, that the elders of Galaad went to take along Iepththae in the land of Tob. ⁶And they said to Iepththae, "Come, and you will be for a leader to us, and let us fight against the sons of Ammon." ⁷And Iepththae said to the elders of Galaad, "Was it not you that hated me and drove me out of my father's house and sent me away from you? And why is it that you came to me when you were in trouble?" ⁸And the elders of Galaad said to Iepththae, "It is not like that! We have come to you now, and you will go with us, and we will fight against the sons of Ammon, and you will be for a head to us, to all the inhabitants of Galaad." ⁹And Iepththae said to the elders of Galaad, "If you are returning me to fight against the sons of Ammon, then let the Lord give them over before me. I will be for a head to you." ¹⁰And the elders of Galaad said to Iepththae, "The Lord will be the one who hears between us, if we do not do so, according to your word." ¹¹And Iepththae went with the elders of

17 And the sons of Ammon went up and encamped in Galaad, and the sons of Israel gathered and encamped at ^athe vantage point^a. ¹⁸And the people, the rulers of Galaad, said, a man to his fellow, "Who is the man who might begin to deploy against the sons of Ammon? He will also be for a ruler to all the inhabitants of Galaad."

And worthless men gathered around Iepththae and set out with him.

⁵ And it happened, when the sons of Ammon mustered with Israel, that the elders of Galaad went to take Iepththae from the land of Tob. ⁶And they said to Iepththae, "Come, and you will be for a chief to us, and let us deploy against the sons of Ammon." ⁷And Iepththae said to the elders of Galaad, "Was it not you that hated me and drove me out of my father's house and sent me away from you? And for what reason did you come to me now when you are in need?" ⁸And the elders of Galaad said to Iepththae, "It is for this reason that we have now turned to you, and you will go with us and deploy against the sons of Ammon, and you will be for a ruler to us, to all the inhabitants of Galaad." ⁹And Iepththae said to the elders of Galaad, "If you are returning me to deploy against the sons of Ammon, then let the Lord give them over before me, and I will be for a ruler to you." ¹⁰And the elders of Galaad said to Iepththae, "Let the Lord be hearing between us, if we do not do so, according to your word." ¹¹And Iepththae went with the Galaad, and they appointed him over them for a head, for a leader, and Iepthae spoke all his words before the Lord at Massepha.

12 And Iepthae sent messengers to the king of the sons of Ammon, saying, "What is there between you and me that you have come against me to fight me in my land?" 13 And the king of the sons of Ammon said to the messengers of Iepthae, "Because Israel took away my land in their journey up out of Egypt, from Arnon up to Iabok and up to the Jordan, and now restore them in peace." 14 And the messengers returned to Iepthae, and Iepthae sent messengers to the king of the sons of Ammon, 15 saying: "This is what Iepthae says: Israel did not take away the land of Moab or the land of the sons of Ammon 16 in their journey up out of Egypt; rather, Israel went in the wilderness to the Red Sea and came to Kades. 17 And Israel sent out messengers to the king of Edom, saying, 'I will pass through your land,' and the king of Edom did not listen. And indeed he sent to the king of Moab, but he did not consent. And Israel resided at Kades. 18 And he journeyed through in the wilderness and went around the land of Edom and the land of Moab and arrived at sunrise^a of the land of Moab, and they camped on the other side of Arnon. And they did not enter the territory of Moab, for Arnon was the boundary of Moab. 19 And Israel sent messengers to Seon, king of Hesebon, the Amorrite, and Israel said to him, 'I will pass through your land to my place.' 20 And Seon did not want Israel to cross his boundaries, and Seon gathered all his people together and encamped at Iassa and fought with Israel. 21 And the Lord, the God of Israel, gave Seon and all his people in the hand of Israel, and he struck them down, and Israel inherited all the land of the Amorrite who inhabited the land. 22 And he inherited all the territory of the Amorrite from Arnon and up to the Iabbok and from the wilderness and up to the Jordan. 23 And now the Lord, the God of Israel, has removed the Amorrite from before his people Israel. And shall you inherit them for yourself? 24 Should it not be that whatever your god Chamos has assigned you as an inheritance, that you will inherit? And everything that the Lord our God has assigned as an inheritance from before us, that we will inherit. 25 And now, are you any better than Balak son of Sepphor, king of Moab? Did he fight in a battle with Israel, or going to war, did he go to war with them? 26 In the house of Israel in Hesebon and in its daughters and in Iazer and in its daughters and in all the cities that are along the Jordan, for three hundred years, why is it they did not recover them within that time? 27 And as for me, I have not sinned against you, and you are the one who does evil against me, to make war against me. May the Lord, who is judging, judge today between the sons of Israel and between the sons of Ammon." 28 And the king of the sons of Ammon elders of Galaad, and the people appointed him over them for a head and for a chief, and Iepthae spoke all his words before the Lord at Massepha.

12 And Iepthae sent messengers to the king of the sons of Ammon, saying, "What is there between you and me that you came against me to deploy in my land?" 13 And the king of the sons of Ammon said to the messengers of Iepthae, "Because Israel took away my land when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon and up to Iabok and up to the Jordan, and now restore them in peace, and I will go." 14 And Iepthae still added and sent messengers to the king of the sons of Ammon 15 and said to him: "Thus says Iepthae: Israel did not take away the land of Moab or the land of the sons of Ammon, 16 for when they came up out of Egypt Israel went in the wilderness to the Sea of Siph and came to Kades. 17 And Israel sent messengers to the king of Edom, saying, 'I will indeed pass through in your land.' And the king of Edom did not listen. And he sent to the king of Moab, and he did not consent. And shall you inherit them? 24 Should it not be that whatever your god Chamos will let you inherit, that you will inherit? And all those that the Lord our God has removed from before us, them we will inherit. 25 And now, are you in any good thing better, beyond Balak son of Sepphor, king of Moab? Did he, fighting, fight with Israel, or going to war, did he go to war with him 26 while he dwelt in Hesebon and in its territories and in the land of Aroer and in its territories and in all the cities that are along the Jordan, for three hundred years, and why did you not recover them within that time? 27 And now it is me. I have not sinned against you, and you are the one who does evil against me, to deploy against me. May the Lord judge, judging today between the sons of Israel and between the sons of Ammon." 28 And the king of the sons of

did not pay heed, and he did not pay heed to the words of Iepthae that he sent him.

29 And a spirit of the Lord came upon Iepthae, and he passed through the land of Galaad and Manasses. And he passed through the vantage point of Galaad, and from the vantage point of Galaad to the other side of the sons of Ammon. ³⁰And Iepthae vowed a vow to the Lord and said, "If with a giving over, you will give over to me the sons of Ammon in my hand, ³¹it shall also be that whoever comes out of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the sons of Ammon, shall also be the Lord's, and I will offer him up as a whole burnt offering." ³²And Iepthae crossed over to the sons of Ammon to fight against them, and the Lord gave them up in his hand. ³³And he struck them down from Aroer and until one comes to Semoith, twenty cities, as far as Abel-of-the-vineyards, a very great blow. And the sons of Ammon were humbled from before the sons of Israel.

34 And Iepthae came to Massepha, to his home, and see, his daughter was coming out to meet him with timbrels and with dancing. And she was his beloved only child, and he had no son or daughter except her. ³⁵And it came about, when he saw her that he tore his clothes and said, "Alas, my daughter! You have got in my way; you have become for a thorn in my eyes. But I opened my mouth about you to the Lord, and I cannot turn away." ³⁶And she said to him, "My father, if against me you have opened your mouth to the Lord, do to me as it came out of your mouth, now that the Lord has exacted vengeance for you from your enemies, from the sons of Ammon." ³⁷And she said to her father, "Also, do this word for me: Grant me two months, and I will go and descend on the mountains and bewail my virginity, both I and my companions." ³⁸And he said, "Go," and sent her away for two months. And she went, she and her companions, and she bewailed her virginity on the mountains. ³⁹And it came about after the end of two months that she returned to her father, and Iepthae fulfilled his vow that he had vowed. And she had never known a man. And it became for an ordinance in Israel: ⁴⁰from ^adays to ^adays^a the daughters of Israel would go together to lament the daughter of Iepthae the Galaadite, four days in the year.

12 And the sons of Ephraim gathered together, and they came to Sephina and said to Iepthae, "Why is it that you went to fight against the sons of Ammon and did not call us to go with you? Ammon did not listen to the words of Iepthae that he sent him.

29 And a spirit of the Lord came upon Iepthae, and he passed by Galaad and Manasses. And he passed by the vantage point of Galaad to the other side of the sons of Ammon. ³⁰And Iepthae vowed a vow to the Lord and said, "If giving, you will give the sons of Ammon in my hand, ³¹it shall also be that he who comes out, whoever comes from the door of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the sons of Ammon, shall also be the Lord's; I will offer him up as a whole burnt offering." ³²And Iepthae went on to the sons of Ammon to deploy against them, and the Lord gave them up in his hand. ³³And he struck them down from Aroer until coming as far as Arnon, twenty cities in number, and up to Ebelcharmin, a very great blow. And the sons of Ammon were put to shame from before the sons of Israel.

34 And Iepthae came to Massepha, to his home, and see, his daughter was coming out to meet him with timbrels and with dancing. And she was an only child; he had no other son or daughter. ³⁵And it came about, as he himself saw her that he tore his clothes and said, "Ah ah, my daughter! With confusion you have confused me, and it is you who were in my confusion. And it is me. Against you I opened my mouth to the Lord, and I cannot turn back." ³⁶But she said to him, "Father, you have opened your mouth to the Lord; do to me as it came out of your mouth when the Lord exacted vengeance for you from your enemies, from the sons of Ammon." ³⁷And she it was who said to her father, "Let my father indeed do this matter: Grant me two months, and I will go and descend on the mountains and bewail my virginity. It is me and my companions." ³⁸And he said, "Go," and sent her away for two months. And she went, she and her companions, and she bewailed her virginity on the mountains. ³⁹And it came about at the end of the two months that she returned to her father, and he carried out against her his vow that he had vowed. And she had never known a man. And it became for an ordinance in Israel: ⁴⁰from ^adays to ^adays^a the daughters of Israel would go to lament the daughter of Iepthae of Galaad, for four days in the year.

12 And a man of Ephraim called out, and they passed by to the north^b and said to Iepthae, "Why did you pass by to deploy against the sons of Ammon and did not call us to go with you? We will burn your house with fire over you!" ²And Iepthae said to them, "I was a fighting man, I and my people and the sons of Ammon, greatly. And I called to you, and you did not deliver me from their hand. ³And I saw that you were not a savior, and I took my life in my hand and passed by against the sons of Ammon, and the Lord gave the Lord gave them up in my hand. And why have you come up to me this day, to fight against me?"⁴And Iepthae gathered all the men of Galaad and began to fight Ephraim, and the men of Galaad struck down Ephraim, because they said, "You are the fugitives from Ephraim, O Galaad in the midst of Ephraim and in the midst of Manasses!"⁵And the men of Galaad quickly seized the fords of the Jordan of Ephraim. And it came about that the fugitives of Ephraim said, "Let us pass over," and the men of Galaad said to them, "Are you not from Ephraim?" And they said, "We are not."⁶And they said to them, "Then say: Password," and they did not keep straight so as to say it like that. And they seized them and slew them at the fords of the Jordan. And forty-two thousand out of Ephraim fell at that time.

7 And Iepthae judged Israel six years. And Iepthae the Galaadite died and was buried in his city, Galaad.

8 After him Esebon of Baithleem judged Israel.⁹And there were born to him thirty sons and thirty daughters, who were sent out outside, and he brought in thirty women from outside for his sons. And he judged Israel seven years.¹⁰And Esebon died and was buried at Bethleem.

11 And after him Ailon the Zaboulonite judged Israel, and he judged Israel ten years.¹²And Ailon the Zaboulonite died at Ailim, and they buried him in the land of Zaboulon.

13 And after him Labdon son of Sellem the Phraathonite judged Israel.¹⁴And there were born to him forty sons and thirty sons of his sons, mounted on seventy colts, and he judged Israel eight years.¹⁵And Labdon son of Sellem the Phraathonite died and was buried at Phraathon in the land of Ephraim, in the hill country of Lanak.

13 And the sons of Israel added to do what was evil against the Lord, and the Lord gave them up in the hand of allophytes forty years.

2 And there was a man of Saraa, of the tribe of Dan, and his name was Manoe. And his wife was barren and was not bearing.³And an angel of the Lord appeared to the woman and said to her, "See now! You are barren and have not borne. And you shall become pregnant and bear a son.⁴And now, be careful, and do not drink wine and sikera^a, and do not eat anything unclean,⁵for see, you shall become pregnant and bear a son. And iron shall not come upon his head, for the boy shall be sanctified, a nazirite to God from the womb. And he it is who shall begin to deliver Israel from the hand of allophytes."⁶And the woman came and said to her husband, saying, "A man of God came to me, and the seeing of him was like the seeing of an angel of God, most remarkable, and I asked where he came from, and he did not tell me his name.⁷And he said to me, 'See, you shall become pregnant and bear a son. them in my hand. And for what have you come up against me in this day, to deploy against me?"⁴And Iepthae rallied all the men of Galaad and did battle with Ephraim, and the men of Galaad struck down Ephraim, because they said, "You are the refugees of Ephraim, O Galaad in the midst of Ephraim and in the midst of Manasses!"⁵And Galaad quickly seized the fords of the Jordan of Ephraim. And the refugees of Ephraim said to them, "Let us cross over," and the men of Galaad said to them, "Are you not an Ephrathite?" And he said, "No."⁶And they said to him, "Then say Ear-of-Corn," and he did not keep straight so as to say it like that. And they seized him and slaughtered him at the fords of the Jordan. And forty-two thousand from Ephraim fell at that time.

7 And Iepthae judged Israel sixty years. And Iepthae the Galaadite died and was buried in his city, in Galaad.

8 And after him Abaisan from Baithleem judged Israel.⁹And he had thirty sons and thirty daughters, whom he sent out outside, and he brought in thirty daughters from outside for his sons. And he judged Israel seven years.¹⁰And Abaisan died and was buried at Baithleem.

11 And after him Ailom the Zaboulonite judged Israel ten years.¹²And Ailom the Zaboulonite died and was buried at Ailom in the land of Zaboulon.

13 And after him Abdon son of Hellel the Pharathonite judged Israel.¹⁴And he had forty sons and thirty sons of sons, who rode on seventy colts, and he judged Israel eight years.¹⁵And Abdon son of Hellel the Pharathonite died and was buried at Pharathom in the land of Ephraim, in the hill country of Amalek.

13 And the sons of Israel added to do what was evil before the Lord, and the Lord gave them up in the hand of Phylistiim forty years.

2 And there was one man from Saraa, from a township of a clan of Dani, and his name was Manoe. And he had a barren wife, and she did not bear.³And an angel of the Lord appeared to the woman and said to her, "See, you are barren and have not borne. And you shall conceive a son.⁴So then do be careful, and do not drink wine and strong drink, and do not eat anything unclean,⁵for see, you are pregnant and shall bear a son. And iron shall not come upon his head, for the boy shall be a nazir of God from the belly. And he it is who shall begin to deliver Israel from the hand of Phylistiim."⁶And the woman went inside and said to her husband, saying, "A man of God came to me, and his appearance was like the appearance of an angel of God, most awe-inspiring, and I did not ask him where he came from, and he did not tell me his name.⁷And he said to me, 'See, you are pregnant and shall bear a son. 8 And Manoe entreated the Lord and said, “By me, Lord, do let the man of God whom you sent to us come to us and enlighten us about what we are to do for the boy who is being born.”⁹ And God heard Manoe’s voice, and the angel of God came again to the woman as she sat in the field, but her husband Manoe was not with her.¹⁰ And the woman hurried and ran off and told her husband, “See, the man who came to me the other day has appeared to me.”¹¹ And Manoe got up and went after his wife towards the man and said to him, “Are you the man who spoke to this woman?” And the angel said, “I am.”¹² And Manoe said, “Now then, when your word comes, what shall be the boy’s judgment, and what will his works be?”¹³ And the angel of the Lord said to Manoe, “Let him keep away from all the things that I spoke to the woman about.¹⁴ He shall not eat of anything that comes from the vine. And he is not to drink wine and sikera^a and he is not to eat any unclean thing. He is to observe everything that I commanded her.”

15 And Manoe said to the angel of the Lord, “Let us then constrain you, and we will prepare a kid of goats before you.”¹⁶ And the angel of the Lord said to Manoe, “If you constrain me, I will not eat of your loaves, and if you make a whole burnt offering, you shall offer it to the Lord.” (For Manoe did not know that he was an angel of the Lord.)¹⁷ And Manoe said to the angel of the Lord, “What is your name so that we may honor you when your word comes?”¹⁸ And the angel of the Lord said to him, “Why do you ask this, my name? Even by itself it is amazing.”

19 And Manoe took the kid of goats and the sacrifice and offered it on the rock to the Lord, to the Lord who works wonders, and Manoe and his wife were looking on.²⁰ And it came about, when the flame went up above the altar toward the sky, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame, and Manoe and his wife were looking on, and they fell on their face to the ground.²¹ And the angel of the Lord did not add still to appear to Manoe and to his wife. Then Manoe realized that it was an angel of the Lord.²² And Manoe said to his wife, “We shall die by death, for we have seen a god.”²³ And his wife said to him, “If the Lord had desired to kill us, he would not have accepted a whole burnt offering and a sacrifice from our hands, and he would not have enlightened us about all these things, and he would not have made them audible to us.”

8 And Manoe prayed to the Lord and said, “By me, Lord Adonaie, about the man of God whom you sent, do let him come to us again, and let him instruct us as to what we are to do for the boy who is being born.”⁹ And God listened to Manoe’s voice, and the angel of God again came to the woman, and she was sitting in a field, and her husband Manoe was not with her.¹⁰ And the woman hurried and ran and told her husband, “See, the man who came to me in a day has appeared to me.”¹¹ And Manoe got up and went after his wife and came to the man and said to him, “Are you the man who spoke to this woman?” And the angel said, “I am.”¹² And Manoe said, “Now your word will come: what is to be the boy’s decision, and what will his deeds be?”¹³ And the angel of the Lord said to Manoe, “He will keep away from all the things that I have spoken to the woman about.¹⁴ He shall not eat of anything that comes from the vine of wine. And he is not to drink wine and sikera^a, strong drink, and he is not to eat any unclean thing. He shall observe everything that I commanded her.”

15 And Manoe said to the angel of the Lord, “Let us detain you here, and let us prepare a kid of goats before you.”¹⁶ And the angel of the Lord said to Manoe, “If you detain me, I will not eat any of your loaves, and if you make a whole burnt offering, you shall offer it to the Lord.” (For Manoe did not know that he was a very angel of the Lord.)¹⁷ And Manoe said to the angel of the Lord, “What is your name? For may your word come, and we will honor you.”¹⁸ And the angel of the Lord said to him, “To what end do you ask this, my name? Even by itself it is amazing.”

19 And Manoe took the kid of goats and the sacrifice and offered it on the rock to the Lord. And he separated to act, and Manoe and his wife were watching.²⁰ And it came about, when the flame went up above the altar to the sky, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar, and Manoe and his wife were watching, and they fell on their face to the ground.²¹ And the angel of the Lord did not add still to appear to Manoe and to his wife. Then Manoe realized that he was an angel of the Lord.²² And Manoe said to his wife, “We shall die by death, for we saw a god.”²³ And his wife said to him, “If the Lord had wanted to kill us, he would not have taken a whole burnt offering and a sacrifice from our hand, and he would not have shown us all these things, and he would not have caused us to hear them when it was the right time.”

14 And Sampson went down to Thamnatha, and at Thamnatha he saw a woman of the daughters of the allophyles, and she was pleasing before him. ²And he came up and told his father and his mother and said, "I have seen a woman at Thamnatha of the daughters of the allophyles, and now, get her for me for a wife." ³And his father and his mother said to him, "Is there not a woman of your brothers' daughters and among all my people, that you will go to take a wife from the uncircumcised allophyles?" And Sampson said to his father, "Get this one for me, because she was pleasing in my sight." ⁴And his father and his mother did not know that it was from the Lord, for he himself was seeking requital from the allophyles. And at that time allophyles had dominion over the sons of Israel.

⁵ And Sampson went down, and his father and his mother, to Thamnatha. And he turned aside into a vineyard of Thamnatha, and see, a whelp of lions roaring to meet him. ⁶And a spirit of the Lord made straight for him, and he tore it apart as he would tear apart a kid of goats, and there was nothing in his hand. And he did not tell his father or mother what he had done. ⁷And they went down and talked with the woman, and she was pleasing before Sampson. ⁸And after days he returned to marry her, and he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion, and see, a swarm of bees in the mouth of the lion, and there was honey. ⁹And he took it out into his mouth and went on, going and eating. And he came to his father and to his mother, and he gave to them, and they ate. And he did not tell them that he had taken the honey from the condition^a of the lion.

¹⁰ And his father went down to the woman, and Sampson held a drinking party there for seven days, because the young men would do thus. ¹¹And it came about, when they were afraid of him, that they appointed thirty companions for him, and they were with him. ¹²And Sampson said to them, "I will set you a problem, and if you tell me the problem within the seven days of the drinking party, I will give you thirty linen garments and thirty robes." ¹³And if you cannot tell me, you shall also give me thirty linen garments and thirty robes used as outer garments." And they said to him, "Set your problem, and we will hear it." ¹⁴And he said to them,

"Out of the eater came forth food, and out of a strong one came forth something sweet."

And for three days they could not tell the problem.

And Sampson said to his father, "Get this one for me, because she is straightforward in my sight." ⁴And his father and his mother did not know that it was from the Lord, for he himself was seeking vengeance from the allophyles. And at that time the allophyles were dominant in Israel.

⁵ And Sampson went down, and his father and his mother, to Thamnatha. And he came as far as the vineyard of Thamnatha, and see, a whelp of a lion roaring to meet him. ⁶And a spirit of the Lord leapt upon him, and he crushed it as he would crush a kid, and there was nothing in his hands. And he did not tell his father or his mother what he had done. ⁷And they went down and talked with the woman, and she was made straight in Sampson's sight. ⁸And after days he returned to marry her, and he turned aside to see the carcass of the lion, and see, a gathering of bees in the mouth of the lion, and honey. ⁹And he took it out into his hands and was going on, going and eating. ¹⁰ And his father went down to the woman, and Sampson held a drinking party there for seven days, because the young men do thus. ¹¹And it came about, when they saw him, that they took thirty invitees, and they were with him. ¹²And Sampson said to them, "I am setting you a problem. "What edible thing came out of the eater, and from the strong a sweet thing?"

And for three days they could not tell the problem.

you invite us to be beggars?" ¹⁶And Sampson's wife wept before him and said to him, "You hate me, and you do not love me, for the problem which you set for the sons of my people, even to me you have not told it." And Sampson said to her, "Look, I have not told it to my father or my mother, and am I going to tell you?" ¹⁷And she wept before him during the seven days, them on which there was a party, and it came about in the seventh day that he told her, because she exasperated him. And she told the sons of her people. ¹⁸And the men of the city said to him in the seventh day before the sun went down,

"What is sweeter than honey?"

And what is stronger than a lion?"

And Sampson said to them,

"If you had not tamed my heifer, you would not have found my problem."

¹⁹And a spirit of the Lord leapt upon him, and he went down to Ascalon. And from there he struck down thirty men and took their robes and gave them to those who had told the problem. And Sampson was furiously angry, and he went back to his father's house. ²⁰And Sampson's wife lived with his bridal escort, who was his companion.

15 And it came about after days, during the days of the wheat harvest, that Sampson went to visit his wife, bringing along a kid of goats. And he said, "I will go in to my wife, into the bedroom." And her father would not allow him to go in to her. ²And her father said, "Saying I said that hating you hated her, and I gave her to your companion. See, is not her younger sister better than she? Do let her be to you in her stead." ³And Sampson said to him, "I am without blame from the allophytes this once, for the fact that I do mischief with you." ⁴And Sampson went and caught three hundred foxes and took torches, and he bound tail to tail and put one torch between the two tails, in the middle. ⁵And he set fire to the torches, and he sent the foxes off into the standing grain of the allophytes and burned up the ears of grain and what had been previously harvested, from the sheaf up to what stood and up to vineyard and olive trees. ⁶And the allophytes said, "Who has done these things?" And they said, "Sampson, the son-in-law of the Thamnathite, because he took his wife and gave her to his companion." And the allophytes came up and burned her father's house along with her and her father with fire. ⁷And Sampson said to them, "If you act thus, I will not be content unless I take my revenge from each and every one of you." ⁸And he struck them on the thigh, a great blow, and he went down and was staying by the wadi in the cave of Etam.

⁹ And the allophytes came up and encamped against Ioudas, and they were thrown back at Lechi. ¹⁰And they said to them, every man of Ioudas, "Why have you come up against us?" And the allophytes said, "To bind Sampson and to do

And Sampson said to her, "If I have not told it to my father or my mother, should I tell you?" ¹⁷And she wept before him during the seven days on which they held the party, and it came about in the seventh day that he told her, because she exasperated him. And she told the sons of her people. ¹⁸And the men of the city said to him in the seventh day before the sun rose,

"What is sweeter than honey?"

And what is stronger than a lion?"

And Sampson said to them,

"If you had not ploughed with my heifer, you would not have known my problem."

¹⁹And a spirit of the Lord leapt upon him, and he went down to Ascalon. And he struck down thirty men of them and took their clothes and gave the robes to those who had told the problem. And Sampson was furiously angry, and he went back to his father's house. ²⁰And Sampson's wife was given to one of his friends, with whom he had been friendly.

15 And it came about after days, during the days of the wheat harvest, that Sampson went to visit his wife with a kid of goats. And he said, "I will go in to my wife, into the inner chamber." And her father would not grant him to go in. ²And her father said, "Saying I said that hating you hated her, and I gave her to one of those from among your friends. Is not her younger sister better beyond her? Do let her be to you in her stead." ³And Sampson said to them, "I am without blame from the allophytes this once too, for the fact that I do evil with them." ⁴And Sampson went and caught three hundred foxes and took torches, and he turned tail to tail and put one torch between the two tails and bound it. ⁵And he put fire to the torches and he sent the foxes off among the allophytes' ears of grain, and they were burned from threshing-floor and up to standing ears of grain and up to vineyard and olive trees. ⁶And the allophytes said, "Who has done these things?" And they said, "Sampson, the groom of the Thamni, because he took his wife and gave her to one from among his friends." And the allophytes came up and burned her and her father with fire. ⁷And Sampson said to them, "If you treat her thus, because I will surely take revenge among you and finally cease." ⁸And he struck them shank upon thigh, a great blow, and he went down and sat in a hole in the rock of Etam.

⁹ And the allophytes came up and encamped in Ioudas, and they were thrown back at Leui. ¹⁰And they said, a man of Ioudas, "To what end have you come up against us?" And the allophytes said, "We have come up to bind Sampson and to

to him as he did to us." ¹¹And three thousand men of Ioudas went down to the hole in the rock of Etam, and they said to Sampson, "Do you not know that the allophytes are ruling over us? And why have you done these things to us?" And Sampson said to them, "As they did to us, so I have done to them." ¹²And they said to him, "We have come down to bind you and to give you into the hands of the allophytes." And Sampson said to them, "Swear to me not to kill me yourselves and give me up to them, lest you yourselves come against me." ¹³And they swore to him, saying, "No, but we will bind you with a binding and give you into their hands, but we will not put you to death by death." And they bound him with two new cords and led him up from the rock.

¹⁴ And he came by himself as far as Jawbone, and the allophytes shouted in triumph to meet him and ran to meet up with him, and a spirit of the Lord made straight for him, and the cords that were on his arms became like flax when it smells fire, and the bonds were loosed from his arms. ¹⁵And he found a jawbone of a donkey thrown by the wayside and stretched out his hand and took it, and with it he struck down a thousand men. ¹⁶And Sampson said,

"I have wiped them out,
wiping them out with a donkey's
jawbone, for with a donkey's jawbone
I have struck down a thousand men."

¹⁷And it came about, when he had finished speaking, that he threw the jawbone from his hand, and he called that place Jawbone's Slaying.

¹⁸ And he was very thirsty, and he called out to the Lord and said, "You have granted this great deliverance by the hand of your slave. And now, shall I die by thirst and fall in the hand of the uncircumcised?" ¹⁹And God opened the wound of the jawbone, and waters came from it. And he drank, and his spirit returned in him, and he revived. Therefore its name was called Spring-Summoned-by-Jawbone, as it remains to this day. ²⁰And he judged Israel in the days of the allophytes twenty years.

16 And Sampson went from there to Gaza, and there he saw a woman, a prostitute, and went in to her. ²And the Gazites were told, saying, "Sampson has come here." And they circled around and lay in wait for him all night by the city gate. And they kept quiet all night, saying, "Let us wait until the light, when it is early, and let us kill him." ³And Sampson lay until midnight. And about midnight he rose up and took hold of the doors of the city gate and the two posts and pulled them up, bar and all, and put them on his shoulder and carried them to the top of the mountain that faces the front of Chebron and set them down there.

And why have you done this to us?" And Sampson said to them, "As they did to me, so I have done to them." ¹²And they said to him, "We have come down to bind you so that we may give you in the hand of the allophytes." And Sampson said to them, "Swear to me, lest you yourselves gather against me." ¹³And they said to him, saying, "No, except that we will bind you with a binding and give you in their hand, and we will not put you to death by death." And they bound him with two new cords and brought him up from that rock.

¹⁴ And they came as far as Jawbone, and the allophytes shouted in triumph and ran to meet him, and a spirit of the Lord leapt upon him, and the cords that were on his arms became like flax which was burnt by fire, and his bonds melted from his hands. ¹⁵And he found a jawbone of a donkey cast aside and stretched out his hand and took it, and with it he struck down a thousand men. ¹⁶And Sampson said,

"I have wiped them out,

¹⁷And it came about, when he had ceased speaking, that he threw the jawbone from his hand, and he called that place Jawbone's Slaying.

¹⁸ And he was very thirsty and wept to the Lord and said, "You have approved this great deliverance by the hand of your slave. And now, shall I die of thirst and fall in the hand of the uncircumcised?" ¹⁹And God broke open the pit in the jawbone, and water came from it. And he drank, and his spirit returned, and he came to life. Therefore its name was called Caller's Spring, which is in Jawbone to this day. ²⁰And he judged Israel in the days of the allophytes twenty years.

16 And Sampson went to Gaza, and there he saw a woman, a prostitute, and went in to her. ²And the Gazites were told, saying, "Sampson has come here." And they circled around and lay in wait for him all night at the city gate. And they kept quiet all night, saying, "Until the dawn breaks, and let us murder him." ³And Sampson lay until midnight. And at the middle of the night he rose up and took hold of the doors of the city gate along with the two posts and pulled them up, bar and all, and put them on his shoulders and went up to the top of the mountain that faces the front of Chebron and set them down there.

phyles came up to her and said to her, "Deceive him, and see in what his great strength lies, and how we may be strong against him and bind him, so as to subdue him, and we for our part will give you, ^aa man^a, eleven hundred pieces of silver." ⁶And Dalila said to Sampson, "Tell me in what your great strength lies and by what means you may be bound so that you could be subdued." ⁷And Sampson said to her, "If they bind me with seven fresh bowstrings that have not been left abandoned, I shall both become weak and be like one of men." ⁸And the satraps of the allophytes brought her seven fresh bowstrings that had not been left abandoned, and she bound him with them. ⁹And his ambush was sitting in the storeroom, and she said to him, "Allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" And he broke the bowstrings, as a strand shaken off snaps when it smells fire. And his strength was not known.

¹⁰ And Dalila said to Sampson, "Look, you have deceived me and told me lies; now then do tell me how you may be bound." ¹¹And he said to her, "If they bind me with a binding, with seven new cords with which no work has been done, I shall both become weak and be like one of men." ¹²And Dalila took new cords for him and bound him with them, and said to him, "The allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" (And the ambush was sitting in the storeroom.) And he snapped the cords off his arms like a thread.

¹³ And Dalila said to Sampson, "Until now you have deceived me and told me lies; do tell me how you may be bound." And he said to her, "If you weave the seven plaits of my head with the warp and hammer them into the wall with the peg, I shall also become weak, like one of men." ¹⁴And Dalila lulled him to sleep, and she made the seven locks of his head the warp with the stretching out and hammered them into the wall with the pegs. And she said to him, "The allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" But he awoke from his sleep and pulled away the pegs along with the web from the wall and the warp. And his strength was not known.

¹⁵ And Dalila said to him, "How can you say, 'I love you,' and your heart is not with me? This is the third time you have deceived me and have not told me in what your great strength lies." ¹⁶And it came about, when she had overpowered him with her words for the entire night and had pestered him, that he was tired to death. ¹⁷And he told her everything from his heart and said to her, "A razor will not come upon my head, for I have been a nazirite of God from my mother's belly. And if I am shaved, my strength will leave me, and I will become weak and be as all men are."

¹⁸ And Dalila realized that he had told her everything from his heart. And she sent and called all the satraps of the allophytes, saying, "Come up this once, for he has told his whole heart to me."

And he tore apart the bowstrings, as one might tear apart a twist of flax when it smells the fire. And his strength was not known.

¹⁰ And Dalida said to Sampson, "Look, you have misled me and told me lies; now then tell me how you may be bound." ¹¹And he said to her, "If when they tie me up they bind me with seven new cords, them with which no work has been done, I shall both become weak and be like one of men." ¹²And Dalida took new cords and bound him with them, and the ambushes came out of the storeroom. And she said, "Allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" And he snapped them off his arms like a thread.

¹³ And Dalida said to Sampson, "Look, you have misled me and told me lies; do tell me how you may be bound." And he said to her, "If you weave the seven plaits of my head with the warp and hammer them into the wall with the peg, I shall also become like one of men, weak." ¹⁴And it came about when he went to sleep that Dalida took the seven plaits of his head and wove them in the warp and fixed them into the wall with the peg. And she said, "Allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" And he awoke from his sleep and lifted the peg of the warp out from the wall.

¹⁵ Then Dalida said to Sampson, "How can you say, 'I love you,' and your heart is not with me? This is the third time you have misled me and have not told me in what your great strength lies." ¹⁶And it came about, when she had worn him down with her words all the days and had hemmed him in, that he was tired to the point of dying. ¹⁷And he told her all his heart and said to her, "Iron has not come upon my head, for I have been a holy one of God from my mother's belly. If then I am shaved, my strength will leave me, and I will become weak and be like all men."

And all the satrapies of the allophytes came up to her and brought the money in their hands. ¹⁹And she lulled him to sleep between her knees, and she called a barber, and he shaved off the seven locks of his head. And he began to weaken, and his strength left him. ²⁰And Dalila said to him, "The allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" and he awoke from his sleep and said, "I will go out and do as I have always done and shake myself free." And he himself did not know that the Lord had left him. ²¹And the allophytes seized him and gouged out his eyes. And they led him down to Gaza and bound him with bronze shackles, and he was grinding grain in the prison-house. ²²And the hair of his head began to grow again after it had been shaved.

²³ And the satraps of the allophytes gathered to sacrifice a great sacrifice to their god Dagon and to rejoice. And they said, "Our god has delivered Sampson our enemy in our hand." ²⁴And the people saw him and praised their gods. And they said, "Our god has delivered our enemy in our hand, yes, the ravager of our country, who multiplied our wounded." ²⁵And it came about, when their heart was merry, that they said, "Call Sampson from the prison-house, and let him perform before us." And they called Sampson out of the prison-house and were making fun of him. And they placed him between the two pillars, ²⁶and Sampson said to the lad who held him by the hand, "Do let me rest, and make me feel the pillars, those on which the house rests, and I will lean against them." Now the boy did so. ²⁷Now the house was full of men and women, and all the satraps of the allophytes were there, and on top of the house there were about three thousand men and women, watching Sampson being made fun of.

²⁸ And Sampson called out to the Lord and said, "Lord, Lord, remember me, and do strengthen me only this once more, and I will exact one act of revenge from the allophytes in return for my two eyes." ²⁹And Sampson embraced the two middle pillars, those on which the house rested, and he leaned against them, one in his right hand and one in his left hand. ³⁰And Sampson said, "Let my soul die with the allophytes." And he leaned with strength, and the house fell on the satraps and on all the people who were in it. And the dead whom Sampson put to death at his death were more numerous, above those he had put to death during his life. ³¹And his brothers and all his father's house came down and took him and went up and buried him between Saraa and between Esthaol in the tomb of his father Manoe. And he himself judged Israel twenty years.

17 And there was a man from the hill country of Ephraim, and his name was Michaias. ²And he said to his mother, "Eleven hundred pieces of silver, those that were taken for you—and you administered an oath and spoke in my hearing—see, the silver is in my possession; I took it."

rulers of the allophytes came up to her and brought up the money in their hands. ¹⁹And Dalida lulled Sampson to sleep on her knees, and she called a man, and he shaved off the seven plaits of his head, and it began to weaken him, and his strength left him. ²⁰And Dalida said, "Allophytes are upon you, Sampson!" and he awoke from his sleep and said, "I will go out as once and once and will be shaken free." And they brought him down to Gaza and shackled him with bronze shackles, and he was grinding grain in the house of incarceration. ²²And hair on his head began to grow as he had shaved it.

²³ And the rulers of the allophytes gathered to sacrifice a great oblation to their god Dagon and to rejoice. And they said, "The god has given Sampson our enemy in our hand." ²⁴And the people saw him and sang hymns to their god: "Our god has given our enemy in our hand, the ravager of our country, and him who multiplied our wounded." ²⁵And when their heart was merry, then they said, "Call Sampson from the prison-house, and let him perform before us." So they called Sampson from the house of incarceration, and he began to perform before them. And they were beating him. And they placed him between the columns, ²⁶and Sampson said to the young man who held his hand, "Let me go, and I will feel the columns, those on which the house stands, and lean against them." ²⁷And the house was full with the men and women, and all the rulers of the allophytes were there, and on top of the house there were about seven hundred men and women, those who were watching Sampson's performances.

²⁸ And Sampson wept to the Lord and said, "Adonaie, Lord, do now remember me, and strengthen me just this once more, O God, and I will carry out this one act of requital against the allophytes for my two eyes." ²⁹And Sampson embraced the two columns of the house on which the house stood, and he leaned against them and grasped one with his right hand and one with his left hand. ³⁰And Sampson said, "Let my soul die with the allophytes." And he lifted with strength, and the house fell on the rulers and on all the people who were in it. And the dead whom Sampson put to death at his death were more than those he had put to death during his life. ³¹And his brothers and his father's house came down and took him and went up and buried him between Saraa and between Esthaol in the tomb of his father Manoe. ⁷ And there was a lad of Bethlehem, division of Ioudas, of the clan of Ioudas, himself a Leuite, and he himself lived there as a resident alien. ⁸And the man went from the city of Ioudas, from Bethlehem, to live as resident alien wherever he could find. And he came to the hill country of Ephraim as far as the house of Michaias, to make his journey. ⁹And Michaias said to him, "From where do you come?" And he replied, "I am a Leuite out of Bethlehem in Ioudas, and I am going to live as resident alien wherever I can find." ¹⁰And Michaias said to him, "Settle with me, and become for a father and for a priest to me, and I for my part will give you ten pieces of silver for days and a set of clothes and what you need to live on." And the Leuite went ¹¹and began to live as a resident alien with the man, and the lad became to him like one of his sons. ¹²And Michaias filled the Leuite's hand, and the lad became for a priest to him and was in the house of Michaias. ¹³And Michaias said, "Now I know that the Lord favors me, because the Leuite has become for a priest to me."

And they came to the hill country of Ephraim, as far as the house of Michaias, and they rested there. ³While they were near Michaias's house, they also themselves recognized the voice of the young lad, the Leuite, and they went over and said to him, "Who brought you here? And he replied, "I am a Leuite from Baithleem in Ioudas, and I am going to live as resident alien in whatever place I can find." ¹⁰And Michaias said to him, "Settle with me, and become for a father and for a priest to me, and I for my part will give you ten pieces of silver a day and an outfit of clothes and what you need to live on." 7 And the five men went on, and they came to Laisa, and they observed the people who were living in it, settled in hope, according to the decision^a of the Sidonians, resting in hope and unable to speak a word, for they were far from Sidon and had no word with Syria.⁸ And the five men came to their brothers at Saraa and Esthaol and their brothers were saying to them, “Why are you sitting down?”⁹ And they said, “Get up, and let us go up against them. For we have entered and journeyed about in the land as far as Laisa, and we saw the people who live in it in hope, according to the judgment^a of the Sidonians: and they were far away, away from Sidon, and they had no word with Syria. But get up, and let us go up against them! For we have found the land, and see, it is very good. And will you keep silent? Do not hesitate to go, to come and inherit the land.¹⁰ Whenever you enter, you will come to a trusting people, and the land is broad—for God has delivered it in your hand—a place, there where is no lack of every matter, everything on earth.”

11 And six hundred men of a clan of Dan, armed with military implements, set out from Saraa and Esthaol¹² and went up and encamped at Kariathiarim in Ioudas. On this account that place is called Dan’s Camp to this day; see, it is behind Kariathiarim.¹³ From there they passed on and came as far as the hill country of Ephraim and came as far as the house of Micha.

14 And the five men who were going to spy out the land answered and said to their brothers, “Do you know that in these buildings there are ephod, theraphin^b, a carved object^c and a cast object^c? So now consider what you will do.”¹⁵ And they turned in that direction and entered the house of the lad, the Leuite, at the home of Micha, and greeted him.¹⁶ And the six hundred men who were armed with military implements were standing like pillars by the door at the gateway, those of the sons of Dan.¹⁷ And the five men who were going to spy out the land went up. They came there and took the carved object^c, the ephod, the theraphin^b and the cast object^c. the carved object^a and the cast object^a and went into the midst of the people.

21 And they turned around and departed and positioned the whole household and his esteemed possession in front of them. ²²Now when they had gone a long distance from the home of Micha, then see, Micha and the men who belonged to the house with Micha were crying out behind the sons of Dan. ²³And the sons of Dan turned their faces around and said to Micha, "What is the matter that you cried out?" ²⁴And Micha said, "Because you took my carved object^a that I made for myself and the priest, and went away, and what have I left? And why do you say this to me, 'Why do you cry out like this?'" ²⁵And the sons of Dan said to him, "Your voice had better not be heard with us or else men who are afflicted in soul will attack you, and you will add your life and the lives of your household." ²⁶And the sons of Dan went on their way. And Micha saw that they were too strong for him, and he turned away and went back to his home.

27 And they took everything Micha had made and the priest who belonged to him and came as far as Laisa, to a people quiet and trusting, and they struck them down with the edge of the sword and burned down the city. ²⁸And there was none to deliver, because it was far from Sidonians and they had no word with people. And it was in a valley that belongs to the house of Roob. And they built the city and lived in it. ²⁹And they called the name of the city Dan, after the name of their ancestor, who was born to Israel; and the city formerly had the name Lais. ³⁰And the sons of Dan set up Micha's carved object^a for themselves, and Jonathan son of Gersom son of Moyses, he and his sons were priests for the tribe of Dan until the day of the removal from the land. ³¹And they appointed for themselves Micha's carved object^a that he had made, all the days that the house of God was at Selo.

19 And it came about in those days that there was no king in Israel. And it came about that a man, a Leuite, was living as a resident alien in the thighs of the hill country of Ephraim. And the man took to himself a wife, a concubine from Bethleem of Ioudas. ²And his concubine became angry with him, and she went away from him to her father's house at Bethleem of Ioudas and was there for days, four months. ³And her husband got up and set out after her, to speak to her heart, to reconcile her to himself and bring her back to him. And his young servant was with him, and a team of draft animals. And he came as far as her father's house, and the young woman's father saw him and was there to meet him. ⁴And his father-in-law, the young woman's father, brought him inside and sat with him three days, and they ate and drank and slept there. ⁵And it came about on the fourth day that they rose early in the morning, and he got up to 21 And they turned around and departed and placed the children and the possession and the weighty item in front of them. ²²They themselves went a long distance from the home of Michaias, and see, Michaias and the men in the houses with Michaias' house raised a shout and caught up with the sons of Dan. ²³And the sons of Dan turned their face around and said to Michaias, "What is the matter that you shouted out?" ²⁴And Michaias said, "Because you took my carved object^a that I made and the priest, and departed, and what have I left? And why do you say this to me, 'Why do you cry out?'" ²⁵And the sons of Dan said to him, "Your voice had better not be heard with us or else men among us who are bitter in soul will meet up, and they will add a life and the lives of your household." ²⁶And the sons of Dan went on their way. And Michaias saw that they were more powerful beyond him, and he turned back to his home.

27 And sons of Dan took what Michaias had made and the priest who belonged to him and came to Laisa, to a people quiet and trusting in hope, and they struck them down with the edge of the sword and burned the city with fire. ²⁸And there was none to rescue, because it was far from Sidonians and they had no word with a person. And it was in the valley of the house of Raab. And they built the city and pitched tent in it. ²⁹And they called the name of the city Dan, by the name of their ancestor Dan, who was born to Israel, and the name of the city was formerly Oulamais. ³⁰And the sons of Dan set up the carved object^a for themselves, and Ionatham son of Gersom son of Manasses, he and his sons were priests for the tribe of Dan until the day of exile from the land. ³¹And they set in place for them the carved object^a that Michaias had made, all the days that the house of God was at Selom.

to leave, and the young woman's father said to his son-in-law, "Strengthen your heart with a morsel of bread, and go after that." ⁶And both sat and ate in the same place, and they drank, and the young woman's father said to the man, "Begin, and lodge, and let your heart be glad." ⁷And the man got up to go, and his father-in-law put great pressure on him, and he lodged there again. ⁸And on the fifth day he rose early in the morning to leave, and the young woman's father said, "Strengthen your heart with bread, and campaign^a until the day declines." And both of them ate and drank. ⁹And the man got up to leave, he and his concubine and his young servant, and his father-in-law, the young woman's father, said to him, "Look now, the day has declined towards evening. Stay here today as well, and let your heart be glad, and tomorrow you shall rise early for your journey and shall depart for your dwelling."

¹⁰ And the man did not want to lodge, and he got up and departed, and they came as far as opposite Iebous (this is Ierousalem). And with him was a team of loaded draft animals, and his concubine was with him. ¹¹While they were still near Iebous (and the day was far spent), then the young servant said to his master, "Come now, and let us turn aside to this city of the Iebousite and lodge in it." ¹²And his master said to him, "I will not turn aside into a foreigner's city, which is not of the sons of Israel, and we will continue on as far as Gabaa." ¹³And he said to his young servant, "Come, and let us enter one of the places and lodge in Gabaa or in Rama." ¹⁴And they passed by and went on, for the sun sank near Gabaa, which belongs to Benjamin. ¹⁵And they turned aside there, to go in to stay in Gabaa. And they went in and sat down in the square of the city, and there was no man who would take them into the house to stay.

¹⁶ And at evening, see, an old man came in from his work, from the field. And the man was from the hill country of Ephraim, and he himself was a resident alien in Gabaa (and the men of the place were sons of Benjamin). ¹⁷And when he looked up with his eyes, he saw the man, the wayfarer in the square of the city, and the old man said, "Where are you going, and where do you come from?" ¹⁸And he said to him, "We are passing through from Bethleem of Ioudas as far as the thighs of the hill country of Ephraim. Now, I am from there, and I went as far as Bethleem of Ioudas, and I am returning to my home, and there is no man taking me into the house. ¹⁹And indeed, there is straw and fodder for our donkeys, and indeed there is bread and wine for me and for your slave-woman and for the young servant, your slaves. And the two ate. ⁹And the man got up to go, he and his concubine and his young man, and his father-in-law, the young woman's father, said to him, "Look now, the day has weakened towards evening. Lodge here, and your heart will be glad, and tomorrow you shall rise early for your journey and leave for your dwelling."

¹⁰ And the man was not pleased to lodge, and he got up and departed, and he came as far as opposite Iebous (this is Ierousalem). And with him was a team of loaded donkeys, and his concubine was with him. ¹¹And they came as far as Iebous, and the day was far advanced, and the young man said to his master, "Come now, and let us turn aside to this city of the Iebousi and lodge in it." ¹²And his master said to him, "We will not turn aside into a foreign city in which there is none from among the sons of Israel here, and we will continue on as far as Gabaa." ¹³And he said to his young man, "Come, and let us go near one of the places, and we will lodge in Gabaa or in Rama." ¹⁴And they passed by and went on, and the sun sank on them near Gabaa, which belongs to Benjamin. ¹⁵And they turned aside there, to go in to lodge in Gabaa. And they went in and sat down in the square of the city, and there was no man taking them in to a house to lodge.

¹⁶ And at evening, see, an old man was coming in from his work, from the field. And the man was from the hill country of Ephraim, and he himself was a resident alien in Gabaa (and the men of the place were sons of Benjamin). ¹⁷And the old man lifted up his eyes and saw the wayfaring man in the square of the city, and the old man said, "Where are you going, and where do you come from?" ¹⁸And he said to him, "We are passing by from Bethleem of Ioudas as far as the thighs of the hill country of Ephraim. I am from there, and I went as far as Bethleem of Ioudas, and I am going to my home, and there is no man taking me into the house. ¹⁹And indeed, there is straw and fodder for our donkeys, and there are loaves and wine for me and for your servant-woman and for the young man with your servants. There is no lack of anything." ²⁰And the old man said, "Peace be to you. Yet, everything you lack is my concern; only do not lodge in the square." ²¹And he brought him into his house and made space for the donkeys, and

22 Now when they were glad in their heart, then see, the men of the city, sons of transgressors, encircled the house and pounded on the door. And they said to the man, the master of the house, the old man, saying, "Bring out the man who came into your house so that we may know him." ²³And the man, the master of the house, went out to them and said to them, "No, no, my brothers, you must not act wickedly. After this man has come into my house, do not do this madness. ²⁴See, my virgin daughter and his concubine, I will bring them out now, and you humiliate them and do to them what is good in your eyes, and against this man do not carry out the thing of this madness." ²⁵And the men did not want to listen to him. And the man seized his concubine and led her out to them outside, and they knew her and sported with her all through the night until the early morning. And just as the dawn began to break, they sent her away. ²⁶And towards morning, the woman came and fell down by the door at the gateway to the man's house, there where her master was, until it was light.

27 And her master got up early and opened the doors of the house and went out to go on his way, and see, the woman, his concubine, lying by the door, and her hands were in the entrance. ²⁸And he said to her, "Get up, and let's go." And she did not answer him, but she had died. And he took her up onto the draft animal, and the man got up and departed for his place. ²⁹And he entered his house and took his dagger and took hold of his concubine and dismembered her into twelve pieces, limb by limb, and sent them to all the tribes of Israel. ³⁰And it came about that everyone who saw would say, "Neither has it happened nor has it appeared thus from the day of the coming up of the sons of Israel from Egypt until this day. And he commanded the men whom he sent, saying, "This is what you shall say to every man of Israel, 'Has it happened according to this thing from the day of the coming up of the sons of Israel from Egypt until this day? Do take counsel with yourselves about her, and speak out.' "

20 And all the sons of Israel came out, from Dan and up to Bersabee, and the land of Galaad, and all the congregation assembled like one man to the Lord at Massepha. ²And the region of all the people stood, all the tribes of Israel in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand men, foot-soldiers drawing a sword. ³(And the sons of Benjamin heard that the sons of Israel had gone up to the Lord at Massepha.) And the sons of Israel said, "Say where this evil took place." ⁴And the Leuite, the husband of the woman who had been murdered, answered and said, "I came to Gabaa in the territory of Ben-

22 Now they were cheering their heart, and see, men of the city, sons of lawless men, surrounded the house, pounding on the door. And they said to the man, the master of the house, the old man, saying, "Bring out the man who came into your house so that we may know him." ²³And the man, the master of the house, went out to them and said, "No, my brothers, you must not commit evil. After this man has come into my house, do not do this madness. ²⁴See, my virgin daughter and his concubine, I will bring them out, and you humiliate them and do to them what is good in your eyes, and against this man you will not carry out the thing of this madness." ²⁵And the men did not see fit to listen to him. And the man seized his concubine and led her out to them outside, and they knew her and were sporting with her all through the night until the early morning. And as the morning rose, they sent her away. ²⁶And towards dawn, the woman came and fell down at the door of the house, there where her husband was, until it was light.

And she did not answer, for she was a corpse. And he took her onto the donkey and went to his place. ²⁹And he took his sword and seized his concubine and dismembered her into twelve members and sent them to every territory of Israel. ³⁰And it came about that everyone who beheld it would say, "It has not happened, and nothing like this^a has been seen, from the day of the coming up of the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt and until this day. You yourselves take counsel in regard to her, and speak out."

20 And all the sons of Israel came out, from Dan and up to Bersabee, and the land of Galaad, and the congregation assembled like one man before the Lord at Massepha. ²And all the tribes of Israel took their stand before the Lord, in an assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand men, foot-soldiers, drawing a sword. ³(And the sons of Benjamin heard that the sons of Israel had gone up to Massepha.) 8 And all the people got up like one man, saying, "We will not go, a man into his dwelling, and we will not turn aside, a man to his house. ⁹And now this is the word that we will carry out against Gabaa: we will go up against it by lot. ¹⁰And we will take ten men for a hundred, and a hundred for a thousand, and a thousand for ten thousand, to bring provisions for the people, those who are going in to carry out against Gabaa of Benjamin according to all the madness that they have committed in Israel." ¹¹And every man of Israel gathered from their cities, coming as one man.

12 And the tribes of Israel sent out men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, "What evil is this that has happened among you? ¹³Now then, hand over the godless men in Gabaa, the sons of Belial, and we will put them to death and remove evil from Israel." And the sons of Benjamin would not listen to the voice of their brothers, the sons of Israel. ¹⁴And the sons of Benjamin came together out of their cities to Gabaa, to go out to fight with sons of Israel. ¹⁵And in that day the sons of Benjamin were reviewed, twenty-five thousand men from the cities drawing a sword, besides the inhabitants of Gabaa. They were reviewed, seven hundred men, handpicked young men, ¹⁶ambidextrous. All these were slingers, throwing a stone at a hair and not missing. ¹⁷And every man of Israel—they were reviewed, apart from the sons of Benjamin, four hundred thousand men drawing a sword. All of these were men, warriors.

18 And they arose and went up to Baithel, and the sons of Israel inquired by God and said, "Who shall go up for us as leader, to fight with Benjamin?" And the Lord said, "Ioudas shall go up as leader."

24 And the sons of Israel advanced against Benjamin in the second day. ²⁵And Benjamin went out to meet them from Gabaa in the second day and destroyed eighteen thousand men of the people upon the land; all these had drawn a sword. ²⁶And all the sons of Israel and all the people went up and came to Baithel and wept before the Lord, and they fasted in that day and offered whole burnt offerings of deliverance before the Lord. ²⁷And the sons of Israel inquired by the Lord (and the ark of the covenant of the Lord was there in those days, ²⁸and Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron stood before it in those days), saying, "Shall I yet add to go out for battle with the sons of Benjamin my brother, or shall I desist?" And the Lord said, "Go up, for tomorrow I will deliver him in your hand."

29 And the sons of Israel set ambushes against Gabaa all around. ³⁰And Israel drew up against Benjamin in the third day, and they deployed against Gabaa, as ^aonce and once^a. ³¹And the sons of Benjamin went out to meet the people, and they were drawn away out of the city, and as ^aonce and once^a they began to strike down some from the people along the roads, one of which goes up to Baithel and one goes up to Gabaa, in the fields, about thirty men in Israel. ³²And the sons of Benjamin said, "They are stumbling before us as previously." And the sons of Israel said, "Let us retreat and draw them out of the city toward the roads." ³³And every man of Israel went up from his position, and they mustered in Baalhamar, and the Israelite ambush was struggling out of its position west of Gabaa. ³⁴And there arrived in front of Gabaa ten thousand men, hand-picked out of all Israel, and the war became grievous. And they did not realize that evil had touched them.

35 And the Lord routed Benjamin in front of Israel, and the sons of Israel destroyed twenty-five thousand one hundred men among Benjamin in that day; all these were drawing a sword.

And a man of Israel gave ground to Benjamin, because they looked to the ambush that they had stationed against Gabaa. ³⁷And the ambush rushed forward, and they spread out against Gabaa, and the ambush advanced, and they struck down the whole city with the edge of the sword. ³⁸And the command for a man of Israel as regards the ambush was that they should send up a signal of the smoke of the city. ³⁹And they turned, a man of Israel, in the battle, and Benjamin had begun to strike down wounded in the man of Israel, about thirty men, for they said, "But being routed he is routed before us, just like the previous battle."

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The present English translation of Routh (the Greek spelling of Ruth) follows the Greek edition by Alfred Rahlfs, which is generally regarded as the best available for this biblical book (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]). Departures from Rahlfs' text as the basis for the English translation are rare, except where punctuation is concerned. Rahlfs' Septuagint as a whole is based principally upon three early codices, not upon all available textual evidence, but for the book of Routh Rahlfs presumably was able to draw upon his earlier work involving c. 50 manuscripts. See A. Rahlfs, Das Buch Ruth griechisch als Probe einer kritischen Handausgabe der Septuaginta (Stuttgart: Privilegierte Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1922), which was not available to me, and Studie über den griechischen Text des Buches Ruth (MSU 3, 2; Berlin: Wiedmannsche Buchhandlung, 1922), also published in Nachrichten von der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen (Philologisch-historische Klasse, 1922) 47–164.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

The book of Routh is a fairly literal translation of the Hebrew, with the Greek text often matching the Hebrew in a word-for-word fashion. At times the translator reflects distinctions in the Hebrew that seem to be of no consequence semantically, as in the consistent representation of אָמַר לִי and אָמַר אֵל (both meaning "said to") as εἶπεν plus dative (15x) and εἶπεν πρὸς (7x) respectively.

Not surprisingly, the Greek text displays a high tolerance for Hebraic modes of expression, retaining certain idioms like "uncover your ear" (4.4) and generally keeping the paratactic syntax of the Hebrew original. The latter is illustrated by the fact that ו meaning "and" (etc.) that begins most Hebrew sentences is reproduced in Greek by the word καί ("and") somewhat less than 90% of the time. Typically this is done even when the resulting Greek is awkward or unappealing stylistically.

Evidently the merits of this kind of close translation were seen to outweigh its disadvantages. By virtue of its Hebraisms, the translation had the power to evoke the original. Non-Jewish readers, no doubt, would have found it strangely worded or even obscure in places, but for the reader who shared the translator's social setting, the Hebraisms in Routh must have been valued as highly accurate renderings.

To speak of a tendency toward literal translation, however, is to tell only part of the story. In many ways the translator exhibits a degree of flexibility and freedom in the treatment of the text. Renderings as completely regular as the example of εἶπεν mentioned above are the exception rather than the rule, and the usual Greek equivalent was often rejected where clarity or other considerations came into play. An interesting example is the rendering of אֲנִי, "I," by ἐγὼ εἶμι, "I am," a feature of Kaige texts (of which Routh is one) by which אֲנִי was distinguished from its synonym אָנֹכִי. This rendering, which is generally found in Routh (in 2.10; 3.9, 12; and twice in 4.4), is replaced by ἐγὼ alone in 2.13 and 3.13, where ἐγὼ εἶμι would have resulted in difficult or ungrammatical Greek.

Often, too, a single Hebrew word is represented by a variety of Greek ones. Three different Greek words, νεῦνις, "young woman" (2.5), παῖς, "lass" (2.6), and παιδίσκη, "maidservant" (4.12), are all used to translate Hebrew נַעֲרָה when it refers to Routh, and a fourth Greek word, κοράσιον, "girl, young woman" (2.8, etc.), is used when נַעֲרָה refers to the female workers of Boos (Boaz). Throughout, the attentive reader will find that Routh, like any translation, is very much an interpretation.

Not infrequently we find that information drawn from the context is inserted into a verse in order to clarify its meaning. These insertions are mostly minor; in a typical if prosaic example from 1.15, in place of MT's "she said" the Greek specifies "Noemin said to Routh." A more substantive insertion occurs in 4.8, where the next-of-kin removes his sandal, as in the MT, "and gave it to him" (to Boos), an act that is implied by 4.7 but not stated in the Hebrew text. Minuses relative to the MT are less frequent. Often they seem to involve words that were seen as superfluous, as with "days of" in the Hebrew text of 1.1. Several may have been motivated by a sense of propriety, as in the omission of "tonight" in 1.12.

Of course many of the differences between the Hebrew text that we know today and the Greek translation might have been present in the Vorlage (the translator's Hebrew text) rather than originating in the translation. Such was evidently the case with the name of Noemin's husband, which is Elimelech in our present-day Hebrew text but is Abimelech in the Greek text (six times in the book). The difference between the two names is only one letter in the vowelless ancient Hebrew script.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF ROUTH

NETS Routh attempts to capture something of the character of the Greek translation. Like the Greek translation, the present English one is relatively literal. In attempting to reflect the Greek closely, it is a more literal rendering of the Greek than the NRSV is of the Hebrew. (For the role of the NRSV as the base text for NETS, see "TO THE READER OF NETS.") In fact, since the Greek often renders the Hebrew literally, and NETS Routh attempts to render the Greek literally, NETS frequently represents the Hebrew phraseology more closely than the NRSV does.

It follows that divergences of NETS Routh from NRSV Ruth in many cases do not indicate divergences of the Greek text from the Hebrew Masoretic Text, but rather stem from the different translation philosophies of NETS and the NRSV. Wherever possible, however, the wording of the NRSV has been retained so that it can be compared profitably with NETS. A somewhat free translation within NETS, Routh may, therefore, be the result of a desire to preserve the NRSV where possible, or it may reflect the necessity for grammatical English.

In many cases the NRSV does not translate the conjunction "and" into English, especially when it begins a sentence, or the NRSV renders it "now," "then," "so," or the like. In this matter NETS Routh is more conservative, generally translating "and." But where both Hebrew and Greek have initial "and," and the NRSV does not translate it, NETS Routh also ignores it, so as not to imply that the Hebrew and Greek differ. When the Greek uses the alternative conjunction $\delta\epsilon$, NETS tries to use a nuanced English equivalent instead of "and." In more significant matters NETS Routh tends to follow the Greek rather than retaining an NRSV translation that does not adequately represent it.

Generally the Greek words in the book of Routh are used in their ordinary meanings, but at times the linkage between a Hebrew word and its typical Greek equivalent apparently caused the Greek word (at least in "biblical Greek") to be used in a Hebraic sense. Examination of Hellenistic sources has often turned up Greek parallels to supposed Hebraisms, but a residue remains that cannot be explained as ordinary Greek. Examples in Routh include $\kappa\alpha\iota$, "and," introducing an apodosis or conclusion, $\acute{\omicron}\tau\iota$, "that" as an asseverative (perhaps explicable as ellipsis); and $\epsilon\nu$, "in," marking the recipient of a thought or emotion.

That certain Hebraisms (but not others) were tolerated seems to point to the audience's familiarity with them, due either to their use in earlier parts of the Septuagint or to their penetration into Jewish liturgical or other settings. If indeed the audience understood certain words and expressions in their Hebrew senses, rather than as ordinary Greek, one might justify a freer, more idiomatic rendering of the Greek than the present one. But in the absence of evidence (as is often the case) that these Greek expressions were so understood, and in keeping with NETS policy, I have adopted a conservative approach, translating the expressions literally except where the sense was in peril or where English grammar would not permit a literal rendering.

Here and there the reader might perceive overtones of the King James Version or other exemplars of "biblical English" ("and it shall be," "look upon [favorably]," etc.). Similarly, it seems, the first audience of Routh experienced its Hebraistic constructions as the "biblical Greek" that they had come to know from oral translations. But NETS Routh avoids "biblical English" where it might obscure the meaning. Thus in 3.3 NRSV's ill-chosen "anoint"—a word restricted to ritual contexts in contemporary English—is rejected in favor of "apply oil."

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Detailed comments on a draft of this translation by Peter J. Gentry have proven invaluable. The translation also owes much to the insightful comments of Albert Pietersma.

FREDERICK W. KNOBLOCH

1 It was when the judges were judging, and there was a famine in the land, and a man went from Baithleem in Iouda to sojourn in the countryside of Moab, he and his wife and his sons. ²The name of the man was Abimelech, and the name of his wife, Noemin, and the name of his two sons, Maalon and Chelaion, Ephrathites from Baithleem in Iouda. They went into the countryside of Moab and remained there. ³And Abimelech, the husband of Noemin, died, and she was left, she and her two sons. ⁴They took for themselves Moabite wives; the name of the one was Orpha, and the name of the second, Routh. And they lived there about ten years, ⁵and both Maalon and Chelaion also died, and the woman was left, apart from her husband and apart from her two sons.

⁶ And she set out, she and her two daughters-in-law, and they came back from the countryside of Moab, for they had heard in the countryside of Moab that the Lord had ^alooked upon^a his people, giving^b them bread. ⁷And she went out from the place, there where she had been, and her two daughters-in-law with her, and they were going on their way to return to the land of Iouda, ⁸and Noemin said to her daughters-in-law, "Go now, go back, each to her mother's house. May the Lord do mercy with you, as you have done with the dead and with me. ⁹May the Lord give to you, and may you find rest, each in the house of her husband." And she kissed them, and they lifted up their voice and wept. ¹⁰They said to her, "We are returning with you to your people." ¹¹And Noemin said, "Turn back now, my daughters! Now why are you going with me? Do I still have sons in my womb, and will they become husbands for you? ¹²Turn back now, my daughters, for I am too old for a husband to have me. For if I said, 'I have confidence that a man will marry me and I will bear sons,' ¹³you would not wait for them until they mature, would you? Or would you, on their account, refrain from getting married? Don't, my daughters, for it has been more bitter for me than for you, because the hand of the Lord has gone forth against me." ¹⁴And they lifted up their voice and wept further. Orpha kissed her mother-in-law and returned to her people, but Routh followed her.

¹⁵ And Noemin said to Routh, "See, your sister-in-law has turned back to her people and to her gods; now turn back, you too, after your sister-in-law." ¹⁶But Routh said,

"^cDo not oppose me, to make me abandon you or turn back^c from after you.
For wherever you go, I will go,
and wherever you lodge, I will lodge;
your people shall be my people, and your God my God.

¹⁷ And wherever you die, I will die—
there will I be buried.

Thus and so may the Lord do to me, and thus and so may he add—for death alone^d shall part me from you!"

¹⁸Then when Noemin saw that she was determined to go with her, she ceased speaking to her further.

¹⁹ So the two of them went on until they came to Baithleem. And the whole city was abuzz because of them, and they^e said, "Is this Noemin?"

²⁰She said to them,

"Call me no longer Noemin;
call me Bitter,
for the Sufficient One was greatly embittered against me.

²¹ I went away full,
and the Lord has brought me back empty.
Why do you call me Noemin
when the Lord has abased me and the Sufficient One has maltreated me?"

²² And Noemin returned, and Routh the Moabite, her daughter-in-law, returning from the countryside of Moab. Now they came to Baithleem at the beginning of the barley harvest.

2 And with regard to Noemin there was a man, an acquaintance of her husband, and the man was powerful, of the kin of Abimelech, and his name was Boos. ²And Routh the Moabite said to Noemin, "Let me go now to the field and gather among the ears of grain, behind anyone in whose eyes I may find favor." And she said to her, "Go, daughter." ³And she went and gleaned in the field behind the reapers. And by happenstance she happened upon the part of the field belonging to Boos, who was of the kin of Abimelech. ⁴And there, from Baithleem, came Boos! He said to the reapers, "The Lord be with you." They said to him, "The Lord bless you." ⁵And Boos said to his servant who was in charge of the reapers, "To whom does this young woman belong?" ⁶The servant who was in charge of the reapers answered and said, "She is the Moabite lass, the one who came back with Noemin from the countryside of Moab." ⁷She said, 'Let me glean now and gather among the sheaves behind the reapers.' And she came, and she stood from morning until evening. She did not rest a bit in the field."

⁸ And Boos said to Routh, "^fDid you not hear, daughter^f? Do not go to glean in another field, and you should not go from this one. Stick close to my girls here. ⁹Keep^d your eyes on the field, wherever they are reaping, and walk behind them. See, I have commanded the young men not to touch you. If you want anything to drink, go to the vessels, and drink from what the young men draw." ¹⁰And she fell upon her face and did obeisance on the ground and said to him, "Why is it that I have found favor in your eyes, that you should take notice of me? And I am a foreigner!" ¹¹And Boos answered and said to her, "All that you have done together with your mother-in-law since the death of your husband has been fully told me, and how you left your father and your mother and your native land and came to a people that you did not know yesterday or the day before. ¹²May the Lord repay you for your work, and may your recompense be full from the Lord, God of Israel, to whom you came, to put your trust under his wings!" ¹³Then she said, "May I find favor in your eyes, sir, because you have comforted me and because you have spoken to the heart of your slave, and see, I shall be like one of your maidservants."

¹⁷ And she gleaned in the field until evening and beat out what she had gleaned, and it was about an ophi^a of barley. ¹⁸She picked it up and came into the city, and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned. And taking it out, Routh gave her what she had left over after she had been satisfied. ¹⁹Her mother-in-law said to her, "Where did you glean today? And where did you work? Blessed be the man who took notice of you." And Routh told her mother-in-law where she worked and said, "The name of the man with whom I worked today is Boos." ²⁰And Noemin said to her daughter-in-law, "He is blessed by the Lord, because he has not forsaken his compassion for the living and for the dead." And Noemin said to her, "The man is near to us; he is one of our next-of-kin." ²¹And Routh said to her mother-in-law, "He even said to me, 'Stick with my servants^b until they have finished all the harvest that belongs to me.'" ²²Noemin said to Routh, her daughter-in-law, "It is good, daughter, that you go with his girls, and they^c will not confront you in another field." ²³And Routh stayed close to the girls of Boos, gleaning^d until he completed the reaping of the barley and the wheat, and she lived with her mother-in-law.

3 But Noemin her mother-in-law said to her, "Daughter, shall I not seek rest for you so that it may be well with you? ²Now, is not Boos our acquaintance, whose girls you were with? Look, he is winnowing the threshing floor of the barley^e this very night. ³Now bathe, and apply oil, and put your clothing on yourself, and go up onto the threshing floor. Do not make yourself known to the man until he has finished drinking and eating. ⁴And it shall be, when he lies down, that you shall observe the place there where he is lying, and you shall go and uncover the place at his feet and lie down, and he will tell you what you shall do." ⁵Then Routh said to her, "Everything that you say I will do."

⁶ And she went down to the threshing floor and did according to everything that her mother-in-law had commanded her. ⁷And Boos ate, and his heart was content, and he went to lie down on part of the heap of grain. Then she came stealthily and uncovered the place at his feet. ⁸Now it was at midnight, and the man was startled and troubled, and there, lying at his feet, was a woman! ⁹So he said, "Who are you?" Then she answered, "I am Routh, your slave; spread your wing^f over your bondwoman, for you are a next-of-kin." ¹⁰Boos said, "May you be blessed by the Lord God, daughter, for your last instance of compassion is better than the first, that you have not gone after young men, whether poor or rich. ¹¹And now, daughter, do not be afraid. Everything that you say I will do for you, for the whole clan of my people knows that you are a strong woman ¹²and that I am, truly, a near kinsman, yet there is even a nearer kinsman than I. ¹³Spend the night, and it shall be in the morning, if he will act as next-of-kin for you, good; let him do it. But if he is not willing to act as next-of-kin for you, the Lord lives, I myself will act as next-of-kin for you. Lie down until morning."

¹⁴ And she lay at his feet until morning but got up before a man could recognize his neighbor. And Boos said, "It must not be known that a woman came to the threshing floor." ¹⁵And he said to her, "Bring the apron that you have on." And she held it, and he measured out six measures of barley and put it upon her, and he^g went into the city. ¹⁶And Routh came in to her mother-in-law, and she said, "Who are you, daughter?" And she told her all that the man had done for her, ¹⁷and she said to her, "He gave me these six measures of barley, for he said to me, 'Do not go in empty-handed to your mother-in-law.'" ¹⁸Then she replied, "Sit, daughter, until you observe how not a word will fail^h, for certainly the man will not rest until he settles the matterⁱ today."

4 And Boos went up to the gate and sat down there, and right there, passing by, was the next-of-kin of whom Boos had spoken. And Boos said to him, "Come over; sit down here, ¹Hidden One!" And he went over and sat down. ²And Boos took ten men of the elders of the city and said, "Sit down here," and they sat down. ³And Boos said to the next-of-kin, "Concerning the portion of the field that belongs to our brother Abimelech, which has been given to Noemin, who returned from the countryside of Moab, ⁴I said, I will ^kuncover your ear^k, saying: Buy it in the presence of those sitting here and in the presence of the elders of my people. If you are acting as next-of-kin, act as next-of-kin, but if you are not acting as next-of-kin, tell me, and I shall know, for there is no one except you to act as next-of-kin, and I come after you." So he said, "I am the one; I will act as next-of-kin." ⁵And Boos said, "The day you acquire the field from the hand of Noemin and from Routh the Moabite, the wife of the deceased, it is necessary for you to acquire her also in order to raise up the name of the deceased on his inheritance." ⁶And the next-of-kin said, "I will not be able to perform the kinsman's function for myself without ruining my inheritance. Take for yourself my right of inheritance, for I will not be able to act as next-of-kin."

your wife who is coming into your house like Rachel and like Leia, who built up, both of them, the house of Israel and produced might in Ephratha, and there shall be a name in Baithleem. ¹²And, through the offspring that the Lord will give you from this maidservant, may your house be like the house of Phares whom Tamar bore to Iouda."

¹³ And Boos took Routh, and she became a wife to him. And he went in to her, and the Lord granted her conception, and she bore a son. ¹⁴And the women said to Noemin, "Blessed be the Lord, who did not bring your next-of-kin to an end this day! And may he call your name in Israel! ¹⁵He shall be to you a restorer of life and shall sustain your gray head. For your daughter-in-law, who loves you, who is better to you than seven sons, has borne him." ¹⁶And Noemin took the child and laid him in her bosom and became a nanny^b to him. ¹⁷The women of the neighborhood gave him a name, saying, "A son has been born to Noemin." They named him Obed. This was the father of Iessai, the father of Dauid.

¹⁸ And these are the generations of Phares: Phares became the father of Hesron, ¹⁹then Hesron became the father of Arran, and Arran became the father of Aminadab; ²⁰Aminadab became the father of Naasson; Naasson became the father of Salman; ²¹Salman became the father of Boos; Boos became the father of Obed; ²²Obed became the father of Iessai, and Iessai became the father of Dauid.

THE OLD GREEK TEXT OF REIGNS TO THE READER

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

Since no volume of the Göttingen Septuagint is currently available for the four books of Reigns, the translation throughout is of Alfred Rahlfs, Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graecae iuxta LXX interpretes 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935), except in the few places noted. Rahlfs did not include any diacriticals for proper nouns, so the Swete text as reproduced in the Larger Cambridge Septuagint has determined whether names beginning with a vowel or diphthong should be aspirated.

The NETS translation of the OG sections departs from the Rahlfs text in only seven places: 1 Rgn 1.4; 9.24; 13.4; 14.20, 23; 2 Rgn 3.5; 7.21. Versification follows the Rahlfs text, with the numbering of the NRSV noted in parentheses.

TRANSLATIONAL PROFILE OF THE GREEK

In 1907 Henry St. John Thackeray claimed that the Old Greek (OG) translation did not include all of Samuel and Kings.¹ To simplify his presentation, he divided the text of the four books of Reigns² using the following sigla:

- α = 1 Rgn 1–31
- ββ = 2 Rgn 1.1–11.1
- βγ = 2 Rgn 11.2–3 Rgn 2.11
- γγ = 3 Rgn 2.12–21.43³
- γδ = 3 Rgn 22 + 4 Rgn 1–25
- βδ = the combined passages βγ and γδ.

On the basis of the presence or absence of two syntactical and eight lexicographical features in the earliest and best extant Greek manuscripts for 1–4 Reigns, he claimed that the Old Greek text originally omitted the βδ portion and that the current text was the work of a later translator. The omissions in βγ include the events of the life of David from his initial encounter with Bathsheba to his death, and in γδ they extend from the time of Jehoshaphat to the Babylonian exile. Thackeray saw the omissions as prompted by concern over content, what he characterized as “The Decline and Fall of the Monarchy,” and he found ready parallels in the book of 2 Supplements (Chronicles in the MT), which similarly omits the David and Bathsheba story and extended portions of the subsequent events.

In the light of the research of Barthélemy and others, it is now generally accepted that rather than representing a new translation, βδ is the result of a later revision. Accordingly, the underlying translation has affinities with the OG of the rest of Reigns, but the revisions have distinct differences that set the sections apart from the rest of Reigns. However, those who accept that the text is a revision lack any agreed upon explanation for why only these portions were revised.

In a similar manner NETS assigned the Old Greek sections and the revised sections to two different translators, and while collaboration has been necessary at specific points, for the most part they worked independently, including the writing of the respective introductions. It is significant, then, that when the introductions were brought together in preparation for publication, each translator has characterized the overall Greek translation in similar terms relative to its relationship to the Hebrew Vorlage and the degree of faithfulness.

³ As will be noted in more detail, in section γγ the order of the OG text varies extensively from that of the standard Hebrew Bible, and the text from 2 Kgs 22.41–50 (the beginning of γγ) is included within γγ as 3 Rgns 16.28a–h.

THE OLD GREEK TRANSLATION OF REIGNS

The Translation Process

The translation work involved two major iterations and several minor ones. The first major one concentrated on the text of the NRSV. Throughout, the NRSV and NETS were placed in parallel columns, and a synoptic relationship was maintained with the two texts aligned not only by chapter and verse, but by clause, phrase, and even word. Since the NRSV was the basis of the NETS translation, as few changes as necessary were made. However, the second time through careful attention was paid to the Greek text, and all necessary changes were made to ensure that the resultant text was faithful to the OG qua Greek.

The Old Greek Text

While Thackeray gave few specifics, he believed that each of the three OG sections was the work of a different translator. At the same time, they all share common underlying characteristics. The one characteristic he chose to focus on was the frequency of historic presents where past events are described using present tense verbs “as date-registering” and “to introduce new scenes in the drama.”⁴ By his count there are 227 examples in the OG sections of Reigns (close to two-thirds of all the examples in the LXX), but only 9 in βδ, some of which he considered spurious.⁵ In 1 Reigns 17, seven occur in the first three verses: συνάγουσιν . . . συνάγονται . . . παρεμβάλλουσιν . . . συνάγονται . . . παρατάσσονται . . . ἴστανται . . . ἴσταται. In accord with standard translation methods, this construction is not represented in NETS.

In terms of the traditional criteria, the translation is literal, though generally not slavishly so in the style of Aquila, and more specifically, overall it is isomorphic. However, the insistence on representing in Greek all of the frequent, redundant nominative personal pronouns in imitation of the Hebrew Vorlage would have sounded strange to the native Greek speaker. While Greek does at times use such a pronoun for emphasis, it is clear that this is not what prompts the translator but rather the presence of the corresponding pronoun in the Hebrew. It is as if the guiding principle was: leave no element untranslated.

Because of the close adherence to the Hebrew word order, the initial impression is that this is semi-tized Greek, and it is true that at the level of idiom numerous Hebrew expressions found their way into Greek and would have sounded strange to the reader. Yet at the same time, word order aside, with few exceptions, the grammar and syntax is that of koine Greek. In contradistinction to Hebrew (and Latin), Greek has in addition to the active voice and the passive voice, the middle voice where the subject of the verb is both the doer and the receiver of the action. Some Greek verbs only occur in the middle voice, while others are regularly middle in one tense and active in another. A study of all of the middle voices in 1 Reigns⁶ established that the presence of middle voice forms was not due to Semitic interference from the Hebrew text, but rather the Greek syntax follows normal Greek usage.

While the translation in general is adequate, at times it is so literal that even though the Greek matches the Hebrew word for word, the resultant translation says something significantly different. At the word level, קֶרֶן “horn,” יָד “hand,” and בַּיִת “house” are translated respectively κέρασ, χεῖρ, and οἶκος with the same basic meanings. This is not a problem so long as the semantic fields do not move outside of their standard denotations. However, on the Hebrew side, קֶרֶן (1 Sam 2.1,10) and יָד (2 Sam 8.3) connote “strength,” “power,” and in addition, יָד connotes “a monument” (1 Sam 15.12), while בַּיִת (1 Sam 1.21) connotes “family,” “household,” none of which find any correspondence on the Greek side. In spite of this, with no regard for the context, the translator maintains the standard associations. Similarly, where the homophone בָּ “I pray” occurs, it is translated ἐν ἐμοί “in/by me” with no regard for context, as if it were the inseparable preposition בְּ with pronominal suffix.

At the level of phrase, a typical example is found at 1 Sam 9.21. The MT reads: הלוֹא בְּיָמֵי אֲנֹכִי (NRSV “I am only a Benjaminite”), for which the OG has: Οὐχὶ ἀνδρὸς υἱὸς λευιταίου ἐγὼ εἶμι “Am I not son of a leminite man?” In contrast, in the same verse, שבט בנימין (NRSV “the tribes of Benjamin”) is translated/transliterated σκῆπτρου Βενιαμιν (“scepter of Benjamin”). This atomistic approach to the text where it is translated word for word with no regard for either sense or overall meaning occurs often.

Since the two languages belong to different language groups, the syntax of each does not correspond at every point, so close correspondence of the Greek to the Hebrew at times results in infelicitous Greek. The last part of 2 Rgns 2.23 reads καὶ ἐγένετο πᾶς ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἕως τοῦ τόπου, οὗ ἔπρεσεν ἐκεῖ

⁶ B. A. Taylor, “Semitic Influence on Greek Syntax: The Greek Middle Voice,” in Grammatica intellectio Scripturae (Studi filologici di greco biblico in onore di padre Lino Cignelli, a cura di R. Pierri; Jerusalem: Franciscan Printing Press, 2006) 49–68.

Asael καὶ ἀπέθανεν, καὶ ὑψίσαστο “And it happened, each one who came to the place, there where Asael fell and died—and he stood still,” corresponding to the Hebrew word for word, down to the pleonastic ἐκεῖ “there,” but the resulting sentence is not good Greek and concomitantly not good English.

One of the features of the OG is the frequent use of transliterations, though at times in unpredictable ways, since in the same context a word can be both translated and transliterated. In 1 Reigns 5, יְהוֹשָׁפָט is first transliterated ἀμαφεθ in v. 4, and then translated βαθμός in v. 5. In all, there are 25 transliterations of common nouns in the OG sections,⁷ but with none found in section ββ. Since most of the Hebrew proper nouns have no counterparts in Greek, the translator has simply transliterated. For the most part these are consistent across all three sections, though some variation occurs, such as the dual spelling Σηλω/Σηλωμ. Where the resulting transliteration has an existing Greek counterpart, such as Ἀννα, it will sometimes decline as if it were a Greek noun. This is not always obvious in the Rahlfs text, since it does not include diacriticals for proper nouns (e.g., 1 Rgns 1.2 καὶ τῆ Ἀννα). Similarly, proper nouns with an existing Greek form, such as Αἴγυπτος (“Egypt”), are used to translate the Hebrew counterpart (in this case, מִצְרַיִם). At the same time, יְרוּשָׁלַם (“Jerusalem”) is always transliterated Ἱεροσολημ in the OG of Reigns, since it is the only form found in the Greek translations of the Hebrew Bible. It is not until the Apocrypha that the declinable form Ἱεροσόλυμα (Hierosolyma), also found in the Greek New Testament, appears.

Two transcriptions are worthy of closer attention. First is צַבְאוֹת, as in the title יְהוָה צַבְאוֹת “Lord of hosts,” found first in the Hebrew Bible at 1 Sam 1.3. In 1 Reigns, צַבְאוֹת is transliterated σαβαωθ (“sabaoth,” 1.2, 11; 15.2; 17.45; in 4.4 the OG has no counterpart in MT). In section ββ of 2 Reigns the translation is either παντοκράτωρ (“Almighty,” 5.10; 7.8, 25 [not in MT]; 19.10, 15) or δύναμις (“host,” 6.2, 18). The γγ section of 3 Reigns again has a translation, either as παντοκράτωρ (“Almighty,” 19.10, 14) or δύναμις (“host,” 17.1 [not in MT]; 18.15), but it does not have a transliteration.

The second example is the consistent translation of פְּלִשְׁתִּים “Philistine” as (ὁ/οἱ) ἀλλόφυλος/-οι “al-lyphyle(s),” first seen in the book of Judges (3.3, 31; for a total of 20x), rather than the transliteration φυλιστιμ (“Phylistim”) found already in Genesis (8x), Exodus (2x), Iesous (Joshua) (1x), Judges (6x) and Sirach (3x).

Overall, with the strong Semitic flavor so pervasive, this is non-literary Greek. For instance, the particle μέν only occurs once in the OG sections (1 Rgns 20.14), and then without a corresponding δε;⁸ and δέ is found 14 times, in stark contrast to the books of Genesis with 855 instances and Exodus with 402 occurrences. Further, with close imitation of the Hebrew parataxis being the norm, the standard Greek hypotaxis is largely eschewed. In line with the LXX text in general, neologisms are found in the OG sections, though only 4 are unique to these sections: ἐπακρόσις (1 Rgns 15.22), ἀυλάρχης (2 Rgns 8.18) ἀπελέκτης (3 Rgns 6.1a, 36, 48, 49; 10.11, 12 [2x]), κοιλοσταθμέω (3 Rgns 6.9), δικτυόομαι (3 Rgns 7.6), ὀλυρίτης (3 Rgns 19.6).

It is not uncommon in the recording of a Hebrew oath to leave the apodosis unexpressed, perhaps originally having been signaled by a hand gesture akin to drawing the fingers across one’s throat, or something similar. The resulting Greek translation is a solecism (see 1 Rgns 3.14).

In the areas of slavery and children/youth, Greek has a more extensive vocabulary than Hebrew, and while several words are interchanged as virtually synonymous, it was deemed advisable to standardize the translation equivalents to signal word changes for the NETS reader. Perhaps the most jarring is the frequent translation of עַבְד (“servant/slave”) as δούλος/δούλη (“bond) slave” (including Hanna, 1 Rgns 1.10), but the Greek is unequivocal. While πᾶς is “boy,” it is often found in the context of slavery and is there translated “servant.” As far as youth and children are concerned, the following standard equivalents have been adopted: παίδιον “boy, child,” παιδάριον “boy, lad,” τέκνον “child,” νεανίας “young man,” νεανίσκος “youth, young man.”

In line with the NRSV translation, gender inclusive language has been adopted where the Greek text supports it. However, where the OG translation uses gender specific terms such as ἀνὴρ “man,” γυνή “woman” rather than the generic ἄνθρωπος “human” (whether male or female), the NETS translation reflects this. However, there is also fluidity in the use of the terms as seen in the story of the feminite who brought news of the capture of the ark of the Lord in 1 Rgns 4. He is variously designated as ἀνὴρ (v. 12), ἄνθρωπος (vv. 13, 14), ἀνὴρ (v. 16), παιδάριον (v. 17).

In addition to the above, some words or phrases are used relatively frequently in these OG sections, significantly more frequently than elsewhere in the rest of the LXX. Of the 661 times that the preposition ἐνώπιον (“before”) occurs overall, 138 (21%) are in these sections, and 66 are found in 1 Rgns, the most of any book, LXX or Greek New Testament (the most in the latter is Revelation at 35x). In contrast it occurs only 5x in Genesis and 43x in the Pentateuch as a whole.

For the most part the stereotypical pairings are to be expected, such as Ἰσραὴλ-κιβωτός (“ark”), בָּרַךְ-εὐλογέω (“to bless”), and כְּבוֹד-δόξα (“glory”). At one level the association of מוֹעֵד (“assembly, congregation”) and μαρτύριον (“witness, testimony”) is to be expected, since it is found in earlier books, however not when the former means “appointed time,” but once the connection was made, it is used in the OG regardless of context.

This is the longest of the three OG sections, and it sets the stage. In relation to the MT, the following verses are not included: 13.1; 17.12–31, 41, 50; 18.1–5, 10–11, 17–19; 23.12. The most significant is the shorter version of events surrounding the David and Goliath story in chapters 17–18.

While the Hebrew text underlying the OG is not identical to the MT, it nevertheless is quite close, and comparison to the latter proved helpful in understanding the Greek text. The Hebrew of 1 Samuel has suffered in transmission, though this is not readily apparent simply by reading the text. Rather it is evident when compared to the OG and the Qumran Samuel manuscripts. Note the following example:

NETS 1 Rgns 14.41 And Saoul said, “O Lord God of Israel, why is it that you have not answered your slave today? If this guilt is in me or in my son Jonathan, O Lord God of Israel, give ‘clear ones,’ and if this is what you say, ‘In your people Israel,’ give, now, holiness.” And Jonathan and Saoul were indicated by the lot, and the people were cleared.

NRSV 1 Sam 14.41 Then Saul said, “O LORD God of Israel, why have you not answered your servant today? If this guilt is in me or in my son Jonathan, O LORD God of Israel, give Urim; but if this guilt is in your people Israel, give Thummim.” And Jonathan and Saul were indicated by the lot, but the people were cleared.

NIV 1 Sam 14.41 Then Saul prayed to the LORD, the God of Israel, “Give me the right answer.” And Jonathan and Saul were taken by lot, and the men were cleared.

The NRSV reflects the longer OG translation, as can be seen when compared to the NIV translation of the MT. However, the NRSV translators have done more than this. Consciously or unconsciously, they translate δὸς δῆλους “give manifestations” back into Hebrew as הַבְּה אֹרִיִּים, and then translate as “give Urim.”

2 Reigns

While the overall characteristics of the text in section ββ are the same as those found in 1 Reigns, there are nevertheless some 7 differences beyond Thackeray’s observations. Already noted is the preference for translating rather than transliterating צְבָאוֹת (“hosts”) and the absence of transliteration of common nouns, although only two of the lexemes transliterated in the other OG sections are found here: גִּדְרָא (“raid”) translated ἐξοδίας (“raid”) in 3.22 and συστρεμμάτων (“bands”) in 4.2; and אֶפֶד (“ephod”) translated στολή (“garment”) in 6.14.

Third, it is surprising to find the expression καὶ γὰρ intruding into this section at 2.6, 7. However, the manuscript evidence makes clear that these two readings are found in the earliest and best witnesses, rather than being later glosses.

Fourth, at 2.13 the expression ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό (“at the same place”) translating יְהִי¹⁰ occurs for the first of the two times in Reigns OG, the other being in 10.15 (יְהִי). Elsewhere in the OG sections the translation appearing first in Deut 12.15 (κατὰ τὸ αὐτό “according to this”) is found (1 Rgns 11.11; 30.24; 31.6; 2 Rgns 16.10 and 3 Rgns 3.18).¹¹

⁹ In 1 Rgns 30.8, 15, 23 it is transliterated as γεδδουρ.

¹⁰ Not translated in NRSV.

¹¹ In the Pentateuch and elsewhere the translation is frequently ἄμα.

Fifth, at 7.3 the verb βαδίζω translates לָלַךְ (both: “walk,” “go”). This is the only time this verb occurs in the OG of Reigns,¹² and as close as two verses later the expected πορεύομαι translates לָלַךְ .

Next, at 8.7, rather than the expected Σολωμων used everywhere else in Reigns, including the very next verse (and the rest of the LXX), the declinable form Σολομών occurs. The latter is the only form found in the NT (Matt, Luke-Acts, John).

Seventh, at 10.2 ὄν τρόπον (“just as”) translates כַּאֲשֶׁר (“as”). This is the default (but not the only) translation in the Pentateuch, Joshua and Judges. However, though כַּאֲשֶׁר occurs 20 times in 1 Reigns, ὄν τρόπον is not used. Instead a variety of other words with the same basic meaning are used (ὅς, καθὼς, ὡς, καθότι, διότι). Thus in 2 Reigns there is a measure of selectivity.

Taken individually, some of these examples might be easily dismissed, but taken together they indicate either the influence of one or more hands or a change in editorial approach.

3 Reigns

Unlike any of the other sections, γγ contains both additions not found in any extant Hebrew text and extensively rearranged text from within the section, and these Miscellanies are its most striking characteristic. Whole chapters are in different order. Sections are included more than once, some drawn from Supplements (MT Chronicles), while others have no known counterpart in the Hebrew Bible or the LXX. The sections are: 2.35a–n, 46a–l; 5.14a,b; 6.1a–d; 6.36a; 9.9a; 10.22a–c; 12.24a–z; 16.26a–h¹³; also, chapters 20 and 21 are in reverse order, and 22.41–50, from the beginning of section γδ, are included in this section at 16.26a–h. Where the source of the transposed text is known, the reference is given in parentheses. In many instances only parts of verses are included, and the material quoted might not be as extensive as would otherwise appear, since the end of known passages is not indicated within any particular “verse.”

The additions to 12.24 are the longest interpolation. They include 14.1–20, which is not found in loco and is not found in chapter 12 in MT order. Further, the additions include a duplication of the verses from the beginning of chapter 12 already included ahead of the addition. They serve to rehearse the events surrounding the death of Salomon, the reign of Roboam, and the rise of Ieroboam and concomitant revolt of Israel. However, all this had already been covered in chapters 11 and 12. The additions constitute a distinct recension and give at once evidence of an underlying Hebrew original, but an agenda different from that of the MT. To date, no a priori grounds have been established as a basis for preferring one recension over the other in toto.

Naturally this phenomenon has been the subject of discussion and debate, but there is no agreed accounting for it.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

The translation process was enhanced by various resources. The time-honored translations by Thomson and Brenton sometimes provided a starting point for a difficult verse but also proved to have been overly influenced by the Hebrew text (and possibly English translations of the same) at just such points. Tov’s Hebrew-Greek parallel text has been invaluable, initially as worksheets where all the preliminary translation work was done. The integration of Tov’s text into BibleWorks 7 facilitated preparation of this Introduction. Along the same line, the availability of a hyperlinked version of the LSJ lexicon within Logos Bible software made lexical work a pleasure. Though regrettably not complete at this time, MSL 2002 contains a wealth of important information that has guided the translation at key points.

Beyond the physical resources, my weekly adult Bible class proved invaluable. Since they knew neither Greek nor Hebrew, their focus was thereby on the NETS translation itself, and their observations helped shape English expression.

Finally, my profound thanks to Albert Pietersma. I have been privileged to work with him from the outset of the project, beginning with the NETS Translation Committee, and then throughout my translation work. His vision for the completed project provided guidance along the way and encouragement to persist. While his acumen enriched at many places, it is nowhere more evident than in the translation of 3 Reigns 7.

BERNARD A. TAYLOR

¹² It occurs 4x in the βγ section of 2 Reigns (14.8; 15.9; 18.21, 24.1). Thus the use of this verb and the occurrence of καί γε suggest a possible link to the following section and its translator.

¹³ The added letters distinguish “verses” within the subsections.

1 There was a man of Harmathaim Sipa from the hill country of Ephraim, and his name was Elkana son of Ieremeel son of Eliou son of Thoke, in Nasib Ephraim. ²And he had two wives; the name of the one was Hanna, and the name of the second Phennana. And Phennana had children, and Hanna had no child.

3 And the man used to go up from ^adays to days^a from his town, from Harmathaim, to do obeisance and to sacrifice to the Lord God Sabaoth at Selo, and there Eli and his two sons, Hophni and Phinees, were priests of the Lord. ⁴And it happened on a day and Elkana sacrificed and gave portions to his wife Phennana and to her sons^b, ⁵and to Hanna he gave one portion, because she did not have a child; however, Elkana loved Hanna more than this one, and the Lord had closed the area of her womb. ⁶Since the Lord did not give her a child according to her affliction and according to the dependency of her affliction, she was also becoming despondent because of this, that the Lord had closed the area of her womb so as not to give her a child. ⁷Thus she used to do year by year, when she would go up to the house of the Lord, and she would be despondent and would weep and not eat. ⁸And her husband Elkana said to her, "Hanna," and she said to him, "Here I am, sir." And he said to her, "How is it that you are weeping? And why do you not eat? And why does your heart smite you? Am I not good to you beyond ten children?"

9 And after they had eaten at Selo, Hanna rose and stood before the Lord, and Eli the priest was sitting on the seat beside the doorposts of the shrine of the Lord. ¹⁰And she was deeply distressed in soul and prayed to the Lord, and weeping she wept ¹¹and vowed a vow to the Lord, saying: "Adonai, Lord, Eloai, Sabaoth, if looking you will look on the humiliation of your slave and remember me and give to your slave an offspring of men, and I will give him as one devoted before you until the day of his death, and wine and strong drink he shall not drink, and no iron shall come upon his head."

12 And it happened, as she continued praying before the Lord, that Eli the priest observed her mouth, ¹³and she was speaking in her heart, and her lips kept moving, and her voice was not heard, and Eli reckoned her as drunk. ¹⁴And the servant of Eli said to her, "How long will you be drunk? Put away your wine, and go out from the presence of the Lord." ¹⁵And Hanna answered and said, "No, sir; I am a woman for whom this is a hard day; I have not drunk wine and strong drink, and I am pouring out my soul before the Lord; ¹⁶do not regard your slave as a pestilent daughter, because I have been greatly extending my mumblings until now." ¹⁷And Eli answered and said to her, "Go in peace; may the God of Israel grant you your every request which you have requested of him." ¹⁸And she said, "Your slave has found favor in your sight." And the woman went on her way and entered her quarters and ate and drank with her husband, and her countenance was sad no longer.

19 And they rose early in the morning and did obeisance to the Lord and went their way. And Elkana entered into his house at Harmathaim, and he knew his wife Hanna, and the Lord remembered her, ²⁰and she conceived. And it happened ^cat the season of days^c that she bore a son, and she called his name Samouel, and she said, "Because I have requested him of the Lord God Sabaoth."

21 And the man Elkana and all his household went up to offer in Selom the ^dsacrifice of the days^d and his vows and all the tithes of his land, ²²and Hanna did not go up with him, for she said to her husband, "Until the boy goes up if I shall wean it, and it will appear to the face of the Lord and stay there forever." ²³And her husband Elkana said to her, "Do what is good in your sight; stay until you have weaned him; only may the Lord establish that which goes out of your mouth." And the woman remained and nursed her son until she weaned him. ²⁴And she went up with him to Selom with a three-year-old bull calf and bread and an ophi^e of flour and a nebelf of wine, and she entered into the house of the Lord at Selom, and the boy was with them. ²⁵And they brought him before the Lord, and his father slaughtered the sacrifice that he used to do from ^adays to days^a to the Lord, and he brought the boy near and slaughtered the bull calf. And Hanna, the mother of the child, brought it to Eli ²⁶and said, "By me, sir! Your soul lives, I am the woman who stood before you when praying to the Lord; ²⁷for this boy I prayed, and the Lord has granted me my request that I requested of him. ²⁸And I lend him to the Lord as long as he lives, a loan to the Lord."

2 And she said,
 "My heart was made firm in the Lord;
 my horn was exalted in my god;
 my mouth was made wide against enemies;
 I was glad in your deliverance,
 2 because there is none holy like the Lord, and there is none righteous like our God;
 there is none holy besides you.
 3 "Boast not, and speak not lofty things; let not big talking come forth from your mouth,
 because the Lord is a god of knowledge, and a god who prepares his own ways.
 4 The bow of the mighty has become weak, and weak ones have girded themselves with might;
 5 full of bread they suffered loss, and the hungry have forsaken the land, because a barren one has borne seven, and she who is rich in children became weak.
 6 The Lord puts to death and brings to life;

 7 The Lord makes poor and makes rich;
 he brings low, and he raises on high.
 8 He raises up the needy from the ground and lifts the poor from the dunghill, to make them sit with the mighty of the peoples,
 even making them inherit a throne of glory.
 9 "Granting the prayer to the one who prays, he has even blessed the years of the righteous,
 because not by strength is a man mighty.
 10 The Lord will make his adversary weak;
 the Lord is holy.
 Let not the clever boast in his cleverness, and let not let the mighty boast in his might,
 and let not let the wealthy boast in his wealth,
 but let him who boasts boast in this:
 to understand and know the Lord and to execute justice and righteousness in the midst of the land.
 The Lord ascended to the heavens and thundered.
 He will judge earth's ends and gives strength to our kings and will exalt the horn of his anointed."

11 And they left him there before the Lord and departed to Harmathaim, and the lad was ministering to the face of the Lord, before Eli the priest.

12 And the sons of Eli the priest were pestilent sons not knowing the Lord,¹³ and what was due to the priest from the people, when any was sacrificing, and the priest's servant would come, while the meat boiled, and a three-pronged meat hook in his hand,¹⁴ and he thrust it into the great cauldron or into the kettle or into the pot; all that came up on the meat hook the priest would take for himself.
 Like this they would do to all Israel who came to sacrifice to the Lord at Selom.¹⁵ And before the fat was burned, the priest's servant would come and say to the man who was sacrificing, "Give meat for the priest to roast, and I will not accept from you boiled meat out of the cauldron."¹⁶ And the man who was sacrificing would say, "Let the fat be burned first as is proper, and take for yourself of all that your soul desires." And he said, "No, because you shall give it now, otherwise I will take it by force."¹⁷ And the sin of the boys before the Lord was very great, for they set at naught the offering of the Lord.

18 And Samouel was ministering before the Lord, a boy wearing an ephoud bar^a.¹⁹ And his mother made for him a small ^bdouble cloak^b and would bring it up to him from ^cdays to days^c when she would go up with her husband to offer the ^dsac-rifice of the days^d.²⁰ And Eli blessed Elkana and his wife, saying, "May the Lord repay you with offspring by this woman in return for the loan that you made to the Lord." And the man returned to his place.

21 And the Lord took note of Hanna, and she bore further, three sons and two daughters. And the boy Samouel became great before the Lord.

22 And Eli was a very old man, and he heard what his sons were doing to the sons of Israel,²³ and he said to them, "Why do you do according to this thing which I hear from the mouth of all the people of the Lord? ²⁴No, children, for the report which I hear is not good; do not behave in this way. For the reports that I hear are not good so that people are not subject to God. ²⁵If in sinning a man sins against a man, and they shall pray for him to the Lord, and if he sins against the Lord, who shall pray for him?"
 And they would not listen to the voice of their father, for the Lord willfully willed to destroy them.

26 And the boy Samouel kept going and became great and was in favor both with the Lord and with people.

27 And a man of God came to Eli and said,
 "This is what the Lord says, 'When I revealed myself, I revealed myself to your father's house when they were in Egypt, slaves to the house of Pharaoh, ²⁸and I chose the house of your father out of all the scepters of Israel, to serve me as priests and to go up on my altar and to offer incense and to bear an ephoud, and I gave to the house of your father all the things of the fire of the sons of Israel for food,²⁹ and why did you look with greedy eye at my incense and my sacrifice and honored your sons above me, to bless themselves with the first fruit of every offering of Israel before me?' ³⁰Therefore this is what the Lord the God of Israel has said: 'I said: Your family and your ancestral family shall go in and out before me forever,' but now, says the Lord: 'Far be it from me, for I will only honor those who honor me, and he who despises me shall be treated with contempt. ³¹Behold, days are coming, and I will destroy your offspring and the offspring of your father's house,³² and no elderly of yours will be in my house all the days, ³³and a man I will not destroy for you from my altar so that his eyes may fail and his soul may ebb away, but every one that remains of your house—they will fall by the sword of men. ³⁴And this is the sign for you that will come upon these two sons of yours, Hophni and Phinees; both shall die on one day. ³⁵And I will raise up for myself a faithful priest, who shall do all that is in my heart and that is in my soul, and I will build him a sure house, and he shall go about before my anointed one all the days. ³⁶And it shall be; he who is left in your house shall come to do obeisance to him for a silver obole, saying, Put me down in one of your priestly places to eat bread."

3 And the boy Samouel was ministering to the Lord before Eli the priest, and a word of the Lord was precious^f in those days; there was no distinguishing^g vision.

2 And it happened in that day that Eli was lying down in his place, and his eyes began to be heavy, and he could not see, ³and it was before the lamp of God was replenished, and Samouel was lying down in the shrine, where the ark of God was, ⁴and the Lord called, "Samouel! Samouel!" And he said, "Here I am!" ⁵and ran to Eli and said, "Here I am, for you have called me," and he said, "I have not called you; return, lie down." And he returned and lay down. ⁶And the Lord continued and called, "Samouel! Samouel!" and he went to Eli the second time and said, "Here I am, for you have called me," and he said, "I have not called you; return, lie down." ⁷And it was before Samouel knew God and a word of the Lord had been revealed to him. ⁸And the Lord continued to call Samouel for a third time, and he got up and went to Eli and said, "Here I am, for you have called me." And Eli learned that the Lord had called the boy, ⁹and he said, "Return, lie down, my child, and it shall be that if he calls you, then you shall say, 'Speak, Lord, for your slave is listening.'" And Samouel went and lay down in his place.

10 And the Lord came and stood and called him as ^aonce and ^conce^a, and Samouel said, "Speak, for your slave is listening." ¹¹And the Lord said to Samouel, "Behold, I carry out my words in Israel so that both ears of everyone that hears will tingle. ¹²On that day I will raise up against Eli all that I have spoken concerning his house; I will begin, and I will finish. ¹³And I have told him that I am about to punish^b his house forever, for the iniquities of his sons, because his sons were reviling God, and even so he would not admonish them. ¹⁴I have sworn to the house of Eli, 'If the iniquity of Eli's house shall be expiated by incense or sacrifice forever . . .'"

15 And Samouel lay there until morning, and he arose early in the morning and opened the doors of the house of the Lord, and Samouel was afraid to tell the vision to Eli. ¹⁶And Eli said to Samouel, "Samouel, my child," and he said, "Here I am." ¹⁷And he said, "What was the word that was told you? Nay, do not hide it from me; may God do thus to you and thus add, if you hide anything from me of all the words spoken to you in your ears." ¹⁸And Samouel reported all the words and hid not from him, and Eli said, "He is the Lord; he will do what is good before him."

19 And Samouel became great, and the Lord was with him, and none of his words fell to the ground. ²⁰And all Israel from Dan and as far as Bersabee knew that Samouel was faithful to the Lord as a prophet. ²¹And the Lord continued to appear at Selom, for the Lord had revealed himself to Samouel, and from one end of the land and as far as the other, Samouel was believed to be a prophet of the Lord to all Israel. And Eli was a very old man, and his sons kept advancing, and their way was evil before the Lord.

4 And it happened in those days that the allophytes mustered for war against Israel, and Israel went out to meet them for war, and they encamped at Abenezzer, and the allophytes encamped at Aphek. ²And the allophytes prepared for war against Israel, and the battle turned and a man of Israel fell before the allophytes, and four thousand men were smitten on the field in the battle. ³And the people came to the camp, and the elders of Israel said, "Why has the Lord caused us to fall today before allophytes? Let us take the ark of our God from Selom, and let it go out in our midst, and it will save us out of the hand of our enemies." ⁴And the people sent to Selom and brought from there the ark of the Lord who is seated on the cheroubim, and both sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinees, were with the ark.

5 And it happened, when the ark of the Lord came into the camp, all Israel gave a mighty shout, and the earth resounded. ⁶And the allophytes heard the shouting, and the allophytes said, "What is this great shouting in the camp of the Hebrews?" And they learned that the ark of the Lord had come into the camp. ⁷And the allophytes were afraid and said, "These are the gods that have come to them into the camp; woe to us, O Lord! Deliver us today, for nothing like this has happened yesterday or the third day. ⁸Woe to us! Who will deliver us out of the hand of these sturdy gods? These are the gods who struck Egypt with every plague, and in the wilderness. ⁹Strengthen yourselves and be men, O allophytes, lest you become subject to the Hebrews as they have been subject to us, and be men and fight them."

10 And they fought them, and a man of Israel fell, and they fled each to his covert, and there was very great distress, and there fell of Israel thirty thousand from the units. ¹¹And the ark of God was captured, and both sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinees, died.

12 And a man, a Ieminite, ran from the battle line and came to Selom on that day, and his clothes were torn, and earth was upon his head. ¹³And he arrived, and behold, Eli was sitting upon the seat by the gate watching the road, for his heart was distraught for the ark of God, and the man came into the city to report the news, and the city cried out. ¹⁴And Eli heard the sound of the cry and said, "What is the cry of this sound? And the man, hurrying, entered in and told Eli. ¹⁵And Eli was a son of ninety years, and his eyes were set^c, and he could not see, and Eli said to the men standing about him, "What is the sound of this noise?" ¹⁶And hurrying the man came to Eli and said to him, "I am the one who has come from the camp, and I have fled from the battle today." And he said, "What has happened, child?" ¹⁷And the lad answered and said, "A^d man of Israel has fled before the allophytes, and there has also been a great slaughter among the people, and both your sons are dead, and the ark of God has been captured." ¹⁸And it happened, when he mentioned the ark of God, he fell over backward from the seat near the gate, and his back was broken, and he died, for the man was old and heavy, and he had judged Israel twenty years.

19 And his daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinees, was pregnant to give birth, and she heard the news that the ark of God was captured and that her father-in-law and her husband were dead, and she crouched down and gave birth, for her labor pains came upon her. ²⁰And as she was about to die, the women attending her said to her, "Do not be afraid, for you have borne a son," and she did not answer, and her heart did not give heed. ²¹And she named the boy Woe Barchaboth, because of the ark of God and because of her father-in-law and because of her husband. ²²And they said, "The glory of Israel has been exiled, in that the ark of the Lord has been taken."

5 And the allophytes took the ark of God and brought it from Abennezer to Azotus. ²And the allophytes took the ark of the Lord and brought it into the house of Dagon and placed it beside Dagon. ³And the Azotians rose early and entered into the house of Dagon and looked and behold, Dagon fallen on his face before the ark of God. And they raised up Dagon and put him back in his place. And the hand of the Lord was heavy on the Azotians, and he plagued them and afflicted them on their seats, Azotus and its borders.

4 And it happened, when they rose early on the next morning, that, behold, Dagon fallen on his face before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and the head of Dagon and both soles of his hands cut off, each on the front parts of amaphetha, and both wrists of his hands fallen in the doorway; only the spine of Dagon was left. ⁵This is why the priests of Dagon and anyone who enters the house of Dagon do not step on the step of the house of Dagon in Azotus to this day, for when they step over, they step over.

6 And the hand of the Lord was heavy upon Azotus and brought trouble on them, and it broke out upon them into the ships, and in the midst of its territory mice grew up, and there was great confusion of death in the city. ⁷And the men of Azotus saw that it was so, and they said, "The ark of the God of Israel shall not sit with us, for his hand is harsh on us and on our god Dagon." ⁸And they sent and gathered together to them the satraps of the allophytes and said, "What should we do with the ark of the God of Israel?" And the Geththites said, "Let the ark of God come over to us," and the ark of God came over to Geththitha. ⁹And it happened, after it came over, that the hand of the Lord came on the city, a very great disturbance, and smote the men of the city from small to great and smote them on their seats, and the Geththites made for themselves seats. ¹⁰And they sent away the ark of God to Ascalon, and it happened, when the ark of God entered Ascalon, that the Ascalonites cried out, saying, "Why have you brought back to us the ark of the God of Israel to put us to death and our people?" ¹¹And they sent and gathered together the satraps of the allophytes and said, "Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it lodge in its own place, and it shall not put us and our people to death"; for there was a very heavy confusion of death in the whole city when the ark of the God of Israel entered there, ¹²and those who lived and did not die were stricken on the seats, and the cry of the city went up to heaven.

6 And the ark was in the country of the allophytes seven months, and their land broke out in mice. ²And the allophytes called for the priests and the diviners and their enchanters, saying, "What should we do with the ark of the Lord? Tell us in what we should send it to its place." ³And they said, "If you are sending away the ark of the covenant of the Lord, God of Israel, on no account send it away empty, but in giving it back give back for it something of the torment, and then you will be healed, and it will propitiate for you, lest his hand not withdraw from you." ⁴And they said, "What is that something of the torment that we should render for it?" And they said, "Five gold seats, according to the number of the satraps of the allophytes, because you and your rulers and the people have one offense, ⁵and a gold mouse a likeness of your mice that ravage the land, and you shall give glory to the Lord, that he might lighten his hand from off you and from off your gods and from off your land. ⁶And why should you make your hearts heavy, as Egypt and Pharaoh made their heart heavy? Was it not so when he mocked them, they sent them^b off, and they departed? ⁷And now take, and make a new cart, and take two cows without their young that have calved for the first time, and yoke the cows to the cart, but take the young home away from them, ⁸and you shall take the ark and place it on the cart and render for it the implements of gold for the torment, and you shall put bersechthan^c as a deposit at its side, and you shall send it off and drive it away, and it will go its way, ⁹and you shall watch, if it goes on the way to its own borders by Baithsamys, he has done us this great harm, and if not, then we shall know that his hand has not struck us, but this is a chance that has happened to us."

10 And the allophytes did so and took two cows that had calved for the first time and yoked them to the cart and kept back their young at home, ¹¹and they put the ark on the cart and the deposit as ergab^d and the gold mice. ¹²And the cows went straight on the way to the way of Baithsamys; they kept going on one path and kept toiling and did not turn aside to the right or the left, and the satraps of the allophytes kept going behind it as far as the borders of Baithsamys.

13 And the people of Baithsamys were reaping the wheat harvest in the valley, and they lifted up their eyes and saw the ark of the Lord and rejoiced to meet it. ¹⁴And the cart came into the field of Hosee which was in Baithsamys, and they set up there beside it a great stone, and they split up the wood of the cart and offered the cows as a whole burnt offering to the Lord. ¹⁵And the Leuites brought up the ark of the Lord and the deposit, the ergab^a with it, and the gold implements that were with it, and set them upon the large stone, and the men of Baithsamys offered whole burnt offerings and sacrifices in that day to the Lord. ¹⁶And the five satraps of the allophytes were watching, and they returned on that day to Ascalon.

¹⁷ And these are the gold seats which the allophytes returned to the Lord for the torment: one for Azotus, one for Gaza, one for Ascalon, one for Geth, one for Akkaron—¹⁸and the gold mice according to the number of all the cities of the allophytes, of the five satraps, from fortified city and as far as the village of the Pherезite and to the great stone on which they set down the ark of the covenant of the Lord, in the field of Hosee the Baithsamysite.

¹⁹ And the sons of Iechonias were not pleased with the men of Baithsamys, because they saw the ark of the Lord, and he smote among them seventy men and fifty thousand men. And the people mourned because the Lord had inflicted on the people a very great plague. ²⁰And the men who were from Baithsamys said, "Who shall be able to pass before this holy Lord? And to whom shall the ark of the Lord go up from us?" ²¹And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kariathiarim, saying, "The allophytes returned the ark of the Lord; come down, and take it up to yourselves."

7 And the men of Kariathiarim came and brought up the ark of the covenant of the Lord and brought it in to the house of Aminadab, which was on the hill, and they consecrated his son, Eleazar, to have charge of the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

² And it happened, from the day the ark was at Kariathiarim, that the days multiplied, and it was twenty years, and all the house of Israel looked back after the Lord.

³ And Samouel said to all the house of Israel, saying, "If you are returning to the Lord with all your heart, take away the foreign gods and the groves from among you, and prepare your hearts towards the Lord, and be subject to him alone, and he will deliver you out of the hand of allophytes." ⁴And the sons of Israel took away the^b Baalim and the groves of Astaroth and were subject to the Lord alone.

⁵ And Samouel said, "Gather all Israel at Massephath, and I will pray to the Lord for you." ⁶And they were brought together at Massephath, and they drew water and poured it out on the ground before the Lord, and they fasted in that day and said, "We have sinned before the Lord." And Samouel was judging the sons of Israel at Massephath.

rael, and the sons of Israel heard and were afraid from before the allophytes. ⁸And the sons of Israel said to Samouel, "Do not omit mention of us so as not to cry to the Lord, your God, and he will save us out of the hand of the allophytes." ⁹And Samouel took one sucking lamb and offered it with all the people as a whole burnt offering to the Lord, and Samouel cried out to the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him. ¹⁰And Samouel was offering up the whole burnt offering, and the allophytes drew near for war against Israel. And the Lord thundered with a mighty voice in that day against the allophytes, and they were thrown into confusion and fell before Israel. ¹¹And the men of Israel went out of Massephath and pursued the allophytes and struck them down as far as under Baithchor.

¹² And Samouel took one stone and set it up between Massephath and between the old city and called its name Abenezzer, Stone of the Helper, and he said, "Thus far the Lord has helped us." ¹³And the Lord humbled the allophytes, and they did not add again to enter into the territory of Israel, and the hand of the Lord was against the allophytes all the days of Samouel. ¹⁴And the towns that the allophytes took from the sons of Israel were restored, and they restored them to Israel from Ascalon to Azob, and Israel recovered the territory from the hand of the allophytes. And there was peace between Israel and between the Amorrite.

¹⁵ And Samouel was judging Israel all the days of his life, ¹⁶and he went and made the rounds year by year to Baithel and Galgala and Massephath and was judging Israel in all these consecrated places. ¹⁷But his return was to Harmathaim, for his home was there, and he was judging Israel there, and he built there an altar to the Lord.

8 And it happened, when Samouel became old, that he appointed his sons judges over Israel. ²And these are the names of his sons; the firstborn Ioel, and the name of the second, Abia, judges in Bersabee. ³And his sons did not go in his way and turned aside after completion^c and were taking bribes and perverting statutes.

⁴ And the men of Israel gathered together and came to Harmathaim to Samouel ⁵and said to him, "You are old, and your sons do not go in your way, and now appoint over us a king to judge us just like the rest of the nations." ⁶And the message was evil in the eyes of Samouel when they said, "Give us a king to judge us," and Samouel prayed to the Lord. ⁷And the Lord said to Samouel, "Listen to the voice of the people in whatever they say to you, for they have not rejected you, but they have rejected me from being king over them. ⁸According to all the deeds that they did to me from the day I brought them up out of Egypt to this day, and they forsook me and were subject to other gods, so also they are doing to you. ⁹And now listen to their voice; only, when testifying, you shall testify to them and tell them the just claim of the king who shall reign over them."

^aHeb = argaz = box ^bGk = fem pl ^cPerhaps went all out

10 And Samouel told every word of the Lord to the people who were requesting a king of him. ¹¹And he said, "This will be the just claim of the king who will reign over you: he will take your sons and put them in his chariots and for his cavalry, and those running before his chariots, ¹²and to appoint them for himself officers of thousands and officers of hundreds and to reap his harvest and to gather his vintage and to make his implements of war and the equipment of his chariots, ¹³and he will take your daughters for perfumers and for cooks and for bakers, ¹⁴and he will take your fields and your vineyards and your good olive-groves and give them to his slaves, ¹⁵and he will take one-tenth of your grain and of your vineyards and give to his eunuchs and his slaves, ¹⁶and he will take your male and female slaves and your good cattle and your donkeys and will take one tenth for his works, ¹⁷and he will take one-tenth of your flocks, and you shall be slaves to him. ¹⁸And in that day you will cry out from before your king whom you chose for yourselves, and the Lord will not hear you in those days, because you chose a king for yourselves."

19 And the people did not want to listen to Samouel and said to him, "No! But a king will be over us, ²⁰and we too will be like all the nations, and our king will judge us and will go out before us and fight our battle." ²¹And Samouel heard all the words of the people and spoke them in the ears of the Lord. ²²And the Lord said to Samouel, "Listen to their voice, and appoint for them a king." And Samouel said to the men of Israel, "Let each return to his town."

9 And there was a man of the sons of Benjamin, and his name was Kis son of Abiel son of Sared son of Bachir son of Aphek son of a leminite man, a mighty man. ²And this man had a son, and his name was Saoul, tall, a good man, and there was not among the sons of Israel better than he; above the shoulder and upward he was taller than all the land.

3 And the donkeys of Kis, Saoul's father, strayed, and Kis said to his son Saoul, "Take one of the lads with yourself, and arise, and go, and look for the donkeys." ⁴And they passed through the hill country of Ephraim and passed through the land of Selcha and did not find them, and they passed through the land of Easakem, and there was nothing, and they passed through the land of Iakim and did not find them.

5 When they came to Siph, then Saoul said to his lad who was with him, "Come, and let us turn back, lest when my father leaves the donkeys he should be anxious about us." ⁶And the lad said to him, "Behold, now a man of God is in this town, and the man is held in honor; anything, whatever he says, when it comes, it will happen, and now let us go, that he might tell us our journey on which we have set out on it." ⁷And Saoul said to his lad who was with him, "And behold, we will go, and what shall we bring the man of God? For the bread in our containers is used up, and there is nothing more that belongs to us to bring to the man of God." ⁸And the lad added to answer Saoul and said, "Behold, a quarter of a shekel of silver is found in my hand, and you will give it to the man of God, and he will tell us our way" ⁹(And formerly in Israel everyone when going to inquire of God would say this, "Come, let us go to the seer," for formerly the people used to call the prophet, "the seer.") ¹⁰And Saoul said to his lad, "The matter is good; come and let us go." And they went to the town, there where the man of God was.

11 As they were going up the ascent to the town, then they found the girls when they had come out to draw water and said to them, "Is the seer here?" ¹²And the girls answered them and said to them, "He is, behold, ahead of you! He has come because of the day to the town, because the people have a sacrifice today at Bama; ¹³as soon as you enter the town, thus you will find him in the town before he goes up to Bama to eat, for the people will not eat until he enters, because he blesses the sacrifice, and after these things the guests eat, and now go up, for because of the day you will find him." ¹⁴And they went up to the town. As they were entering into the center of the town then, behold, Samouel came to meet them to go up to Bama.

15 And one day before Saoul came to him, the Lord uncovered Samouel's ear, saying: ¹⁶"Tomorrow about this time I will send to you a man from the land of Benjamin, and you shall anoint him to be ruler over my people Israel, and he shall save my people from the hand of allophytes; for I have looked upon the humiliation of my people, because their cry has come to me." ¹⁷And Samouel saw Saoul, and the Lord answered him, "Behold, the man about whom I said to you, 'This one shall rule among my people.'" ¹⁸And Saoul approached Samouel in the center of the town and said, "Tell, now, which is the house of the seer?" ¹⁹And Samouel answered Saoul and said: "I am he; go up before me to Bama, and eat with me today, and in the morning I will send you off and will tell you all that is in your heart. ²⁰And as for your donkeys that were lost three days ago, do not set your heart on them, for they have been found, and whose is the beauty of Israel? Is it not yours and your ancestral house?" ²¹And Saoul answered and said, "Am I not son of a leminite man, the small scepter of a tribe of Israel and of the least tribe of the whole scepter of Benjamin? And why did you speak to me according to this word?"

22 And Samouel took Saoul and his lad and brought them into the lodging place and set a place for them among the first of those who had been invited—about seventy men. ²³And Samouel said to the cook, "Give me the portion that I gave you, the one I told you to put aside." ²⁴And the cook had boiled^a the thigh, and he set it before Saoul, and Samouel said to Saoul, "Behold, that which is left, set it before you, and eat, for it is set before you for a testimony in preference to the others; tear off."

And Saoul ate with Samouel in that day. ²⁵And

^ataken up = Ra

he came down from Bama into the town, and they spread a bed for Saoul on the roof, ²⁶and he fell asleep. And it happened when dawn arose that Samouel called Saoul on the roof, saying, "Get up, and I will send you on your way," and Saoul got up, and he and Samouel went out, outside.

²⁷ As they were going down to the outskirts of the town, Samouel said to Saoul, "Speak to the young man, and let him go on before us, and as for you, stand as today, and hear a message from God."

10 And Samouel took the flask of oil and poured it on his head and kissed him and said to him, "Has the Lord not anointed you ruler over his people, over Israel? And you shall reign among the people of the Lord, and you will save them from the hand of their enemies all around. And this shall be the sign to you that the Lord anointed you ruler over his heritage: ²when you depart from me today, then you will find two men, by Rachel's tomb in the territory of Beniamin, jumping greatly, and they will say to you, "The donkeys that you went to seek are found, and behold, your father has disposed of the matter of the donkeys and is worrying about you^a, saying: What shall I do about my son?" ³And you shall go on from there further and come to the oak of Thabor and find there three men going up to God at Baithel, one carrying three kids and one carrying three containers of bread and one carrying a skin of wine, ⁴and they will ask you matters of peace and give you two first fruits of bread, and you shall accept from their hand. ⁵And after these things you shall enter into the hill of God, there where is the establishment of the allophytes; there is Nasib the allophyle. And it will be as you enter there into the town, that you will meet a band of prophets coming down from Bama, and before them a nabla^b and a drum and a flute and a cinyrac, and they will be prophesying, ⁶and a spirit of the Lord will spring upon you, and you will prophesy along with them and be turned into another man. ⁷And it will be, when these signs shall come upon you, do all whatever your hand finds to do, for God is with you. ⁸And you shall go down in front of Galgala, and behold, I am coming down to you to offer a whole burnt offering and peace offerings; seven days you shall wait until I come to you and show you what you shall do."

⁹ And it happened, as he was turned with his shoulder to leave Samouel, God changed for him another heart, and all the signs came in that day. ¹⁰And he went from there to the hill, and behold, a band of prophets was opposite him, and a divine spirit sprang upon him, and he prophesied in the midst of them. ¹¹And all who knew him yesterday and the third day came and saw, and behold, he was in the midst of the prophets, and the people said each to his neighbor, "What is this that has happened to the son of Kis? Is Saoul also among the prophets?" ¹²And one of them answered and said, "And who is his father?" Therefore it became an illustration, "Is Saoul also among the prophets?" ¹³And he finished prophesying and went to the hill.

¹⁴ And his uncle said to him and to his lad, "Where did you go?" And they said, "To seek the donkeys, and we saw that they were not, and we went to Samouel." ¹⁵And the uncle said to Saoul, "Tell me now what Samouel said to you." ¹⁶And Saoul said to his uncle, "He told telling me that the donkeys had been found." But of the matter of the kingship he did not tell him.

¹⁷ And Samouel summoned all the people to the Lord at Massepha ¹⁸and said to the sons of Israel, "This is what the Lord the God of Israel said, saying, 'I brought up the sons of Israel out of Egypt and delivered you from the hand of Pharao king of Egypt and from all the kingdoms that were oppressing you, ¹⁹and today you have rejected God who is your savior from all your evils and your distresses, and you have said, "No! but you shall set a king over us," and now stand before the Lord by your scepters and by your clans.'"

²⁰ And Samouel brought all the scepters of Israel near, and the scepter of Beniamin was taken by lot, ²¹and he brought the scepter of Beniamin near in tribes, and the tribe of Mattari was taken by lot, and they brought the tribe of Mattari near by man, and Saoul son of Kis was taken by lot. And he was looking for him, and he was not to be found. ²²And Samouel inquired again by the Lord, "Did the man come here?" and the Lord said, "Behold, he is hidden among the baggage." ²³And he ran and took him from there and set him among the people, and he was elevated above all the people by his shoulder and upward. ²⁴And Samouel said to all the people, "Do you see the one whom the Lord has chosen for himself, that there is no one like him among you all?" And all the people took notice and said, "Let the king live!"

²⁵ And Samouel told the people the just claim of the king, and he wrote in a book and set it before the Lord. And Samouel sent off all the people, and they went, each to his place. ²⁶And Saoul went to his home at Gabaa, and with Saoul went sons of power whose hearts the Lord had touched. ²⁷And some pestilent sons said, "What, will this one save us?" And they despised him and brought him no presents.

11 And it happened about a month later, that Naas the Ammanite went up and encamped against Iabis-Galaad, and all the men of Iabis said to Naas the Ammanite, "Make a covenant with us, and we will be subject to you." ²And Naas the Ammanite said to them, "By this^d I will make a covenant with you, by gouging out of you every right eye, and I will put disgrace upon Israel." ³And the men of Iabis said to him, "Allow us seven days, and we will send messengers through all the territory of Israel; if there is no one to save us, we will come out to you." ⁴And the messengers came to Gabaa to Saoul and spoke the words in the ears of the people, and all the people lifted up their voice and wept.

5 And behold, Saoul was coming from the field after the early morning, and Saoul said, "Why is it that the people are weeping?" And they told him the words of the sons of Iabis. ⁶And a spirit of the Lord sprang upon Saoul when he heard these words, and his anger was greatly kindled against them. ⁷And he took two oxen and cut them in pieces and sent throughout all the territory of Israel by the hand of messengers, saying, "He who does not come out after Saoul and after Samouel, like this shall they do to his oxen!" And the dread of the Lord fell upon the people of Israel, and they cried out as one man. ⁸And he reviewed them at Abiezek in Bama, every man of Israel, six hundred thousand and the men of Ioudas, seventy thousand. ⁹And he said to the messengers who came, "This is what you shall say to the men of Iabis: 'Tomorrow, by the time the sun is hot, you shall have deliverance.'" And the messengers came to the town and told the men of Iabis, and they rejoiced. ¹⁰And the men of Iabis said to Naas the Ammanite, "Tomorrow we will come forth to you, and you shall do to us what seems good before you." ¹¹And it happened after the morrow that Saoul put the people in three companies. And at the morning watch they came into the camp and smote the sons of Ammon until the day had become hot, and there were those who survived; they were scattered, and no two among them were left together.

12 And the people said to Samouel, "Who is it that said, 'Shall Saoul reign over us?' Hand the men over and we will put them to death." ¹³And Saoul said, "No one shall die in this day, for today the Lord has wrought deliverance in Israel."

14 And Samouel said to the people, saying, "Let us go to Galgala and there renew the kingdom." ¹⁵And all the people went to Galgala, and there Samouel anointed Saoul king before the Lord in Galgala, and there he sacrificed meat offerings and peace offerings before the Lord, and Samouel and all Israel rejoiced exceedingly.

12 And Samouel said to every man of Israel, "Behold, I heard your voice in all that you said to me, and I set a king over you. ²And now, behold, the king goes about before you, and I am old, and I will sit still, and behold, my sons are with you, and behold, I have gone about before you from my youth even until this day. ³Here I am; answer against me before the Lord and before his anointed; whose calf have I taken, or whose donkey have I taken, or whom of you have I oppressed, or whom have I mistreated, or from whose hand have I taken a bribe, even a sandal? Answer against me, and I will restore it to you." ⁴And they said to Samouel, "You have not defrauded us, and you have not oppressed us, and you have not afflicted us, and you have not taken anything from the hand of anyone." ⁵And Samouel said to the people, "The Lord is witness among you, and his anointed is witness in this very day that you have not found anything in my hand." And they said, "He is witness."

6 And Samouel said to the people, saying, "The Lord who made Moyses and Aaron is witness, who brought your fathers up out of Egypt. ⁷And now stand still, and I will enter into judgment with you before the Lord, and I will declare to you all the righteousness of the Lord, which things he performed among you and among your fathers: ⁸how Iakob and his sons went into Egypt, and Egypt humiliated them, and our fathers cried to the Lord, and the Lord sent Moyses and Aaron, and he brought forth our fathers out of Egypt and settled them in this place. ⁹And they forgot the Lord their God, and he sold them into the hands of Sisara, commander-in-chief of the army of King Iabin of Hasor and into the hands of the allophytes and into the hands of the king of Moab, and they fought against them. ¹⁰And they cried to the Lord and were saying, 'We have sinned, because we forsook the Lord and were subject to the^a Baalim and the groves, and now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will be subject to you.' ¹¹And the Lord sent Ierobaal and Barak and Iepthae and Samouel and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies who were round about, and you were living securely. ¹²And you saw that Naas, king of the sons of Ammon, came against you, and you said, 'No, none but a king shall reign over us,' and the Lord our God is our king. ¹³And now, behold, the king whom you chose, and behold, the Lord has granted a king over you, ¹⁴if you fear the Lord and are subject to him and heed his voice and do not contend with the mouth of the Lord, and if both you and the king who reigns over you keep following the Lord, ¹⁵but if you should not heed the voice of the Lord and contend with the mouth of the Lord, the hand of the Lord will also be against you and against your king. ¹⁶And now stand still, and see this great thing that the Lord will do before your eyes. ¹⁷Is it not the wheat harvest today? I will call upon the Lord, and he will give sounds and rain, and know, and see that your wickedness that you have done before the Lord is great in asking a king for yourselves." ¹⁸And Samouel called upon the Lord, and the Lord gave sounds and rain in that day, and all the people greatly feared the Lord and Samouel.

19 And all the people said to Samouel, "Pray to the Lord, your God, for your slaves, and we shall not die, for we have added to all our sins an evil by asking for a king for ourselves." ²⁰And Samouel said to the people, "Do not be afraid; you have done this entire evil; yet do not turn aside from after the Lord, and be subject to the Lord with your whole heart, ²¹and do not turn aside after those things that are nothing, who do not accomplish anything and who will not deliver, for they are nothing. ²²For the Lord will not cast away his people for his great name's sake, because the Lord graciously took you to him for a people. ²³And far be it from me to sin against the Lord by ceasing to pray for you, and I will subject to the Lord and show you the good and the right way; ²⁴only fear the Lord and be subject to him in truth and with your whole heart, for you saw what things he has magnified with you, ²⁵and if you still do wickedly, you shall be handed over, both you and your king."

13 ²And Saoul chose for himself three thousand men from the men of Israel, and two thousand were with Saoul in Machemas and in the hill country of Baithel, and a thousand were with Jonathan in Gabee of Benjamin, and the rest of the people he sent home each to his covert. ³And Jonathan smote Nasib the allophyle who was in the hill, and the allophyles heard. And Saoul blew with a trumpet in all the land, saying, "The slaves have revolted!" ⁴And all Israel heard say, "Saoul has smitten Nasib the allophyle, and Israel was put to shame among the allophyles." And the people went up^a after Saoul at Galgala.

⁵ And the allophyles gathered for battle against Israel, and thirty thousand chariots and six thousand horsemen and a people like the sand that is by the sea in multitude came up against Israel, and they came up and encamped at Machemas over against Baithon, southward. ⁶And a man of Israel saw that he was in distress so that he could not proceed, and the people hid in caves and in dens and in rocks and in holes and in pits. ⁷And those who crossed over crossed the Jordan to the land of Gad and Galaad. And Saoul was still at Galgala, and all the people were confounded behind him.

⁸ And he waited seven days for the testimony as Samouel said, and Samouel did not come to Galgala, and his people slipped away from him. ⁹And Saoul said, "Bring, that I may offer a whole burnt offering and peace offerings," and he offered the whole burnt offering. ¹⁰And it happened, as he finished offering the whole burnt offering, that Samouel arrived, and Saoul went out to meet him to bless^b him. ¹¹And Samouel said, "What have you done?" And Saoul said, "Because I saw how the people slipped away from me, and you did not come as you arranged in the testimony^c of the days, and the allophyles were gathered at Machemas, ¹²and I said, 'Now the allophyles will come down to me to Galgala, and I have not entreated the face of the Lord,' and I forced myself and offered the whole burnt offering." ¹³And Samouel said to Saoul, "You have done foolishly, for you did not keep my commandment, which the Lord commanded you. As just now the Lord prepared your kingdom over Israel forever, ¹⁴also now your kingdom will not stand, and the Lord will seek for himself a person after his heart, and the Lord will command him to be ruler over his people, because you did not keep what the Lord commanded you." ¹⁵And Samouel arose and departed from Galgala on his way. And the rest of the people went up behind Saoul, to meet behind the people of war.

When they were come from Galgala to Gabaa of Benjamin, then Saoul counted the people who were present with him, about six hundred men. ¹⁶And Saoul and his son Jonathan and the people who were present with them stayed in Gabee Benjamin, and they wept, and the allophyles had encamped at Machemas. ¹⁷And there came out of the field of the allophyles a raider in three companies; the one company closely observed the way of Gophera over the land of Sogal, ¹⁸and the one company closely observed the way of Baithoron, and the one company closely observed the way of Gabee, which overlooks Gai Sabin.

¹⁹ And there was no craftsman in iron to be found in all the land of Israel, for the allophyles said, "Lest the Hebrews should make sword and spear." ²⁰And all Israel used to go down to the land of the allophyles to forge each his sickle and his tool and each his axe and his pruning hook. ²¹And the harvest was ready to reap; but the implements were three shekels for the prong^d, and for the axe and the pruning hook the plan was the same. ²²And it happened in the days of the battle of Machemas that neither sword nor spear was to be found in the hand of any of the people who were with Saoul and with Jonathan, and Saoul and his son Jonathan had them.

14 And a day came, and Jonathan son of Saoul said to the lad who carried his armor, "Come, and let us go over to Messab of the allophyles which is on the yonder side," but he did not tell his father. ²And Saoul was sitting on the top of the hill under the pomegranate tree that is at Magdon, and there were with him about six hundred men, ³and Achia son of Achitob, Iochabed's brother, son of Phinees son of Eli the priest of God in Selom, carrying an ephoud. And the people did not know that Jonathan had gone. ⁴And in the middle of the pass, where Jonathan was trying to go over to the substance^e of the allophyles, there was a rocky crag on one side and a rocky crag on the other; the name of the one was Bazes, and the name of the other, Senna; ⁵one way from the north was for one going to Machmas, and the other way from the south, for one going to Gabee.

⁶ And Jonathan said to the lad who carried his armor, "Come, let us go over to Messab of these uncircumcised, if perhaps the Lord may do something for us, for nothing can hinder the Lord from saving by many or by few." ⁷And his armor-bearer said to him, "Do all that your mind inclines to; behold, I am with you; my mind is as your mind." ⁸And Jonathan said, "Behold, we are going to cross over to the men, and we will be rolled down to them, ⁹and if this is what they say to us, 'Stand off there until we tell you,' then we will stand by ourselves and definitely not go up to them, ¹⁰and if this is what they say to us, 'Come up to us,' then we will go up, for the Lord has given them into our hands; this will be the sign for us." ¹¹And both of them entered into Messab of the allophyles, and the allophyles said, "Behold, the Hebrews are coming out of their holes where they hid there.”¹² And the men of Messab hailed Jonathan and his armor-bearer and said, “Come up to us, and we will show you something.” And Jonathan said to his armor-bearer, “Come up after me, for the Lord has given them into the hands of Israel.”¹³ And Jonathan climbed up on his hands and on his feet, and his armor-bearer with him, and they looked intently at the face of Jonathan, and he smote them, and his armor-bearer behind him was providing supplies.¹⁴ And the first slaughter that Jonathan and his armor-bearer inflicted was about twenty men, with darts and with sling stones and with pebbles of the plain.¹⁵ And there was a dread in the camp and in the field, and all the people, those in Messab and the raiders, were astounded, and they would not act, and the earth was terror-struck, and the dread was from the Lord.

16 And Saoul’s lookouts in Gabee of Benjamin saw, and behold, the camp was in commotion on this side and that.¹⁷ And Saoul said to the people that were with him, “Call the roll now and see who has gone from us,” and they called the roll, and behold, Jonathan and his armor-bearer were not to be found.¹⁸ And Saoul said to Achia, “Bring the ephoud, for he bore the ephoud in that day before Israel.”¹⁹ And it happened, while Saoul was talking to the priest, that the tumult in the camp of the allophytes increased more and more, and Saoul said to the priest, “Bring your hands together.”²⁰ And Saoul and all the people who were with him^a went up^a and came to the battle, and behold, a man’s sword was against his neighbor, a very great confusion.²¹ And the slaves who yesterday and the third day had been with the allophytes who had gone up into the camp, turned about, even they, to be with Israel who were with Saoul and Jonathan.²² And all Israel who were hiding in the hill country of Ephraim also heard that the allophytes had fled, and they joined together, even they, after them in battle.²³ And the Lord saved Israel in that day.

And the battle passed through Bamoth^b, and all the people with Saoul were about ten thousand men, and the battle was extended into every town in the hill country of Ephraim.

24 And Saoul was ignorant with great ignorance in that day, and he laid an oath on the people, saying, “Cursed be anyone who eats food before it is evening, so I will avenge my enemy,” and none of the people tasted food.²⁵ And all the land ate the midday meal. And Iaar was a wood with a beehive on the ground,²⁶ and the people came upon the beehive, and behold, they went on talking, and, behold, they did not turn their hands to their mouths, for the people feared the oath of the Lord.²⁷ And Jonathan had not heard when his father charged the people with the oath, and he extended the scepter that was in his hand and dipped the tip of it in the honeycomb and put his hand to his mouth, and his eyes recovered their sight.²⁸ And one of the people answered and said, “Ad-judging your father strictly charged the people with an oath, saying, ‘Cursed be the one who eats food today;’” and the people were faint.²⁹ And Jonathan understood and said, “My father has put away the land; see now that my eyes saw, because I tasted a little of this honey,³⁰ but if only when eating today the people had eaten of their enemies’ spoils which they had found, then now the slaughter among the allophytes would have been greater.”

31 And they struck down some of the allophytes in that day in Machemas, and the people were very faint.³² And the people turned to the spoils, and the people took flocks and herds and calves and slaughtered them on the ground, and the people were eating them with the blood.³³ And it was reported to Saoul, saying, “The people have sinned against the Lord eating with the blood.” And in Geththem Saoul said, “Roll a large stone before me here.”³⁴ And Saoul said, “Disperse yourselves among the people, and tell them to bring here each his bull calf and each his sheep, and let him slaughter on this, and do not sin against the Lord by eating with the blood,” and all of the people brought each what was in his hand and slaughtered there.³⁵ And Saoul built there an altar to the Lord; Saoul began to build this as an altar to the Lord.

36 And Saoul said, “Let us go down after the allophytes by night and despoil them until the day dawns, and let us not leave one of them.” And they said, “Do whatever seems good to you.” And the priest said, “Let us draw near to God here.”³⁷ And Saoul inquired of God, “Shall I go down after the allophytes? Will you give them into the hands of Israel?” And he did not answer him in that day.³⁸ And Saoul said, “Come here, all you leaders of Israel, and know, and see how this sin has arisen today,³⁹ for the Lord who saves Israel lives, if he should give answer against my son Jonathan, he shall die the death.” And there was no one among all the people who answered him.⁴⁰ And he said to all Israel, “You shall be for slavery, and I and my son Jonathan will be for slavery.” And the people said to Saoul, “Do what seems good to you.”⁴¹ And Saoul said, “O Lord God of Israel, why is it that you have not answered your slave today? If this guilt is in me or in my son Jonathan, O Lord God of Israel, give clear ones; and if this is what you say, ‘In your people Israel, give, now, holiness.’” And Jonathan and Saoul were indicated by the lot, and the people were cleared.⁴² And Saoul said, “Cast the lot between me and between my son Jonathan; whoever the Lord should indicate by lot, let him die.” And the people said to Saoul, “This thing is not to be.” And Saoul prevailed over the people, and they cast the lot between him and Jonathan his son, and Jonathan was taken.

43 And Saoul said to Jonathan, “Tell me what you have done.” And Jonathan told him and said, “Tasting I tasted a little honey with the tip of the scepter that was in my hand; behold, I will die.”⁴⁴ And Saoul said to him, “May God do so to me and more also, you shall die the death today.”⁴⁵And the people said to Saoul, “Shall he who achieved this great victory in Israel die today? The Lord lives; shall a hair of his head fall to the ground?—for the people of God wrought this day.” And the people prayed for Jonathan in that day, and he did not die.⁴⁶And Saoul went up from following the allophyles, and the allophyles went to their place.

47 And Saoul had received by lot office over Israel, and he was fighting against all his enemies on every side—against Moab and against the sons of Ammon and against the sons of Edom and against Baitheor and against the king of Souba and against the allophyles; wherever he turned, he was being kept safe.⁴⁸And he formed an army and struck down Amalek and delivered Israel out of the hand of those who trampled on them.

49 And the sons of Saoul were Jonathan and Iessiou and Melchisa, and the names of his two daughters: the name of the firstborn was Merob, and the name of the second, Melchol.⁵⁰And the name of his wife was Achinoom daughter of Achimaas. And the name of the commander-in-chief was Abenner son of Ner son of a kinsman of Saoul,⁵¹ and Kis was the father of Saoul, and Ner the father of Abenner was the son of Iamin son of Abiel.

52 And the fighting against the allophyles was hard all the days of Saoul, and when Saoul saw any strong man and any man a son of might, then he took them to himself.

15 And Samouel said to Saoul, “The Lord sent me to anoint you as king over Israel, and now listen to the voice of the Lord.²This is what the Lord Sabaoth said, ‘Now I will avenge what Amalek did to Israel, how he encountered him in the way as he was coming up out of Egypt.³And now go, and you shall smite Amalek and Ierim and all that he has, and you shall not keep anything of his alive, and you shall utterly destroy him and anathematize him and all that he has to destruction, and you shall not spare of him, and you shall kill from man even up to woman and from child up to infant and from calf up to sheep and from camel up to donkey.’”

4 And Saoul summoned the people, and reviewed them in Galgala, four hundred thousand in units, and Ioudas, thirty thousand in units.⁵And Saoul came to the cities of Amalek and lay in wait in the wadi.⁶And Saoul said to the Kinite, “Depart, and turn aside from among the Amalekite, lest I include you with him, and as for you, you dealt mercifully with the sons of Israel when they came up out of Egypt.” And the Kinite withdrew from among Amalek.⁷And Saoul smote Amalek, from Euilat as far as Sour, facing Egypt.⁸And he took king Agag of Amalek alive, but he killed all the people of Ierim with the edge of the sword.⁹And Saoul and all the people saved alive Agag and the best of the flocks and of the herds and of the foods and of the vineyards and of all the good things and did not wish to destroy them utterly, and every despised and worthless artifact they utterly destroyed.

10 And a word of the Lord came to Samouel, saying: ¹¹“I have been comforted, because I made Saoul king, for he has turned away from behind me and has not kept my words.” And Samouel was disheartened, and he cried out to the Lord the whole night.¹²And Samouel rose early and went to meet Israel in the morning, and it was told to Samouel, saying, “Saoul came to Carmel and raised a hand for himself, and ^athe chariot returned^a.” And he went down to Galgala to Saoul, and behold, he was offering up to the Lord as a whole burnt offering the first of the spoils that he brought from Amalek.¹³And Samouel came to Saoul, and Saoul said to him, “Blessed are you to the Lord; I have established all that the Lord spoke.”¹⁴And Samouel said, “And what is the sound of this flock in my ears and the sound of cattle that I am hearing?”¹⁵And Saoul said, “From Amalek I brought them, what the people spared, the best of the flock and of the cattle, that they might be sacrificed to the Lord, your God, and the rest I have utterly destroyed.”¹⁶And Samouel said to Saoul, “Stop, and I will tell you what the Lord spoke to me during the night.” And he said to him, “Speak.”

17 And Samouel said to Saoul, “Are you not small before him, a leader of a scepter of a tribe of Israel? And the Lord anointed you as king over Israel.¹⁸And the Lord sent you on a journey and said to you, ‘Go, and utterly destroy those who sin against me, Amalek, and you shall fight them until you consume them.’¹⁹And why did you not hearken to the voice of the Lord, but rushed to set upon the spoils and did what was evil before the Lord?”²⁰And Saoul said to Samouel, “Because I listened to the voice of the people, and I went on the journey on which the Lord sent me, and I brought Agag, king of Amalek, and I utterly destroyed Amalek,²¹ and from the spoils the people took flocks and herds, the first of the things devoted to destruction, to sacrifice before the Lord, our God, in Galgala.”²²And Samouel said,

“Are whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices as wanted to the Lord as hearkening to the voice of the Lord?
Behold, hearing is better than sacrifice and listening than the fat of rams.

²³ For divination is a sin,

Because you rejected the word of the Lord, the Lord will also reject you from being king over Israel.”

24 And Saoul said to Samouel, “I have sinned; for I have transgressed the word of the Lord and what you said, because I feared the people and listened to their voice.²⁵And now do take away then my sin, and return with me, and I will do obedience to the Lord your God.”²⁶And Samouel said to Saoul, “I will not return with you, for you have rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord will reject you from being king over Israel.”²⁷And Samouel turned away his face to go away, and

Saoul caught hold of the wing of his ^adouble cloak^a, and he tore it. ²⁸And Samouel said to him, "The Lord tore the kingdom of Israel from your hand today, and he will give it to a neighbor of yours, who is better than you, ²⁹and Israel will be divided in two, and he will not turn back or change his mind, for he is not like a human, that he should change his mind." ³⁰And Saoul said, "I have sinned; yet do honor me now before the elders of Israel and before my people, and return with me, and I will do obeisance to the Lord, your God." ³¹And Samouel turned back after Saoul, and he did obeisance to the Lord.

³² And Samouel said, "Bring Agag king of Amalek to me." And Agag came to him trembling. And Agag said, "Is death thus bitter?" ³³And Samouel said to Agag,

"As your sword made women childless, so your mother shall be childless among women."

And Samouel slew Agag before the Lord in Galgal.

³⁴ And Samouel went away to Harmathaim, and Saoul went up to his house in Gabaa. ³⁵Samouel did not add to see Saoul until the day of his death, for Samouel grieved over Saoul. And the Lord was sorry that he had made Saoul king over Israel.

16 And the Lord said to Samouel, "How long are you grieving over Saoul? And it is I that have set him at naught not to be king over Israel. Fill your horn with oil, and come, let me send you to Iessai as far as to Bethlehem, for I have observed among his sons one to be king for me." ²And Samouel said, "How am I to go? Saoul will both hear and kill me." And the Lord said, "Take a heifer of the oxen in your hand, and you will say, 'I have come to sacrifice to the Lord,' ³and you shall invite Iessai to the sacrifice, and I will show you what you shall do, and you shall anoint whomever I say to you." ⁴And Samouel did all that the Lord spoke to him and came to Bethlehem. And the elders of the city were surprised at meeting him and said, "Is your entering peace, you seer?" ⁵And he said, "Peace; I have come to sacrifice to the Lord; sanctify yourselves and be glad with me today." And he sanctified Iessai and his sons and invited them to the sacrifice.

⁶ And it happened, when they entered, and he looked on Eliab that he said, "To be sure, before the Lord is his anointed." ⁷And the Lord said to Samouel, "Do not look on his appearance or on the posture of his size, because I have rejected him, for God will not look as a mortal will see, for a mortal will see into a face, but God will see into a heart." ⁸And Iessai called Aminadab, and he passed before Samouel. And he said, "Neither has the Lord chosen this one." ⁹And Iessai brought forward Sama. And he said, "Also for this one the Lord has not chosen." ¹⁰And Iessai brought his seven sons forward before Samouel, and Samouel said, "The Lord has not chosen among these." ¹¹And Samouel said to Iessai, "Have the boys come to an end?" And he said, "There is yet the smallest; behold, he is shepherding among the flock." And Samouel said to Iessai, "Send, and fetch him; for we will definitely not recline until he comes." ¹²And he sent and brought him in. And this one was ruddy with beauty of eyes and was good in appearance to the Lord. And the Lord said to Samouel, "Rise, and anoint Daud; for this one is good." ¹³And Samouel took the horn of oil and anointed him in the midst of his brothers, and a spirit of the Lord sprang upon Daud from that day and onward. And Samouel rose and returned to Harmathaim.

¹⁴ And a spirit of the Lord departed from Saoul, and an evil spirit from the Lord tormented him. ¹⁵And Saoul's servants said to him, "See now, an evil spirit from the Lord is tormenting you. ¹⁶Let now your slaves speak before you, and let them seek for our lord a man who has learned how to play on a cinyrab, and it will be, when an evil spirit is upon you, that he will play on his cinyrab, and it will be good for you, and it will give you respite." ¹⁷And Saoul said to his servants, "Do look out for me for a man who plays well, and bring him to me." ¹⁸And one of his lads answered and said, "Behold, I have seen a son of Iessai a Bethlehemite, and he knows how to play music, and the man is intelligent, and the man is a warrior and prudent with words, and a man good in appearance, and the Lord is with him." ¹⁹And Saoul sent messengers to Iessai, saying, "Send me your son Daud who is with your flock." ²⁰And Iessai took a gomorc of bread and a skin of wine and one kid of the goats and sent them by the hand of his son Daud to Saoul. ²¹And Daud came in to Saoul and stood before him. And Saoul loved him greatly, and he became to him one that would bear his armor. ²²And Saoul sent to Iessai, saying, "Do let Daud stand before me, for he has found favor in my eyes." ²³And it happened, when an evil spirit came upon Saoul, that Daud would take the cinyrab and play it with his hand, and Saoul would be relieved, and it was good for him, and the evil spirit would depart from him.

17 And the allophytes gathered their armies for battle, and they were gathered at Sokchoth of Judea, and they encamped between Sokchoth and between Azeka, in Ephermem. ²And Saoul and the men of Israel were gathered and encamped in the valley; they formed ranks for battle opposite the allophytes. ³And the allophytes stood on the mountain here, and Israel stood on the mountain there, and the valley was between them. ⁴And a mighty man came out from the ranks of the allophytes; Goliath was his name, from Geth; his height was four cubits and a span. ⁵And he had a helmet on his head, and he was armed with a coat of chain mail, and the weight of his coat was five thousand shekels of bronze and iron. ⁶And there were bronze greaves on his legs and a bronze shield between his shoulders. ⁷And the shaft of his spear was like a beam of weavers, and his spear weighed six hundred shekels of iron, and the one who carried his armor would go before him. ⁸And he stood and shouted to the ranks of Israel and said to them, "Why do you come out to draw up for battle opposite us? Am I not an allophyle, and are you not Hebrews of Saoul? Choose a man for yourselves, and let him come down to me, ⁹and if he is able to fight against me and if he strike me, then we will be to you for slaves, but if I am able and kill him, then you shall be to us for slaves and be subject to us." ¹⁰And the allophyle said, "Behold, today on this very day I have chided the ranks of Israel. Give me a man, and we both will fight in single combat." ¹¹And Saoul and all Israel heard these words of the allophyle, and they were dismayed and greatly afraid.

³² And Dauid said to Saoul, "On no account let the heart of my lord collapse upon him; your slave will go and will fight with this allophyle."

³³And Saoul said to Dauid, "You will definitely not be able to go against the allophyle to fight with him, for you are a boy, and he has been a warrior from his youth." ³⁴And Dauid said to Saoul, "Your slave was tending the flock for his father, and when the lion and the bear would come and take a sheep from the herd, ³⁵and I would go after it, then I struck it and pulled from its mouth, and if it turned against me, then I caught it by its throat and struck it down and put it to death. ³⁶And your slave would smite both the bear and the lion, and the uncircumcised allophyle shall be like one of these. Shall I not go and smite him and take away today a reproach from Israel? For who is this uncircumcised one who reproached the ranks of the living God? ³⁷The Lord who delivered me from the paw of the lion and from the paw of the bear, he himself will rescue me from the hand of this uncircumcised allophyle." And Saoul said to Dauid, "Go, and the Lord will be with you!"

⁴² And Goliad saw Dauid, and he disdained him, for he was a boy, and he was ruddy with beauty of eyes. ⁴³And the allophyle said to Dauid, "Am I like a dog, that you come upon me with a rod and stones?" And Dauid said, "No, but worse than a dog." And the allophyle cursed Dauid by his gods. ⁴⁴And the allophyle said to Dauid, "Come to me, and I will give you flesh to the birds of the air and to the animals of the earth." ⁴⁵And Dauid said to the allophyle, "You come to me with sword and with spear and with shield, and I am coming to you in the name of the Lord Sabaoth, the God of the ranks of Israel, which you have reproached today. ⁴⁶And today the Lord will shut you up into my hand, and I will kill you and remove your head from you, and I will give your limbs and the limbs of the camp of the allophyles on this day to the birds of the air and to the wild animals of the earth, and all the earth will know that there is a God in Israel, ⁴⁷and all this assembly will know that the Lord does not save by sword and spear, for the battle is the Lord's, and the Lord will give you into our hands."

⁴⁸ And the allophyle arose and came to meet Dauid, ⁴⁹and Dauid stretched out his hand into the bag and took out from there one stone and slung it and struck the allophyle on his forehead, and the stone penetrated through the helmet into his forehead, and he fell on his face on the ground. ⁵¹And Dauid ran and stood over him and took his sword and put him to death and cut off his head.

And the allophyles saw that their mighty one was dead, and they fled. ⁵²And the men of Israel and Ioudas rose up and shouted and pursued after them, as far as the entrance to Geth and as far as the gate of Ascalon, and the wounded of the allophyles fell on the way of the gates, even as far as Geth and as far as Akkaron. ⁵³And the men of Israel came back from turning aside after the allophyles, and they trampled their camps. ⁵⁴And Dauid took the head of the allophyle and brought it into Ierousalem, and he put his armor in his covert.

18 ⁶And the dancers came to meet Dauid out of all the towns of Israel, with drums and with rejoicing and with cymbals. ⁷And the women began and were saying,

"Saoul killed amongst his thousands, and Dauid amongst his ten thousands."

⁸And the matter appeared evil in the eyes of Saoul concerning this word, and he said, "They ascribed to Dauid the ten thousands, and to me they ascribed the thousands." ⁹And Saoul was eyeing Dauid with suspicion from that day and beyond.

¹² And Saoul was afraid from before Dauid, ¹³and he removed him from him and made him an officer of a thousand for himself, and he was going out and coming in before the people. ¹⁴And Dauid was prudent in all his ways, and the Lord was with him. ¹⁵And Saoul saw how he acted very prudently, and he was afraid from before him. ¹⁶And all Israel and Ioudas loved Dauid, for he was going out and coming in from before the people.

²⁰ And Saoul's daughter Melchol loved Dauid, and Saoul was told, and it was right in his eyes. ²¹And Saoul said, "I will give her to him, and she will be a snare to him." And the hand of the allophyles was against Saoul, ²²and Saoul commanded his servants, saying, "Speak to Dauid secretly, saying, 'Behold, the king wants you, and all his servants love you, and as for you, become the king's son-in-law.'" ²³And Saoul's servants spoke these words in the hearing of Dauid. And Dauid said, "Does it seem light in your eyes to become the king's son-in-law? And as for me, I am a humble man and of no repute." ²⁴And the servants of Saoul reported to him according to these things that Daidid said. ²⁵And Saoul said, "This is what you shall say to Daidid, 'The king does not desire to avenge for the king's enemies with a present, except with a hundred foreskins of the allophytes.'" And Saoul counted on casting him into the hands of the allophytes. ²⁶And the servants of Saoul told Daidid these words, and the matter was right in the eyes of Daidid to be the king's son-in-law. ²⁷And Daidid rose and went, he and his men, and smote one hundred men among the allophytes and brought their foreskins to the king, and he became the king's son-in-law, and he gave him his daughter Melchol for him as a wife. ²⁸And Saoul saw that the Lord was with Daidid and that all Israel loved him, ²⁹and he continued to be afraid of Daidid even more.

19 And Saoul spoke to his son Ionathan and to all his servants to put Daidid to death. And Saoul's son Ionathan was much taken with Daidid. ²And Ionathan told Daidid, saying, "Saoul seeks to put you to death; therefore be on guard tomorrow morning, and hide yourself, and stay in hiding, ³and I will go out and stand beside my father in a field, there where you are, and I will speak to my father about you and see what it might be, and I will tell you." ⁴And Ionathan spoke well of Daidid to his father Saoul and said to him, "Let the king not sin against your slave Daidid, because he has not sinned against you, and his deeds are very good, ⁵and he put his life in his hand and smote the allophyte, and the Lord brought about a great deliverance, and all Israel saw and rejoiced, and why do you sin against innocent blood by putting Daidid to death without cause?" ⁶And Saoul heeded the voice of Ionathan, and Saoul swore, saying, "The Lord lives, if he shall die!" ⁷And Ionathan called Daidid and related all these words to him, and Ionathan brought Daidid in to Saoul, and he was in his presence as yesterday and the third day.

⁸ And the war continued to be against Saoul, and Daidid prevailed over and fought the allophytes, and he smote among them with a very great blow, and they fled from before him. ⁹And there came an evil divine spirit upon Saoul, and he was at rest in his house, and a spear was in his hand, and Daidid was playing music with his hands, ¹⁰and Saoul was seeking to strike the spear into Daidid, and Daidid withdrew from before Saoul, and he struck the spear into the wall, and Daidid fled and escaped.

¹¹ And it happened in that night that Saoul sent messengers to Daidid's house to keep watch over him to put him to death in the morning. And his wife Melchol told Daidid, saying, "If you do not save your own life this night, tomorrow you will be put to death." ¹²And Melchol let Daidid down through the window, and he departed and flew away and escaped. ¹³And Melchol took and laid the cenotaph on the bed, and she put goats' liver by its head and covered them with a garment. ¹⁴And Saoul sent messengers to take Daidid, and they said he was unwell. ¹⁵And he sent for Daidid, saying, "Bring him to me on the bed, that I may put him to death." ¹⁶And the messengers come, and behold, the cenotaph is on the bed, and goats' liver by its head. ¹⁷And Saoul said to Melchol, "Why have you thus deceived me and sent off my enemy, and he has escaped?" And Melchol said to Saoul, "He said, 'Send me off, but if not, I will put you to death.'"

¹⁸ And Daidid fled and escaped and came to Samouel at Harmathaim and told him all that Saoul did to him, and Daidid and Samouel went and settled at Nauath in Rama. ¹⁹And it was told to Saoul, saying, "Behold, Daidid is at Nauath in Rama." ²⁰And Saoul sent messengers to take Daidid, and they saw the assembly of the prophets, and Samouel stood as appointed over them, and a divine spirit came upon the messengers of Saoul, and they were prophesying. ²¹And it was told to Saoul, and he sent other messengers, and they also prophesied. And Saoul added to send messengers the third time, and they too prophesied. ²²And Saoul was seething with anger, and he too went to Harmathaim, and he came to the well of the threshing floor that is in Sephi, and he asked and said, "Where are Samouel and Daidid?" And they said, "Behold, at Nauath in Rama." ²³And he went from there toward Nauath in Rama, and a divine spirit also came upon him, and as he was going, he was prophesying until he came to Nauath in Rama. ²⁴And he stripped off his clothes, and he prophesied before them and fell naked all that day and the whole night. Therefore they were saying, "Is Saoul also among the prophets?"

20 And Daidid fled from Nauath in Rama and came before Ionathan and said, "What have I done? And what is my wrong? And wherein have I sinned before your father that he is seeking my life?" ²And Ionathan said to him, "Far be it from you! You shall not die. Behold, my father will not do anything either great or small and not uncover my ear, and why is it that my father should hide this matter? This is not possible!" ³And Daidid answered Ionathan and said, "Perceiving your father knows that I have found favor in your eyes, and he said, 'Do not let Ionathan know this; he may not consent.' But, the Lord lives, and your soul lives, that, as I said, between me and death has been filled up." ⁴And Ionathan said to Daidid, "What does your soul desire, and what shall I do for you?" ⁵And Daidid said to Ionathan, "Behold, now, tomorrow is the new moon and seated I will not sit with the king to eat, and you will send me off, and I will hide in the plain until evening. ⁶If observing your father observes me, then you will say, 'Entreating Daidid asked leave of me to run as far as to Bethlehem his city, for there is a sacrifice of days there for all the tribe.' ⁷If this is what he says, 'Very well!' there is peace for your slave, and if he should answer you harshly, know that evil has been determined by him. ⁸And you shall do mercy with your slave, for you have brought your slave into a covenant with the Lord along with yourself, and if there is iniquity in your slave, you put me to death, and why should you bring me thus to your father?" ⁹And Ionathan said,

"Far be it from you, for if knowing I know that the evil from my father had been determined to come upon you—and if not—I will bring tidings to you to your cities." ¹⁰And Daudid said to Ionathan, "Who will tell me if your father answers you harshly?" ¹¹And Ionathan said to Daudid, "Go, and stay in a field." And they both went out into a field.

¹²And Ionathan said to Daudid, "The Lord the God of Israel knows that I will sound out my father as the opportunity arises, three times, and behold, if there is good concerning Daudid, then I will not send to you in the field; ¹³this is what God may do to Ionathan, and this is what he may add, for I will report the evils to you and uncover your ear and I will send you off, and you will depart in peace, and the Lord will be with you as he was with my father. ¹⁴And if I am still living, you shall also do mercy with me, and if I die by death, ¹⁵you shall not remove your mercy from my house for ever, and if not, when the Lord removes the enemies of Daudid, each from the face of the earth, ¹⁶that the name of Ionathan be removed from the house of Daudid, and may the Lord seek out the enemies of Daudid." ¹⁷And Ionathan added yet to swear to Daudid, for he loved the soul of one who loved him.

¹⁸And Ionathan said, "Tomorrow is the new moon, and you will be observed, because your seat will be observed. ¹⁹And you shall do it three times and observe and come to your place where you hid on the workday, and you will sit by that ergab^a. ²⁰And I will shoot three times with darts, sending them into the amattari^b. ²¹And behold, I will send the lad, saying, 'Go, find the dart for me.' If I say to the lad, saying, 'Here is the dart, away from you, even here; take it'; come, for, the Lord lives, there is peace for you, and there is no word. ²²If this is what I say to the young man, 'Here is the dart, away from you, even beyond'; go, for the Lord has sent you away. ²³And as for the matter about which I and you have spoken, behold, the Lord is witness between me and you forever."

²⁴And Daudid hid in a field, and the month came, and the king came to the table to eat. ²⁵And the king sat upon his seat, as once and again, upon the seat by a wall. And he preceded Ionathan, and Abenner sat beside Saoul, and Daudid's place was under observation.

²⁶And Saoul did not say anything in that day, for he said, "A chance; he appears not to be clean because he has not purified himself." ²⁷And it happened on the morrow, on the second day of the month, and Daudid's place was under observation. And Saoul said to his son Ionathan, "Why is it that the son of Iessai has not come to the table, both yesterday and today?" ²⁸And Ionathan answered Saoul and said to him, "Daudid asked leave of me to go as far as to Bethleem his city, ²⁹and he said, 'Do send me off, for there is a sacrifice of our tribe for us in the city, and my brothers gave orders to me, and now, if I have found favor in your eyes, I will indeed get away and see my brothers.' For this reason he has not come to the king's table."

³⁰And Saoul was greatly seething with anger against Ionathan, and he said to him, "You son of traitorous girls! For do I not know that you are an accomplice of the son of Iessai to your shame and to the shame of your mother's uncovering? ³¹For during all the days which the son of Iessai lives upon the earth, your kingdom shall not be established. Now therefore send, take the youth, for he is a son of death." ³²And Ionathan answered Saoul, "Why does he die? What has he done?" ³³And Saoul lifted up the spear against Ionathan, to put him to death, and Ionathan knew that this evil from his father to put Daudid to death was fully determined, ³⁴and Ionathan sprang up from the table in fierce anger and ate no food on the second day of the month, for he was grieved for Daudid, because his father was set against him.

³⁵And morning came, and Ionathan went out into the field as arranged for a witness to Daudid, and with him was a little boy. ³⁶And he said to the boy, "Run, find for me the darts with which I am throwing." And the boy ran, and he was throwing the dart and sent it beyond. ³⁷And the boy came to the place of the dart where Ionathan was throwing, and Ionathan called after the young man and said, "There is the dart, away from you, even beyond." ³⁸And Ionathan called after his boy saying, "Hurry, be quick, and do not linger." And Ionathan's boy gathered up the darts for his master. ³⁹And the boy knew nothing; only Ionathan and Daudid knew the matter. ⁴⁰And Ionathan gave his implements to his boy and said to his boy, "Go, enter into the city." ⁴¹And when the boy had entered, Daudid rose from the ergab^a and fell on his face and did obedience to him three times, and each kissed each his fellow and each wept with his fellow, until ^ca great completion^c. ⁴²And Ionathan said, "Go in peace, and as we both have sworn in the name of the Lord, saying, 'The Lord shall be witness between me and you and between my seed and between your seed, forever.'"

^{2(21.1)}And Daudid came to Nomba to the priest Abimelech. And Abimelech was astonished to meet him and said to him, "Why is it that you are alone, and no one with you?" ³⁽²⁾And Daudid said to the priest, "The king has charged me with a matter today and said to me, 'Let no one know the matter about which I send you and concerning which I have charged you,' and I have testified solemnly to the lads in the place called Faith of God, Phellani, Alemoni, ⁴⁽³⁾and now if there are in your hand five loaves, give into my hand what is found." ⁵⁽⁴⁾And the priest answered Daudid and said, "There are no permitted loaves in my hand, for there are only consecrated loaves; if the lads have kept themselves from a woman, then they shall eat." ⁶⁽⁵⁾And Daudid answered the priest and said to him, "Indeed we have kept ourselves from a woman yesterday and the third day; when I go on a journey all the lads have become consecrated, and this journey is profane^a, wherefore it shall be consecrated today through my implements." ⁷⁽⁶⁾And Abimelech the priest gave him the loaves of the presentation, for there was no bread there except the loaves of the presence, which are removed from the presence of the Lord to be replaced by hot bread on the day that he took them.

⁹⁽⁸⁾ And Daudid said to Abimelech, "See if there is a spear or sword here by your hand, for I have not brought my sword and my implements in my hand, because the king's business was in haste." ¹⁰⁽⁹⁾And the priest said, "Behold, the sword of Goliath the allophyle whom you killed in the valley of Ela, and it is wrapped in a garment; if you will take this for yourself, take it, for there is none here except this one." And Daudid said, "Behold, there is none like it; give it to me." ¹¹And he gave it to him.

⁽¹⁰⁾ And Daudid rose and fled in that day from before Saul. And Daudid went to King Anchous of Geth. ¹²⁽¹¹⁾And the servants of Anchous said to him, "Is this not Daudid, the king of the land? Did the dancers not take the lead for this one, saying, 'Saul killed amongst his thousands, and Daudid amongst his ten thousands?'"

¹³⁽¹²⁾And Daudid put the words in his heart and was very much afraid from before King Anchous of Geth. ¹⁴⁽¹³⁾And he changed his face before him, and he put on an act in that day, and he drummed on the doors of the city and gestured with his hands and fell against the doors of the gate, and his spittle ran down on his beard. ¹⁵⁽¹⁴⁾And Anchous said to his servants, "Look, see an epileptic man; why did you bring him to me?" ¹⁶⁽¹⁵⁾Indeed, do I lack epileptics, that you have brought him to have an epileptic fit before me? This fellow shall not come into the house."

22 And Daudid left there and escaped and came to the Odollam cave. And his brothers and his father's house heard and went down there to him. ²And every one in distress and every one in debt and every one troubled in soul were gathering to him, and he was leader over them, and there were with him about four hundred men.

³ And Daudid went from there to Massepha of Moab and said to the king of Moab, "Let now my father and my mother be with you until I know what God will do for me." ⁴And he persuaded the person of the king of Moab, and they were dwelling with him all the days that Daudid was in the stronghold. ⁵And the prophet Gad said to Daudid, "Do not remain in the stronghold; leave, and you shall enter into the land of Ioudas." And Daudid left and went and settled in the city of Sarich.

which is in Rama, and his spear in his hand, and all his servants stood around him. ⁷And Saul said to his servants who stood around him and said to them, "Do hear, sons of Benjamin, if the son of Iessai will truly give every one of you fields and vineyards and make you all officers of hundreds and officers of thousands!" ⁸For you are all in collusion against me, and there is no one who uncovers my ear when my son makes a covenant with the son of Iessai, and there is no one of you who feels sorry for me or uncovers my ear because my son stirred up my slave against me as an enemy, as this day." ⁹And Doek the Syrian who was in charge of Saul's mules answered and said, "I have seen the son of Iessai coming to Nomba to Abimelech son of Achitob the priest, ¹⁰and he was inquiring of God for him, and he gave him provisions and gave him the sword of Goliath the allophyle."

¹¹ And the king sent to call Abimelech son of Achitob and all the sons of his father, the priests who were at Nomba, and all of them came to the king. ¹²And Saul said, "Listen now, son of Achitob." And he said, "Here I am, speak, sir." ¹³And Saul said to him, "Why have you conspired against me, you and the son of Iessai, that you gave him bread and a sword and that you ask through God for him, to set him against me as an enemy, as this day?"

¹⁴ And he answered the king and said, "And who among all your slaves is like Daudid, faithful and the king's son-in-law and executor of your every behest and honored in your house?" ¹⁵Have I begun today to ask through God for him? By no means! Let not the king impute anything to his slave or to the whole of my father's house, for your slave knew nothing of all this, a matter small or large." ¹⁶And Saul the king said, "You shall die by death, Abimelech, you and all your father's house." ¹⁷And the king said to the runners who stood around him, "Draw near, and put to death the priests of the Lord, because their hand is with Daudid and because they knew that he was fleeing and they did not uncover my ear." And the servants of the king were not willing to extend their hands to attack the priests of the Lord. ¹⁸And the king said to Doek, "You, turn, and attack the priests." And Doek the Syrian turned and put to death the priests of the Lord in that day, three hundred five men, all bearing an ephoud. ¹⁹And Nomba, the city of the priests, he smote with the edge of the sword: from man up to woman, from child up to infant, and calf and donkey and sheep.

²⁰ And one son of Abimelech son of Achitob escaped, and his name was Abiathar, and he fled after Daudid. ²¹And Abiathar told Daudid that Saul put to death all the priests of the Lord. ²²And Daudid said to Abiathar, "I knew in that day that Doek the Syrian—that telling he would tell Saul. I am responsible for the lives of your father's house. ²³Stay with me; do not be afraid; for where I shall seek a place for my life, I shall also seek one for your life, for you are safe with me."

23 And it was told to Daud, saying, "Behold, the allophytes are fighting in Keila, and they are despoiling, they are trampling the threshing floors." ²And Daud inquired through the Lord, saying, "Shall I go and attack these allophytes?" And the Lord said, "Go, and you shall attack among these allophytes and rescue Keila." ³And Daud's men said to him, "Behold, we are afraid here in Judea, and how will it be if we go to Keila? We shall enter into the spoils of the allophytes." ⁴And Daud added to inquire again through the Lord, and the Lord answered him and said to him, "Arise, and go down to Keila, for I am giving the allophytes into your hands." ⁵And Daud went, and the men who were with him, to Keila and fought with the allophytes, and they fled from before him, and he brought away their livestock and dealt a heavy blow among them. And Daud rescued the inhabitants of Keila.

⁶And it happened, when Abiathar son of Abimelech fled to Daud, that he came down with Daud to Keila having an ephoud in his hand. ⁷And it was told Saoul that Daud had come to Keila, and Saoul said, "God has sold him into my hands, for he has shut himself in having entered a town of doors and bars." ⁸And Saoul summoned all the people to war to go down to Keila to besiege Daud and his men. ⁹And Daud learned that Saoul was not keeping the evil concerning him quiet, and Daud said to the priest Abiathar, "Bring the ephoud of the Lord here." ¹⁰And Daud said, "O Lord, the God of Israel, hearing your slave has heard that Saoul seeks to come to Keila to destroy the city on my account. ¹¹Will it be shut up? And now, will Saoul come down as your slave has heard? O Lord, the God of Israel, tell your slave." And the Lord said, "It will be shut up." ¹³And Daud arose, and the men who were with him, about four hundred, and they departed from Keila, and they were going wherever they went, and it was told Saoul that Daud had escaped from Keila, and he gave up to go out.

¹⁴And Daud settled in the wilderness in Maserem at the narrows, and he sat in the wilderness in Mount Ziph in the dry country, and Saoul was seeking him all the days, and the Lord did not give him into his hands. ¹⁵And Daud saw that Saoul was coming out to seek Daud, and Daud was in the dry mountain in New Ziph. ¹⁶And Saoul's son Jonathan set out and came to Daud at New and strengthened his hands in the Lord. ¹⁷And he said to him, "Do not be afraid, for the hand of my father Saoul shall not find you, and you shall be king over Israel, and I shall be second to you, and my father Saoul knows that this is so." ¹⁸And both of them made a covenant before the Lord, and Daud sat at New, and Jonathan departed to his house.

¹⁹And the Ziphites from the dry country went up to Saoul on the hill, saying, "Behold, is Daud not hiding among us in Messara in the narrows in New in the hill of Hechela, which is on the right of Jessaimoun? ²⁰And now, as for everything that is on the king's mind for a descent, let him descend to us; they have shut him up into the king's hands." ²¹And Saoul said to them, "May you be blessed to the Lord, for you felt sorry for me! ²²Do go, and make ready once more, and know his place where his foot will be, quickly there where you said, lest he be cunning. ²³And look around, and know, and we will go with you, and it will be, if he is in the land, that I will search him out among all the thousands of Ioudas." ²⁴And the Ziphites set out and went ahead of Saoul, and Daud and his men were in the Maan wilderness in the evening to the right of Jessaimoun.

²⁵And Saoul went, and his men, to search for him, and they reported to Daud, and he went down to the rock that is in the wilderness of Maan. And Saoul heard and pursued after Daud into the wilderness of Maan. ²⁶And Saoul and his men went on one side of this mountain, and Daud and his men were on the other side of this mountain. And Daud was sheltering himself to get away from before Saoul, and Saoul and his men encamped against Daud and his men to capture them. ²⁷And a messenger came to Saoul, saying, "Hurry, and come, for the allophytes have made a raid on the land." ²⁸And Saoul turned back from pursuing after Daud and went to meet the allophytes; therefore that place was called the Divided Rock.

24 ^(23,29)And Daud went up from there and settled in the narrows of Engaddi. ^{2(24.1)}And it happened, when Saoul returned from after the allophytes, that it was told him, saying, "Daud is in the wilderness of Engaddi." ³⁽²⁾And he took with him three thousand chosen men out of all Israel and went to look for Daud and his men in front of Sadaiem. ⁴⁽³⁾And he came to the flocks of herds that were beside the road, and a cave was there, and Saoul went in to prepare himself, and Daud and his men were sitting in the inner part of the cave. ⁵⁽⁴⁾And Daud's men said to him, "Behold, this is the day of which the Lord spoke to you to give your enemy into your hands, and you shall do to him as is good in your eyes." And Daud arose and stealthily removed the wing of Saoul's ^adouble-cloak^a. ⁶⁽⁵⁾And it happened after these things that Daud's heart smote him, because he had removed the wing of his ^adouble-cloak^a. ⁷⁽⁶⁾And Daud said to his men, "Not at all is it to me from the Lord, if I shall do this thing to my lord, the Lord's anointed, to bring my hand against him, for this one is the Lord's anointed." ⁸⁽⁷⁾And Daud persuaded his men with words and did not permit them to get up to put Saoul to death. And Saoul got up and went down to the road.

⁹⁽⁸⁾And Daud got up after him out of the cave, and Daud called after Saoul, saying, "My lord king!" And Saoul looked behind him, and Daud bowed with his face to the ground and did obeisance to him. ¹⁰⁽⁹⁾And Daud said to Saoul,

^aa style of garment

“Why do you listen to the words of the people, saying, ‘Behold, Daudid seeks your life?’ ¹¹⁽¹⁰⁾Behold, in this very day your eyes have seen how the Lord gave you today into my hand in the cave, and I was not willing to kill you, and I spared you and said, ‘I will not raise my hand against my lord; for this one is the Lord’s anointed.’ ¹²⁽¹¹⁾And behold, the wing of your ^adouble-cloak^a is in my hand; I have removed the wing, and I have not killed you, and know, and see today that there is no wrong or impiety and rebellion in my hand. And I have not sinned against you, and you are binding my life to take it. ¹³⁽¹²⁾May the Lord judge between me and you, and may the Lord avenge me on you, and my hand shall not be against you, ¹⁴⁽¹³⁾as the ancient illustration says, ‘Out of the lawless will come forth error;’ and my hand shall not be against you. ¹⁵⁽¹⁴⁾And now after whom do you come out O king of Israel? After whom do you pursue? After a dead dog and after one flea. ¹⁶⁽¹⁵⁾May the Lord be judge and jury between me and between you; may the Lord see and judge my cause and acquit me out of your hand.”

¹⁷⁽¹⁶⁾ And it happened, when Daudid had finished speaking these words to Saoul, that Saoul said, “Is this your voice, my child Daudid?” and Saoul lifted up his voice and wept. ¹⁸⁽¹⁷⁾And Saoul said to Daudid, “You are more righteous than I, for you have repaid me good, but I have repaid you evil. ¹⁹⁽¹⁸⁾And today you have told me the good things that you have done for me, when the Lord shut me into your hands today and you did not kill me, ²⁰⁽¹⁹⁾and that if one should find his enemy in distress and should send him on a good way, then the Lord will repay him good as you have done today. ²¹⁽²⁰⁾And now, behold, I know that ruling you shall rule, and the kingdom of Israel shall be established in your hands. ²²⁽²¹⁾And now swear to me by the Lord that you will not utterly destroy my offspring after me and not wipe out my name from my father’s house.” ²³⁽²²⁾And Daudid swore to Saoul. And Saoul departed to his place, and Daudid and his men went up to the Messara narrow.

25 And Samouel died, and all Israel assembled and mourned him, and they buried him at his home in Harmathaim.

And Daudid got up and went down to the wilderness of Maan.

² And there was a man in Maan, and his flocks were in Carmel, and the man was very great, and he had three thousand sheep and a thousand goats, and it happened when he was shearing his flock in Carmel. ³And the name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife Abigaia, and his wife was good at understanding and very beautiful in appearance, and the man was surly and mean in his practices, and the man was dog-like. ⁴And Daudid heard in the wilderness that Nabal the Carmelite was shearing his flock, ⁵and Daudid sent ten lads and said to the lads, “Go up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and ask him in my name regarding peace, ⁶and you shall say this: ‘To good times; may you be in good health and your house, and all that you have be in good health!’ ⁷And now, behold, I have heard that they are shearing for you—now your shepherds who were with us in the wilderness, and we did not hinder them and did not demand anything of them, all the days they were in Carmel. ⁸Ask your lads, and they will tell you. And let my lads find favor in your sight, for we have come on a good day. Do give whatever your hand finds to your son Daudid.”

⁹ And the lads came and spoke these words to Nabal according to all these words in the name of Daudid. And he leaped up, ¹⁰and Nabal answered Daudid’s servants and said, “Who is Daudid? And who is the son of lessai? Slaves have been multiplied today, when they are breaking away each from before his master. ¹¹And shall I take my bread and my wine and my sacrifices, the sheep that I have sacrificed for my shearers, and give them to men who come from I do not know where?” ¹²And Daudid’s lads turned away on their way and returned and came and told Daudid according to these words. ¹³And Daudid said to his men, “Each strap on his sword!” and about four hundred men went up after Daudid, and the two hundred remained with the baggage.

¹⁸ And Abigaia hurried and took two hundred loaves and two vessels of wine and five sheep ready dressed and five ophi^b of parched grain and one gomor^c of raisins and two hundred cakes of dried fruit and put them on the donkeys ¹⁹and said to her lads, “Go on ahead of me, and behold, I am coming after you.” And she did not tell her husband. ²⁰And it happened, when she was mounted on the donkey and was going down under cover of the mountain, that, behold, Daudid and his men were coming down to meet her, and she met them. ²¹And Daudid said, “Perchance for an unrighteous fellow I have protected all his belongings in the wilderness, and we have not ordered to receive anything of all his belongings, and he has returned me evil for good. ²²This is what God may do to Daudid, and this is what he may he add, if by morning I will leave of all who belong to him one who urinates against a wall^d.”

²³ And Abigaia saw Daudid, and she hurried and alighted from the donkey and fell before Daudid on her face and did obeisance to him on the ground ²⁴on his feet and said, “Upon me, my lord, be the injustice; do let your slave speak in your ears, and hear a word of your slave. ²⁵Let not now my lord set his heart on this pestiferous person, for as his name is, so is he; Nabal is his name, and folly is with him, but I, your slave, did not see your lads whom you sent.

²⁶ "And now, my lord, the Lord lives, and your life lives, since the Lord restrained you from coming against innocent blood, and to save your hand for yourself, even now may your enemies and those who seek evil for my lord be like Nabal. ²⁷And now accept this benefaction that your slave has brought for my lord, and you shall give it to the lads who follow my lord. ²⁸Do remove the trespass of your slave, for making the Lord will make for my lord a faithful house, because my lord is fighting the battle of the Lord, and evil shall not be found in you ever. ²⁹And a person will rise up pursuing you and seeking your life, and the life of my lord shall be bound up in the bundle of life under the care of the Lord God, and the life of your enemies you shall sling out in the midst of the sling. ³⁰And it will be that the Lord will do to my lord all the good that he spoke concerning you, and the Lord will command you to be leader over Israel, ³¹and this shall not be for you an abomination and offense to my lord to have shed innocent blood without cause and to save the hand of my lord for himself. And the Lord will deal well with my lord, and you shall remember your slave to do good to her."

³² And Dauid said to Abigaia, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who sent you to meet me on this very day, ³³and blessed be your character, and blessed be you who has hindered me on this very day so as not to come into spilling of blood and to save my hand for myself! ³⁴For surely the Lord, the God of Israel, lives, who has hindered me today from hurting you, because if you had not hurried and come to meet me, then I had said, 'If by morning light there would have been left to Nabal one who urinates against a wall!^{a1}'" ³⁵And Dauid received from her hand all that she had brought him, and he said to her, "Go up to your house in peace; see, I have heeded your voice, and I have chosen your face."

³⁶ And Abigaia came to Nabal, and behold, he had a feast in his house like a feast of a king, and Nabal's heart was merry upon him, and he was exceedingly drunk, and she did not tell him a word small or great until the morning light. ³⁷And it happened in the morning, when Nabal had sobered up from the wine, his wife told him these things, and his heart died within him, and he became like a stone. ³⁸And it happened about ten days later, and the Lord struck Nabal, and he died.

³⁹ And Dauid heard and said, "Blessed be the Lord who has judged the cause of my reproach at Nabal's hand and has kept back his slave from the hand of evil acts, and the Lord has returned the evildoing of Nabal upon his head." And Dauid sent and spoke concerning Abigaia to take her to himself as a wife. ⁴⁰And Dauid's servants came to Abi-

gaia at Carmel and spoke to her, saying, "Dauid sent us to you to take you to him as a wife." ⁴¹And she rose and did obeisance, face to the ground, and said, "Behold, your slave is for a servant-girl to wash the feet of your servants." ⁴²And Abigaia arose and mounted the donkey and five maids were attending her, and she went after the servants of Dauid and became his wife.

26 And the Ziphites came from the dry country to Saoul on the hill, saying, "Behold, Dauid is sheltering with us on the hill of Hechela, which is in front of Iessaimoun." ²And Saoul rose and went down to the wilderness of Ziph, and with him were three thousand chosen men of Israel, to seek Dauid in the wilderness of Ziph. ³And Saoul encamped on the hill of Hechela in front of Iessaimoun beside the road, and Dauid settled in the wilderness. And Dauid saw that Saoul had come after him into the wilderness, ⁴and Dauid sent out spies and learned that Saoul had come prepared from Keila. ⁵And Dauid rose secretly and went in to the place, there where Saoul was sleeping, and Abenner son of Ner, the commander-in-chief of his army, was there, and Saoul was sleeping in a covered chariot, and the people were encamped around him.

⁶ And Dauid answered and said to Achimelech the Chettite and to loab's brother Abessa son of Sarouia, saying "Who will enter with me into the camp to Saoul?" And Abessa said, "I will enter with you." ⁷And Dauid went in, and Abessa, to the people by night, and behold, Saoul lay in sleep in a covered chariot, and his spear stuck in the ground at his head, and Abenner and his people were sleeping around him. ⁸And Abessa said to Dauid, "The Lord has shut up your enemy into your hand today, and now I will pin him to the ground with the spear once, and I will not strike him a second time." ⁹And Dauid said to Abessa, "Do not humble him, for who shall bring his hand against the Lord's anointed and be guiltless?" ¹⁰And Dauid said, "The Lord lives, if the Lord does not strike him down or his day comes and he dies or he goes down into battle and is added, ¹¹it is certainly not from the Lord to bring my hand against the Lord's anointed, and now do take the spear from by his head, and the jar of water, and let us depart by ourselves." ¹²And Dauid took the spear and the jar of water from by his head, and they went away by themselves. And there was no one to see it and no one to know it and no one to awaken; all were sleeping, because amazement from the Lord had fallen upon them.

¹³ And Dauid went over to the other side and stood on the top of the mountain far away, and the distance between them was great. ¹⁴And Dauid called to the people, and he spoke to Abenner, saying, "Abenner! Will you not answer?" And Aben-

ner answered and said, "Who are you that calls me?" ¹⁵And Daudid said to Abenner, "Are you not a man? And who is like you in Israel? And why do you not keep watch over your lord the king? For one of the people came in to destroy your lord the king. ¹⁶And this thing that you have done is not good. The Lord lives, because you who guard our lord the king, the Lord's anointed, are sons of execution. And now do see! Where are the king's spear and the jar of water that are at his head?"

¹⁷ And Saoul recognized Daudid's voice and said, "Is this your voice, my child Daudid?" And Daudid said, "Your slave, O lord the king." ¹⁸And he said, "Why does my lord thus pursue after his slave? For what have I done wrong? And what injustice was found in me? ¹⁹And now do let my lord the king hear the word of his slave: if it is God who stirs you up against me, may he get scent of your offering, and if it is sons of men, may they be cursed before the Lord, for they have driven me out today so as not to be established in the heritage of the Lord, saying, 'Go, be subject to other gods.' ²⁰And now, may my blood not fall to the ground opposite the presence of the Lord, for the king of Israel has come out to seek my life, as the long-eared owl hunts on the mountains."

²¹ And Saoul said, "I have done wrong; come back, my child Daudid, for I will not harm you, because my life was precious in your eyes in this very day; I have been a no-good and have acted in very great ignorance." ²²And Daudid answered and said, "Behold, the spear of the king! Let one of the lads come over and get it. ²³And the Lord will return to each his righteous deeds and his faith, as the Lord gave you into my hand today, and I did not want to bring my hand against the Lord's anointed, ²⁴and behold, as your life was magnified today in my eyes in this very day, so may my life be magnified before the Lord, and may he protect me, and he will deliver me from all tribulation." ²⁵And Saoul said to Daudid, "Blessed be you, my child. And doing you will do, and succeeding you will succeed." And Daudid went on his way, and Saoul returned to his place.

27 And Daudid said in his heart, saying, "I shall now be added in one day into the hands of Saoul, and there is no good for me, unless I escape to a land of allophyles and Saoul ceases from seeking me within every border of Israel, and I shall escape out of his hand." ²And Daudid and the four hundred men with him arose and came to Anchous son of Ammach, king of Geth. ³And Daudid settled with Anchous at Geth, he and his men, each and his household, and Daudid and both his wives, Achinaam the Iezraelite and Abigaia the wife of Nabal the Carmelite. ⁴And it was told Saoul that Daudid had fled to Geth, and he no longer added to seek him.

⁶ And Daudid said to Anchous, "If indeed your slave has found favor in your eyes, do let them give me a place in one of the towns that are in the country, and I will settle there, and why does your slave settle in a royal city with you?" ⁶And in that day he gave him Sekelak; therefore Sekelak has belonged to the king of Judea to this day. ⁷And the number of days that Daudid was settled in the country of the allophyles was four months.

⁸ And Daudid was going up, and his men, and they were making raids on every Gesiri and on the Amalekite, and behold, the land was being inhabited—the land from Gelampsour even as far as the land of Egypt—by suitable walled places.⁹ ⁹And he was striking the land and not leaving man or woman alive and was taking away flocks and herds and donkeys and camels and clothing, and they returned and were coming to Anchous. ¹⁰And Anchous said to Daudid, "Against whom have you made a raid today?" And Daudid said to Anchous, "Against the south of Judea and against the south of Iesmega and against the south of Kenez." ¹¹And he left neither man nor woman alive to bring back to Geth, saying, "They must not bring word to Geth against us, saying, 'This is what Daudid does.'" And this was his rationale all the days that Daudid was settled in the country of the allophyles. ¹²And Daudid was fully trusted with Anchous, saying, "Shaming he has made himself shamed among his people in Israel, and he shall always be a slave to me."

28 And it happened in those days that allophyles were gathering in their camps to go out to fight with Israel, and Anchous said to Daudid, "Knowing you shall know that you will go out with me to battle, you and your men." ²And Daudid said to Anchous, "Thus now you shall know what your slave will do," and Anchous said to Daudid, "So I will make you chief of the bodyguard all the days."

⁸ And Saoul disguised himself and put on other clothes and went, he and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night, and he said to her, "Do seek divinations for me by a ventriloquist, and bring up for me whomever I say to you." ⁹And the woman said to him, "Behold, indeed you know what Saoul did, how he cut off the ventriloquists and those in the know from the land, and why are you laying a snare for my life to put it to death?" ¹⁰And Saoul swore to her, saying, "The Lord lives, if injustice shall befall you in this matter." ¹¹And the woman said, "Whom shall I bring up for you?" And he said, "Bring up Samouel for me." ¹²And the woman saw Samouel, and she cried out with a loud voice, and the woman said to Saoul, "Why did you deceive me? And you are Saoul!" ¹³And the king said to her, "Have no fear; tell whom you have seen." And she said to him, "I have seen gods coming up out of the ground." ¹⁴And he said to her, "What did you perceive?" And she said to him, "A man, standing, coming up out of the ground, and he is wrapped in a double-cloak." And Saoul knew that this was Samouel, and he bowed with his face to the ground and did obeisance to him.

¹⁵ And Samouel said, "Why did you disturb me that I ascend?" And Saoul said, "I am greatly distressed, and the allophytes are warring against me, and God has turned away from me and no longer heeds me, either by the hand of prophets or by dreams, and now I have summoned you to tell me what I shall do." ¹⁶And Samouel said, "Why do you inquire of me? And the Lord has turned from you and is with your neighbor, ¹⁷and the Lord has done to you just as he spoke by my hand, and the Lord will tear your kingdom out of your hand and give it to your neighbor Daudid. ¹⁸Because you did not hear the voice of the Lord and did not carry out his fierce wrath on Amalek, therefore the Lord did this thing to you this day. ¹⁹And the Lord will hand over Israel along with you into the hands of allophytes, and tomorrow you and your sons with you shall fall, and the Lord will give the camp of Israel into the hands of allophytes."

²⁰ And Saoul hastened, and as he stood, he fell on the ground and was filled with fear because of the words of Samouel, and there was no more any strength in him, for he had eaten nothing the whole day and that whole night. ²¹And the woman came to Saoul and saw that he hastened greatly and said to him, "Behold, indeed your slave heard your voice, and I put my life in my hand and heard the words that you spoke to me, ²²and now do listen to the voice of your slave, and I will set a morsel of bread before you, and eat, and there will be strength in you for you will go on the way." ²³And he did not want to eat, and his servants and the woman were urging him, and he listened to their voice and got up from the ground and sat on the seat. ²⁴And the woman had a grazing heifer in the house, and she hastened and slaughtered it and took flour and kneaded it and baked unleavened cakes ²⁵and brought them before Saoul and before his servants, and they ate. And they rose and went away that night.

29 And allophytes gathered all their armies at Aphek, and Israel encamped in Aendor which is in Iezrael. ²And satraps of allophytes were passing on by hundreds and by thousands, and Daudid and his men were passing on in the rear with Anchous, ³and the satraps of the allophytes said, "Who are these who pass by?" And Anchous said to the commanders of the allophytes, "Is this not Daudid, the slave of King Saoul of Israel? He has been with us for days; this is the second year, and from the day he fell in with me I have found no fault in him and until this day." ⁴And the commanders of the allophytes were distressed by him and said to him, "Return the man to his place, there where you have assigned him, and let him not go with us to the battle, and let him not be a plotter against the camp, and by what means could this fellow reconcile himself to his lord? Would it not be with the heads of those men? ⁵Is this not Daudid, for whom they began with dances, saying, 'Saoul has killed amongst his thousands, and Daudid amongst his ten thousands?'"

⁶ And Anchous called Daudid and said to him, "The Lord lives, that you and your coming in and your going out with me in the camp are right and good in my eyes and that I have not found evil against you from the day you have come to me until the present day, and in the eyes of the satraps you are not good. ⁷And now go back, and go in peace, and you shall not do evil in the eyes of the satraps of the allophytes." ⁸And Daudid said to Anchous, "What have I done to you, and what did you find in your slave from the day I was before you even until this day, that I shall not go to fight the enemies of my lord the king?" ⁹And Anchous replied to Daudid, "I know that you are good in my eyes, but the satraps of the allophytes say, 'He shall not go up with us to battle.' ¹⁰And now be early in the morning, you and the servants of your lord who came with you, and go to the place, there where I appointed you, and do not place a pestilent thought in your heart, for you are good before me, and start early on the way, and let there be light upon you, and go." ¹¹And Daudid was early to depart, he and his men, and to guard the land of the allophytes, and the allophytes went up to fight against Israel.

30 And it happened, when Daudid and his men entered into Sekelak on the third day, that Amalek had made a raid on the south and on Sekelak and had struck Sekelak and burned it with fire, ²and with respect to the women and all that was in it, from small up to great, they did not put to death man or woman, but took them captive and went on their way. ³And Daudid came, and his men, to the city, and behold, it had been burned with fire, but their wives and their sons and their daughters taken captive. ⁴And Daudid raised, and his men, their voice, and they wept until they had no more strength left to weep. ⁵And both Daudid's wives were taken captive, Achinoom the Iezraelite and Abigaia the wife of Nabal the Carmelite. ⁶And Daudid was greatly distressed, for the people spoke of stoning him, because the soul of all the people was in great pain each for his sons and for his daughters, and Daudid was strengthened in the Lord, his God.

7 And Daud said to the priest, Abiathar son of Achimelech, "Bring the ephoud." ⁸And Daud inquired through the Lord, saying, "Shall I pursue after this geddour^a? Shall I overtake them?" And he said to him, "Pursue, for overtaking you shall overtake, and delivering you shall deliver." ⁹And Daud went out, he and the six hundred men with him. And they came to Wadi Bosor, and the reserves stayed. ¹⁰And he pursued with four hundred men, but two hundred stayed behind, who stayed on the other side of Wadi Bosor.

11 And in the open country they found an Egyptian man, and they took him and brought him to Daud in the open country, and they gave him bread, and he ate, and they gave him water to drink, ¹²and they gave him a piece of fig cake, and he ate, and his spirit revived in him, for he had not eaten bread or drunk water for three days and three nights. ¹³And Daud said to him, "Whose are you, and where are you from?" And the Egyptian lad said, "I am a slave of an Amalekite man, and my master left me behind because I fell sick three days ago. ¹⁴And we had made a raid on the south of Cholthi and on the parts of Judea and on the south of Cheloub, and we burned Sekelak with fire." ¹⁵And Daud said to him, "Will you take me down to this geddour^a?" And he said, "Do swear to me by God that you will not put me to death and not hand me over into the hands of my master, and I will take you down to this geddour^a."

16 And he took him down there, and behold, they were spread out over the face of all the ground, eating and drinking and celebrating a feast with all the great spoils they took from the land of allophytes and from the land of Ioudas. ¹⁷And Daud came upon them and smote them from morning star till late at night and on the morrow, and not a man of them escaped, except four hundred lads, who had mounted on camels and fled. ¹⁸And Daud recovered all that the Amalekites took and delivered both his wives. ¹⁹And nothing was amiss with them, from small up to great and from the spoils even up to sons and daughters and up to all the things that they took of theirs; Daud brought back all the things. ²⁰And Daud took all the flocks and herds and led them away ahead of the spoils, and of those spoils it was being said, "These are Daud's spoils."

21 And Daud came to the two hundred men who had been too exhausted to go after Daud, and he had caused them to sit at Wadi Bosor, and they went out to meet Daud and to meet the people who were with him, and Daud drew near to the people, and they asked him the matters for peace. ²²And every pestilent and bad fellow among the men, the warriors, who had gone with Daud answered and said, "Because they did not pursue together with us, we will not give them any of the spoils that we have recovered, except let each take his wife and his children and leave." ²³And Daud said, "You shall not do so after the Lord delivered them to us and guarded us, and the Lord delivered the geddour^a that came against us into our hands. ²⁴And who will listen to these your words? For they are not inferior to you; because according to the share of the one who goes down into the battle, so shall be the share of the one who stays by the baggage; according to this they shall be divided." ²⁵And it happened, from that day and beyond, that it was for an ordinance and for a statute for Israel until today.

26 And Daud came to Sekelak and sent part of the spoils to the elders of Ioudas and to his fellows, saying, "Behold, some of the spoils of the enemies of the Lord," ²⁷for those in Baithsour and those in Rama of the south and those in Ieththor ²⁸and those in Aroer and the Ammadi and those in Saphi and those in Esthie ^{28a}and those in Geth and those in Kinan and those in Saphkek and those in Thimath ²⁹and those in Carmel and those in the towns of Ierameli and those in the towns of Kenezi ³⁰and those in Ierimouth and those in Bersabee and those in Noo ³¹and those in Chebron and in all the places, there where Daud crossed, he and his men.

31 And the allophytes were fighting against Israel, and the men of Israel fled from before the allophytes, and wounded fell on Mount Gelboue. ²And allophytes engaged Saul and his sons, and allophytes smote Jonathan and Aminadab and Melchisa, sons of Saoul. ³And the battle pressed hard upon Saoul, and the darters, the bowmen found him, and he was wounded in the abdomen. ⁴And Saoul said to the one who bore his armor, "Draw your sword, and thrust me through with it, lest these uncircumcised come and thrust me through and make sport of me." And the one who bore his armor was unwilling, for he feared greatly, and Saoul took the sword and fell upon it. ⁵And the one who bore his armor saw that Saoul had died, and he also fell upon his sword and died with him. ⁶And Saoul and his three sons and the one who bore his armor died together in that day. ⁷And the men of Israel who were on the other side of the valley and those beyond the Jordan saw that the men of Israel fled and that Saoul had died, and his sons, and they forsook their towns and fled, and the allophytes came and settled in them.

8 And it happened on the next day that the allophytes came to strip the dead, and they found Saoul and his three sons fallen on the mountains of Gelboue. ⁹And they brought him back and stripped off his armor and sent them into the land of allophytes round about, proclaiming the good news to their idols and to their people. ¹⁰And they put his armor in the Astarteion^c and they fastened his body on the wall of Baithsan. ¹¹And the inhabitants of Iabis of Galaaditis heard what the allophytes had done to Saoul, ¹²and every man of might arose and went the whole night and took the body of Saoul and the body of Jonathan his son from the wall of Baithsan and brought them to Iabis and burned them there. ¹³And they took and buried their bones under the cultivated ground of Iabis and fasted seven days.

THE KAIGE TEXT OF REIGNS TO THE READER

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of the two Kaige sections in Reigns, 2 Rgns 11.2–3 Rgns 2.11 (= βγ) and 3 Rgns 22.1–4 Rgns 25.30 (= γδ), is based on the preliminary critical edition by Alfred Rahlfs, Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935).

In a few places I have disagreed with Rahlfs' edition. For example, he was correct to adopt τὸν λουδα in 2 Rgns 24.1 and λουδα in 4 Rgns 21.11. Both readings show that the translator rendered יהודה by an uninflected transcription (λουδα) instead of the inflected form (λουδας). Inner-Greek copyists preferred λουδας, which accounts for Rahlfs' readings in 2 Rgns 11.11; 20.5; 4 Rgns 8.19; 9.29; 14.10, 12; 17.19; 21.16; 23.27; 25.21.

KAIGE AS COMPOSITE TEXT

Most Septuagint scholars today agree that Rahlfs' edition of βγ and γδ (Thackeray's labels for the two sections) is a reasonable approximation (as a work in progress) to the text presupposed by extant Hexaplaric readings and a counterweight to the text of the so-called Lucianic manuscripts. A growing consensus further suggests that Rahlfs' text most likely represents a composite text, consisting of an underlying Old Greek (OG) translation (second century BCE) interspersed with "Kaige" revisions (latter part of the first century BCE, perhaps by a Jewish Palestinian school of translators), with the aim of bringing the OG into closer agreement with a proto-Masoretic text. This composite text is commonly referred to as "Kaige-Theodotion" or simply "Kaige." For further details about scholarly theories on the OG and Kaige in 1–4 Reigns, see "TO THE READER OF THE OLD GREEK TEXT OF REIGNS" (above).

TWO SECTIONS OF KAIGE

Shared Features in βγ and γδ

Several translation equivalents and techniques are shared by βγ and γδ, in contrast to the OG sections of 1–4 Reigns. (1) כִּי אוֹ כִּי־אֵל was typically rendered by καὶ γε (c. 26x and 17x respectively: e.g., 2 Rgns 11.12, 17, 21, 24; 3 Rgns 22.22; 4 Rgns 2.5; 8.1) in distinction from καὶ in OG (c. 72x). One can therefore infer that a Kaige translator/reviser was intent on contrasting ׀ with כִּי אוֹ כִּי־אֵל. I have tried to flag this contrast by glossing καὶ γε with "and indeed/indeed." (2) אֲנִי – ἐγὼ and אֲנִי־אֵימ – ἐγὼ εἶμι were distinguished, even when ἐγὼ εἶμι was followed by a finite verb, e.g., ἐγὼ εἶμι ἔχρισά σε εἰς βασιλεία ἐπὶ Ἰσραηλ "I am–I anointed you to be king over Israel" (2 Rgns 12.7[2x] and cf. 11.5; 13.28; 15.28; 18.12; 20.17; 24.12, 17; 3 Rgns 2.2). Though γδ is less consistent than βγ, there too one finds ἐγὼ εἶμι plus a finite verb (cf. 4 Rgns 4.13; 10.9; 22.20), a barbarism absent from the OG sections of 1–4 Reigns. (3) Though שׁוֹפָר "a ram's horn" is translated by σάλπιγξ "a (metal) trumpet" in the OG (and Lucianic manuscripts within βγ and γδ), in Kaige it is rendered by κεράτινη "a horn" (e.g., contrast 1 Rgns 13.3 with 2 Rgns 18.16 and 4 Rgns 9.13). (4) The historic present tense, found over 220 times in the OG sections, is used fewer than 10 times in Kaige. (5) מֵעַל "from" is rendered by ἐπάνωθεν or ἀπάνωθεν "from upon," rather than by ἀπό or ἐπάνω "from" as in OG (e.g., 2 Rgns 11.21; 13.9; 24.25; 3 Rgns 2.4; 4 Rgns 2.3, 5, 13, 14; 10.31; 17.21, 23; 25.5, 21, 28). These shared features set βγ and γδ apart from the OG sections in 1–4 Reigns.

Isomorphic Translation of Hebrew

Another distinctive Kaige feature, ubiquitous in βγ and γδ, is what may be called "rigid isomorphism" or "extreme literalism." Each constitutive element in the source text (apparently proto-Masoretic) is translated sequentially morpheme-for-morpheme or word-for-word, with the result that the Greek is often unidiomatic. Although this feature is not absent from the OG sections, it is more strictly adhered to in βγ and γδ (which is not to say that "normal" Greek does not occur). A few examples are in order:

2 Rgns 12.5 זֶה הָיָה שֶׁעָשָׂה הָאִישׁ כִּי בִּן־מוֹת הָיָה – ὅτι υἱὸς θανάτου ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ ποιήσας τοῦτο, “for the man who did this is a son of death.”

2 Rgns 12.16 צוֹם דָּוִד יוֹם – καὶ ἐνήστευσεν Δαυιδ νηστείαν, “and David fasted a fast.”

2 Rgns 13.15 מִשָׂא נֶאֱמָרָה גְדוֹלָה מְאֹד – καὶ ἐμίσησεν αὐτήν Ἀμμων μῖσος μέγα σφόδρα, “And Amnon hated her with very great hatred.”

See further 2 Rgns 14.28; 3 Rgns 2.4; 4 Rgns 5.3; 8.20, 22; 10.30; 11.11; 14.21.

Overworked pairings are הִנֵּה – ἰδοὺ “see/behold” (c. 45x in βγ, 60x in γδ) and לֵאמֹר – λέγων “saying” (c. 40x in βγ, 60x in γδ). The infinitive absolute plus finite verb was translated awkwardly by finite verb plus cognate participle/cognate dative, e.g., παροξύνων παρώξυνας . . . θανάτω ἀποθανεῖται “provokingly you provoked . . . [he] shall die by death” (2 Rgns 12.14; cf. 14.14; 15.8; 17.10–11; 18.2–3; 23.7; 24.24; 3 Rgns 22.28; 4 Rgns 1.4, 6, 16; 2.11; 8.10, 14; 14.10; 18.30, 33). Oath formulae were rendered word-for-word, to the point where the standard default אִם – εἰ “if” failed to pick up on the emphatic negative component of אִם when it occurs in an oath, which resulted in an unstated protasis or apodosis, e.g., ζῆ κύριος εἰ πεσεῖται ἀπὸ τῆς τριχὸς τοῦ υἱοῦ σου ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν “The Lord lives, if a hair of your son shall fall on the ground!” (2 Rgns 14.11; cf. 11.11; 14.19; 15.21; 19.8; 3 Rgns 2.8; 4 Rgns 2.2, 4, 6; 3.14; 4.30; 5.16). Throughout βγ and γδ clauses were not subordinated but simply strung together according to the equation 1 – καί.

Stereotypes

Stereotyping in βγ and γδ sometimes results in negative semantic interference from the Hebrew source text. So, for example, the third instance of שָׁלוֹם – εἰρήνη in 2 Rgns 11.7 gives rise to an oxymoron: “and David inquired after the peace of Joab and after the peace of the people and after the peace of the war.” In 4 Rgns 1.7 מִשְׁפָּט has the sense “kind/sort/manner”: “What sort of man was he who came to meet you?” However, the translator’s stereotyped equation מִשְׁפָּט – κρίσις results in an unusual inquiry: “What was the judgment <Or means of judging> of the man who went up to meet you,” whereupon Eliou is described as a hairy man wearing a leather belt.

Isolates

Etymologizing translations can produce isolates. In βγ, for example, Hebrew מִשְׂאֵת הַמֶּלֶךְ was rendered as ἄρσις τοῦ βασιλέως in the clause “and there went out after him a burden/portion? from the king” (2 Rgns 11.8). מִשְׂאֵת was derived from שָׂאָה, which usually corresponds to αἶρω “to raise,” which in turn produced ἄρσις, a word that is a poor contextual fit here. Another example is τὰς ἀκοὰς αὐτοῦ “his hearings/reports” for מִשְׁמַעְתּוֹ “his bodyguard” in 2 Rgns 23.23 via the equation שָׁמַע – ἀκούω “to hear.”

γδ has numerous isolate translations, for example: אִף־הוּא “he too” – ἀφῶ (4 Rgns 2.14); כְּבָרָה, אָרַךְ “a short distance” – εἰς δεβραθα τῆς γῆς “for debratha of the land” (4 Rgns 5.19); אֶל־הַעֲפָל “to the citadel” – εἰς τὸ σκοτεινόν “into the darkness <Perhaps secret place>” (4 Rgns 5.24) where the translator may have misconstrued the Hebrew noun to be אֶפְלָה, מְנַחָה “a present” – μανα (4 Rgns 8.8, 9; 17.3, 4; 20.12); אִם־אָז “then” – ἀφῶ (4 Rgns 10.10); לְאִשֶׁר־עַל־הַמַּלְתָּחָה “to the keeper of the wardrobe” – τῶ ἐπὶ τοῦ οἴκου μεσθααλ “to the man over the house of mesthaal <Or Mesthaal>” (4 Rgns 10.22); הַתְּחַבֵּשׁ “the thornbush” – ὁ ἄκαν (4 Rgns 14.9[2x]); מַעֲבְרֵי הַכַּשְׂדִּים “the Chaldean officials” – πάροδον τῶν Χαλδαίων “a passing <Possibly incursion> of the Chaldeans” (4 Rgns 25.24) although the translator may have misread מַעֲבְרֵי as מַעֲבָרִי. Isolate translations further illustrate the translator’s rigid isomorphism in both sections of Kaige.

Transcriptions

The translator’s isomorphic approach is further underscored by numerous transcriptions of typically difficult or unknown Hebrew words. For example, in βγ one finds: “araboth of the wilderness” (2 Rgns 15.28), “dried araphoth on it” (17.19), and “saphphoth from cows” (17.29). In γδ a great number of transcriptions occur (c. 26), not including person or place names (cf. 4 Rgns 3.4; 4.39; 8.15; 9.13; 11.8, 12; 12.6, 10; 15.5; 16.17; 17.6; 19.23; 20.12–13; 22.14; 23.4, 5, 7, 11, 24; 25.12, 14, 17). Some of these may be technical terms and thus unknown to the translator, while some may have been institutionalized.

Neologisms

Apparent neologisms in βγ include παραβιβάζω “to put aside” (2 Rgns 12.13; 24.10); κολληρίζω “to roll κολληρίδας (i.e., rolls)” (13.6, 8); παραζώνη “belt” (18.11); ἐξηλιάζω “to hang in the sun (i.e., as a form of torture)” (21.6, 9, 13); ἐπιστήριγμα “a support” (22.19); μουζωνος “a lightly armed (man)”

(22.30; also in 4 Rgns 5.2; 6.23; 13.20, 21; 24.2; Job 29.25); and ἐξέλευσις “a going out, way out” (2 Rgns 15.20). The translator of the γδ section apparently coined one neologism, διακάμπτω “bend or turn about” (4 Rgns 4.34). In the very next verse, he translates the same Hebrew verb with συγκάμπτω “bend together,” well attested in ancient Greek.

γδ also uses a few words not found (thus far) in pre-LXX: συσσεισμός “whirlwind/earthquake” (4 Rgns 2.1, 11; already in OG in 3 Rgns 19.11, 12); κατώδυνος “in great pain” (4 Rgns 4.27; cf. 1 Rgns 1.10; 22.2; 30.6); and σειρομάστης “a barbed lance” (4 Rgns 11.10; cf. Num 25.7; 3 Rgns 18.28; Joel 4.10).

Calques

Occasionally the translator(s) of βγ and γδ made use of calques or loan words from Semitic, some of which, however, pre-date the LXX. For example: כַּתְנֵי – χιτών “robe/coat” (2 Rgns 13.18, 19; 15.32); שֶׁקֶל – σίκλος “shekel” (2 Rgns 14.26; 18.12; 21.16; 24.24; 4 Rgns 6.25; 7.1, 16, 18; 15.20); בְּרִית – διαθήκη “covenant” (2 Rgns 15.24; 23.5; 4 Rgns 11.4, 17; 13.23; 17.35, 38; 18.12; 23.2, 3, 21); קָב – κάβος unit of measure (4 Rgns 6.25); and שָׁלֹשׁ – ὁ τριστάτης “the number-three man” (4 Rgns 7.2, 17, 19; 9.25; 10.25; 15.25).

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES IN βγ AND γδ VIS-À-VIS THE MT

βγ and γδ share many translation features, resulting from strict adherence to the Hebrew source text and Kaige revision, which set them apart for the OG sections in 1–4 Reigns. At the same time, both βγ and γδ reflect hundreds of small semantic variants from MT. A comparison of NETS with NRSV will spot many of these. These variants may be quantitative, ranging in length from a single word to several verses, or qualitative, i.e., the source text was interpreted differently. In either case, the composite Kaige text in both βγ and γδ reflects only partial revision towards a proto-Masoretic text.

The fact that semantic variations exist between MT and the Kaige text in both βγ and γδ, means that each section has its own distinctive features or translation profile vis-à-vis MT. Naturally, such features are conditioned by the way the translator (or were there two translators?) handled the details in the various narratives recounted in each section. Here I do not intend to make a detailed comparison between βγ and γδ that would argue for or against the existence of two translators for these two sections. Such a project awaits future study. My more limited aim is to alert the reader to the kind of quantitative and qualitative variants visible in both βγ and γδ.

Distinctive Features in βγ vis-à-vis MT

Many quantitative differences in βγ are probably due to a source text slightly different from proto-MT. In these instances the unwary reader of NETS (side by side with NRSV) might incorrectly conclude that Kaige is a free translation of the corresponding Hebrew. However, close comparison of MT with Kaige, along with new insights from 4QSam^a (first century BCE), show that many variants in the Greek are best attributed to a Hebrew source different from proto-MT or to changes that occurred in proto-MT after the Hebrew had been translated into Greek (e.g., editorial changes or errors in transmitting the Hebrew). One may note quantitative variants in: 2 Rgns 11.22; 12.16, 30; 13.21, 27, 34, 39; 14.27, 30; 15.18, 20, 34; 17.3, 8, 28; 18.3, 14, 18; 19.8, 10, 11, 19, 44; 20.18; 21.1, 5, 11, 22; 23.1, 3, 8, 9, 15; 24.25; 3 Rgns 1.47, 48 (for discussion see Barthélemy, Driver, McCarter, and McLean).

Other differences are likely due to the translator/ reviser. I count some 100 light interpretive touches. Consistent with the translator’s usual mode of translating, these variants are typically limited to one or two words in a given sentence.

Semantic leveling occurs. So for example, while MT distinguishes between שָׂרָא “commander” (10x, e.g., 2 Rgns 18.5; 19.7) and שָׂרֵי “chief” (2 Rgns 23.8, 18), the translator uses but one, ἄρχων “commander.” At other times, the translator differentiated where the Hebrew did not. For example, עֶבֶד “slave/servant/minister/adviser/official” was rendered by παῖς “servant” or δοῦλος “slave,” the latter typically in a deferential context (e.g., 2 Rgns 11.24; 13.24; 14.6; 3 Rgns 1.13, 17). Similarly, Hebrew חֶרֶב “sword” becomes either μάχαιρα “dagger” or ῥομφαία a large broad “sword” or “scimitar.” (The last two examples of differentiation occur in γδ also.) In numerous instances the translator made a grammatical subject or object explicit. Sometimes the subject was altered in Greek (e.g., 2 Rgns 20.22; 21.13).

As instances of interpretation in βγ from MT to Kaige (i.e., MT > Kaige) one may cite: “fourfold” > “sevenfold” (2 Rgns 12.6); “desolate woman” > “widow” (13.20); “the king” > “his father” (15.7); “turn [it] into foolishness” > “scatter abroad” (15.31); “playing on pipes” > “dancing in choruses” (3 Rgns 1.40). In 2 Rgns 18.21, 22, 23, 31, 32 an anonymous “Cushite” has been turned into David’s wise friend “Chousi” (cf. 2 Rgns 15.32, 37; 16.16–18; 17.5–8, 14, 15).

A few translational variants are of a theological nature, for example: אֱלֹהִים “(the) God” > ὁ ἰσχυρός “the Strong One” (2 Rgns 22.31, 33, 48; 23.5); צוֹר “my rock” > φύλαξ...μου “my keeper” (22.3); מַגֵּן “my shield” > ὑπερασπιστής μου “my protector” (22.3); מַצְבֵּי “my stronghold” > ἀντιλήμπτωρ μου “my supporter” (22.3); שָׁאוֹל שֶׁבֶל “the cords of Sheol” > ὠδίνες θανάτου “pangs of death” (22.6, contrast 3 Rgns 2.6, 9).

Distinctive Features in γδ vis-à-vis MT

In general, the Hebrew source text behind γδ appears to have been in better shape than that behind βγ. Nevertheless, one observes many pluses and minuses in γδ vis-à-vis MT. Two of the longest variants involve doublets. (1) Greek text missing at 3 Rgns 22.47–50 (= 1 Kings 22.46–49 in NRSV) actually appears in the OG section at 3 Rgns 16.28d–g. This doublet concerns the reign of Iosaphat, cf. 3 Rgns 16.28a–h; 22.41–46, 51. (2) γδ contains a lengthy plus at 4 Rgns 1.18a–d concerning Ioram’s reign, which reappears with slight differences in the doublet at 4 Rgns 3.1–3.

Other quantitative variants are typically only a word or a few words in length. Minuses in γδ (i.e., pluses in MT) occur in or in between such verses as: 3 Rgns 22.47–50; 4 Rgns 1.17; 3.13; 4.20; 5.21; 6.21, 31; 9.28, 29, 32; 10.14; 13.1, 13, 16; 15.14, 19; 16.11–12; 17.14–15, 27; 18.34; 19.6, 10, 15, 25, 34; 20.11; 21.7, 12; 23.17; 24.2; 25.10. Pluses in γδ occur in: e.g., 3 Rgns 22.7, 53; 4 Rgns 1.18a–d (cf. 3.1–3); 2.6, 16; 4.36; 6.16; 9.16, 29, 32; 10.16, 21, 34; 15.25; 16.2; 17.32; 19.20; 20.21; 22.3; 23.16, 29. Given the relatively good shape of the Hebrew text, many of the pluses here and elsewhere in γδ may have been added intentionally by the translator to clarify the identity of a speaker, to avoid points of misunderstanding, to highlight certain items, or for other unknown reasons. In one case, 4 Rgns 17.32–34, Kaige reflects a doublet and several minuses whose overall effect, whether or not they stem from the translator, is to paint the Samaritans and their syncretistic practices in a harsher way than in MT. Sometimes the translator might have misread the Hebrew, for example in 4 Rgns 5.24; 6.25; 7.10, 17; 11.10, 14; 19.25.

Variations between the Hebrew and Greek texts, however the differences arose, also have a bearing on the complicated chronological problems that surface in γδ and elsewhere in 1–4 Reigns. For example, in 4 Rgns 8.25–29 Kaige does not distinguish as clearly as MT between kings Joram and Jehoram. In 8.17 Rahlfs adopted the reading “eight years” (= MT) for the length of Jehoram’s reign; yet another well attested reading in Greek has “forty years.” Ambiguity in 4 Rgns 3 over the identities of the kings of Israel and Iouda also adds to the complex problem of variant chronologies in MT and the Greek texts in Reigns.¹

As in βγ, so in γδ one also observes hundreds of light interpretive touches, probably due to the translator (or a later reviser), which in effect have set the Kaige text apart from MT, sometimes in significant and fascinating ways. (Some examples cited below may be regarded as the necessary consequences of the translator’s isomorphic mode of translating.)

Again, one finds instances of semantic leveling. In 4 Rgns 13.12 פָּשַׁע and עָבַד were leveled to ποιέω (NETS “did” and “exercised” allows for better English grammar). In 4 Rgns 24.6, 8, 12, 15; 25.27 Kaige fails to distinguish between father Jehoiakim and his son Jehoiakin and names them both “Ioakim.” This leads to further confusion in 4 Rgns 24.17 where there is another variant concerning the relationship between Ioakim and Sedekias.

Occasionally Kaige exhibits semantic differentiation. In 4 Rgns 2.2, 4, 6 Elisaie declares three times that he will not “leave” or “abandon” Eliou, a small change from MT’s “leave.” In 4 Rgns 10.27 men “pulled down (κατασπάω) the steles of Baal and tore down (καθαίρω) the house of Baal,” while MT uses the same verb יָרַח “demolish.” In 4 Rgns 11.9 Kaige describes Iodae not only as “the priest” (2x in MT) but also as ὁ συνετός “the wise,” perhaps picking up on the semantic component עָרַח in his Hebrew name יהויאדא “Jehoiada.”

On numerous occasions in γδ the translator interpreted the Hebrew in a different way from what we see in MT (glossed here as, MT > Kaige). For example: “Elijah ascended in a whirlwind into heaven” > “Eliou was taken up in a whirlwind as into heaven” (4 Rgns 2.11); “mantle/cloak” > “sheepskin” (4 Rgns 2.8, 13, 14; in LXX μηλωτή is used solely to designate Eliou’s sheepskin, cf. previously in the OG in 3 Rgns 19.13, 19); “eighty shekels” > “fifty shekels” (4 Rgns 6.25); “arrows” > “bows” (4 Rgns 13.18); “king of Assyria” > “king of the Assyrians” (c. 48x, e.g., 4 Rgns 15.19, 20, 29); “they did wicked things”

> “and they made partners and engraved <Perhaps engraved steles>” (4 Rgns 17.11); “he prospered” > “he understood” (4 Rgns 18.7); “one hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold” > “one hundred talents of silver and one hundred talents of gold” (4 Rgns 23.33); “the captain of the bodyguard” > “the chief cook” (4 Rgns 25.8, 10–12, 15, 18, 20). In 4 Rgns 11.4, 19 MT refers to captains of “the Carites” (כָּרִי) and “the guards” (צָרִי), while Kaige interpreted these as two commanders named “Chorri” (Χορρι) and “Rasim” (Ρασιμ). In 4 Rgns 2.12 the translator interpreted the expression “Father, father! The chariots of Israel and its horsemen!” (MT) as “Father, father! Chariot of Israel and its horseman!” (γδ), apparently a designation for the prophet Eliou himself, not a description of other elements in the vision (similarly in 13.14 where Elisaie is given the same epithet). In 4 Rgns 8.1, 5, Elisaie is said to have vividly “sparked to life” (ἐζωπύρησεν) the Soumanite woman’s dead son (MT reads Hiphil forms of חָיָה “restored”; contrast 5.7 where the verb ζωοποιέω “to make alive” was used).

Some semantic variants in γδ pertain to foreign gods or goddesses. (1) The translator consistently rendered אֲשֵׁרָה “Asherah” or the Asherah pole that represented this foreign goddess by τὸ ἄλλος “a sacred grove” (4 Rgns 13.6; 17.10, 16; 18.4; 21.3, 7; 23.4, 6, 7, 14, 15 and cf. the precedent for this in Ex 34.13; Deut 7.5). (2) In 4 Rgns 1.2, 3, 6, 16 (and cf. 21.3) the translator interpreted “Baal” in an intriguing manner: אֱלֹהֵי עֲקֵרוֹן בַּבַּעַל זְבוּב “of Baal-zebub [i.e., Baal of flies] the god of Ekron” – ἐν τῇ Βααλ μυῖαν θεὸν Ακκαρων “by the goddess Baal, fly god of Akkaron.” Oddly, the translator refers to this Baal using both feminine and masculine articulation (e.g., 1.2 ἐν τῇ Βααλ where NETS supplies “goddess” and δι’ αὐτοῦ “through him”). Previously, in 3 Rgns 22.54, the translator rendered אֱלֹהֵי הַבַּעַל “Baal” – τοῖς Βααλιμ “the Baalim” using a transcription (Βααλιμ usually marks the plural form הַבַּעַלִּים, e.g., 1 Rgns 7.4; 12.10; 3 Rgns 18.18). Thus the translator perceived Baal in a variety of ways.

Finally, some of the translator’s interpretations touch on matters of a theological nature. (1) Where MT frequently reads “man of God” in reference to Elisha, for some reason Kaige preferred “Elisaie” (cf. 4 Rgns 4.16, 25, 27; 5.8, 14, 15, 20; 6.9, 10, 15; 7.2, 18, 19; 8.2). One might suppose the translator did this to avoid being vague or confusing Elisaie with others called a “man of God” (e.g., Eliou, cf. 3 Rgns 17.18, 24; 4 Rgns 1.9–13). However, in many other verses pertaining to Elisha as a “man of God,” Kaige did translate the expression word-for-word (e.g., 4.7, 9, 21, 22, 25, 40, 42; 7.17; 8.4, 7, 8, 11; 13.19). (2) If the variation in 4 Rgns 20.17 is not attributed to a different Hebrew Vorlage, then the translator has shown theological interest in underscoring the point that every word of the Lord shall be fulfilled: דְּבַר אֲמַר יְהוָה לֹא יוֹתֵר “nothing shall be left, says the LORD” – καὶ οὐχ ὑπολειφθήσεται ῥῆμα ὃ εἶπεν κύριος “and no word which the Lord said shall fail.”

In summary

There are numerous shared features in the so-called “Kaige” text of βγ and γδ that distinguish these two sections from the OG sections found elsewhere in 1–4 Reigns. The Kaige text itself is most likely a composite text which consists of an underlying layer of OG along with a scattering of subsequent partial revisions towards a proto-Masoretic text. In both βγ and γδ the Kaige text reflects a typically isomorphic word-for-word rendering of the Hebrew source text, to the point where one finds examples in almost every sentence of linguistic features native to Hebrew that have been translated quite mechanically into Greek. The longer pluses or minuses found in these Kaige chapters, vis-à-vis the traditional Hebrew text in MT, were probably not the work of a free creative translator but indications in certain contexts of a different Hebrew Vorlage. This is especially true for the βγ section, where MT appears to have suffered many instances of haplography during transmission.

In the Kaige text in both βγ and γδ one also finds numerous translational variants, vis-à-vis MT, which resulted from: semantic leveling, semantic differentiation, specifying the Hebrew in a different way in Greek, small interpretive touches for various contextual reasons, and some theological interpretations, all of which have affected the Greek narrative in slightly different ways from the Hebrew story.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF KAIGE IN βγ AND γδ

Throughout my translation of Kaige in sections βγ and γδ, I have tried to adhere strictly to the guidelines outlined in the introduction, “TO THE READER OF NETS.” In particular, in order to represent the predominantly isomorphic and stilted nature of the Greek text, I have intentionally used an isomorphic or wooden style of English, when demanded by the Greek. Even in verses where the Hebrew and Greek texts are semantically equivalent, the reader will observe that NETS (correctly) has the same essential meaning as NRSV, though the style of the NETS translation may be laborious English. In other words, in translating the Greek text, I have often altered the wording of NRSV in such a way that NETS reproduces unidiomatic Greek features using unidiomatic yet grammatical English.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

In matters of punctuation I have followed NRSV as much as possible. To assist the reader in making sense of Kaige's awkward rendering of ἔγώ εἰμι plus a finite verb, I have used an em dash (e.g., 2 Rgns 12.7). An ellipsis indicates the unstated protasis or apodosis in an oath (e.g., 2 Rgns 11.11). Versification follows Rahlfs' Greek text with NRSV's verse numbers in parentheses where applicable (cf. 2 Rgns 19.1–44; 3 Rgns 22.44–54; 4 Rgns 1.18a–d; 12.1–22).

(OLD GREEK)

1 And it happened, after Saoul died, that Dauid returned from smiting Amalek, and Dauid settled two days in Sekelak. ²And it happened on the third day, and behold, a man came from the camp of Saoul's people, and his clothes were torn, and earth was on his head. And it happened, when he came in to Dauid, that he fell to the ground and did obeisance to him. ³And Dauid said to him, "Where have you come from?" And he said to him, "I have come safe from the camp of Israel." ⁴And Dauid said to him, "What is this word? Tell me!" And he said, "The people fled from the battle, and many of the people have fallen and died, and Saoul died, and his son Ionathan died." ⁵And Dauid said to the lad who was telling him, "How do you know that Saoul and his son Ionathan died?" ⁶And the lad who was telling him said, "By accident I had an encounter on Mount Gelboue, and behold, Saoul was propped up on his spear, and behold, the chariots and the horse captains drew close to him. ⁷And he looked on the things behind him and saw me and called me, and I said, 'Behold, here am I.' ⁸And he said to me, 'Who are you?' And I said 'I am an Amalekite.' ⁹And he said to me, 'Do stand over me, and put me to death, for a terrible darkness has laid hold of me, for all my life is in me.' ¹⁰And I stood over him and put him to death, for I knew that he could not live after he had fallen, and I took the crown that was on his head and the armlet that was on his arm, and I have brought them here to my lord."

11 And Dauid took hold of his clothes and tore them, and all the men who were with him tore their clothes. ¹²And they beat themselves and wept and fasted until evening for Saoul and for his son Ionathan and for the people of Ioudas and for the house of Israel, because they were smitten with a sword. ¹³And Dauid said to the lad who had told him, "Where are you from?" And he said, "I am son of a man, a resident alien, an Amalekite." ¹⁴And Dauid said to him, "How did you not fear to bring your hand to destroy the Lord's anointed?" ¹⁵And Dauid called one of his lads and said, "Drawing near, fall upon him," and he struck him down, and he died. ¹⁶And Dauid said to him, "Your blood be on your head, for your mouth answered against you, saying, 'I put to death the Lord's anointed.'"

17 And Dauid lamented this lamentation over Saoul and over his son Ionathan ¹⁸and said to teach the sons of Ioudas—behold, it is written in a book of the upright—

- ¹⁹ Set up a monument, O Israel, for the wounded that have died upon your heights!
How the mighty have fallen!
²⁰ Tell it not in Geth, and proclaim it not in the exits of Ascalon, lest daughters of allophyles rejoice, lest daughters of the uncircumcised exult.

- ²¹ You mountains that are in Gelboue,
let no dew descend, and let there be no rain upon you or fields of first fruits!
For there the shield of the mighty was treated with vexation;
Saoul's shield was not anointed with oil.
- ²² From the blood of wounded,
from the fat of mighty ones,
Ionathan's bow did not return empty to the rear, and Saoul's sword did not turn back empty.
- ²³ Saoul and Ionathan, the beloved and lovely,
not divided;
comely in their life and in their death
they were not divided;
swift beyond eagles they were,
and they had strength beyond lions.
- ²⁴ O daughters of Israel, weep over Saoul, who clothed you with scarlet with your ornament, who brought gold ornament to your apparel.
- ²⁵ How the mighty have fallen amidst the battle!
Ionathan, a casualty upon your heights.
- ²⁶ I grieve for you, my brother Ionathan;
you were made very beautiful to me;
your love to me was wonderful,
beyond women's love.
- ²⁷ How the mighty have fallen,
and the weapons of war perished!

2 And it happened after these things that Dauid inquired by the Lord, saying, "Shall I go up into one of the cities of Ioudas?" And the Lord said to him, "Go up." And Dauid said, "Where shall I go up?" And he said, "To Chebron." ²And Dauid went up there to Chebron, and both his wives, Achinoom the Iezraelite and Abigaia, the wife of Nabal the Carmelite, ³and the men who were with him, each and his household, and they were dwelling in the towns of Chebron. ⁴And the men of Judea came, and there they anointed Dauid to reign over the house of Ioudas.

And they told Dauid, saying, "The men of Iabis of Galaaditis buried Saoul." ⁵And Dauid sent messengers to the leaders of Iabis of Galaaditis and said to them, "You are blessed to the Lord, because you have done this mercy to your lord, to Saoul the anointed of the Lord, and buried him and Ionathan his son! ⁶And now may the Lord do mercy and truth with you! And indeed I will do these good things with you, because you have done this thing, ⁷and now let your hands be strong, and become mighty sons, for Saoul your lord is dead, and indeed the house of Ioudas has anointed me king over themselves."

8 And Abenner son of Ner, commander-in-chief for Saoul, took Iebosthe son of Saoul and brought him out of the camp to Manaem ⁹and made him king over Galaaditis and over Thasiri and over Iezrael and over Ephraim and over Benjamin and over all Israel. ¹⁰Iebosthe, Saoul's son, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and he reigned two years, except over the house of Ioudas who were behind Daud. ¹¹And the days that Daud was king in Chebron over the house of Ioudas were seven years and six months.

12 And Abenner son of Ner went out, and the servants of Iebosthe son of Saoul, from Manaem to Gabaon, ¹³and Ioab son of Sarouia and the servants of Daud went out from Chebron and met them at the well of Gabaon at the same place and they sat, these^a at the well of Gabaon here and these^a at the well there. ¹⁴And Abenner said to Ioab, "Do let the lads arise and have a game before us," and Ioab said, "Let them arise." ¹⁵And they arose and passed by, to the number of twelve of the servants of Benjamin, those of Iebosthe son of Saoul, and twelve of the servants of Daud. ¹⁶And they held each his hand upon the head of his fellow, and his dagger to the side of his fellow, and they fell down together, and the name of that place was called the Portion of the Plotters, which is at Gabaon. ¹⁷And the battle was extremely hard in that day, and Abenner stumbled, and the men of Israel, before the servants of Daud.

18 And three sons of Sarouia were there, Ioab and Abessa and Asael, and Asael was as swift on his feet as one gazelle in a field. ¹⁹And Asael pursued after Abenner and did not turn to go to the right or to the left after Abenner. ²⁰And Abenner looked behind him and said, "Are you Asael himself?" And he answered, "I am." ²¹And Abenner said to him, "Turn to the right or to the left, and seize for yourself one of the lads, and take for yourself his armor," and Asael did not want to turn aside from behind him. ²²And Abenner added again, saying to Asael, "Withdraw from me, lest I strike you to the ground, and how then could I lift up my face to Ioab? And where are these things leading? Return to your brother Ioab." ²³But he was not willing to withdraw. And Abenner struck him in the loins with the butt of his spear, and the spear went out behind him, and he fell there and died under him. And it happened, each one who came to the place, there where Asael fell and died—and he stood still.

24 And Ioab and Abessa pursued after Abenner, and the sun was going down, and they came to the hill of Amman, which is before Gai on the way to the wilderness of Gabaon. ²⁵And the sons of Benjamin who were behind Abenner gathered themselves together and formed one band, and they stood on the top of one hill. ²⁶And Abenner called Ioab and said, "The sword will not devour unto victory, will it? Do you not know that in the end it will be bitter? And how long will you not say to the people to turn from after our brothers?" ²⁷And

Ioab said, "The Lord lives, for if you had not spoken, wherefore, then the people from early morning would have gone up, each after his brother." ²⁸And Ioab trumpeted with the trumpet, and all the people departed, and they did not pursue after Israel, and they did not add to fight any longer.

29 And Abenner and his men returned westward that whole night and crossed the Jordan and went the whole ^bstretch of time ahead^b and came to the camp. ³⁰And Ioab returned from after Abenner and gathered all the people together, and nineteen men and Asael of Daud's servants were noted. ³¹And the servants of Daud smote of the sons of Benjamin three hundred sixty men, belonging to him. ³²And they took up Asael and buried him in the tomb of his father at Baithleem. And Ioab went, and the men who were with him, the whole night, and the day broke upon them at Chebron.

3 And the war was for a long time between the house of Saoul and between the house of Daud, and the house of Daud was going and strengthening, and the house of Saoul was going and weakening.

2 And sons were born to Daud at Chebron, and his firstborn was Amnon by Achinoom the Iezraelite, ³and his second Dalouia by Abigaia the Carmelite, and the third Abessalom son of Maacha daughter of King Tholmi of Gesir, ⁴and the fourth Ornia son of Phegghith, and the fifth Sabatia by Abital, ⁵and the sixth Ietheraam by Daud's wife Aigal^d; these were born to Daud in Chebron.

6 And it happened, while there was war between the house of Saoul and between the house of Daud, that Abenner was prevailing over the house of Saoul. ⁷And Saoul had a concubine Respha daughter of Ial, and Memphibosthe son of Saoul said to Abenner, "Why is it that you went in to my father's concubine?" ⁸And Abenner was very angry concerning the word of Memphibosthe, and Abenner said to him, "Am I a dog's head? Today I did mercy with the house of your father Saoul both concerning brothers and acquaintances, and I did not desert to the house of Daud, and do you question me today concerning an injustice of a woman? ⁹This is what God may do to Abenner, and this is what he may add to it, for just what the Lord has sworn to Daud, for thus will I do for him in this day, ¹⁰to take the kingdom from the house of Saoul and set up the throne of Daud over Israel and over Ioudas, from Dan to Bersabee." ¹¹And Memphibosthe was no longer able to answer Abenner a word, from his being afraid of him.

12 And Abenner sent messengers to Daud at Thailam, where he was, immediately, saying, "Make your covenant with me, and behold my hand is with you to return all the house of Israel to you." ¹³And Daud said, "Well, I will make a covenant with you, but one thing I ask of you, saying: 'You shall never see my face unless you bring Saoul's daughter Melchol when you come to see my face.'" ¹⁴And Daud sent messengers to Saoul's son Memphibosthe, saying, "Give me back my wife Melchol whom I took for a hundred foreskins of allophyles." ¹⁵And Memphibosthe sent and took her from her husband, from Phaltiel son of Selles. ¹⁶And her husband went with her, weeping behind her until Barakim, and Abenner said to him, "Go, return," and he returned.

¹⁷ And Abenner said to the elders of Israel, saying, "Yesterday and the third day you were seeking Daud to rule over you, ¹⁸and now act, for the Lord spoke concerning Daud, saying: 'By the hand of my slave Daud I will save Israel from the hand of allophyles and from the hand of all their enemies.'" ¹⁹And Abenner spoke in the ears of Benjamin. And Abenner went to speak in the ears of Daud at Chebron all that seemed pleasing in the eyes of Israel and in the eyes of all the house of Benjamin.

²⁰ And Abenner came to Daud at Chebron and with him twenty men. And Daud made a feast for Abenner and the men who were with him. ²¹And Abenner said to Daud, "Indeed I will arise and go and will gather all Israel to my lord the king, and I will make a covenant with you, and you will reign over all that your soul desires." And Daud sent away Abenner, and he went in peace.

²² And behold, the servants of Daud and Ioab arrived from the raid, and they brought much spoil with them, and Abenner was not with Daud at Chebron, for he had sent him away, and he had gone in peace. ²³And Ioab and all his army came, and it was told Ioab, saying, "Abenner son of Ner has come to Daud, and he has dismissed him, and he went away in peace." ²⁴And Ioab went in to the king and said, "What is this you have done? Behold, Abenner came to you, and why have you sent him off, and he has gone away in peace? ²⁵Do you not know the wickedness of Abenner son of Ner, that he came to deceive you and to learn your coming and your going and to learn all that you are doing?"

²⁶ And Ioab returned from Daud and sent messengers after Abenner, and they brought him back from the cistern of Seiram, and Daud did not know. ²⁷And he brought Abenner back to Chebron, and Ioab took him aside beside the gate to speak to him, ambushing him, and there he stabbed him in the loins, and he died by the blood of Asael, Ioab's brother. ²⁸And after these things Daud heard and said, "I am guiltless, and my kingdom, forever from the Lord for the blood of Abenner son of Ner; ²⁹let it fall on the head of Ioab and on all his father's house, and may the house of Ioab never be without one who has a discharge or who is leprous or who holds a cudgel or who falls by the sword or who lacks food!" ³⁰But Ioab and his brother Abessa lay in wait for Abenner, because he had put to death their brother Asael in the battle at Gabaon.

³¹ And Daud said to Ioab and to all the people who were with him, "Tear your clothes, and put on sackcloth, and beat yourselves before Abenner." And King Daud walked behind the bier. ³²And they buried Abenner at Chebron, and the king lifted up his voice and wept at his grave, and all the people wept for Abenner. ³³And the king lamented for Abenner and said,

"Shall Abenner die according to the death of Nabal?"

³⁴ Your hands were not bound;
your feet were not in fetters;
he did not bring, like Nabal;
before sons of injustice you fell."

And all the people gathered to weep over him. ³⁵And all the people came to make Daud eat a funeral meal with bread while it was still day, and Daud swore, saying, "This is what God may do, and this may he add, because, if the sun does not set, I will not taste of bread, or from anything!" ³⁶And all the people knew, and everything that the king did before the people was pleasing before them. ³⁷And all the people and all Israel knew in that day that it was not from the king to put Abenner son of Ner to death. ³⁸And the king said to his servants, "Do you not know that a great leader has fallen in this day in Israel ³⁹and that today I am a Kinsman and one appointed by a king? But these men, sons of Sarouia, are too cruel for me; the Lord pay back the one who does evil in accordance with his wickedness!"

4 And Saoul's son Memphibosthe heard that Abenner had died at Chebron, and his hands were weakened, and all the men of Israel grew faint. ²And Saoul's son Memphibosthe had two men, captains of bands, the name of the one was Baana, and the name of the second, Rechab, sons of Remmon the Berothite of the sons of Benjamin; for Beroth is reckoned to the sons of Benjamin, ³and the Berothites escaped to Geththaim and were living there as resident aliens to this day.

⁴ And Saoul's son Ionathan had a son injured in the feet; he was a son of five years when the news about Saoul and his son Ionathan came from Iezrael, and his nurse picked him up and fled, and it happened, when she hastened and withdrew, that he fell and became lame, and his name was Memphibosthe.

⁵ And sons of Remmon the Berothite, Rekcha and Baana, went, and about the heat of the day they entered into the house of Memphibosthe, and he was sleeping on the bed at noonday, ⁶and behold, the porter of the house was cleaning wheat, and he slumbered and slept, and Rekcha and Baana, the brothers, escaped notice ⁷and entered into the house, and Memphibosthe was lying on his couch in his bedchamber, and they attacked him and put him to death and beheaded him and took his head and returned by the western road the whole night. ⁸And they brought the head of Memphibosthe to David at Chebron and said to the king, "Behold, the head of Memphibosthe son of Saoul your enemy, who used to seek your life, and the Lord gave the lord king vengeance on his enemies, as this day, on Saoul your enemy and on his offspring."

them, "The Lord lives, who redeemed my life out of every adversity, ¹⁰for the one who told me that Saoul had died—and he was as one bringing good news before me—and I seized and killed him at Sekelak, to whom I ought^a to have given a reward for good tidings. ¹¹And now wicked men have killed a righteous man on his bed in his own house! And now I shall require his blood at your hand and destroy you from the earth." ¹²And David commanded his lads, and they killed them and docked their hands and their feet and hung them at the well at Chebron, and the head of Memphibosthe they buried in the tomb of Abenner son of Ner.

5 And all the tribes of Israel came to Daudid at Chebron and said to him, "Behold, we are your bone and your flesh, ²and yesterday and the third day, while Saoul was king over us, it was you who led out and brought in Israel, and the Lord said to you: It is you who shall shepherd my people Israel, and it is you who shall become a ruler over Israel." ³And all the elders of Israel came to the king at Chebron, and King Daudid made a covenant with them at Chebron before the Lord, and they anointed Daudid king over all Israel. ⁴Daudid was a son of thirty years when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years, ⁵seven years and six months he reigned at Chebron over Ioudas, and thirty-three years he reigned over all Israel and Ioudas at Ierusalem.

⁶ And Daudid departed, and his men, to Ierusalem against the Iebousite who inhabited the land. And it was said to Daudid, "You will not come in here," for the blind and the lame resisted, saying, "Daudid shall not come in here." ⁷And Daudid took the stronghold Sion (this is the city of Daudid). ⁸And Daudid said on that day, "Everyone who strikes down the Iebousite, let him attack with a dirk both the lame and the blind, and those who hate the soul of Daudid"; therefore they shall say, "The blind and the lame shall not come into the house of the Lord." ⁹And Daudid settled in the stronghold, and this was called the city of Daudid, and he built the city all around from the citadel and his house. ¹⁰And Daudid would go, going and increasing, and the Lord Almighty was with him.

¹¹ And King Chiram of Tyre sent messengers to Daudid and cedar wood and craftsmen of wood and craftsmen of stones, and they built Daudid a house. ¹²And Daudid perceived that the Lord had prepared him to be king over Israel and that his kingdom was exalted for the sake of his people Israel.

¹³ And Daudid took yet wives and concubines out of Ierusalem after he came from Chebron, and Daudid yet had sons and daughters. ¹⁴And these are the names of those who were born to him in Ierusalem: Sammous and Sobab and Nathan and Salomon ¹⁵and Ebear and Elisous and Naphek and Iephies ¹⁶and Elisama and Elidae and Eliphalth, Samae, Iessibath, Nathan, Galamaan, Iebaar, Theeous, Elphalat, Naged, Naphek, Ianatha, Leasamys, Baalimath, Eliphalth.

¹⁷ And allophytes heard that Daudid had been anointed king over Israel, and all the allophytes went up to seek Daudid, and Daudid heard and went down to the stronghold. ¹⁸And the allophytes came and converged on the valley of the Titans. ¹⁹And Daudid inquired through the Lord, saying, "Shall I go up against the allophytes, and will you give them into my hands?" And the Lord said to Daudid, "Go up, for giving I will give the allophytes into your hands." ²⁰And Daudid came from the upper breaches and smote the allophytes there, and Daudid said, "The Lord has breached my enemies the allophytes before me, like water is breached"; therefore the name of that place was called the Upper Breaches. ²¹And they abandoned their gods there, and Daudid and those who were with him took them.

²² And allophytes added still to come up and converged in the valley of the Titans. ²³And Daudid inquired through the Lord, and the Lord said, "You shall not go up to meet them; return from them, and you shall meet them near the Wailing." ²⁴And it will be when you hear the sound of the confinement of the grove of the Wailing, then you shall go down to them, because then the Lord will go out before you, to strike down in the battle of the allophytes." ²⁵And Daudid did just as the Lord had commanded him and struck down the allophytes from Gabaon to the land of Gazera.

6 And Daudid again gathered every young man of Israel, about seventy thousand. ²And he arose and went, Daudid and all the people with him, from the rulers of Ioudas on an ascent, to bring up from there the ark of God on which the name of the Lord of hosts who is seated on the cheroubin upon it is called. ³And he loaded the ark of the Lord on a new cart and brought it out of the house of Aminadab which was on the hill, and Oza and his brothers, sons of Aminadab, were leading the cart ⁴with the ark, and his brothers were going in front of the ark. ⁵And Daudid and the sons of Israel were sporting before the Lord with tuned instruments, with strength and with songs and with cinyras^b and with nablas^c and with drums and with cymbals and with flutes.

⁶ And they came to the threshing floor of Nodab, and Oza reached out his hand to the ark of God to steady it and took hold of it, for the bull calf caused it to swerve, to steady it. ⁷And the Lord was angry with Oza, and God struck him there, and he died there beside the ark of the Lord before God. ⁸And Daudid was disheartened because the Lord breached a breach upon Oza, and that place was called the Breach of Oza until this day. ⁹And Daudid was afraid of the Lord in that day, saying, "How will the ark of the Lord come to me?" ¹⁰And Daudid did not want to turn aside the ark of the covenant of the Lord to him in the city of Daudid, and Daudid turned it aside into the house of Abeddara the Geththite. ¹¹And the ark of the Lord sat in the house of Abeddara the Geththite three months,

^ai.e. was expected ^b = Heb kinnor = lyre ^c = Heb nebel = ten or twelve stringed instrument and the Lord blessed the whole house of Abeddara and all that belonged to him.

12 And it was told King Daud, saying, "The Lord has blessed the house of Abeddara and all that belongs to him because of the ark of God." And Daud went and brought up the ark of the Lord from the house of Abeddara to the city of Daud with rejoicing. ¹³And there were with them seven bands carrying the ark and a sacrifice: calf and lamb. ¹⁴And Daud struck upon tuned instruments before the Lord, and Daud was girded with a distinguishing garment. ¹⁵And Daud and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the Lord with shouting and with sound of trumpet.

16 And it happened, as the ark of the Lord was entering the city of Daud, that Melchol the daughter of Saoul was peeking through the window and saw King Daud dancing and striking up before the Lord, and she despised him in her heart.

17 And they brought the ark of the Lord and set it in its place into the midst of the tent that Daud pitched for it, and Daud offered whole burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord. ¹⁸And Daud finished offering up the whole burnt offerings and the peace offerings and blessed the people in the name of the Lord of hosts ¹⁹and distributed to all the people, to all the host of Israel from Dan to Bersabee, from man until woman, to each a small loaf of bread and a portion of roasted bread and a cake from a frying-pan, and all the people went back, each to his home.

20 And Daud returned to bless his household, and Melchol the daughter of Saoul came out to meet Daud and blessed him and said, "How the king of Israel has honored himself today, who was uncovered today in the eyes of his own slaves' maids, as one of the disrobed dancers uncovers himself!" ²¹And Daud said to Melchol, "I will dance before the Lord; blessed be the Lord who chose me over your father and over all his house to appoint me as leader for his people, for Israel, and I will play and dance before the Lord, ²²and I will again be uncovered thus, and I will be worthless in your eyes and with the maids with whom you said I am held in honor." ²³And to Melchol daughter of Saoul there was no child to the day of her death.

7 And it happened, when the king sat in his house and the Lord had given him an inheritance round about from all his enemies who were round about him, ²that the king said to the prophet Nathan, "Behold, indeed I am living in a house of cedar, and the ark of God stays in the midst of the tent." ³And Nathan said to the king, "Go, and do all that is in your heart; for the Lord is with you."

4 And it happened on that night that a word of the Lord came to Nathan, saying: ⁵Go, and say to my slave Daud: This is what the Lord says: You shall not build me a house for me to live in; ⁶for I have not lived in a house from the day I brought up the sons of Israel from Egypt to this day, and I was moving about in a temporary abode and in a tent. ⁷In all places to which I have moved about among all Israel, speaking did I speak with one tribe of Israel whom I commanded to shepherd my people Israel, saying, "Why is it that you have not built me a house of cedar?" ⁸And now this is what you shall say to my slave Daud: This is what the Lord Almighty says: I took you from the sheepfold for you to be leader for my people, for Israel ⁹and was with you in all to which you went and destroyed all your enemies from before you and made you renowned like the name of the great ones who are upon the earth. ¹⁰And I will appoint a place for my people Israel and will plant them, and they will encamp by themselves, and they will be distressed no more, and a son of injustice shall not add to afflict them as formerly ¹¹from the days that I appointed judges over my people Israel, and I will give you rest from all your enemies, and the Lord will tell you that you will make a house for him. ¹²And it will be if your days are fulfilled and you lie down with your fathers, that I will raise up your offspring after you who shall be from your belly, and I will prepare his kingdom; ¹³he shall build me a house for my name, and I will restore his throne forever. ¹⁴I will be a father to him, and he shall be a son to me, and if his injustice comes, then I will punish him with a rod of men and with attacks of sons of men, ¹⁵but I will not remove my mercy from him, as I removed it from those whom I removed from before me. ¹⁶And his house and his kingdom shall be made sure forever before me, and his throne shall be restored forever. ¹⁷According to all these words and according to all this vision, thus Nathan spoke to Daud.

18 And King Daud went in and sat before the Lord and said, "Who am I, my Lord, O Lord, and what is my house, that you have loved me until these? ¹⁹And it was very small before you, my Lord, O Lord, and you spoke of your slave's house at length, but this is the law for the person, my Lord, O Lord! ²⁰And what more shall Daud add to say to you? And now you know your slave, my Lord, O Lord! ²¹On account of your slave^a you have acted and according to your own heart you did all this greatness to make known to your slave, ²²for the sake of magnifying you, my Lord, O Lord, for there is no one like you and there is no god besides you in all that we have heard with our ears. ²³And who is like your people Israel—another nation in the earth? How God guided them to redeem a people for him to make you a name to do greatness and manifestation that you should cast out nations and coverts from before your people whom you redeemed for yourself out of Egypt! ²⁴And you prepared your people Israel for yourself, a people forever, and you, O Lord, became a god to them. ²⁵And now, my Lord, O Lord, the word that you spoke concerning your slave and his house, confirm it forever, O Lord Almighty, O God of Israel, and now as you said, ²⁶may your name be magnified forever. ²⁷O Lord Almighty, God of Israel, you uncovered the ear of your slave, saying, 'I will build you a house'; therefore your slave found his own heart to pray this prayer to you. ²⁸And now, my Lord, O Lord, you are God, and your words will be true, and you spoke these good things concerning your slave, ²⁹and now begin, and bless the house of your slave, that it may exist forever before you, for you exist, my Lord, O Lord; you have spoken, and from your blessing shall the house of your slave be blessed forever."

8 And it happened after these things that Daudid smote the allophytes and put them to flight, and Daudid took what had been marked off out of the hand of the allophytes.

2 And Daudid smote Moab and measured them off with ropes, putting them to sleep on the ground, and there were the two portions for putting to death, and the two portions he kept alive, and Moab became slaves to Daudid bearing gifts^a.

3 Daudid also smote Hadraazar son of Raab, king of Souba, as he went to establish his hand to the river Euphrates. 4And Daudid preempted a thousand of his chariots and seven thousand cavalrymen and twenty thousand men on foot, and Daudid disabled all the chariots and left remaining from them a hundred chariots. 5And Syria of Damascus came to help Hadraazar, king of Souba, and Daudid smote among the Syrian twenty-two thousand men. 6And Daudid put a garrison in Syria, which was at Damascus, and the Syrian became slaves to Daudid bringing gifts^a. And the Lord preserved Daudid in all to which he would go. 7And Daudid took the gold bracelets that were on the servants of Hadraazar, king of Souba, and brought them^b to Ierousalem, and Sousakim, king of Egypt, took them^b when he went up to Ierousalem in the days of Roboam son of Solomon. 8And from Masbak from the choice towns of Hadraazar, King Daudid took very much bronze; with it Salomon made the bronze sea and the pillars and the washbasins and all the vessels.

9 And Thoou, the king of Hemath, heard that Daudid smote the whole force of Hadraazar, 10and Thoou sent his son Ieddouran to King Daudid, to ask him matters of peace and to salute him because he had fought against Hadraazar and smote him, for he was an adversary to Hadraazar, and in his hands were silver vessels and gold vessels and bronze vessels. 11And these King Daudid dedicated to the Lord with the silver and with the gold that he dedicated from all the cities that he got control of, 12from Idumea and from the land of Moab and from the sons of Ammon and from the allophytes and from Amalek and from the spoils of Hadraazar son of Raab, king of Souba.

13 And Daudid made a name, and when he returned he smote Idumea, eighteen thousand in Gaimela. 14And he put a garrison in Idumea, throughout all Idumea, and all the Idumeans became the king's slaves. And the Lord preserved Daudid in all to which he went.

15 And Daudid reigned over Israel, and Daudid was administering judgment and justice for all his people. 16And Ioab son of Sarouia was over the army, and Iosaphat son of Achia was over the records, 17and Saddouk son of Achitob and Achimelech son of Abiathar were priests, and Asa was the secretary, 18and Banaias son of Iodae was counselor—and Cheleththi and Pheletti, and Daudid's sons were chiefs of the court.

9 And Daudid said, "Is there still anyone left of the house of Saoul, and I will do mercy with him for Ionathan's sake," 2and there was a servant from the house of Saoul, and his name was Siba, and they called him to Daudid. And the king said to him, "Are you Siba?" And he said, "I am your slave." 3And the king said, "Is there still a man remaining from the house of Saoul, and I will do with him divine mercy," and Siba said to the king, "There is still a son of Ionathan injured in the feet." 4And the king said, "Where is he?" And Siba said to the king, "Behold, in the house of Machir son of Amiel from Ladabar." 5And King Daudid sent and took him from the house of Machir son of Amiel from Ladabar. 6And Memphibosthe son of Ionathan son of Saoul came to King Daudid and fell on his face and did obeisance to him. And Daudid said to him, "Memphibosthe," and he said, "Behold, your slave." 7And Daudid said to him, "Do not be afraid, for doing I will do mercy with you on account of your father Ionathan, and I will restore to you every field of Saoul, father of your father, and you shall eat bread at my table always." 8And Memphibosthe did obeisance and said, "Who am I, your slave, that you looked upon a dead dog like me?"

9 And the king called Saoul's lad Siba and said to him, "All that belongs to Saoul and to his whole house I have given to your master's son, 10and you shall till the land for him, you and your sons and your slaves, and you shall bring in food to your master's son, and he shall eat it, and your master's son Memphibosthe shall always eat bread at my table." (And Siba had fifteen sons and twenty slaves.) 11And Siba said to the king, "According to all that my lord the king has commanded his slave, so your slave will do." And Memphibosthe used to eat at Daudid's table like one of the king's sons. 12And Memphibosthe had a young son and his name was Micha. And all the household of Siba's house became Memphibosthe's slaves. 13And Memphibosthe was living in Ierousalem, for he always used to eat at the king's table, and he was lame in both his feet.

10 And it happened after these things that the king of the sons of Ammon died, and his son Hannon reigned in his stead. 2And Daudid said, "I will do mercy with Hannon son of Naas, just as his father did mercy with me," and Daudid sent by the hand of his slaves to comfort him concerning his father. And Daudid's servants came into the land of the sons of Ammon, ³and the rulers of the sons of Ammon said to their lord Hannon, "Was it from Daudid's glorifying your father before you, that he sent comforters to you? But has not Daudid sent his servants to you to search the city and to spy it out and in order to survey it?" ⁴And Hannon took Daudid's servants and shaved their beards and cut their woolen cloaks in half up to their hips and sent them away. ⁵And they told Daudid about the men, and he sent for a meeting with them, for the men were very insulted, and the king said, "Settle at Iericho until your beards grow, and you shall return."

⁶ And the sons of Ammon saw that the people of Daudid were put to shame, and the sons of Ammon sent and hired Syria of Baithroob, twenty thousand foot soldiers, and the king of Maacha, one thousand men, and Istob, twelve thousand men. ⁷And Daudid heard and sent Ioab and the entire force, the mighty ones. ⁸And the sons of Ammon came out and prepared for battle near the door of the gate, and Syria of Souba and Roob and Istob and Maacha were by themselves in open country.

⁹ And Ioab saw that there was a front of the battle against him both in front and in the rear, and he chose from the young men of Israel and arrayed them opposite Syria. ¹⁰And the rest of the people he put in the hand of his brother Abessa, and he arrayed them opposite the sons of Ammon. ¹¹And he said, "If Syria is too strong for me, then you shall be a deliverance to me, and if the sons of Ammon are too strong for you, then we will be to save you; ¹²be valiant, and let us be strong for the sake of our people and for the cities of our God, and the Lord will do what is good in his eyes." ¹³And Ioab and his people with him moved forward into battle against Syria, and they fled from before him. ¹⁴And the sons of Ammon saw that Syria fled, and they fled from before Abessa and entered into the city. And Ioab returned from the sons of Ammon and came to Ierusalem.

11 And it happened after the year had turned, at the time of the going out of kings, Daudid also sent Ioab and his servants with him and all Israel, and they destroyed the sons of Ammon and took up position against Rabbath, and Daudid sat in Ierusalem.

(KAIGE)

11 ²And it happened towards evening, that Daudid rose from his bed and was walking about on the roof of the house of the king, and he saw a woman bathing from the roof, and the woman was very beautiful in appearance. ³And Daudid sent and inquired into the woman. And he said, "Is this not Bersabee daughter of Eliab, wife of Ourias the Chettite?" ⁴And Daudid sent messengers and took her, and she went in to him, and he lay with her. (And she was purifying herself from her uncleanness.) And she returned to her house. ⁵And the woman conceived. And when she sent, she told Daudid and said, "I am—I am pregnant!"

⁶ And Daudid sent to Ioab, saying, "Send me Ourias the Chettite." And Ioab sent Ourias to Daudid. ⁷And Ourias came and went in to him, and Daudid inquired after the peace of Ioab and after the peace of the people and after the peace of the war. ⁸And Daudid said to Ourias, "Go down to your house, and wash your feet." And Ourias went out of the king's house, and there went out after him a burden^a from the king. ⁹And Ourias slept beside the door of the king with the slaves of his lord and did not go down to his house. ¹⁰And they told Daudid, saying, "Ourias did not go down to his house." And Daudid said to Ourias, "Are you not coming from a journey? Why is it that you did not go down to your house?" ¹¹And Ourias said to Daudid, "The ark of Israel and Ioudas^b dwell in tents, and my lord Ioab and the slaves of my lord are camping on the field, and shall I enter into my house, to eat and to drink and to lie with my wife? How can I? Your soul lives, if I will do this thing!" ¹²And Daudid said to Ourias, "Stay here indeed today, and tomorrow I will send you off." And Ourias stayed in Ierusalem in that day and the next. ¹³And Daudid invited him, and he ate in his presence and drank, and he made him drunk, and in the evening he went out to lie on his bed with the slaves of his lord, but he did not go down to his house.

¹⁴ And it happened in the morning that Daudid wrote a document to Ioab and sent it by the hand of Ourias. ¹⁵And he wrote in the document, saying, "Lead Ourias opposite the hardest fighting, and you^c shall draw back from behind him, and he will be struck and will die." ¹⁶And it happened, as Ioab was keeping watch on the city, that he assigned Ourias to the place where he knew that men of power were there. ¹⁷And the men of the city came out and were fighting with Ioab, and some of the people of the slaves of Daudid fell. And indeed Ourias the Chettite died. ¹⁸And Ioab sent and told Daudid^d all the news of the fighting, ¹⁹and he commanded the messenger, saying, "When you have finished telling the king all the news of the fighting, ²⁰and it shall be, if the anger of the king rises and he says to you, 'Why is it that you went so near the city to fight? Did you not know that they would shoot from the top of the wall?' ²¹Who struck Abimelech son of Ierobaal? Did not a woman throw a piece of millstone on him from the top of the wall, and he died at Thamasi? Why did you draw so near the wall?' and you shall say, 'And indeed Ourias your slave, the Chettite, died.'

²² And the messenger of Iobab went to the king in Ierusalem and came and told Dauid all that Iobab had told him, all the news of the fighting. And Dauid was angry with Iobab and said to the messenger, "Why did you draw so near the city to fight? Did you not know that you would be struck from the wall? Who struck Abimelech son of Ierobaal? Did not a woman throw a piece of millstone on him from the wall, and he died at Thamasi? Why did you draw so near the wall?" ²³And the messenger said to Dauid, "Because the men prevailed against us and came out against us in the field, and we were upon them to the entrance of the gate. ²⁴And the archers shot at your servants from the top of the wall, and some of the servants of the king died, and indeed your slave Ourias the Chettite died." ²⁵And Dauid said to the messenger, "This is what you shall say to Iobab, 'Do not let this thing be evil in your sight, for the dagger devours now one way then another way; strengthen your fight against the city, and pull it down.' And strengthen him."

²⁶ And the wife of Ourias heard that Ourias her husband had died, and she made lamentation for her husband. ²⁷And the mourning passed, and Dauid sent and brought her to his house, and she became his wife and bore him a son.

And the thing that Dauid had done appeared evil in the Lord's sight.

12 And the Lord sent Nathan the prophet to Dauid. And he went in to him and said to him, "There were two men in one city, one rich and one poor. ²And the rich man had very many flocks and herds, ³and the poor man had nothing but one little ewe lamb, which he had bought. And he preserved and reared it, and it grew up with him and with his sons together; it used to eat from his bread and drink from his cup and sleep in his bosom, and it was like a daughter to him. ⁴And there came a traveler to the rich man, and he refrained from taking anything from his flocks and from his herds to prepare for the stranger, since he had come to him as a wayfarer, and he took the ewe lamb of the poor man and prepared it for the man who had come to him." ⁵And Dauid was greatly inflamed with anger at the man. And Dauid said to Nathan, "The Lord lives, for the man who did this is a son of death, ⁶and he shall restore the ewe lamb sevenfold, because he did this thing, and because he did not refrain."

⁷ And Nathan said to Dauid, "You are the man who did this! This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I am—I anointed you to be king over Israel, and I am—I rescued you from the hand of Saoul, ⁸and I gave you the house of your master and the wives of your master into your bosom, and I gave you the house of Israel and of Iouda, and if it is too little, I will add to you in accordance with these. ⁹Why is it that you trivialized the word of the Lord, to do what is evil in his sight? You struck Ourias the Chettite with a sword and took his wife for yourself for a wife and killed him with a sword of the sons of Ammon. ¹⁰And now, a sword shall never depart from your house, because you counted me as nothing and took the wife of Ourias the Chettite to be your wife. ¹¹This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am raising up trouble against you out of your own house, and I will take your wives before your eyes and give them to your neighbor, and he shall lie with your wives before this sun. ¹²For you did it secretly, and I will do this thing before all Israel and before this sun." ¹³And Dauid said to Nathan, "I have sinned against the Lord." And Nathan said to Dauid, "Indeed, the Lord put aside your sin; you shall not die. ¹⁴Yet, because provokingly you provoked the enemies of the Lord by this thing, indeed your son who was born to you shall die by death." ¹⁵And Nathan went away to his house.

And the Lord weakened the child that the wife of Ourias bore to Dauid, and it became ill. ¹⁶And Dauid sought God concerning the child, and Dauid fasted a fast and went in and lodged in sackcloth on the ground. ¹⁷And the elders of his house stood by him to raise him from the ground, but he was unwilling, and he did not eat bread together with them. ¹⁸And it happened in the seventh day that the child died. And the slaves of Dauid were afraid to tell him that the child was dead; for they said, "Behold, while the child was still alive, we spoke to him, and he did not listen to our voice, and how can we tell him that the child is dead? Indeed, he shall do harm." ¹⁹And Dauid noticed that his servants were whispering, and Dauid perceived that the child was dead, and Dauid said to his servants, "Is the child dead?" And they said, "He is dead."

²⁰ And Dauid rose from the ground and washed and anointed himself and changed his clothes. And he entered into the house of God and did obeisance to him, and he entered into his house, and he asked for bread to eat, and they set bread before him, and he ate. ²¹And his servants said to him, "What is this thing that you did? For the sake of the child, while it was still alive, you were fasting and weeping and keeping watch, and when the child died, you rose and ate bread, and you have taken a drink." ²²And Dauid said, "While the child was still alive, I fasted and wept, for I said, 'Who knows whether the Lord will have pity on me and the child will live?' ²³But now he is dead. Why is this, that I fast? I will not be able to bring it back again, will I? I will go to him, but he shall not return to me."

²⁴ And Dauid consoled Bersabee his wife and went in to her and lay with her, and she conceived and bore a son and called his name Salomon. And the Lord loved him. ²⁵And he sent by the hand of Nathan the prophet, and he called his name Idedi, on account of the Lord.

²⁶ And Joab made war on Rabbath of the sons of Ammon and seized the royal city. ²⁷And Joab sent messengers to Dauid, and said, "I made war on Rabbath and seized for myself the city of the waters. ²⁸And now gather the rest of the people together, and encamp against the city, and seize it in advance for yourself so that I myself might not seize the city in advance for myself, and my name be called over it." ²⁹And Dauid gathered all the people together and went to Rabbath and made war on it and seized it for himself. ³⁰And he took the crown of Melchol, their king, from his head, and the weight of it was a talent of gold and of precious stone, and it was on the head of Dauid. And he brought forth very many spoils of the city. ³¹And he brought out the people who were in it and set them at the saw and at the iron threshing machines and conducted them through the brick-works. And thus he did to all the cities of the sons of Ammon. And Dauid and all the people returned to Ierousalem.

13 And it happened after this that Abessalom son of Dauid had a sister very beautiful in appearance, and her name was Themar, and Amnon son of Dauid loved her. ²And Amnon was tormented so as to be ill because of Themar his sister, for she was a virgin, and it was too gross in Amnon's sight to do anything to her. ³And Amnon had a companion, and his name was Ionadab son of Samaa the brother of Dauid, and Ionadab was a very crafty man. ⁴And he said to him, "What's with you that you are so haggard, O son of the king, morning by morning? Will you not tell me?" And Amnon said to him, "I love Themar, the sister of Abessalom my brother." ⁵And Ionadab said to him, "Lie down on your bed and act weak, and your father will come in to see you, and you shall say to him, 'Do let Themar my sister come and feed me some morsels, and let her prepare food in my sight so that I may see and eat from her hands.'" ⁶And Amnon lay down and became ill, and the king came in to see him, and Amnon said to the king, "Do let Themar my sister come to me and roll two rolls in my sight, and I will eat from her hand."

⁷ And Dauid sent to Themar, to the house, saying, "Do go to the house of Amnon your brother, and prepare food for him." ⁸And Themar went to the house of Amnon her brother, and he was lying down. And she took the dough and kneaded it and rolled rolls in his sight and boiled the rolls. ⁹And she took the frying-pan and emptied it out before him, but he did not want to eat. And Amnon said, "Lead out every man from upon me." And they led out every man from upon him. ¹⁰And Amnon said to Themar, "Bring the food into the chamber, and I will eat from your hand." And Themar took the rolls that she had prepared and brought them to Amnon her brother, into the bedroom. ¹¹And she brought them to him to eat, and he took hold of her and said to her "Come on, lie with me, my sister!" ¹²And she said to him, "No, my brother, do not humiliate me; for it shall not be done in this way in Israel; do not do this folly!" ¹³And I, where will I carry away my shame? And you, you shall be as one of the fools in Israel. And now, do speak to the king; for surely he shall not withhold me from you." ¹⁴But Amnon did not want to listen to her voice, and he prevailed over her and humiliated her and lay with her.

¹⁵ And Amnon hated her with very great hatred; for the hatred with which he hated her was greater than the love with which he had loved her. And Amnon said to her, "Get up, and get out!" ¹⁶And Themar said to him, "No, brother, for greater is the last wrong than the first which you did with me, to send me away." But Amnon did not want to listen to her voice. ¹⁷And he called his lad who was in charge of his house, and he said to him, "Now send this woman away from me, outside, and bar up the door after her." ¹⁸(And on her was a tunic to the wrists, for so the daughters of the king who were virgins were clothed in their outer garments.) And his attendant led her outside and barred up the door after her. ¹⁹And Themar took ashes and put them on her head and tore the tunic to the wrists that was on her, and she put her hands on her head and went away, walking and crying aloud.

²⁰ And Abessalom her brother said to her, "Amnon your brother wasn't with you, was he? And now, my sister, be quiet, for he is your brother; do not set your heart to speak about this thing." And Themar stayed as a widow in her brother Abessalom's house. ²¹And King Dauid heard all these words and was very angry, but he did not grieve the spirit of Amnon his son, for he kept loving him, for he was his firstborn. ²²And Abessalom did not speak with Amnon, from evil to good, for Abessalom kept hating Amnon on account of which he had humiliated Themar his sister.

²³ And it happened in a two-year span of days that they were shearing for Abessalom at Belasor, which borders Ephraim, and Abessalom invited all the sons of the king. ²⁴And Abessalom came to the king and said, "Behold now, they are shearing for your slave; do let the king and his servants go with your slave." ²⁵And the king said to Abessalom, "Surely not my son, let us not all go, and we will not be a burden on you." And he pressed him, but he did not want to go, and he blessed him. ²⁶And Abessalom said, "And if not, do let Amnon my brother go with us." And the king said to him, "Why should he go with you?" ²⁷And Abessalom pressed him, and he sent with him Amnon and all the sons of the king. And Abessalom made a feast according to the feast of the king. ²⁸And Abessalom commanded his lads, saying, "Watch, when the heart of Amnon is made good with wine, and I say to you, 'Strike Amnon, and put him to death.' Don't be afraid, for I am—I am commanding you, am I not? Act like men and be sons of power." ²⁹And the lads of Abessalom did to Amnon just as Abessalom had commanded them. And all the sons of the king rose, and they sat, a man upon his mule, and fled.

30 And it happened, while they were on the way, that the report came to Dauid, saying, "Abessalom struck all the sons of the king, and none of them was left, not even one." ³¹And the king rose and tore his garments and lay on the ground, and all his servants who were standing around him tore their garments. ³²And Ionadab, son of Samaa brother of Dauid, answered and said, "Let not my lord the king say that ^ahe put to death all the lads, the sons of the king^a, for only Amnon alone has died, for it was determined by the mouth of Abessalom from the day when he humiliated Themar his sister. ³³And now, let not my lord the king set a thing on his heart, saying, 'All the sons of the king have died,' but only Amnon alone has died."

³⁴ And Abessalom ran away. And the lad, the lookout, raised his eyes and saw, and behold, many people were coming on the road behind him from the side of the mountain in the descent, and the lookout came and told the king and said, "I have seen men from the road of Oronen from the region of the mountain." ³⁵And Ionadab said to the king, "Behold, the sons of the king are nearby; according to the word of your slave, so it happened." ³⁶And it happened, when he finished speaking, that behold, the sons of the king came and raised up their voice and wept, and indeed the king and all his servants wept with a very great weeping.

³⁷ And Abessalom fled and went to Tholmai son of Emioud, king of Gedsour, to the land of Machad. And King Dauid mourned for his son all the days. ³⁸And Abessalom ran away and went to Gedsour and was there three years. ³⁹And the spirit of the king ceased to go out after Abessalom, for he was consoled over Amnon, that^b he had died.

14 And Ioab son of Sarouia perceived that the heart of the king was on Abessalom. ²And Ioab sent to Thekoe and took from there a wise woman and said to her, "Do mourn, and put on mourning garments, and do not anoint yourself with oil, and you shall be as a woman mourning over one who has been dead here many days, ³and you shall go to the king and speak to him according to this matter." And Ioab put the words into her mouth.

⁴ And the Thekoite woman went in to the king, and she fell on her face to the ground and did obeisance to him and said, "Save, O king, save!" ⁵And the king said to her, "What is it with you?" And she said, "And certainly I am a widow woman, and my husband has died. ⁶And indeed your slave had two sons, and they both struggled in the field, and there was no one to part them, and the one struck his brother and put him to death. ⁷And behold, the whole paternal family rose up against your slave, and they said, 'Give up the one who struck his brother, and we will put him to death for the life of his brother whom he killed, and we will remove indeed your^c heir.' And they will quench my ember that is left, so as not to establish for my husband remnant and name on the face of the earth."

⁸ And the king said, "Proceed to your house in good health, and I will give command concerning you." ⁹And the Thekoite woman said to the king, "On me, my lord O king, be the lawlessness, and on the house of my father, and the king and his throne be guiltless." ¹⁰And the king said, "Who was speaking to you? You shall also bring him to me, and he shall not any longer touch him." ¹¹And she said, "Do let the king keep the Lord, his God, in mind, that a next of kin of blood succeed in destroying him, and they shall not remove my son." And he said, "The Lord lives, if a hair of your son shall fall on the ground!"

¹² And the woman said, "Do let your slave speak a word to my lord the king." And he said, "Speak." ¹³And the woman said, "Why did you calculate such a thing against God's people? Indeed this word out of the king's mouth is like an error, inasmuch as the king did not bring back his own banished one. ¹⁴For by death we shall die and be as water that is spilled on the ground, which shall not be gathered up. And God shall take a life, even as he calculates to banish a banished one from him. ¹⁵And now, what I came to say to the king my lord is this word, because the people will see me, and your slave will say, 'Do let one speak to the king, if somehow the king will enact the word of his slave; ¹⁶for the king will hear, and so to deliver his slave from the hand of the man who seeks to remove me and my son from a divine heritage.' " ¹⁷And the woman said, "May the word of my lord the king indeed be as an offering, for as a divine angel, so is my lord the king, to hear the good and the evil, and the Lord your God shall be with you!"

¹⁸ And the king answered and said to the woman, "Do not hide from me a thing that I ask you." And the woman said, "Do let my lord the king speak." ¹⁹And the king said, "The hand of Ioab is not in all this with you, is it?" And the woman said to the king, "Your soul lives, my lord O king, if there is to the right or to the left from anything that my lord the king said! For your slave Ioab himself commanded me, and he himself put all these words in the mouth of your slave. ²⁰In order to get around the façade of this thing, your slave Ioab made up this tale. And my lord is wise like the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth."

²¹ And the king said to Ioab, "Behold now, I acted for you according to this your word; go, bring back the lad Abessalom." ²²And Ioab fell on his face on the ground and did obeisance and blessed the king, and Ioab said, "Today your slave realized that I found favor in your sight, my lord O king, for my lord the king enacted the word of his slave." ²³And Ioab set off and went to Gedsour and brought Abessalom to Ierousalem. ²⁴And the king said, "Let him return to his house and not see my face." And Abessalom returned to his house and did not see the face of the king.

25 And in all Israel there was no man quite so praiseworthy as Abessalom; from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him. 26 And when he cropped his head (and it happened ^afrom a beginning of days to days^a, when he would crop, that it weighed down on him), and after he cropped it, he weighed the hair of his head, two hundred shekels by the royal shekel. 27 And there were born to Abessalom three sons and one daughter, and her name was Themar; she was a very beautiful woman, and she became wife to Roboam son of Salomon, and she bore him Abia.

28 And Abessalom stayed in Ierousalem two years of days and did not see the face of the king. 29 And Abessalom sent to Ioab to send him to the king, but he did not want to come to him. And he sent a second time to him, but he did not want to come. 30 And Abessalom said to his servants, "Look, the portion in Ioab's field is next to mine, and he has barley there; go, and burn it with fire." And the servants of Abessalom set them^b on fire. And the slaves of Ioab came to him with their clothes torn and said, "The slaves of Abessalom burned your portion with fire." 31 And Ioab set off and came to Abessalom into his house and said to him, "Why did your servants burn my portion with fire?" 32 And Abessalom said to Ioab, "Behold, I sent to you, saying: Come here, and I will send you to the king, saying, 'Why did I come from Gedsour? It were good for me to be there still. And now, behold, I have not seen the face of the king, but if there is injustice in me, just put me to death!'" 33 And Ioab went in to the king and told him, and he summoned Abessalom. And he went in to the king and did obeisance to him and fell on his face on the ground in front of the king, and the king kissed Abessalom.

15 And it happened after this that Abessalom got himself chariots and horses and fifty men to run along before him. 2 And Abessalom woke up at dawn and stood close by the road of the gate, and it happened: every man who had a judgment came to the king for judgment, and Abessalom called out to him and would say to him, "From what city are you?" And the man said, "Your slave is from one of the tribes of Israel." 3 And Abessalom said to him, "Behold, your claims are good and easy, and there is no one from the king to hear you." 4 And Abessalom said, "Who will make me a judge in the land? And every man who may have a dispute and a judgment will come to me, and I will give him justice." 5 And it happened, when a man came near to do obeisance to him, that he would stretch out his hand and take hold of him, and he kissed him. 6 And Abessalom did according to this thing to all Israel, to those who came to the king for judgment, and Abessalom made the heart of the men of Israel his own.

7 And it happened at the end of forty years, that Abessalom said to his father, "I will go now and pay my vows that I vowed to the Lord, in Chebron. 8 For your slave vowed a vow when I lived in Gedsour in Syria, saying, 'If by returning the Lord should return me to Ierousalem, then I will serve the Lord.'" 9 And the king said to him, "Proceed in peace." And getting up, he went to Chebron. 10 And Abessalom sent spies among all the tribes of Israel, saying, "When you hear the sound of the horn, then you will say, 'Abessalom has been crowned king in Chebron!'" 11 And two hundred men from Ierousalem went with Abessalom, invited and going in their simplicity, and they did not know anything. 12 And Abessalom sent and summoned Achitophel the Gelmonite, the counselor of Daud, from his city, from Gola, when he was offering sacrifices. And the conspiracy became strong, and the people, going and in great number, were with Abessalom.

13 And the messenger came to Daud, saying, "The heart of the men of Israel has gone after Abessalom." 14 And Daud said to all his servants who were with him in Ierousalem, "Get up, and let us flee, for there is no deliverance for us from before Abessalom. Be quick to go so that he might not be quick and overtake us and thrust out evil upon us and strike the city with a dagger's edge." 15 And the servants of the king said to the king, "According to everything which our lord the king chooses, behold, your servants." 16 And the king went out, and all his house on their feet, and the king left ten women of his concubines to keep the house. 17 And the king went out and all his servants on foot, and they stopped at the far house. 18 And all his servants were passing close by him, and every Chetti and every Phelthti, and they stood by the olive tree in the wilderness. And all the people were passing by near him, and all those about him and all the prominent men and all the warriors, six hundred men, and they were passing by at his hand, and every Chereththi and every Phelththi and all the Geththites, six hundred men, who came on their feet from Geth, going in front of the king.

19 And the king said to Eththi the Geththite, "Why are you also going with us? Turn back, and live with the king, because you are a stranger and because you have changed your abode from your place. 20 If you had come yesterday, shall I even today move you with us, and indeed will you evade your place? Yesterday was your ^cgoing out^c, and today shall I remove you to go with us? And I will go wherever I go. Turn back, and turn back your brothers with you, and the Lord will do mercy and truth with you." 21 And Eththi answered the king and said, "The Lord lives, and my lord the king lives, for in the place wherever my lord may be, both if it be for death and if it be for life, for there your slave will be." 22 And the king said to Eththi, "Come on and cross over with me." And Eththi the Geththite went past, and all his servants and all the throng that was with him. ²³And the whole country was weeping with a loud voice. And all the people were passing by at the Wadi Kedron, and the king crossed the Wadi Kedron, and all the people and the king were passing by the wilderness on the road surface.

²⁴And behold, and indeed Sadok and all the Leuites were with him carrying the ark of the covenant of the Lord from Baithar, and they set down the ark of God, and Abiathar went up until all the people ceased to pass out of the city. ²⁵And the king said to Sadok, "Return the ark of God to the city. If I find favor in the eyes of the Lord, then he will bring me back and show me it and its beauty. ²⁶And if he says thus, 'I have no want in you,' behold, here I am, let him do to me according to what is good in his eyes." ²⁷And the king said to Sadok the priest, "Look, you are turning back to the city in peace, and Achimaas your son and Jonathan the son of Abiathar, your two sons with you. ²⁸Look, I am—I am at arms in araboth^a of the wilderness until word comes from you to inform me." ²⁹And Sadok and Abiathar returned the ark to Ierousalem, and it sat there.

³⁰And Daudid was ascending by the ascent of the olive groves, ascending and weeping and his head covered, and he went barefoot, and all the people who were with him—a man covered his head, and they were ascending, ascending and weeping. ³¹And it was told Daudid, saying, "Even Achitophel is among the conspirators with Abessalom." And Daudid said, "Do scatter abroad the counsel of Achitophel, O Lord my God."

³²And Daudid was coming to the Roos, there where he did obeisance to God, and behold, there was Chousi the ^bArchi, a companion^b of Daudid, to meet with him, with his tunic torn and earth on his head. ³³And Daudid said to him, "If you cross over with me, then you will be for a burden on me. ³⁴And if you return to the city and will say to Abessalom, 'Your brothers have passed through, and your father the king has passed through behind me, and now I am your servant, O king, permit me to live; I was a servant of your father in the past and recently, and now I am a slave of yours,' then you will scatter abroad for me the counsel of Achitophel. ³⁵And behold, Sadok and Abiathar the priests are with you there, and it shall be that every word that you might hear from the king's house, you shall also tell it to Sadok and Abiathar the priests. ³⁶Behold, their two sons are there with them, Achimaas son of Sadok and Jonathan son of Abiathar, and by their hand you shall send to me every word which you might hear." ³⁷And Chousi, the companion of Daudid, entered into the city, and Abessalom was going into Ierousalem.

16 And Daudid passed some little way from the Roos, and behold, there was Siba, the lad of Memphibosthe, to meet him, and a couple of donkeys fully laden and upon them two hundred loaves of bread and one hundred raisins and one hundred dates and a nebel^c of wine. ²And the king said to Siba, "Why do you have these things?" And Siba said, "The draft animals are for the household of the king to sit upon, and the loaves of bread and the dates for food for the lads, and the wine for those who are faint in the wilderness to drink."

³And the king said, "And where is the son of your master?" And Siba said to the king, "Behold, he sits in Ierousalem, for he said, 'Today the house of Israel will return to me the kingdom of my father.'"

⁴And the king said to Siba, "Behold, everything is yours that belongs to Memphibosthe." And doing obeisance Siba said, "May I find favor in your sight, my lord O king."

⁵And King Daudid came to Baourim, and behold, a man from the kinsfolk of the house of Saoul went out from there, and his name was Semei son of Gera; he came out, going out and cursing ⁶and stoning with stones Daudid and all the servants of King Daudid, and there were all the people, and all the powerful men were on the right and on the left of the king. ⁷And thus Semei kept saying while he cursed, "Get out, get out, man of blood and lawless man! ⁸The Lord returned on you all the blood of the house of Saoul, for you became king in his stead, and the Lord gave the kingdom into the hand of Abessalom your son. And behold, you are in your bad state, for you are a man of blood."

⁹And Abessa son of Sarouia said to the king, "Why does this dead dog curse my lord the king? I will surely walk over and take off his head." ¹⁰And the king said, "What have I to do with you, O sons of Sarouia? Leave him alone, and so let him curse, because the Lord told him to curse Daudid, and who shall say, 'To what end did you do so?'" ¹¹And Daudid said to Abessa and to all his servants, "Behold, my son who came out of my belly seeks my life, and now besides, the son of the Iemini! Leave him alone to curse, because the Lord told him. ¹²If somehow the Lord may look on my humiliation, then he will return to me good things in place of his curse this day." ¹³And Daudid and his men went on the road, and Semei was going by the side of the mountain next to him, going and cursing and stoning with stones from his flanks and sprinkling with dirt. ¹⁴And the king came, and all his people, exhausted, and they recovered there.

¹⁵And Abessalom and every man of Israel entered into Ierousalem, and Achitophel was with him. ¹⁶And it happened when Chousi the ^bArchi, a companion^b of Daudid, came to Abessalom, that Chousi said to Abessalom, "Let the king live!" ¹⁷And Abessalom said to Chousi, "Is this your mercy with your companion? Why did you not go away with your companion?" ¹⁸And Chousi said to Abessalom, "No, but hereafter he whom the Lord and this people and every man of Israel have chosen, his I will be, and with him I will sit. ¹⁹And secondly, to whom will I be subject? Is it not in the presence of his son? Just as I was subject in the presence of your father, so I will be in your presence."

²⁰And Abessalom said to Achitophel, "Bring forth counsel among yourselves, what we should do." ²¹And Achitophel said to Abessalom, "Go in to the concubines of your father, whom he left behind to keep his house, and all Israel will hear that you put your father to shame, and the hands of all who are with you will be strengthened." ²²And they pitched the tent for Abessalom upon the roof, and Abessalom went in to the concubines of his father in the sight of all Israel. ²³And the counsel of Achitophel, which he counseled in the former days, was as if one were to inquire by a word of God; so was all the counsel of Achitophel, and indeed to Daudid and indeed to Abessalom.

17 And Achitophel said to Abessalom, "I will now choose for myself twelve thousand men, and I will set out and pursue closely after Daudid tonight. ²And I will come suddenly upon him, and he will be weary and faint in hands, and I will ^aastound him^a, and all the people who are with him shall flee, and I will strike only the king all alone, ³and I will turn all the people back to you, as a bride turns back to her husband. You seek only the life of one man, and there will be peace for all the people." ⁴And the saying was right in the sight of Abessalom and in the sight of all the elders of Israel.

⁵ And Abessalom said, "Do call indeed Chousi the Arachi, and let us hear what is in his mouth, indeed his." ⁶And Chousi went in to Abessalom, and Abessalom said to him, saying, "According to this word Achitophel spoke. Shall we act according to his saying? But if not, you speak." ⁷And Chousi said to Abessalom, "This counsel, that Achitophel counseled this one time, is not good." ⁸And Chousi said, "You know your father and his men, that they are very powerful and downright bitter in their spirit, as a bear robbed of her young in a field and as a savage sow in the plain. And your father is a man of war, and he shall not ^blodge with^b the people. ⁹For behold, he himself is now hidden in one of the hills or in one of the places. And it shall be, when he falls upon them at first, and if the hearer^c hears and says, 'There has been a slaughter among the people who are behind Abessalom,' ¹⁰and indeed a son of power himself, whose heart is like the heart of a lion—melting it^d shall melt away, for all Israel knows that your father is powerful, and those who are with him are sons of power. ¹¹For in advising I so advised, that all Israel being gathered, shall be gathered together to you, from Dan even to Bersabee, as the sand by the sea for multitude, and your face going in their midst. ¹²And we shall come to him in one of the places where we may find him there, and we shall encamp against him, as the dew falls on the ground, and we shall not leave behind among him and the men who are with him indeed one. ¹³And if he is gathered into a city, then all Israel will take ropes to that city, and we shall drag it as far as to the wadi in order that not even a stone may be left behind there." ¹⁴And Abessalom, and every man of Israel said, "The counsel of Chousi the Arachi is better than the counsel of Achitophel." And the Lord commanded to scatter abroad the good counsel of Achitophel so that the Lord might bring all evil upon Abessalom.

¹⁵ And Chousi the son of the Arachi said to Sadok and Abiathar the priests, "Thus and so Achitophel advised Abessalom and the elders of Israel, and thus and so I advised. ¹⁶And now send quickly and tell Daudid, saying, 'Do not lodge tonight in araboth^e of the wilderness, and indeed hasten crossing over, lest one swallow up the king and all the people who are with him.'" ¹⁷And Ionathan and Achimaas stood by the spring of Rogel, and the servant-girl went and told them, and they would go and tell King Daudid, for they could not be seen to enter into the city. ¹⁸And a lad saw them and told Abessalom, and the two went quickly and entered into the house of a man in Baourim, and he had a cistern in his courtyard, and they went down there. ¹⁹And the wife took and spread out the covering over the face of the cistern and dried araphoth^f on it, and not a thing was known. ²⁰And the servants of Abessalom came to the woman into the house, and they said, "Where are Achimaas and Ionathan?" And the woman said to them, "They passed by a little way from the water." And they searched and did not find, and they returned to Ierusalem.

²¹ And it happened, after they departed, that they came up out of the cistern and went and told King Daudid. And they said to Daudid, "Set out, and cross the water quickly, for thus Achitophel counseled about you." ²²And Daudid set out, and all the people who were with him, and they crossed the Jordan until the morning light; not even one went unnoticed who did not pass through the Jordan.

²³ And Achitophel saw that his counsel did not come to pass, and he saddled his donkey and set out and departed to his house into his city. And he commanded his household and hanged himself, and he died and was buried in the tomb of his father.

²⁴ And Daudid passed through to Manaim, and Abessalom crossed the Jordan, he and every man of Israel with him. ²⁵And Abessalom set Amessai instead of Ioab over the force. And Amessai was the son of a man, and his name was Iothor the Israelite; he it was who went in to Abigaia daughter of Naas, sister of Sarouia mother of Ioab. ²⁶And all Israel and Abessalom encamped in the land of Galaad.

²⁷ And it happened, when Daudid came to Manaim, Ouesbi son of Naas from Rabbath of the sons of Ammon and Machir son of Amiel from Lodabar and Berzelli the Galaadite from Rogellim ²⁸brought ten beds and double-sided rugs and ten cauldrons and earthen vessels and wheat and barley and wheat-meal and barley-meal and beans and lentils ²⁹and honey and butter and sheep and saphphoth^g from cows, and they brought them to Daudid and the people with him, to eat, for they said, "The people are hungry and faint and thirsty in the wilderness."

18 And Daud inspected the people who were with him and set over them officers of thousands and officers of hundreds. ²And Daud sent out the people, one-third by the hand of Ioab and one-third by the hand of Abessa son of Sarouia, brother of Ioab, and one-third by the hand of Eththi the Geththite. And Daud said to the people, "Going out I will go out, and indeed I with you." ³And they said, "You shall not go out. For if in flight we should flee, they will not set heart upon us. And if we should die, even half of us, they will not set heart upon us; for you are as we are, ten thousand, and now it is good that you will be a help for us in the city to help." ⁴And the king said to them, "Whatever pleases in your sight I will do." And the king stood close by the gate, and all the people were going out in hundreds and in thousands. ⁵And the king commanded Ioab and Abessa and Eththi, saying, "Spare for my sake the lad Abessalom." And all the people heard ^awhen the king commanded^a all the commanders concerning Abessalom.

⁶ And all the people went out into the forest opposite Israel, and the battle took place in the forest of Ephraim. ⁷And the people of Israel fell there before the servants of Daud, and the slaughter was great in that day, twenty thousand men. ⁸And the battle took place there, spread about over the face of all the country, and the forest exceeded in devouring of the people more than those whom the dagger devoured among the people in that day.

¹⁶ And Ioab trumpeted with a horn, and the people turned back in order not to pursue after Israel, for Ioab was sparing the people. ¹⁷And he took Abessalom and threw him into a great chasm in the forest, into the great pit, and set up as a stele over him, a very great heap of stones. And all Israel fled, a man to his covert. ¹⁸And Abessalom, while still alive also set up for himself the stele ^cby which he was taken and set it up as a stele to take^c, the stele that is in the valley of the king, for he said, "He has no son for the sake of remembering his name," and he called the stele Hand of Abessalom, until this day.

¹⁹ And Achimaas son of Sadok said, "Do let me run, and I will carry good tidings to the king, that the Lord has vindicated him from the hand of his enemies." ²⁰And Ioab said to him, "You are not a man of good tidings in this day, and you shall carry good tidings in another day, but in this day you shall not carry good tidings, because the son of the king has died." ²¹And Ioab said to Chousi, "Proceed, tell the king what you saw." And Chousi did obeisance to Ioab and went out. ²²And Achimaas son of Sadok continued further and said to Ioab, "And let it be that I may run, and indeed I after Chousi." And Ioab said, "Why is this that you run, my son? Come on; by going you have no good tidings for gain." ²³And he said, "So what if I will run?" And Ioab said to him, "Run." And Achimaas ran the way of the Kechar and went beyond Chousi.

²⁴ And Daud was sitting between the two gates. And the lookout went to the roof of the gate at the wall and lifted up his eyes and looked, and behold, a man running alone before him. ²⁵And the lookout shouted and told the king. And the king said, "If he is alone, there are good tidings in his mouth." And he kept going, going and drawing near. ²⁶And the lookout saw another man running, and the lookout shouted to the gate and said, "Behold, another man running alone!" And the king said, "And indeed he is bringing good tidings." ²⁷And the lookout said, "I see the running of the first one as the running of Achimaas son of Sadok." And the king said, "He is a good man, and indeed he will come for the purpose of beneficial good tidings."

²⁸ And Achimaas shouted and said to the king, "Peace!" And he did obeisance to the king on his face on the ground and said, "Blessed be the Lord your God, who shut up the men who hate, their hand against my lord the king." ²⁹And the king said, "Is there peace for the lad Abessalom?" And Achimaas said, "I saw the great multitude, so that Ioab sent off the slave of the king, even^d your slave, but I knew not what was there." ³⁰And the king said, "Turn aside, ^ebe set up as a stele^e here." And he turned aside and stood.

³¹ And behold, Chousi came and said to the king, "Let my lord the king receive good tidings! For the Lord has vindicated you today from the hand of all who were stirred up against you." ³²And the king said to Chousi, "Is there peace for the lad Abessalom?" And Chousi said, "May the enemies of my lord the king, and all who rose up against him for evil, be like the lad."

19 ^(18.33)And the king was troubled and went up to the upper chamber of the gate and wept, and thus he said, as he went, "O my son Abessalom, my son, my son Abessalom! Who would give my death instead of you, I instead of you? O Abessalom, my son, my son!"

2(19.1) And it was told Ioab, saying, "Behold, the king is weeping and mourning for Abessalom." ³⁽²⁾And the deliverance in that day turned into mourning for all the people, for the people heard in that day, saying, "The king is grieving for his son." ⁴⁽³⁾And the people kept stealing away in that day to enter into the city, as people steal away who are ashamed when they flee in battle. ⁵⁽⁴⁾And the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, saying, "O my son Abessalom, O Abessalom, my son!" ⁶⁽⁵⁾And Ioab went in to the king into the house and said, "Today you covered with shame the face of all your slaves who delivered you today, and the life of your sons and your daughters and the life of your wives and your concubines, ⁷⁽⁶⁾to love those who hate you and to hate those who love you. And you proclaimed today that neither your commanders nor servants exist, for I have perceived today that if Abessalom were alive, all of us would be dead today, that then it would have been the right thing in your sight. ⁸⁽⁷⁾And now arise, go out, and speak to the heart of your slaves; for I swore by the Lord, that unless you shall go out today—if a man shall lodge with you this night—and observe for yourself, this will be evil for you, even beyond all the evil that has come upon you from your youth until now." ⁹⁽⁸⁾And the king got up and took his seat in the gate. And all the people proclaimed, saying, "Behold, the king is sitting in the gate," and all the people entered in front of the king.

And Israel fled, a man to his coverts. ¹⁰⁽⁹⁾And all the people were disputing among all the tribes of Israel, saying, "King Daud rescued us from all our enemies, and he delivered us from the hand of al-lophyles, and now he has fled from the land and from his kingdom, from Abessalom. ¹¹⁽¹⁰⁾And Abessalom, whom we anointed over us, died in the battle. And now why are you quiet about bringing the king back?" And the word of all Israel came to the king.

12(11) And King Daud sent to Sadok and to Abiathar the priests, saying, "Speak to the elders of Iouda, saying, 'Why are you the last to bring the king back to his house? And the talk of all Israel came to the king. ¹³⁽¹²⁾You are my brothers, you are my bones and my flesh, and why are you the last to bring the king back to his house?' ¹⁴⁽¹³⁾And you shall say to Amessai, 'Are you not my bone and my flesh? And now, this is what God may do to me, and this is what he may add, if you shall not be commander of the force before me all my days instead of Ioab.'" ¹⁵⁽¹⁴⁾And he inclined the heart of every man of Iouda as one man, and they sent to the king, saying, "Return, you and all your slaves." ¹⁶⁽¹⁵⁾And the king returned and came as far as the Jordan, and men of Iouda came to Galgala to go to meet the king, to bring the king over the Jordan.

17(16) And Semei son of Gera son of the Iemeni, from Baourim, hurried and went down with a man of Iouda to meet King Daud, ¹⁸⁽¹⁷⁾and a thousand men were with him from Benjamin and Siba, the lad of the house of Saoul, and his fifteen sons with him and his twenty slaves with him, and they made straight towards the Jordan before the king ¹⁹⁽¹⁸⁾and ministered the ministry to bring over the king, and the crossing^a crossed over to raise up the household of the king and to do what was right in his sight.

And Semei son of Gera fell on his face before the king, as he crossed over the Jordan, ²⁰⁽¹⁹⁾and said to the king, "Let my lord not consider my lawlessness, and do not remember how much your servant did wrong in the day when my lord the king was going out from Ierousalem so that the king put it in his heart. ²¹⁽²⁰⁾For your slave knew that I sinned, and behold, I came today, first of all the house of Ioseph to go down to meet my lord the king." ²²⁽²¹⁾And Abessa son of Sarouia answered and said, "Shall not Semei be put to death for this, because he cursed the Lord's anointed?" ²³⁽²²⁾And Daud said, "What have I to do with you, O sons of Sarouia, that you become treacherous to me today? Today no man from Israel shall be put to death, for I do not know whether I am king today over Israel." ²⁴⁽²³⁾And the king said to Semei, "You shall not die." And the king swore to him.

25(24) And Memphibosthe son of Ionathan son of Saoul went down to meet the king, and he did not take care of his feet nor pare his nails nor make his moustache, and he did not wash his clothes, from the day when the king departed until the day when he arrived in peace. ²⁶⁽²⁵⁾And it happened, when he entered into Ierousalem to meet the king, that the king said to him, "Why is it that you did not go with me, Memphibosthe?" ²⁷⁽²⁶⁾And Memphibosthe said to him, "My lord O king, my slave deceived me; for your servant said to him, 'Saddle the donkey for me, and I will mount up on it and go with the king.' For your slave is lame. ²⁸⁽²⁷⁾And he played a trick on your slave against my lord the king. And my lord the king is like an angel of God, and do what is good in your sight. ²⁹⁽²⁸⁾For all the house of my father were nothing but men of death to my lord the king, and you set your slave among those who eat your table. And what right have I any longer even to cry any longer to the king?" ³⁰⁽²⁹⁾And the king said to him, "Why do you speak any longer of your affairs? I said, You and Siba shall divide the field for yourselves." ³¹⁽³⁰⁾And Memphibosthe said to the king, "And let him take indeed all, after my lord the king comes in peace to his house."

32(31) And Berzelli the Galaadite came down from Rogellim and crossed over the Jordan with the king, to send him out at the Jordan. ³³⁽³²⁾And Berzelli was a very elderly man, a son of eighty years, and he supported the king while he lived in Manaim, for he was a very great man. ³⁴⁽³³⁾And the king said to Berzelli, "You shall cross over with me, and I will support your old age with me in Ierusalem." ³⁵⁽³⁴⁾And Berzelli said to the king, "How many are the days of the years of my life, that I shall go up with the king to Ierusalem?" ³⁶⁽³⁵⁾Today I am a son of eighty years; I shall not discern between good and evil, shall I? Or will your slave taste any longer what I shall eat or drink? Or shall I hear any longer the voice of singing men and singing women? Why will your slave be a burden any longer on my lord the king? ³⁷⁽³⁶⁾Your slave will cross over the Jordan a little with the king. And why does the king recompense me this reward? ³⁸⁽³⁷⁾Do let your slave stay put, and I shall die in my city, near the tomb of my father and my mother. And behold, your slave Chamaam will cross over with my lord the king. And do for him what is good in your sight." ³⁹⁽³⁸⁾And the king said, "Let Chamaam cross over with me, and I will do for him what is good in your sight, and all that you shall choose in my power, I will do for you." ⁴⁰⁽³⁹⁾And all the people crossed over the Jordan, and the king crossed over, and the king kissed Berzelli and blessed him, and he returned to his own place. ⁴¹⁽⁴⁰⁾And the king crossed over to Galgala, and Chamaam crossed over with him, and all the people of Iouda were crossing over with the king, and indeed half of the people of Israel.

⁴²⁽⁴¹⁾ And behold, every man of Israel came to the king, and they said to the king, "Why is it that our brothers, man^a of Iouda, stole you away and brought the king and his household over the Jordan, and all Daudi's men with him?" ⁴³⁽⁴²⁾And every man of Iouda answered a man of Israel and said, "Because the king is near to me. And why were you thus angry concerning this matter? In eating, we did not eat from the king, did we? Or did he give us a gift or lift a burden^b for us?" ⁴⁴⁽⁴³⁾And a man of Israel answered the man of Iouda and said, "I have ten hands in the king, and I am first-born rather than you, and indeed in Daudi I am over you. And why is this that you despised me? And was my word not reckoned first to me, to bring the king back to me?" And the word of the man of Iouda grew harder than the word of the man of Israel.

20 And one nicknamed a lawless son was there, and his name was Sabee son of Bochori, the Iemeni man, and he trumpeted with the horn and said,

"We have no portion in Daudi, and we have no inheritance in the son of Iessai!

A man to your coverts, O Israel!"

²And every man of Israel went up from behind Daudi after Sabee son of Bochori, and man^c of Iouda adhered to their king from the Jordan even to Ierusalem.

³And Daudi entered into his house in Ierusalem, and the king took the ten women, his concubines, whom he left to keep the house, and gave them over into a house under guard and supported them but did not go in to them. And they were shut up until the day of their death, living as widows.

⁴And the king said to Amessai, "Call the man^c of Iouda to me for three days, and stand here yourself." ⁵And Amessai went to call Iouda^d, and he delayed beyond the set time that Daudi appointed for him. ⁶And Daudi said to Abessa, "Now Sabee son of Bochori will do us more harm than Abessalom, and now, take with yourself the servants of your lord, and pursue closely after him, lest he find strong cities for himself and will overshadow our eyes." ⁷And there went out after him the men of Iobab and Chereththi and Pheleththi and all the powerful men, and they went out from Ierusalem to pursue after Sabee son of Bochori. ⁸And they were beside the great stone that is in Gabaon, and Amessai went in before them. And Iobab was wearing a woolen cloak as his garment, and over it he was wearing a dagger fastened at his waist in its sheath, and the dagger came out and fell. ⁹And Iobab said to Amessai, "Are you in good health, brother?" And the right hand of Iobab took hold of the beard of Amessai to kiss him. ¹⁰And Amessai did not guard himself against the dagger that was in the hand of Iobab, and Iobab struck him with it in the muscles of the loins, and his entrails poured out on the ground, and he did not do it to him a second time, and he died.

And Iobab and Abessa his brother pursued after Sabee son of Bochori. ¹¹And a man from the lads of Iobab stood over him^e and said, "Who is it that likes Iobab, and who belongs to Daudi after Iobab!" ¹²And Amessai was drenched in his blood in the middle of the path. And the man saw that all the people had stopped, and he turned Amessai away from the path into a field and threw a garment over him, inasmuch as he saw all who came by him standing still. ¹³And when he preceded off the path, every man of Israel passed on after Iobab to pursue after Sabee son of Bochori.

¹⁴And he^f passed through among all the tribes of Israel to Abel and to Baithmacha, and all in Charri both assembled and came behind him^f. ¹⁵And they came near and kept laying siege against him^f in Abel and Baithmacha, and they poured out a mound against the city, and it stood within the outer fortification, and all the people who were with Iobab were intending to throw down the wall. ¹⁶And a wise woman shouted from the wall and said, "Listen! Listen! Do say to Iobab, 'Come over here,' and I will speak to him." ¹⁷And he came near to her, and the woman said, "Are you Iobab?" And he said, "I am." And she said to him, "Listen to the words of your slave." And Iobab said, "I am listening—I am." ¹⁸And she said, saying, "A saying they spoke^g at first^h, saying, 'When inquired of, one was inquired of in Abel,' and in Dan if they had abandoned what the faithful of Israel had established. 'When inquiring, they shall inquire in Abel,' and likewise if they had abandoned it. ¹⁹I am a peaceful one of the supports of Israel, but you seek to put to death a city and a mother city in Israel; why do you drown the Lord's inheritance?" ²⁰And Iobab answered and said, “Be gracious to me; be gracious to me, if I shall drown and if I shall destroy! ²¹This is not the reason! For there is a man from mount Ephraim—Sabee son of Bochori is his name—and he lifted up his hand against King Daud; give him alone up to me, and I will depart from upon the city.” And the woman said to Ioab, “Behold, his head shall be thrown to you through the wall.” ²²And the woman went in to all the people and spoke to all the city in her wisdom. And she removed the head of Sabee son of Bochori and threw it to Ioab. And he trumpeted with a horn, and they were dispersed from the city, a man to his coverts, and Ioab returned to Ierousalem to the king.

²³ And Ioab was engaged with the entire force of Israel, and Banaias son of Iodae was over Chereththi and over Pheleththi, ²⁴and Adoniram was over the tribute, and Iosaphat son of Achilouth was doing the recording, ²⁵and Sousa was secretary, and Sadok and Abiathar were priests, ²⁶and indeed Iras the Iarin was Daud’s priest.

21 And there was a famine in the days of Daud for three years, year next to year, and Daud sought the face of the Lord. And the Lord said, “There is an injustice upon Saoul and upon his house, because he ^aput to death^a by^b a death of blood, on account of which he put to death the Gabaonites.” ²And King Daud called the Gabaonites and spoke to them. (And the Gabaonites are not sons of Israel, but only from the remnant of the Amorrite, and the sons of Israel swore to them, and Saoul sought to strike them, when he was zealous for the sons of Israel and Iouda.) ³And Daud said to the Gabaonites, “What shall I do for you? And in what way shall I make atonement, and you will bless the inheritance of the Lord?” ⁴And the Gabaonites said to him, “For us it is not silver and gold with Saoul and with his house, and for us there is no man to put to death in Israel.” And he said, “What are you saying, and I will do it for you?” ⁵And they said to the king, “The man brought an end upon us, and he who deceived in order to utterly destroy us persecuted us; let us do away with him, so he has no stand within any boundary of Israel. ⁶Let one hand over to us seven men from his sons, and let us hang them in the sun for the Lord in Gabaon of Saoul, elect ones of the Lord.” And the king said, “I will hand them over.”

⁷ And the king spared Memphibosthe son of Ionathan son of Saoul, because of the oath of the Lord that was between them, between Daud and between Ionathan son of Saoul. ⁸And the king took the two sons of Respha daughter of Aia, whom she bore to Saoul, Ermoni and Memphibosthe, and the five sons of Michol daughter of Saoul, whom she bore to Esriel the Mooulathi, son of Berzelli, ⁹and he gave them into the hand of the Gabaonites, and they hung them in the sun on the mountain before the Lord. And the seven themselves fell together. And also they were put to death in the days of harvest at the first, at the beginning of barley harvest.

¹⁵ And the allophytes still had war with Israel. And Daud went down, and his servants with him, and they fought with the allophytes, and Daud was faint. ¹⁶And Iesbi, who was among the descendants of Rapha—and the weight of his spear was the weight of three hundred shekels of bronze, and he was fitted with a mace—he also intended to strike Daud. ¹⁷But Abessa son of Sarouia came to his aid and struck the allophyle and put him to death. Then the men of Daud swore, saying, “You shall no longer go out with us to battle, and you shall not quench the lamp of Israel.”

¹⁸ And after this there was still a battle in Geth with the allophytes; then Sebocha the Hastatothi struck Seph, who was among the descendants of Rapha. ¹⁹And the battle was in Gob with the allophytes. And Eleanan son of Ariorgim, the Baithleemite, struck Goliath the Geththite, and the shaft of his spear was like a beam of weavers. ²⁰And there was still war in Geth. And there was a man of Madon, and the fingers of his hands and the toes of his foot were six and six, twenty-four in number, and indeed he was born to Rapha. ²¹And he reproached Israel, and Ionathan son of Semei brother of Daud struck him. ²²These four were born as descendants of the giants in Geth, to Rapha, as a household, and they fell by the hand of Daud and by the hand of his slaves.

22 And Daud spoke to the Lord the words of this ode in which day the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies and from the hand of Saoul. ²And he said:

O Lord, my rock and my fortress,
and for me one who delivers me;
³ my God shall be my keeper;
I will be reliant on him,
my protector and horn of my salvation, my supporter and my refuge for my salvation,

4 I will call upon the Lord for he is praiseworthy,
 and I shall be saved from my enemies.
 5 For afflictions of death encompassed me;
 wadis of lawlessness astounded me;
 6 pangs of death surrounded me;
 rigidities of death outran me.
 7 When I am afflicted I will call upon the Lord, and to my God I will shout, and from his shrine he shall heed my voice,
 and my cry shall be in his ears.
 8 And the earth was stirred up and quaked, and the foundations of the sky were confounded and torn apart, because the Lord was angry with them.
 9 Smoke went up in his wrath, and fire from his mouth shall devour;
 coals flamed forth from him.
 10 And he bent the heavens and came down, and thick darkness was under his feet.
 11 And he sat on cherubim and flew,
 and he was seen upon wings of wind.
 12 And he made darkness his hideaway around him;
 his tent was a darkness of waters;
 it thickened^a with clouds of air.
 13 From the splendor before him coals of fire flamed forth.
 14 The Lord thundered from heaven, and the Most High gave his voice.
 15 And he sent forth arrows and scattered them—
 lightning, and astounded them.
 16 And b^bemissions of sea^b were seen, and foundations of the world were laid bare
 by the rebuke of the Lord,
 at the blast of the breath of his anger.
 17 He sent from on high, and he took me;
 he drew me out of many waters.
 18 He rescued me from my enemies of strength, from those who hate me,
 for they were too strong for me.
 19 They outran me in the day of my affliction, and the Lord was my support.
 20 And he brought me out into spaciousness, and he delivered me, because he delighted in me.
 21 And the Lord rewarded me according to my righteousness;
 according to the cleanness of my hands
 he rewarded me.
 22 For I kept ways of the Lord and did not impiously depart from my God.
 23 For all his judgments were in front of me, and his statutes, I did not depart from them.

 24 And I shall be blameless to him, and I shall keep myself from my lawlessness.
 25 And the Lord will pay me back according to my righteousness and according to the cleanness of my hands in his sight.
 26 With the devout you will be deemed devout, and with a perfect man you will be deemed perfect, 27 and with the select^c you will be select^c, and with the crooked you will be deemed crooked.
 28 And you will save the poor people, and you will lower^d your eyes on the haughty.
 29 For you are my lamp, O Lord, and the Lord will illumine my darkness
 for me.
 30 For in you I shall run as a lightly armed man, and in my God I shall scale a wall.
 31 The Strong One—his way is blameless;
 the word of the Lord is strong, ^etried by fire^e;
 he is a protector for all who rely on him.
 32 Who is strong except the Lord?
 And who will be a creator except our God?
 33 It was the Strong One who strengthened me with power
 and shook my way blameless, 34 making my feet like the feet of deer and setting me secure on the heights, 35 training my hands for war and breaking a bronze bow with my arm.
 36 And you gave me protection for my salvation,
 and your answer made me increase 37 into spaciousness for my steps under me, and my legs did not totter.
 38 I will pursue my enemies and destroy them, and I will not turn back until I will bring them to an end.
 39 And I will crush them, and they shall not rise,
 and they shall fall under my feet.
 40 And you will strengthen me with power for battle;
 you will make those who rise up against me bow down under me.
 41 And you gave me my enemies in the back;
 those who hated me, you even put them to death.
 42 They will shout, and there is no helper;
 to the Lord, but he did not answer them.
 43 And I ground them down like dust of the earth;
 like mire of exits I beat them fine.

44 And you will rescue me from battle with peoples;
you will guard me to be head of nations;
a people whom I did not know was subject to me.

45 Foreign sons lied to me;
at the hearing of the ear they heard me.

46 Foreign sons shall be cast away and shall stumble out of their enclosures.

47 The Lord lives! And blessed be my keeper!
And my God, the keeper of my salvation, shall be exalted!

48 The Lord who gives me vengeance is strong, disciplining peoples underneath me and bringing me out from my enemies.

49 And you will exalt me from those who are stirred up against me;
you will rescue me from a man of wrongs.

50 Therefore I will acknowledge you, O Lord, among the nations,
and make music in your name, magnifying ^aacts of deliverance^a of his king and doing mercy to his anointed, to Daudid and his offspring forever.

23 And these are the last words of Daudid: Faithful is Daudid, son of Iessai, and faithful the man whom the Lord raised up to be the anointed of Iakob's God, and fitting are Israel's melodies.

2 The Lord's spirit spoke by me, and his word was upon my tongue.

3 The God of Israel speaks; Israel's keeper spoke to me: Speak a parable.
How might you^b strengthen fear of God ^cby
a human^c?

dawn;
the morning did not pass from splendor, and it was as if from rain for tender grass

Strong^d?
For he made with me an everlasting covenant,
ready in every season, kept safe;
for my whole salvation and total will is that the lawless shall not sprout.

6 They are all like a thorny plant, thrust out, for not by hand shall they be taken, and a man shall not grow weary among them—
and full of iron also is a shaft of a spear—

and with fire, with burning, they shall be burned by their shame.

8 These are the names of the powerful men of Daudid: Iebosthe the Chananite is commander of the Third—Adinon the Asonite—he drew his sword against eight hundred casualties at once.

9 And after him was Eleazar, son of his father's brother, son of Sousites^e, among the three powerful men. He was with Daudid in Serran, and when he reproached^f among the allophyles, they gathered there for battle, and they went up, a man of Israel. ¹⁰He stood up and struck among the allophyles until his hand grew weary and his hand stuck to the dagger, and the Lord brought about a great deliverance in that day. And the people were encamped behind him—only to despoil.

11 And after him was Samaia son of Asa, the Harouchite. And the allophyles gathered together at Wild Beasts, and there was there a portion of the field full of lentil, and the people fled from before allophyles. ¹²And he ^gwas made a steles in the middle of the portion and delivered it and struck the allophyles, and the Lord brought about a great deliverance.

13 And three of the Thirty went down and came into Kason to Daudid into the cave of Odollam, and a unit of the allophyles encamped in the valley of Raphaim. ¹⁴And Daudid was then in the enclosure, and the support of the allophyles was then in Baith-leem. ¹⁵And Daudid longed and said, "Who will give me water to drink from the cistern that is in Baith-leem, that is by the gate?" But the corps of the allophyles was then in Baithleem. ¹⁶And the three powerful men broke through into the camp of the allophyles and drew water from the cistern that was in Baithleem that was by the gate and took it and came to Daudid. But he did not want to drink it, and he poured it out as a libation to the Lord ¹⁷and said, "Be gracious to me, O Lord, for doing this.
Shall I drink the blood of the men who went by^h their lives?" And he did not want to drink it. The three powerful men did these things.

18 And Abessa, brother of Ioab son of Sarouia, he was commander among the Three. And he awakened his spear against three hundred casualties and had a name among the Three. ¹⁹Of those Three he was highly esteemed and became a commander for them, but he did not attain to the Three.

20 And Banaias son of Iodae, he was a man great in deeds, from Kabeseel, and he struck the two sons of Ariel of Moab. He also went down and struck the lion in the middle of the pit in the day of the snowfall. ²¹He struck the Egyptian man, a man to be seen. Now in the hand of the Egyptian was a spear, like the upright of a ladder, and he went down to him with a rod and snatched the spear out of the hand of the Egyptian and killed him with his own spear. ²²These things did Bana-ias son of Iodae, and he had a name among the three powerful men. ²³Of the Three he was highly esteemed, but he did not attain to the Three. And Daudid appointed him for his hearings^a.

24 And these are the names of the powerful men of King Daudid: Asael, brother of Ioab (he was among the Thirty), Eleanan son of Doudi his father's brother in Baithleem, ²⁵Samai the Haroudite, Elika the Harodite, ²⁶Helles the Phelothi, Iras son of Ekkas the Thekoite, ²⁷Abiezer the Anathothite of the sons of the Hasothite, ²⁸Selmon the Aoitte, Moore the Netophathite, ²⁹Hela son of Baana the Netophathite, Eththi son of Riba of Gabaeth son of Benjamin, ³⁰Banaias the Pharathonite, Houri of Nachaligaias, ³¹Abiel son of the Arabothite, Azmoth the Barsamite, ³²Eliasou the Salabonite, sons of Iasan, Ionathan, ³³Samma the Harodite, Achian son of Sarad the Araourite, ³⁴Aliphaeth son of the Hasbite son of the Maachati, Eliab son of Achitophel the Gelonite, ³⁵Hasarai the Carmelite, Pharai the Erchi, ³⁶Igaal son of Nathan from power, son of Gaddi, ³⁷Elie the Ammanite, Gelorai the Berothite, carrier of the weapons of Ioab son of Sarouia, ³⁸Iras the Iethirite, Gareb the Iethirite, ³⁹Ourias the Chet-tite—thirty-seven in all.

24 And anger of the Lord added to blaze out against Israel, and he incited Daudid against them, saying, "Go, count Israel and Iouda." ²And the king said to Ioab commander of the force, who was with him, "Go now through all the tribes of Israel, from Dan and as far as Bersabee, and inspect the people, and I will know the number of the people." ³And Ioab said to the king, "And may the Lord your God add to the people, just as they are, even a hundred times, just as they are, even while the eyes of my lord the king see! And my lord the king, why is he desirous in this matter?" ⁴And the word of the king prevailed against Ioab and against the commanders of the force. And Ioab and the commanders of the force went out before the king to inspect the people of Israel. ⁵And they crossed the Jordan and encamped in Aroer on the right side of the city that is in the middle of the ravine of Gad and Eliezer. ⁶And they came to Galaad and to the land of Thabason, which is Hadasai, and they drew near to Danidan and Oudan and circled round to Sidon ⁷and came to Mapsar of Tyre and all the cities of the Heuite and the Chananite, and they came down south of Iouda to Bersabee. ⁸And they went round in all the land, and they drew near to Ierousalem at the end of nine months and twenty days. ⁹And Ioab gave the number of the inspection of the people to the king: and Israel was eight hundred thousand men of power capable of drawing a sword, and man^b of Iouda was five hundred thousand warrior men.

10 And Daudid's heart struck him after he had numbered the people, and Daudid said to the Lord, "I sinned greatly in what I did. Now, O Lord, do put aside the lawlessness of your slave, for I have been very foolish." ¹¹And Daudid rose in the morning, and a word of the Lord came to Gad the prophet, the seer of Daudid, saying, ¹²"Go, and speak to Daudid, saying: This is what the Lord says: Three things I am—I am taking up against you, and choose for yourself one of them, and I will do it to you." ¹³And Gad went in to Daudid and told him, and said to him, "Choose for yourself what shall happen: whether famine shall come to you for three years in your land or that you flee for three months before your enemies, and they will be pursuing you, or that there be death for three days in your land. Now then, decide, and see what word I shall answer to the one who sent me." ¹⁴And Daudid said to Gad, "It is very narrow for me on every side; I shall fall now into the hand of the Lord, for his mercies are very many, but into human hands I will not fall." And Daudid chose for himself death.

15 And there were days of wheat harvest, and the Lord gave death in Israel from morning till lunchtime, and the destruction began among the people, and seventy thousand of the men died out of the people, from Dan and as far as Bersabee. ¹⁶And the angel of God stretched out his hand toward Ierousalem to destroy it, and the Lord was consoled over the evil and said to the angel who was destroying among the people, "It is much now; relax your hand." And the angel of the Lord was by the threshing floor of Orna the Iebousite. ¹⁷And Daudid spoke to the Lord when he saw the angel hitting among the people and said, "Behold, I am—I did wrong, and I am the shepherd—I did evil, and these are the sheep; what did they do? Now let your hand be against me and against the house of my father."

18 And Gad came to Daudid in that day and said to him, "Go up, and erect an altar to the Lord on the threshing floor of Orna the Iebousite." ¹⁹And Daudid went up according to the word of Gad, according as the Lord commanded him. ²⁰And Orna looked out and saw the king and his servants passing by upon him, and Orna went out and did obeisance to the king on his face on the ground. ²¹And Orna said, "Why is it that my lord the king came to his slave?" And Daudid said, "To buy the threshing floor from you in order to build an altar to the Lord, and the destruction may be stopped over the people." ²²And Orna said to Daudid, "Let my lord the king take and offer up to the Lord what is good in his sight; behold, the oxen for a whole burnt offering, and the wheels and the gear of the oxen for wood." ²³Orna gave everything to the king, and Orna said to the king, "May the Lord your God bless you."

24 And the king said to Orna, "No, on the contrary, buying I will buy from you at a price, and I will not offer up a whole burnt offering to the Lord, my God, without payment." And Daudid bought the threshing floor and the oxen in silver of fifty shekels. ²⁵And Daudid built there an altar to the Lord and offered up whole burnt offerings and those for peace. And Salomon added onto the altar in the end, for it was little at first. And the Lord listened to the land, and the destruction was stopped from upon Israel.

1 And King Daudid was old, advanced in days, and they kept clothing him with clothes, and he was not being warmed. ²And his servants said, "Let them search for a young virgin for our lord the king, and she shall wait on the king, and she shall be keeping him warm and shall fall asleep with him, and our lord the king shall be warmed." ³And they searched for a beautiful girl from every boundary of Israel and found Abisak the Somanite and brought her to the king. ⁴And the girl was beautiful, extremely so, and she was keeping the king warm and was ministering to him, but the king did not know^a her.

5 And Adonias son of Haggith was exalting himself, saying, "I will be king," and he prepared for himself chariots and horsemen and fifty men to run along before him. ⁶And his father did not ever hinder him, saying, "For what reason did you act?" And indeed he was very youthful in appearance, and ^bhe begot^b him after Abessalom. ⁷And his conferences were with Joab the son of Sarouia and with Abiathar the priest, and they were helping behind Adonias. ⁸And Sadok the priest and Banaias son of Iodae and Nathan the prophet and Semei and Rei and the powerful men of Daudid were not behind Adonias.

9 And Adonias offered sacrifices, sheep and calves and lambs, with stone of Zoeleth, which was next to the spring of Rogel, and he invited all his brothers and all the prominent men of Iouda, servants of the king, ¹⁰and Nathan the prophet and Banaias and the powerful men and Salomon his brother he did not invite.

11 And Nathan spoke to Bersabee mother of Salomon, saying, "Did you not hear that Adonias son of Haggith became king, and our lord Daudid did not know? ¹²And now come, I will indeed give you advice. And deliver your own life and the life of your son Salomon. ¹³Come on, go in to King Daudid, and you shall speak to him, saying, 'Did you not, my lord O king, swear to your slave, saying: Salomon your son shall be king after me, and he shall sit on my throne? And why is it that Adonias became king?' ¹⁴And behold, while you are still there speaking with the king, I too will go in after you and will fill out your words."

15 And Bersabee went in to the king into the chamber. And the king was very old, and Abisak the Somanite was ministering to the king. ¹⁶And Bersabee bent down and did obeisance to the king, and the king said, "What is it with you?" ¹⁷And she said, "My lord O king, you swore by the Lord your God to your slave, saying: Salomon your son shall be king after me, and he shall sit on my throne. ¹⁸And now, behold, Adonias became king, and you, my lord O king, did not know. ¹⁹And he offered sacrifices, calves and lambs and sheep in great numbers, and invited all the sons of the king and Abiathar the priest and Joab the commander of the force, but Salomon your slave he did not invite. ²⁰And you, my lord O king—the eyes of all Israel are towards you to tell them who shall sit on the throne of my lord the king after him. ²¹And it will come to pass, when my lord the king sleeps with his fathers, that I myself and my son Salomon will be sinners."

22 And behold, while she was still speaking with the king, Nathan the prophet also came. ²³And it was told the king, "Behold, Nathan the prophet." And he entered in front of the king and did obeisance to the king, in front of him on the ground. ²⁴And Nathan said, "My lord O king, did you say, 'Adonias shall be king after me, and he shall sit on my throne'? ²⁵For today he went down and offered sacrifices, calves and lambs and sheep in great numbers, and invited all the sons of the king and the commanders of the force and Abiathar the priest, and behold, they are eating and drinking before him, and they said, 'Let King Adonias live!' ²⁶But me myself your slave and Sadok the priest and Banaias son of Iodae and Salomon your slave he did not invite. ²⁷If this thing has been brought about by my lord the king, then you did not let your slave know who shall sit on the throne of my lord the king after him."

28 And Daudid answered and said, "Summon to me Bersabee." And she came in before the king and stood before him. ²⁹And the king swore and said, "The Lord lives, who redeemed my life from every affliction, ³⁰that as I swore to you by the Lord, the God of Israel, saying, 'Salomon your son shall be king after me, and he shall sit on my throne instead of me,' that so will I do this day." ³¹And Bersabee bent down on her face on the ground and did obeisance to the king and said, "Let my lord King Daudid live forever!"

32 And King Daudid said, "Summon to me Sadok the priest and Nathan the prophet and Banaias son of Iodae." And they came in before the king. ³³And the king said to them, "Take the slaves of your lord with you and mount my son Salomon on my own mule and bring him down to Gion.

³⁴And there let Sadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anoint him king over Israel. And trumpet with a horn, and you shall say, 'Let King Salomon live!' ³⁵And he shall sit on my throne, and he shall be king instead of me, and I myself commanded that he be ruler over Israel and Iouda." ³⁶And Banaias son of Iodae answered the king and said, "May it be! May the Lord, the God of my lord the king, so guarantee. ³⁷As the Lord was with my lord the king, so may he be with Salomon, and may he make his throne greater than the throne of my lord King Daud."

³⁸ And Sadok the priest went down, and Nathan the prophet and Banaias son of Iodae and Chereththi and Pheleththi, and they seated Salomon on the mule of King Daud and led him away to Gion. ³⁹And Sadok the priest took the horn of oil from the tent and anointed Salomon and trumpeted with the horn. And all the people said, "Let King Salomon live!" ⁴⁰And all the people went up after him, and they were dancing in choruses and rejoicing with great joy, and the earth burst at their sound.

⁴¹ And Adonias heard, and all his guests, and they finished eating. And Iobab heard the sound of the horn and said, "What, the sound of the city echoing?" ⁴²While he was still speaking, also behold, Ionathan son of Abiathar the priest came. And Adonias said, "Come in, for you are a man of power. And bring good news." ⁴³And Ionathan answered and said, "Actually, our lord King Daud made Salomon king, ⁴⁴and the king sent with him Sadok the priest and Nathan the prophet and Banaias son of Iodae and Chereththi and Pheleththi, and they seated him on the mule of the king, ⁴⁵and Sadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anointed him king in Gion, and they went up from there rejoicing, and the city echoed. This is the sound that you heard. ⁴⁶And Salomon sat on the throne of the kingdom. ⁴⁷And the slaves of the king came in to bless our lord King Daud, saying, 'May God make the name of Salomon your son better than your name and make his throne greater than your throne.' And the king did obeisance on his bed, ⁴⁸and indeed thus said the king, 'Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who today gave from my offspring one sitting on my throne, and my eyes see it.'"

2 And the days of Daud drew near for him to die, and he commanded Salomon his son, saying: ²"I am—I am going by way of all the earth. And you shall be strong, and you shall become a man, ³and you shall keep the charge of the Lord your God, to walk in his ways, to keep his commandments and the statutes and the judgments which are written in the law of Moyses so that you may understand what you shall do in all things, whatever I command you ⁴so that the Lord may establish his word that he spoke, saying, 'If your sons take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with their whole heart and with their whole soul—saying: There shall not be utterly destroyed for you a man from upon the throne of Israel.'

⁵ "And indeed you knew what Iobab son of Sarouia did to me, what he did to the two commanders of the forces of Israel, to Abenner son of Ner and to Amessai son of Iether, and he killed them and arrayed the blood of war in peace and put innocent blood on his belt that was on his waist and on his sandal that was on his foot. ⁶And you shall act according to your wisdom, and you shall not bring his gray hair down in peace to Hades. ⁷And you shall do mercy to the sons of Berzelli the Galaadite, and they shall be among those who eat your table, for thus they drew near to me when I ran away from before Abessalom your brother. ⁸And behold, there is with you Semei son of Gera son of the Iemeni from Baourim, and he cursed me with a painful curse on the day when I went to Camps, and he came down to meet me at the Jordan, and I swore to him by the Lord, saying, 'If I will put you to death with a sword, . . . !' ⁹And you shall not hold him guiltless, for you are a wise man, and you will know what you shall do to him, and you shall bring his gray hair down with blood to Hades."

¹⁰ And Daud slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of Daud. ¹¹And the days that Daud reigned over Israel were forty years; in Chebron he reigned seven years and in Ierusalem thirty-three years.

(OLD GREEK)

2 ¹²And Salomon sat on the throne of his father Daud, a son of twelve years, and his kingdom was well prepared.

¹³ And Adonias son of Haggith came in to Bersabee, Salomon's mother, and did obeisance to her. But she asked, "Is your visit peace?" And he said, "Peace; ¹⁴a word for me with you." And she said to him, "Speak." ¹⁵And he said to her, "You know that the kingdom was mine and all Israel set its face on me to be king, and the kingdom was turned about and became my brother's, for it was his from the Lord. ¹⁶And now I request one request from you; do not turn away your face." And Bersabee said to him, "Speak on." ¹⁷And he said to her, "Speak now to King Salomon—for he will not turn his face from you—and he will give me Abisak the Somanite for a wife." ¹⁸And Bersabee said, "Very well; I will speak to the king on your behalf."

19 And Bersabee went in to King Salomon to speak to him on behalf of Adonias. And the king rose to meet her and kissed her, and he sat on his throne, and a throne was placed for the king's mother, and she sat on his right. ²⁰And she said to him, "I request one small request from you; do not turn your face away." And the king said to her, "Make your request, my mother, for I will not refuse you." ²¹And she said, "Let now Abisak the Somanite be given to your brother Adonias as a wife." ²²And King Salomon answered and said to his mother, "And why do you request Abisak for Adonias? And request for him the kingdom! For he is my brother, the great one beyond me, and he has the priest Abiathar, and he has Ioab the son of Sarouia the commander-in-chief for a companion!" ²³And King Salomon swore by the Lord, saying, "This is what God may do to me, and this may he add, for Adonias spoke this word at the risk of his life! ²⁴And now the Lord lives, who prepared me and placed me on the throne of my father Dauid, and he made me a house, as the Lord spoke, for today Adonias shall be put to death." ²⁵And King Salomon sent by the hand of Banaïou son of Iodae and did away with him, and Adonias died on that day.

²⁶ And the king said to the priest Abiathar, "Depart quickly to Anathoth, to your field, for you are a man of death on this day, and I will not put you to death, because you carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord before my father and because you were afflicted with all the hardships with which my father was afflicted." ²⁷And Salomon banished Abiathar from being a priest of the Lord, to fulfill the word of the Lord that he spoke regarding the house of Eli in Selom.

²⁸ And the news came to Ioab the son of Sarouia—for Ioab had inclined after Adonias and did not incline after Salomon—and Ioab fled to the covert of the Lord and grasped the horns of the altar. ²⁹And it was told to Salomon, saying, "Ioab fled to the tent of the Lord, and behold, he is grasping the horns of the altar," And Salomon sent to Ioab, saying, "What happened to you that you have fled to the altar?" And Ioab said, "Because I was afraid from before you, and I fled to the Lord." And King Salomon sent Banaïou son of Iodae, saying, "Go, and do away with him, and bury him." ³⁰And Banaïou son of Iodae came to Ioab into the tent of the Lord and said to him, "This is what the king says, 'Come out.'" And Ioab said, "I am not going out, for I will die here." And Banaïou son of Iodae returned and said to the king, saying, "This is what Ioab has spoken, and this is what he has answered me." ³¹And the king said to him, "Go, and do to him as he has said, and do away with him, and you shall bury him, and today you will take away from me and from my father's house the blood that Ioab shed without cause, ³²and the Lord brought back the blood of his injustice on his head, as he fell upon the two persons who were more righteous and better than he, and he killed them with a sword, and my father Dauid did not know of their blood, Abenner son of Ner, commander-in-chief of Israel, and Amessa son of Iether, commander-in-chief of Ioudas, ³³and their spilled blood was brought back on his head and on the head of his offspring forever, and to Dauid and to his offspring and to his house and to his throne may there be peace from the Lord forever." ³⁴And Banaïou son of Iodae came upon Ioab and put him to death and buried him at his house in the wilderness. ³⁵And the king put Banaïou son of Iodae in command in his place, and the kingdom was being established in Ierousalem, and the king appointed the priest Sadok first priest in the place of Abiathar.

35a (4.29) And the Lord gave Salomon discernment and very great wisdom and breadth of mind like the sand which is by the sea, ^{35b}(4.30) and the discernment of Salomon was greatly multiplied above the discernment of all ancient sons and above all prudent ones of Egypt.

35c(3.1) And he took the daughter of Pharaoh and brought her into the city of Dauid until he first finished his house and the house of the Lord and the wall of Ierousalem round about; in seven years he made and finished them. ^{35d}(5.15) And Salomon had seventy thousand bearing a burden and eighty thousand stonemasons in the hill country.

35e(7.23) And Salomon made the sea and the supports and the great washbasins and the pillars and the fountain of the court and the bronze sea. ^{35f}And he built the citadel and its defenses, and he cut through the city of Dauid; ^(9.24)thus Pharaoh's daughter used to go up from the city of Dauid to her house which he built for her. Then he built the citadel.

35g(9.25) And Salomon would offer up in the year three whole burnt offerings and peace offerings on the altar that he built for the Lord and would burn incense before the Lord. And he finished the house.

35l And while Dauid was still alive, he commanded Salomon, saying, ^(2.8)"Behold, with you is Semei son of Gera, son of the offspring of the Jemini, from Chebron; ^{35m}he cursed me with a painful curse on the day I was going into Camps, ³⁵ⁿand he would come down to meet me at the Jordan, and I swore to him by the Lord, saying: If he will be put to death with a sword . . . ! ^{35o}(2.9) And now do not hold him guiltless, for you are a prudent man, and you will know what you shall do to him, and you shall bring his gray head down with blood to Hades."

36 And the king summoned Semei and said to him, "Build yourself a house in Ierousalem, and sit there, and you shall not go out from there to any place whatever, ³⁷and it will be on the day of your going out, and you shall cross the Wadi Kedron, knowing you shall know that by death you shall die; your blood shall be on your own head." And the king caused him to swear on that day. ³⁸And Semei said to the king, "The dictum is fair that you have spoken, my lord O king; so will your slave do." And Semei stayed in Ierousalem three years.

³⁹ And it happened after three years that two of Semei's slaves ran away to King Anchous son of Maacha of Geth, and it was told Semei, saying, "Behold, your slaves are in Geth," ⁴⁰and Semei arose and saddled his donkey and went to Anchous in Geth to search for his slaves, and Semei went and brought his slaves from Geth. ⁴¹And it was reported to Salomon, saying, "Semei went from Ierousalem to Geth and brought back his slaves." ⁴²And the king sent and summoned Semei and said to him, "Did I not make you swear by the Lord and solemnly adjure you, saying, 'Knowing you shall know that on the day you go out of Ierousalem and go to the right or to the left, by death you shall die?' ⁴³And why is it that you have not kept the oath of the Lord and the commandment which I commanded against you?" ⁴⁴And the king said to Semei, "You know all your evil that your heart knew that you did to my father Daud, and the Lord has recompensed your evil on your own head, ⁴⁵and King Salomon is blessed, and the throne of Daud shall be established before the Lord forever." ⁴⁶And King Salomon commanded Banaia son of Iodae, and he went out and did away with him, and he died.

^{46a} And King Salomon was very prudent and wise, ^(4.20)and Ioudas and Israel were very many as the sand which is by the sea in great number, eating and drinking and being happy, ^{46b}and Salomon was chief among all the kingdoms, and they were bringing gifts, and they were subject to Salomon all the days of his life. ^{46c}And Salomon began to open the resources of Lebanon, ^{46d}and he built Thermai in the wilderness. ^{46e}And this was ^(4.22)the midday meal for Salomon: thirty kors^a of choice flour and sixty kors^a of ground meal, ^(4.23)ten choice calves and twenty pasture-fed oxen and one hundred sheep, besides deer and gazelles and choice fatted birds. ^{46f(4.24)}For he was chief everywhere across the river from Raphi to Gaza, among all the kings across the river, ^{46g}and he had peace on all his sides round about, ^(4.25)and Ioudas and Israel lived in confidence, each under his vine and under his fig tree, eating and drinking, from Dan and as far as Bersabee, all the days of Salomon. ^{46h}And these were the officials of Salomon: Azariou son of Sadok the priest and Orniou son of Nathan chief of those in charge and Edram, over his house, and Souba, scribe, and Basa son of Achithalam, recorder, and Abi son of Ioab, commander-in-chief, and Achire son of Edrai over the levies and Banaia son of Iodae over the main court and over the brickworks and Zachour son of Nathan, the counselor. ^{46i(4.26)}And Salomon had forty thousand brood mares for chariots and twelve thousand horsemen. ^{46k(4.21)}And he was chief among all the kings from the river and as far as the land of allophytes and to the borders of Egypt.

^{46l} Salomon son of Daud reign'd over Israel and Ioudas in Ierousalem.

3 ²Only, the people were burning incense at the high places, because until now a house had not been built for the name of the Lord.

³ And Salomon loved the Lord, to walk in the ordinances of his father Daud; only, he would sacrifice and offer incense at the high places. ⁴And he arose and went to Gabaon to sacrifice there, for this was the highest ground and great; Salomon offered a thousand whole burnt offerings on the altar at Gabaon. ⁵And the Lord appeared to Salomon in a dream by night, and the Lord said to Salomon, "Request some request for yourself." ⁶And Salomon said, "You did great mercy with your slave, my father Daud, as he passed through before you in truth and in righteousness and in uprightness of heart with you, and you have kept for him this great mercy to give his son on his throne, as this day. ⁷And now, O Lord my God, you gave your slave in place of my father Daud, and I am a little lad, and I do not know my going out and my coming in, ⁸but your slave is in the midst of your people whom you chose, a large people, who shall not be counted, ⁹and you shall give your slave a heart to hear and to judge your people in righteousness to discern between good and evil; for who will be able to judge this your weighty people?"

¹⁰ And it was pleasing before the Lord that Salomon requested this thing. ¹¹And the Lord said to him, "Because you requested this thing from me and did not request for yourself many days and did not request riches and did not request lives of your enemies but requested for yourself understanding to listen to judgment, ¹²behold, I have done according to your word; behold, I have given you a prudent and wise heart; like you there has not been before you, and after you there shall not arise similar to you. ¹³And I have given you what you did not request, both riches and honor; there has not been a man like you among kings, ¹⁴and if you walk in my way, to keep my commandments and my ordinances as your father Daud walked, I will also lengthen your days."

¹⁵ And Salomon awoke, and behold, it was a dream, and he arose and came to Ierousalem and stood facing the altar which is before the ark of the covenant of the Lord in Sion and offered up whole burnt offerings and made peace offerings and made a great feast for himself and all his servants.

¹⁶ Then, two women, prostitutes, appeared before the king and stood before him. ¹⁷And the one woman said, "With regard to me, my lord, this woman and I, we live in one house, and we gave birth in the house, ¹⁸and it happened, on the third day after I gave birth, that this woman also gave birth, and we were together, and there was no one else with us besides both of us in the house. ¹⁹And this woman's son died in the night, as she lay on him, ²⁰and she got up in the middle of the night and took my son from my arms and laid him in her bosom and laid her dead son in my bosom. ²¹And I arose in the morning, to nurse my son, and that one was dead, and behold, I looked at him closely in the morning, and behold, it was not my son whom I had borne." ²²And the other woman said, "No, but the living son is mine, but the dead son is yours." And they spoke before the king.

²³ And the king said to them, "You say, 'This is my son that is alive, and this woman's son is the dead one,' and you say, 'Not so! but my son is the living one, and your son is the dead one.'" ²⁴And the king said, "Take a dagger for me," and they brought the dagger before the king. ²⁵And the king said, "Divide the living boy, the suckling, in two, and give the half of it to this woman and the half of it to this woman." ²⁶And the woman whose was the living son answered and said to the king—because her womb was troubled over her son—and she said, "With regard to me, my lord, give her the boy, and by death do not put him to death," and this woman said, "Let it be neither mine nor yours; divide it." ²⁷And the king answered and said: "Give the boy to the one who said, 'Give it to her, and by death do not put him to death.' She is his mother." ²⁸And all Israel heard this judgment that the king judged, and they stood in awe from before the king, because they perceived that divine discernment was in him to execute judgment.

4 And King Salomon was ruling over Israel, ²and these were the rulers who were his: Azariou son of Sadok ³and Eliareph and Achia son of Saba, secretaries, and Iosaphat son of Achilid, recorder, ⁴and Sadouch and Abiathar, priests, ⁵and Ornia son of Nathan, over the officials, and Zabouth son of Nathan, the king's companion, ⁶and Achiel, steward, and Eliab son of Saph, over the paternal family, and Adoniram son of Ephra, over the levy.

⁷ And Salomon had twelve appointed over all Israel to provide for the king and his household; it would be that for one month in the year the one would provide. ⁸And these are their names: Benor in the hill country of Ephraim, one; ⁹son of Rechab in Mackemas and Bethalamin and Baithsamus and Ailon as far as Baithanan, one; ¹⁰son of Esoth Berbethnema, Lousamencha and Resphara; ¹¹Chinanadab and Anaphathi, a man of Tableth (his wife was a daughter of Salomon), one; ¹²Bakcha son of Achilid Thaanach and Mekedo and all the house of San which is beside Sesathan below the Esrae and from Baisaphoud Ebelmaola as far as Maerber Loukam, one; ¹³son of Gaber in Remath Galaad, and to this the allotment Eregaba, which is in Basan, sixty great cities with walls and bronze bars, one; ¹⁴Achinadab son of Achel Maanain, one; ¹⁵Achimaas, in Nephthali (and he took Basemmath, Salomon's daughter, as wife), one; ¹⁶Baana son of Chousi in Maalath, one; ¹⁷Samaa son of Ela in Benjamin; ¹⁸Gaber son of Adai in the land of Gad, the land of King Seon of Hesebon and of King Og of Basan; and one nasiph^a in the land of Ioudas; ¹⁹Iosaphat son of Phouasoud in Issachar.

5 ^(4.27)And thus the officials would supply provisions for King Salomon and everything ordered for the table of the king, each one in his month, they did not alter a thing, and they also used to bring to the place where the king might be barley and straw for the horses and the chariots, each according to his charge. ²(4.22)And these were Salomon's provisions for one day: thirty kors^b of choice flour and sixty kors^b of ground meal ³(4.23)and ten choice calves and twenty pasture-fed oxen and one hundred sheep, besides deer and gazelles and choice birds, grain fed. ⁴(4.24)For he was ruler across the river, and he was at peace on all sides round about.

⁹(4.29) And the Lord gave Salomon discernment and very great wisdom and volume of mind like the sand that is by the sea, ¹⁰(4.30)and Salomon was greatly multiplied, above the discernment of all ancient people and above all the discerning of Egypt. ¹¹(4.31)And he was wise beyond all humans; he was wise beyond Gaithan the Ezraite and Haiman and Chalkal and Darda, sons of Mal. ¹²(4.32)And Salomon spoke three thousand illustrations, and his songs were five thousand. ¹³(4.33)And he spoke of trees, from the cedar that is in Lebanon and as far as the hyssop that comes out through the wall, and he spoke of animals and of birds and of reptiles and of fish. ¹⁴(4.34)And all the people used to come to hear the wisdom of Salomon, and he would receive gifts from all the kings of the earth who were hearing of his wisdom.

14a(3.1) And Salomon took the daughter of Pharao for himself for a wife and brought her into the city of Daudid until he finished the house of the Lord and his own house and the wall of Ierou-salem. ^{14b}(9.16)Then Pharao king of Egypt went up and captured Gazer and burned it and the Canaanite who lived in Mergab, and Pharao gave them^d as send-off to his daughter, Salomon's wife, and Salomon built Gazer.

15(5.1) And King Chiram of Tyre sent his servants to anoint Salomon in place of his father Daudid, for Chiram had affection for Daudid all the days. ¹⁶(5.2)And Salomon sent to Chiram, saying, ¹⁷(5.3)"You know my father Daudid that he could not build a house for the name of the Lord, my God, from the presence of the wars that surrounded him until the Lord put them under the traces of his feet. ¹⁸(5.4)And now the Lord my God gave me rest all around; there is no plotter, and there is no evil encounter. ¹⁹(5.5)And behold, I intend to build a house for the name of the Lord, my God, as the Lord God spoke to my father Daudid, saying, 'Your son whom I will give on your throne in your place, this one shall build the house for my name.^{20(5.6)}And now command, and let them cut timber from Lebanon for me, and behold, my slaves are with your slaves, and I will give you the wages of your services according to all that you say, for you know that we have no one who knows how to cut timber like the Sidonians.”

21(5.7) And it happened, when Chiram heard the words of Salomon, he rejoiced greatly and said, “Blessed be God today, who gave to Dauid a discerning son over this numerous people.”^{22(5.8)}And he sent to Salomon, saying, “I have heard concerning all that you sent to me; I will do your every wish, cedar timber and pine.^{23(5.9)}My slaves shall bring them down to the sea from Lebanon, and I will make them rafts to the place that you indicate to me, and I will have them broken up there, and you will take them away, and you shall do my wish by providing food for my household.”^{24(5.10)}And Chiram was giving Salomon cedars and his every wish.^{25(5.11)}And Salomon in turn gave Chiram twenty thousand kors^a of wheat and machir^b for his household and twenty thousand beth^c of beaten oil; like this Salomon would give to Chiram yearly.^{26(5.12)}And the Lord gave Salomon wisdom, as he spoke to him, and there was peace between Chiram and between Salomon, and they made a covenant between themselves.

27(5.13) And the king raised a levy out of all Israel, and the levy was thirty thousand men.^{28(5.14)}And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand a month alternating, they were a month in Lebanon and two months in their home, and Adoniram was in charge of the levy.^{29(5.15)}And Salomon had seventy thousand bearing a burden and eighty thousand stonecutters in the hill country,^{30(5.16)}besides the rulers appointed over Salomon’s works, three thousand six hundred supervisors who managed the works.^{32(5.18)}And for three years they prepared the stones and the wood.

G And it happened, in the four hundred fortieth year of the departure of the sons of Israel from Egypt, in the fourth year in the second month, when King Salomon reigned over Israel,^{1a(5.17)}that the king commanded, and they took great, costly stones for the foundation of the house, and unhewn stones,^{1b(5.18)}and the sons of Salomon and the sons of Chiram hewed and laid them.^{1c(6.37)}In the fourth year he laid the foundation of the house of the Lord in the month Niso, the second month;^{1d(6.38)}in the eleventh year in the month Baal (this is the eighth month) the house was finished in all its plan and in all its arrangement.²And the house that King Salomon built for the Lord, forty cubits its length and twenty its width in cubits and twenty-five its height in cubits.³And the ailam^d in front of the shrine, twenty its width in cubits for the width of the house and ten its depth in cubits in front of the house.^(6.14)And he built the house and finished it.⁴And for the house he made hidden, peep windows.⁵And he placed beams on the wall of the house all around the shrine and the dabir^e, and he made sides all around.⁶The lower side five cubits its width and the middle six and the third^f seven its width in cubits; he gave the house a space all around, outside the house, in order that they should not lay hold of the walls of the house.

7 And the house while it was being built was built with rough, unworked stones, neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron was heard in the house while it was being built.

8 And the gateway of the lower side was under the right shoulders^g of the house, and there was a winding ascent into the middle and from the middle to the third-story.⁹And he built the house and finished it, and he made a coffered ceiling for the house from cedars.¹⁰And he built the bondings through the whole house, its height five in cubits, and he enclosed the bonding with cedar boards.¹⁵And he built the walls of the house with cedar boards from the floor of the house and as far as the rafters and to the walls; he made a coffered ceiling enclosed with boards within, and he covered the inside of the house with sides of pine.¹⁶And he built the twenty cubits from the top of the house, the one side from the floor to the rafters, and he made from the dabir^e to the holy of holies.¹⁷And the shrine was forty cubits in front of¹⁹the dabir^e in the midst of the house within, to set there the ark of the covenant of the Lord.²⁰The length twenty cubits and twenty cubits the width and twenty cubits its height, and he covered it with overlaid gold. And he made an altar²¹in front of the dabir^e and overlaid it with gold.²²And he overlaid the whole house with gold until the completion of all the house.

23 And in the dabir^e he made two cherubin of ten cubits measured size.²⁴And five cubits the wing of the one cherub and five cubits its second wing and from the tip of its wing to the tip of its wing ten in cubits;²⁵thus it was with the second cherub, with one measure one completion for both.²⁶And the height of the one cherub ten in cubits and so the second cherub.²⁷And both the cherubin were in the midst of the innermost house and he spread out their wings, and one wing was touching the wall, and a wing of the second was touching the wall, and their other wings which were in the midst of the house were touching wing to wing.²⁸And he overlaid the cherubin with gold.

29 And with a stylus he inscribed all the walls of the house, round about, with engraved cherubin, and the inner and the outer had palm trees.³⁰And the floor of the house he overlaid with gold, of the innermost and of the outermost.

31 And for the doorway of the dabir^e he made doors of juniper wood and a five-sided lintel³²and two doors of pine boards and carved on them carved cherubin and palm trees and open flower-leaves, and he overlaid with gold, and the gold went down on the cheroubin and on the palm trees.

33 And thus he made for the gateway to the shrine lintels of juniper, four-sided porticoes.³⁴ And pine boards in both the doors; the one door two leaves and their hinges and the second door two leaves, hinged; ³⁵carved cheroubin and palm trees and open flowers-leaves and overlaid with gold brought down upon the relief work. ³⁶And he built the inner court, three courses of unhewn stones and a course of prepared cedar round about. And he built the veil of the court of the ailma^a of the house, which is before the shrine.

7 ⁽¹³⁾And King Salomon sent and received Chiram from Tyre, ²⁽¹⁴⁾son of a widow, and he was from the tribe of Nephthali, and his father was a Tyrian man, an artisan in bronze and accomplished in skill and understanding and knowledge to perform every work in bronze, and he was brought in to King Salomon, and he made all the works.

3(15) And he cast the two pillars for the ailma^a of the house; eighteen cubits was the height of a pillar, and a circumference of fourteen cubits encompassed it, and the thickness of the pillar was the hollow of four fingers, and so the second pillar. ⁴⁽¹⁶⁾And he made two covers of molten bronze to set on the tops of the pillars, five cubits the height of the one cover and five cubits the height of the second cover. ⁵⁽¹⁷⁾And he made two lattice works to wrap around the cover of the pillars, and a lattice-work for the one cover and a lattice work for the second cover ⁶⁽¹⁸⁾and a hanging work, two rows of bronze pomegranates wrought in net-works, a hanging work, row upon row, and thus he did with the second cover. ⁷⁽²¹⁾And he set up the pillars of the ailma^a of the shrine, and he set up the one pillar and called its name Iachoum, and he set up the second pillar and called its name Baaz. ⁸⁽¹⁹⁾And on the tops of the pillars was lily-work of four cubits, against the ailma^a ⁹⁽²⁰⁾and a beam on both the pillars, and on top of the sides the beam was as a cover in thickness.

10(23) And he made the sea, ten in cubits from its rim to its rim; the same was round in a circle; its height was five in cubits, and ^bdrawn together^b, thirty-three in cubits encompassed it. ¹¹⁽²⁴⁾And supports under its rim all round were encircling it, ten in cubits all round, to raise up the sea. ¹²⁽²⁶⁾And its rim was like the work of the rim of a cup, like a bud of a lily, and the thickness of it a handbreadth. ¹³⁽²⁵⁾And twelve oxen were under the sea, the three facing north and the three facing seaward^c and the three facing south and the three facing east, and all the hindquarters were toward the house, and the sea was upon them from above.

14(27) And he made ten bronze mechonoth^d, five cubits the length of the one mechonoth^d, and four cubits its width and six in cubits its height. ¹⁵⁽²⁸⁾And this was the work of the mechonoth^d; they had a stopper, and a stopper between the projections. ¹⁶⁽²⁹⁾And on their stoppers between the projections were lions and oxen and cheroubin, and on the projections thus: enclosed spaces both above and below the lions and the oxen, a work of descent. ¹⁷⁽³⁰⁾And the one mechonoth^d had four bronze wheels and the bronze attachments and their four sides, shoulder^e pieces under the wash-basins. ¹⁸⁽³²⁾And there were hands^f in the wheels in the mechonoth^d, and the height of the one wheel was a cubit and a half. ¹⁹⁽³³⁾The work of the wheels was the work of chariot wheels; their hands^f and their backs^g and their works, the whole castings. ²⁰⁽³⁴⁾The four shoulder^e pieces were at the four corners of the one mechonoth^d; its shoulders were from the mechonoth^d. ²¹⁽³⁵⁾And on the top of the mechonoth^d, half a cubit its size, a circle around on the top of the mechonoth^d and a beginning of its hands^f and its borders, and it was open at the beginning of its hands^f. ²²⁽³⁶⁾And its borders were cheroubin and lions and palm trees, standing, each connected on its front, inside and round about. ²³⁽³⁷⁾Like it^h, he made all the ten mechonoth^d, one order and measure for all.

24(38) And he made ten bronze buckets, the one bucket holding forty chous by measurement; the one bucket on the one mechonoth^d, for the ten mechonoth^d. ²⁵⁽³⁹⁾And he placed the ten mechonoth^d, five on the shoulder^e of the house on the right and five on the shoulder^e of the house on the left and the sea on the shoulder^e of the house on the right, eastward, on the sideⁱ of the south.

26(40) And Chiram made the cauldrons and the tongs and the saucers, and Chiram finished making all the works that he made for King Salomon in the house of the Lord: ²⁷⁽⁴¹⁾two pillars and the wreathed works of the pillars on the tops of the two pillars and the two lattice works to cover both the wreathed works of the carvings that were on the pillars, ²⁸⁽⁴²⁾the four hundred pomegranates for both the lattice works, two rows of pomegranates for the one lattice-work, to wrap around both the wreathed works on both the pillars, ²⁹⁽⁴³⁾and the ten mechonoth^d, the ten buckets on the mechonoth^d ³⁰⁽⁴⁴⁾and the one sea and the twelve oxen underneath the sea ³¹⁽⁴⁵⁾and the cauldrons and the tongs and the saucers, all the implements that Chiram made for King Salomon for the house of the Lord, and the forty-eight pillars of the house of the king and the house of the Lord.

All the works of the king that Chiram made, entirely of bronze; ³²⁽⁴⁷⁾the weight of the bronze of which he made all these works, very much in abundance. ³³⁽⁴⁶⁾In the region of the Jordan the king cast them, in the thickness of the ground between Sokchoth and between Sira.

34(48) And King Salomon gave the implements that he made in the house of the Lord: the golden altar, and the table upon which were the loaves of the offering—golden, ³⁵⁽⁴⁹⁾and the lampstands, five on the right and five on the left, in front of the dabiri—overlaid gold, and the torches and the lamps and the golden pouring vessels ³⁶⁽⁵⁰⁾and the porticoes and the nails and the saucers and the bowls and the golden censers, overlaid, and the doorways of the innermost part of the house, the holy of the holies and the golden doors of the shrine. ³⁷⁽⁵¹⁾And all the work that King Salomon did on the house of the Lord was fulfilled, and Salomon brought in the holy things of his father Daud and all the holy things of Salomon, the silver and the gold and the implements, and gave them into the treasuries of the house of the Lord.

38(7.1a) And Salomon built his house in thirty years.

39(7.2) And he built the House to the Forest of the Lebanon, one hundred cubits its length and fifty cubits its width and thirty cubits its height, and three courses of cedar logs, and cedar shoulders for the logs. ^{40(7.3)}And he paneled the house, from above, on the sides of the logs, and the number of logs was forty-five; the course was fifteen, ^{41(7.4)}and there were three beams and space on space, three times, ^{42(7.5)}and all the doorways and the spaces linked by beams were square and from the doorway on the door three times.

43(7.6) And the Ailama^a of the Pillars was fifty cubits long and thirty in cubits in width, linked together. There was an ailam^a in front of them, and pillars and thickness before it^b for the ailammin^c.

44(7.7) And the Ailama^a of the Thrones, there where he pronounced judgment, Ailama^a of the Court.

45(7.8) And he had a house, there where he sat, one court evolved for those ^daccording to^d this work, and a house for Pharaoh's daughter whom Salomon took, corresponding to this ailam^a.

46(7.9) All these were of costly stones, sculptured at intervals on the inside, even from the foundation to the coping, and on the outside into the great court ^{47(7.10)}founded with large, costly stones, stones of ten cubits and eight cubits. ^{48(7.11)}And above with costly stones, according to the measure of unhewn^e, and with cedars. ^{49(7.12)}For the great court three courses of unhewn^e and a course of sculptured cedar. ^{50(7.1b)}And Salomon finished his whole house.

8 And it happened, when Salomon finished building the house of the Lord and his own house after twenty years, then King Salomon assembled all the elders of Israel in Zion to bring up the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of the city of Daud (this is Zion) ²in the month Athanin. ³And the priests carried the ark ⁴and the covert of witness and all the holy vessels that were in the tent of witness, ⁵and the king and all Israel were before the ark sacrificing countless sheep and oxen. ⁶And the priests brought the ark into its place in the dabir^f of the house, into the holy of holies, underneath the wings of the cheroubin, ⁷for the cheroubin were spread out by their wings over the place of the ark, and the cheroubin would cover above the ark and above its holy things from above, ⁸and the sacred things^g projected, and the heads of the sacred things were seen from the holy place in front of the dabir^f, but they could not be seen from outside. ⁹There was nothing in the ark except the two stone tablets, tablets of the covenant, that Moyses had placed there at Choreb—which things the Lord arranged with the sons of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁰And it happened, when the priests came out of the holy place, that a cloud filled the house, ¹¹and the priests could not stand to minister from before the cloud, for the glory of the Lord filled the house.

14 And the king turned his face away, and the king blessed all Israel, and all the assembly of Israel had stood. ¹⁵And he said, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel today, who spoke with his mouth concerning my father Daud and fulfilled with his hands, saying, ¹⁶'Since the day that I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I have not chosen in a city, in one scepter of Israel, to build a house for my name to be there, but I chose in Ierusalem for my name to be there, and I chose Daud to be over my people Israel.' ¹⁷And it was in the heart of my father Daud to build a house for the name of the Lord, God of Israel. ¹⁸And the Lord said to my father Daud, 'Because it came into your heart to build a house for my name, you did well that it came into your heart; ¹⁹nevertheless, you shall not build the house, but your son who will come forth out of your sides, he shall build the house for my name.' ²⁰And the Lord raised up his word that he spoke, and I arose in the place of my father Daud, and I sat on the throne of Israel, as the Lord had spoken, and I built the house for the name of the Lord, God of Israel. ²¹And I set there a place for the ark, there wherein is the covenant of the Lord, which the Lord made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt."

22 And Salomon stood before the altar of the Lord before all the assembly of Israel and spread out his hands to heaven ²³and said, "O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like you in heaven above and on the earth beneath, keeping covenant and mercy for your slave who goes before you with his whole heart, ²⁴which things you kept for your slave my father Daud and spoke with your mouth and have, as this day, fulfilled with your hands. ²⁵And now, O Lord God of Israel, keep for your slave, my father Daud, what you spoke to him, saying, 'There shall not be taken from you a man from before me to sit on the throne of Israel, if only your children keep their ways to go before me, as you went before me.' ²⁶And now, O Lord God of Israel, do let your word to my father Daud be confirmed.

27 "For will God indeed dwell with people on the earth? If heaven and the heaven of the heaven will not suffice for you, how much less even this house that I built for your name? ²⁸And you shall look upon my petition, O Lord God of Israel, to hear the delight with which your slave prays before you to you today, ²⁹that your eyes may be open day and night toward this house, toward the place of which you said, 'My name shall be there' that you may heed the prayer that your slave prays toward this place day and night. ³⁰And you shall hearken to the petition of your slave and of your people Israel, which things they pray toward this place, and you shall listen in heaven, in the place of your habitation, and you shall do and be merciful.

31 "What each sins against his neighbor, and if he takes a curse upon him that he be cursed and comes and confesses before your altar in this house, ³²then you shall listen from heaven and act and shall judge your people Israel, that a lawless person has acted lawlessly—to give his way to his head—and to declare righteous a righteous person—to give him according to his righteousness.

33 "When your people Israel fall before enemies, because they will sin against you, and they shall return and acknowledge your name and pray and plead in this house, ³⁴then you shall listen from heaven and be merciful to the sins of your people Israel and bring them again to the land that you gave to their fathers.

35 "When the sky is shut up and there is no rain, because they will sin against you, and they pray toward this place and acknowledge your name and turn from their sins, when you humble them, ³⁶then you shall listen from heaven and be merciful to the sins of your slave and your people Israel, because you will make clear to them the good way to go in it, and you will grant rain on the land that you gave to your people in inheritance.

37 "If there is famine, if there is death—for there will be burning, locust larva—if there is mildew and if their enemy afflicts them in one of their cities, any plague, any pain, ³⁸any prayer, any petition, if it be to any person, when each knows the grip of his own heart and spreads out his hands toward this house, ³⁹then you shall listen from heaven from your established dwelling place, and will be merciful and act and give to a man according to his ways, just as you know his heart, for you alone know the heart of all the sons of people, ⁴⁰that they may fear you all the days that they live in the land that you gave to our fathers.

41 "And for the stranger, he who is not of your people, ⁴²when they shall come and pray toward this place, ⁴³then you shall listen from heaven, from your established dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calls to you for, that all the peoples may know your name and fear you like your people Israel and know that your name has been invoked on this house that I have built.

44 "For your people will go out to battle against their enemies, by a way that you shall turn them, and they will pray in the name of the Lord by way of the city, which you have chosen to be in it, and the house that I have built for your name, ⁴⁵then you, from heaven, shall listen to their petition and their prayer and maintain their cause.

46 "Because they will sin against you—for there is not a person who will not sin—and you will bring against them and hand them over before enemies, and those who take captive shall take them captive to a land far off and near, ⁴⁷and they will turn their hearts in the land, there where they were transferred. And should they turn and plead with you in the land of their deportation, saying, 'We have sinned; we have acted lawlessly; we have acted unjustly,' ⁴⁸and they turn to you with their whole heart and with their whole soul in the land of their enemies where you transferred them, and they shall pray to you by way of their land, which you gave to their fathers, the city that you have chosen, and the house that I have built for your name, ⁴⁹then you shall listen from heaven, from your established dwelling place, ⁵⁰and you will be merciful to their injustices with which they sinned against you and according to all their transgressions that they have transgressed against you, and you will give them over to compassion before their captors, and they will have compassion on them, ⁵¹for they are your people and your heritage, which you brought out of the land of Egypt, from the midst of a smelter of iron. ⁵²And let your eyes and your ears be open to the petition of your slave and to the petition of your people Israel, to listen to them whenever they call to you, ⁵³for you have separated them for yourself from among all the peoples of the earth to be your heritage, just as you said by the hand of your slave Moyses, when you brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt, O Lord, O Lord."

53a(8.12) Then Salomon spoke concerning the house, when he had finished building it,

"A sun the Lord made manifest in the sky;
he said that he should dwell in deep darkness:

(8.13) 'Build my house, a remarkable house for yourself, to dwell in anew.' "

And behold, is this one not written in a book of the song?

54 And it happened, when Salomon finished praying the whole prayer and this petition to the Lord, that he arose from before the altar of the Lord, crouched down on his knees and his hands spread out toward heaven, ⁵⁵and he stood and blessed all the assembly of Israel with a loud voice, saying:

56 "Blessed be the Lord today, who has given rest to his people Israel according to all that he spoke; not one word failed in all his good words which he spoke by the hand of his slave Moyses. ⁵⁷May the Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers; may he not abandon us or turn us away, ⁵⁸to incline our hearts to him, to go in all his ways and to keep all his commandments and his ordinances which he commanded our fathers. ⁵⁹And let these words which I have pleaded before the Lord, our God, be near to the Lord, our God, day and night, that he may maintain the cause of your slave and the cause of your people Israel, as a word of a day in its day ⁶⁰so that all the peoples of the earth may know that the Lord God, he is God and there is no other. ⁶¹And let our hearts be perfect to the Lord, our God, to go devoutly in his ordinances and to keep his commandments, as this day."

62 And the king and all the sons of Israel offered a sacrifice before the Lord. ⁶³And King Salomon offered the sacrifices of peace that he sacrificed to the Lord, twenty-two thousand oxen and one hundred twenty thousand sheep, and the king and all the sons of Israel dedicated the house of the Lord. ⁶⁴On that day the king consecrated the middle of the court that was in front of the house of the Lord, for there he made the whole burnt offering and the sacrifices and the fat pieces of the peace offerings, because the bronze altar that was before the Lord was small so as not to be able to bear the whole burnt offering and the sacrifices of peace.

65 And Salomon held the feast in that day, and all Israel with him, a great assembly, from the entering in of Hemath to the river of Egypt, before the Lord, our God, in the house that he built, eating and drinking and rejoicing before the Lord, our God, seven days. ⁶⁶And in the eighth day he sent the people away, and he blessed them, and they went each to his tents joyful and in good heart because of the good things that the Lord did to his slave Daud and to his people Israel.

9 And it happened, when Salomon had finished building the house of the Lord and the house of the king and all the business of Salomon that he desired to do, ²that the Lord appeared to Salomon a second time, as he appeared at Gabaon, ³and the Lord said to him, "I heard the sound of your prayer and your petition which you petitioned before me; I have done for you according to all your prayer; I have consecrated this house that you built to put my name there forever, and my eyes and my heart will be there all the days. ⁴And if you go before me, as Daud your father went, with piety of heart and with uprightness and doing according to all that I commanded him and will keep my ordinances and my commandments, ⁵then I will establish the throne of your kingship over Israel forever, as I spoke to your father Daud, saying, 'There shall not be taken from you a man who rules in Israel.'

⁶"But if turning aside you turn aside from me, you and your children, and do not keep my commandments and my ordinances that Moyses set before you, and go, and be subject to other gods, and do obeisance to them, ⁷then I will remove Israel off from the land that I given them, and this house that I consecrated for my name I will cast out from before me, and Israel will become a desolation and prattle among all the peoples. ⁸And as for this exalted house—everyone who passes by it will be astonished and will hiss, and they will say, 'Why did the Lord do thus to this land and to this house?' ⁹And they will say, 'Because they forsook the Lord, their God, who brought their fathers out of Egypt out of a house of slavery and embraced foreign gods and did obeisance to them and were subject to them, therefore the Lord has brought this evil upon them.' "

9a(9.24) Then Salomon brought up Pharaoh's daughter from the city of Daud to his house that he built for himself in those days.

10 For twenty years, in which Salomon built the two houses, the house of the Lord and the king's house, ¹¹King Chiram of Tyre supplied Salomon with cedar timber and with pine timber and with gold and with every wish of his. Then the King gave Chiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. ¹²And Chiram departed from Tyre and went to Galilee, to see the cities that Salomon gave him, and they did not please him, ¹³and he said, "What kind of cities are these that you gave me, brother?" And he called them Boundary to this day. ¹⁴And Chiram brought Salomon one hundred twenty talents of gold, ²⁶and with that King Salomon made a ship at Gasiongaber, which is near Ailath on the shore of the last sea in the land of Edom. ²⁷And Chiram sent off in the ship some of his servants, seafaring men who knew how to row the sea, together with the servants of Salomon. ²⁸And they went to Sophera and took from there one hundred twenty talents of gold and brought them to King Salomon.

10 And the queen of Saba heard the name of Salomon and the name of the Lord and came to test him with riddles, ²and she came to Ierousalem with a very weighty force, and there were camels bearing spices and very much gold and precious stone, and she came in to Salomon and spoke to him all that was on her heart. ³And Salomon reported to her all her words; there was not a word overlooked by the king that he did not report to her. ⁴And the queen of Saba observed all the discernment of Salomon and the house that he built ⁵and the food of Salomon and the sitting of his servants and the standing of his public servants and his clothing and his cupbearers and his whole burnt offering that he offered in the house of the Lord, and she was beside herself.

⁶ And she said to King Salomon, "The word is true that I heard in my land concerning your word and concerning your discernment, ⁷and I did not believe those who spoke to me until I came and my own eyes had seen it, and behold, as they reported to me, it is not the half. You have added good things to them in every report that I heard in my land. ⁸Happy are your wives! Happy are these your servants who continually stand before you, who hear all your discernment! ⁹May the Lord your God be blessed who wanted you, to give you on the throne of Israel. Because the Lord loves Israel to establish it forever, he also made you king over them to do judgment in righteousness, even in their lawsuits." ¹⁰And she gave Salomon one hundred twenty talents of gold and very much spices and precious stone. Like those spices, which the queen of Saba gave to King Salomon, there have not come again in quantity.

¹¹ (And the ship of Chiram which carried the gold from Souphir brought very much unhewn wood and precious stone. ¹²And the king made the unhewn wood supports of the house of the Lord and of the house of the king and nablas^a and cinyras^b for the singers. Such unhewn wood had not come into the land or been seen anywhere to this day.)

13 And King Salomon gave the queen of Saba everything, as much as she desired, as much as she requested, beyond all that Salomon had given her through the hand of the king, and she returned and went to her own land, she and all her servants.

14 And the weight of gold that had come to Salomon in one year was six hundred sixty-six talents of gold,¹⁵ besides the tributes from those subjected and from the merchants and from all the kings who are from beyond and the satraps of the land.¹⁶ And Salomon made three hundred beaten gold spears; three hundred gold pieces went into the one spear.¹⁷ And he made three hundred beaten gold weapons; three minas^a of gold went into the one weapon, and he put them in the House of the Forest of Lebanon.¹⁸ And the king made a great ivory throne and gilded it with pure gold; ¹⁹the throne had six steps, and the throne had heads of calves in relief behind it and on this side and on that, on the place of the seat, were arms^b and two lions standing beside the arms^b ²⁰and twelve lions standing ^con this side and on that^c, on the six steps; it was not done so in any kingdom.²¹ And all Salomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and gold washbasins, all the vessels of the House of the Forest of Lebanon, were of overlaid with gold; there was no silver, for it was not reckoned in the days of Salomon.²² For the king had a ship of Tharsis at sea with the ships of Chiram, one ship used to come to the king from Tharsis every three years with gold and silver and carved and hewn stones.

22a(9.15) This was the business of the foraging that King Salomon brought to build the house of the Lord and the house of the king and the wall of Ierousalem and the citadel, to fortify all round the fence of the city of Daud and Assour and Magdan and Gazer (9.17) and Upper Baithoron (9.18) and Iethermath (9.19) and all the cities for the chariots and all the cities for the horsemen and the business of Salomon which he was engaged in, to build in Ierousalem and in all the land,^{22b}(9.20) so that all the people who remained of the Chettite and of the Amorrite and of the Pherezite and of the Chananite and of the Heuite and of the Iebousite and of the Gergesite, those who were not of the sons of Israel—(9.21) their children who remained after them in the land, those whom the sons of Israel were not able to destroy—would not rule over him. And Salomon brought them under tribute until this day.^{22c}(9.22) And from the sons of Israel Salomon exacted nothing, for they were men who fought, and his servants and captains of his chariots and his horsemen.

23 And Salomon was greater than all the kings of the earth in riches and in discernment.²⁴ And all the kings of the earth were seeking the face of Salomon to hear his discernment, which the Lord gave into his heart.²⁵ And they each would bring their gifts, gold utensils and raiment, oil of myrrh and spices and horses and mules, this every year by year.

26 And Salomon had four thousand mares for chariots and twelve thousand horsemen, and he put them^d in the cities for the chariots and with the king in Ierousalem.^{26a}(4.21) And he was ruling all the kings from the river and as far as the land of allophytes and to the borders of Egypt.²⁷ And the king gave gold and silver in Ierousalem like stones, and he gave the cedars like sycamores that are in a plain in abundance.²⁸ And Salomon's import of horses was from Egypt and Thekoue, and the king's traders would receive them from Thekoue by barter,²⁹ and the import from Egypt rose, a chariot for a hundred pieces of silver and a horse for fifty pieces of silver, and thus to all the kings of Chettin and the kings of Syria they used to go out by sea.

11 And King Salomon was a philogynist. And he had seven hundred ruling women and three hundred concubines. And he took foreign women, both the daughter of Pharao, Moabites, Ammonites, Syrians and Idumeans, Chettites and Amorrites,² from the nations that the Lord forbade to the sons of Israel: "You shall not go in to them, and they shall not go in to you, lest they turn away your hearts after their idols"; Salomon clung to them for love.⁴ And it happened at the time of Salomon's old age that his heart was not perfect with the Lord, his God, as was the heart of his father Daud, and his foreign wives turned away his heart after their gods.⁵ Then Salomon built a high place to Chamos, idol of Moab, and to their king, idol of the sons of Ammon,⁶ and to Astarte, abomination of the Sidonians.⁷ And thus he did for all his foreign wives; they were offering incense and sacrificing to their idols,⁸ and Salomon did evil before the Lord; he did not go after the Lord as Daud his father.

9 And the Lord was angry with Salomon, because his heart had turned away from the Lord God of Israel, who appeared to him twice,¹⁰ and commanded him concerning this matter that he should definitely not go after other gods and should keep to do what the Lord God commanded him.¹¹ And the Lord said to Salomon, "Since these things were with you and you did not keep my commandments and my ordinances that I commanded you, tearing I will tear your kingdom from your hand and give it to your slave.¹² Yet, for the sake of your father Daud I will not do them in your days; I will take it out of the hand of your son.¹³ Yet, I will not take the entire kingdom; I will give one scepter to your son for the sake of my slave Daud and for the sake of Ierousalem, the city which I chose."

14 And the Lord raised up a satan^e against Salomon, Hader the Idumean (11.23) and Hesrom son of Eliadae who was in Raemmath, Hadrazar, king of Souba, his master, (11.24) and men were gathered around him, and he was leader of a band, and he first captured Damasek, ^(11.25)and they were a sathan^a to Israel all the days of Salomon. And Hader the Idumean was of the seed of the kingdom in Idumea. ¹⁵And it happened, when Daud utterly destroyed Edom while loab, commander of the army, went to bury the casualties, that they cut off every male in Idumea ¹⁶(for loab and all Israel encamped there in Idumea six months until he had eliminated every male from Idumea), ¹⁷and Hader fled, he and all the Idumean men of the servants of his father with him, and they went into Egypt, and Hader was a young lad. ¹⁸And men from the city of Madiam rose up and came into Pharan, and they took men with them and came to Pharao, king of Egypt, and Hader entered in before Pharao, and he gave him a house and arranged food for him. ¹⁹And Hader found great favor in the sight of Pharao, and he gave him for a wife a sister of his wife, the elder sister of Thekemina. ²⁰And the sister of Thekemina bore to him—to Hader—her son Ganebath, and Thekemina raised him among the sons of Pharao, and Ganebath was among the sons of Pharao. ²¹And Hader heard in Egypt that Daud slept with his fathers and that loab, the commander of the army, had died, and Hader said to Pharao, "Send me off, and I will return to my land." ²²And Pharao said to Hader, "What do you lack with me? And behold, you seek to go to your land." And Hader said to him, "Sending off send me off." And Hader returned to his land. ²⁵This was the evil which Hader did, and he was indignant with Israel, and he reigned in the land of Edom.

²⁶ And Ieroboam son of Nabat the Ephrathi from Sarira, son of a widow woman, was a slave of Salomon. ²⁷And this was the matter when he lifted up hands against King Salomon. He built the citadel, closed up the fence of the city of David his father, ²⁸and the person Ieroboam was mighty in power, and Salomon saw the lad, that he was a man of action, and he gave him charge over the levies of the house of Ioseph. ²⁹And it happened at that time that Ieroboam went out of Ierusalem, and the prophet Achias the Selonite found him on the way and took him aside out of the way, and Achias had clothed himself with a new garment, and both were in the plain. ³⁰And Achia laid hold of his new garment that was upon him and tore it into twelve pieces. ³¹And he said to Ieroboam: Take for yourself ten pieces, for this is what the Lord, God of Israel, says, "Behold, I am about to tear the kingdom from the hand of Salomon, and I will give you ten scepters, ³²and two scepters will remain his for the sake of my slave Daud and for the sake of Ierusalem, the city that I chose in it, out of all the tribes of Israel, ³³because he forsook me and acted for Astarte, abomination of the Sidonians, and for Chamos and for the idols of Moab and for their king, offense of the sons of Ammon, and he did not go in my ways, to do what is right before me, like his father Daud. ³⁴And I will certainly not take the whole kingdom out of his hand because, resisting I will resist him all the days of his life, for the sake of my slave Daud, him whom I chose. ³⁵And I will take the kingdom out of the hand of his son and give you the ten scepters, ³⁶but to his son I will give the two scepters in order that there be an institution for my slave Daud all the days before me in Ierusalem, the city which I chose for myself to put my name there. ³⁷And I will take you, and you shall reign in what your soul desires, and you shall be king over Israel. ³⁸And it will be, if you keep all that I command you and go in my ways and do what is right before me, to keep my commandments and my ordinances, as Daud, my slave, did, then I will be with you and will build you a sure house, as I built for Daud." ⁴⁰And Salomon sought to put Ieroboam to death, and he arose and fled to Egypt to King Sousakim of Egypt, and he was in Egypt until Salomon died.

⁴¹ And the rest of the words of Salomon and all that he did and all his discernment, behold, have these not been written in a book of the words of Salomon? ⁴²And the days that Salomon reigned in Ierusalem were forty years. ⁴³And Salomon slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of his father Daud. And it happened, ^(12.2)when Ieroboam son of Nabat heard (and he was still in Egypt, since he fled from before Salomon and settled in Egypt), he went straight and came to his city in the land of Sarira which is in the hill country of Ephraim. And King Salomon slept with his fathers, ^(11.43)and his son Roboam ruled in his stead.

12 And King Roboam went to Sikima, for all Israel was coming to Sikima to make him king. ³And the people spoke to Roboam the king, saying, ⁴"Your father made our collar heavy, and now you, lighten some of the hard service of your father and of his heavy collar that he placed on us, and we will be subject to you." ⁵And he said to them, "Go away for as long as three days, and come again to me," and they went away.

⁶ And the king summoned the elders who had attended before his father Salomon while he was still living, saying, "How do you advise and I answer this people a word?" ⁷And they spoke to him, saying, "If you will be a slave to this people in this day and be subject to them and speak good words to them, they will also be your slaves all the days." ⁸And he disregarded the advice of the elders that they counseled him and took counsel with the young men who had grown up with him who attended before him ⁹and said to them, "What do you advise, and what should I answer this people who spoke to me, saying, 'Lighten some of the collar that your father put on us?'" ¹⁰And the young men who had grown up with him who attended before him spoke to him, saying, "This is what you shall speak to this people who spoke to you, saying, 'Your father made our collar heavy, and now you, lighten it from off us,' this is what you shall speak to them, 'My smallness is thicker than my father's loins, ¹¹and now, my father used to lay on you a heavy collar, and I will add to your collar; my father disciplined you with whips, but I will discipline you with scorpions.' "

12 And all Israel came to King Roboam in the third day, as the king told them, saying, "Come to me again on the third day." ¹³And the king answered the people harshly, and Roboam disregarded the advice of the elders that they counseled him ¹⁴and spoke to them according to the advice of the young men, saying, "My father made your collar heavy, and I will add to your collar; my father disciplined you with whips, and I will discipline you with scorpions." ¹⁵And the king did not listen to the people, because the change was from the Lord that his word which he spoke by the hand of Achia the Selonite concerning Ieroboam son of Nabat might stand.

16 And all Israel saw that the king did not listen to them, and the people answered the king, saying,

"What share do we have in Daudid?

And we have no inheritance in the son of Iessai;

depart to your coverts, O Israel!

Now feed your own house, O Daudid."

And Israel went away to its coverts. ¹⁸And the king sent Adoniram who was over the levy, and all Israel stoned him with stones, and he died, and King Roboam was the first to mount to flee to Ierusalem. ¹⁹And Israel rebelled against the house of Daudid to this day.

20 And it happened, when all Israel heard that Ieroboam had returned from Egypt, that they sent and called him to the gathering and made him king over Israel, and there was no one behind the house of Daudid except the scepter of Ioudas and Benjamin alone.

21 And Roboam entered into Ierusalem and convened the gathering of Ioudas and scepter of Benjamin, one hundred twenty thousand young men, practicing war, to fight against the house of Israel to restore the kingdom to Roboam son of Salomon. ²²And a word of the Lord came to Samaias, a man of God, saying: ²³Say to Roboam king of Ioudas, son of Salomon and to all the house of Ioudas and Benjamin and to the rest of the people, saying, ²⁴"This is what the Lord says, 'You shall not go up or fight with your brothers, the sons of Israel; let each return to his own house, for this thing has come from me.' " And they heeded the word of the Lord and forbore to go, according to the word of the Lord.

24a(11.43) And King Salomon slept with his fathers and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daudid. And his son Roboam ruled in his stead in Ierusalem being a son of sixteen years when he began to reign, and he reigned twelve years in Ierusalem, and his mother's name was Naanan daughter of Anan son of Naas, king of the sons of Ammon, ^(14.22)and he did evil before the Lord and did not go in the way of Daudid his father.

24b(11.26-28) And there was a person of Mount Ephraim, a slave of Salomon, and his name was Ieroboam, and his mother's name was Sarira, a prostitute, and Salomon made him ruler of the cudgel over the burdens of the house of Ioseph, and he built for Salomon Sarira, which was in Mount Ephraim, and he had three hundred chariots of horses; he built the citadel with the burdens of the house of Ephraim; he enclosed the city of Daudid, and he was aspiring to the kingdom. ^{24c(11.40)}And Salomon was seeking to put him to death, and he was afraid and ran away to King Sousakim of Egypt, and he was with him until Salomon died. ^{24d(11.21,22)}And Ieroboam heard in Egypt that Salomon had died, and he spoke in the ears of Sousakim, king of Egypt, saying, "Send me off, and I will depart into my land," and Sousakim said to him, "Request any request, and I will give it to you." ^{24e}And Sousakim gave Ieroboam Ano, the older sister of Thekemina his wife, to him as wife; she was great among the king's daughters, and she bore to Ieroboam Abia his son. ^{24f}And Ieroboam said to Sousakim, "Do really send me off, and I will depart." And Ieroboam departed from Egypt and came into the land of Sarira, which is in Mount Ephraim, and there all the scepter of Ephraim gathered, and Ieroboam built a palisaded camp there.

24g(14.1) And his lad was sick with a very severe sickness, and Ieroboam went to inquire about the lad, ^(14.2)and he said to Ano his wife, "Arise, and go; ask God about the lad, whether he will recover from his sickness." ^{24h}And there was a person in Selo, and his name was Achia, and he was a son of sixty years, and the word of the Lord was with him. And Ieroboam said to his wife, "Arise, and ^(14.3)take in your hand for the man of God loaves and cakes for his children and grapes and a jar of honey." ^{24i(14.4)} And the woman arose and took in her hand loaves and two cakes and grapes and a jar of honey for Achia, and the person was rather old, and his eyes were dim-sighted to see. ^{24k}And she arose from Sarira and came, and it happened, after she entered into the city to Achia the Selonite, that Achia said to his lad: Indeed, go out to meet Ano the wife of Ieroboam and you will say to her, ^(14.6)"Come in and do not stand, for this is what the Lord says, 'I will send hard things upon you.'" ^{24l}And Ano entered in before the man of God, and Achia said to her, "Why have you brought me loaves and grapes and cakes and a jar of honey? This is what the Lord says, 'Behold, you will depart from me, and it will be when you enter the gate to Sarira that your girls will come out to meet you and will say to you, 'The lad has died.' " ^{24m(14.11)}For this is what the Lord says, 'Behold, I will utterly destroy of Ieroboam ^aone that urinates against a wall^a, and the dead of Ieroboam will be in the city; the dogs will devour them^b, and the birds of the air will devour the one who has died in the field. And they shall lament for the child, "Woe, O Lord," for there was found in him a good thing concerning the Lord." 24n(14.17)And the woman departed when she heard, and it happened, as she entered into Sarira, that the lad died, (14.18)and the wailing came out to meet her.

24o And Ieroboam went to Sikima which is in Mount Ephraim and gathered there the tribes of Israel, and Roboam son of Salomon came up there, and a word of the Lord came to Samaias the Elami, saying, "Take for yourself a new garment which has not been immersed in water and tear it into twelve pieces, and you shall give to Ieroboam and say to him, "This is what the Lord says, Take for yourself ten pieces to cover yourself," and Ieroboam took them, and Samaias said, "This is what the Lord says concerning the ten tribes of Israel."

24p(12.3) And the people said to Roboam son of Salomon, (12.4)"Your father made his collar heavy upon us and the food of his table heavy. And now if you will ease up on us, then we will be subject to you," and Roboam said to the people, (12.5)"Yet three days, and I will answer you a word." 24q(12.6)And Roboam said, "Bring in the elders to me and I will take counsel with them what word I should answer the people in the third day." And Roboam spoke in their ears as the people sent to him, and the elders of the people said, "Thus the people spoke to you." 24r(12.8)And Roboam rejected their advice, and it was not pleasing before him, and he sent and gathered those who had been brought up with him (12.9)and spoke to them the issues, "And the people sent to me, saying these things." (12.10)And those who had been brought up with him said: "Thus you shall speak to the people, saying, 'My smallness is thicker than my father's loins; (12.11)my father chastised you with whips, but I will rule you with scorpions.'" 24sAnd the word was pleasing before Roboam, (12.14)and he answered the people according as the lads who grew up with him advised him. 24t(12.16)And all the people as one man said, each to his neighbor, and all cried out, saying, "There is no part for us in Daudid, neither inheritance in the son of Iessai; to your coverts, O Israel, for this person is not for a ruler or for a leader."

24uAnd all the people were dispersed from Sikima, and each departed to his coverts. (12.21)And Roboam retained control and departed and mounted on his chariot and entered into Ierousalem, and all the scepter of Ioudas and all the scepter of Benjamin went after him.

25 And Ieroboam built Sikima, which is in Mount Ephraim and settled in it, and he went out from there and built Phanouel. 26And Ieroboam said in his heart, "Behold, now the kingdom will revert to the house of Daudid. 27If these people go up to offer sacrifices in the house of the Lord in Ierousalem, the heart of the people will also turn again to the Lord and their lord, to King Roboam of Ioudas, and they will kill me." 28And the king took counsel and went and made two golden calves and said to the people, "Let it suffice for you to go up to Ierousalem; behold, your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt." 29And he set the one in Baithel, and the one he gave in Dan. 30And this thing became a sin, and the people would go before the one as far as Dan. 31And he made houses on high places and made some part of the people priests who were not of the sons of Leui. 32And Ieroboam made a feast in the eighth month in the fifteenth day of the month like the festival that was in the land of Ioudas, and he went up onto the altar that he made in Baithel to sacrifice to the calves that he had made, and he placed in Bethel the priests of the high places that he made. 33And he went up onto the altar that he made on the fifteenth day in the eighth month on the feast that he fashioned from his heart, and he made a festival for the sons of Israel and went up onto the altar to sacrifice.

13 And behold, a man of God came out of Ioudas to Baithel by word of the Lord, and Ieroboam was standing by the altar to sacrifice, and proclaimed against the altar by a word of the Lord and said, "O altar, altar, this is what the Lord says, 'Behold, a son shall be born to the house of Daudid, Iosias by name, and he shall sacrifice on you the priests of the high places who sacrifice on you and shall burn human bones on you.'" 3And he gave a sign in that day, saying, "This is the word that the Lord spoke, saying, 'Behold, the altar shall be torn down, and the fatness that is on it shall be poured out.'" 4And it happened, when King Ieroboam heard the words of the man of God who called out against the altar which was at Baithel, that the king stretched out his hand from the altar, saying, "Seize him!" And behold, his hand that he stretched out against him withered, and he could not return it to himself, 5and the altar also was torn down, and the fatness poured out from the altar according to the sign that the man of God gave by a word of the Lord. 6And King Ieroboam said to the man of God, "Entreat the face of the Lord your God, and let my hand return to me." And the man of God entreated the face of the Lord, and he returned the king's hand to him, and it became as it was before. 7And the king spoke to the man of God, "Come home with me, and dine, and I will give you a gift." 8And the man of God said to the king, "If you give me half your house, I will not go in with you, nor will I eat food or drink water in this place. 9For thus the Lord commanded by a word, saying: Do not eat food, and do not drink water, and do not return by the way that you came on it." ¹⁰And he went another way and did not return by the way that he had come on it to Baithel.

¹¹ And one old prophet lived in Baithel and his sons came and told him all the deeds that the man of God did in that day in Baithel, and the words that he spoke to the king, and they turned the face of their father. ¹²And their father spoke to them, saying, "Which way has he gone?" And his sons showed him the way on which the man of God who came from Ioudas returned. ¹³And he said to his sons, "Saddle the donkey for me," and they saddled the donkey for him, and he mounted it. ¹⁴And he went after the man of God and found him sitting under an oak tree, and he said to him, "Are you the man of God who came from Ioudas?" And he said to him, "I am." ¹⁵And he said to him, "Come with me, and eat some food." ¹⁶And he said, "I am not able to return with you neither will I eat food nor drink water in this place, ¹⁷for thus the Lord has commanded me by a word, saying: Do not eat food there, and do not drink water there, and do not return by the way that you came on it." ¹⁸And he said to him, "I also am a prophet as you are, and an angel has spoken to me by a word of the Lord, saying: Bring him back to yourself into your house, and let him eat food and drink water," and he lied to him. ¹⁹And he brought him back, and he ate food and drank water in his house.

²⁰ And it happened, as they were sitting at the table, that a word of the Lord came to the prophet who had brought him back, ²¹and he said to the man of God who came from Ioudas, saying, "This is what the Lord says: Because you embittered the word of the Lord and did not keep the commandment that the Lord your God commanded you ²²and came back and ate food and drank water in this place about which he spoke to you, saying, 'Do not eat food, and do not drink water,' your body shall not come to the tomb of your fathers." ²³And it happened, after he ate food and drank water, that he saddled for him the donkey, and he turned back. ²⁴And he departed, and a lion found him on the road and put him to death, and his body was thrown in the road, and the donkey stood beside it, and the lion stood beside the body. ²⁵And behold, men were passing by and saw the carcass thrown in the road, and the lion was standing by the carcass, and they came in and spoke in the town wherein the old prophet lived.

²⁶ And the one who had brought him back from the way heard and said, "This is the man of God who embittered the word of the Lord." ²⁸And he went and found his body thrown in the road, and the donkey and the lion stood beside the body, and the lion did not eat the body of the man of God and did not crush the donkey. ²⁹And the prophet took up the body of the man of God and laid it on the donkey, and the prophet brought it back to the city to bury him ³⁰in his own grave, and they mourned over him, "Woe, brother!" ³¹And it happened, after he mourned him, that he said to his sons, saying, "When I die, bury me in this grave wherein the man of God is buried; lay me beside his bones, that my bones may be preserved with his bones, ³²for the saying that he spoke by the word of the Lord against the altar which is in Baithel and against the houses of the high places that are in Samaria shall come to pass."

³³ And after this event Ieroboam did not turn from his evil, and he turned and made priests for the high places from part of the people; anyone who wanted to, he would fill his hand, and he would become a priest for the high places. ³⁴And this matter became to the house of Ieroboam sin and ruin and desolation from the face of the earth.

14 ²¹And Roboam son of Salomon reigned over Ioudas; Roboam was a son of forty and one years when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Ierusalem, the city that the Lord chose out of all the tribes of Israel to put his name there, and his mother's name was Naama the Ammanite. ²²And Roboam did what was evil before the Lord and provoked him to jealousy with all that his fathers did and with their sins with which they sinned, ²³and they built for themselves high places and poles and groves on every high hill and under every shady tree, ²⁴and there was also a conspiracy in the land, and they did some of all the abominations of the nations that the Lord drove out from before the sons of Israel.

15 And in the eighteenth year of the reign of Ieroboam son of Nabat, Abiou son of Roboam began to reign over Ioudas, ²and he reigned six years, and his mother's name was Maacha daughter of Abessalom. ³And he went in the sins of his father that he did before him, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord, his God, like the heart of his father Daudid. ⁴For because of Daudid the Lord gave him a remnant, that he might establish his children after him and establish Ierousalem; ⁵as Daudid did what was right before the Lord, he did not turn aside from anything that he commanded him all the days of his life. ⁷And the rest of the histories of Abiou and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Ioudas? And there was war between Abiou and between Ieroboam. ⁸And Abiou slept with his fathers in the twenty-fourth year of Ieroboam, and he was buried with his fathers in the city of Daudid, and his son Asa reigned instead of him.

¹⁶ And there was war between Asa and between King Baasa of Israel all the days. ¹⁷And King Baasa of Israel went up against Ioudas and built Rama to prevent anyone from going out and coming in to King Asa of Ioudas. ¹⁸And Asa took the silver and the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the king and gave them into the hands of his servants, and King Asa sent them away to Hader's son, son of Taberemman son of Hazin king of Syria who resided in Damascus, saying, ¹⁹"Make a covenant between me and between you and between my father and your father; behold, I have sent you presents, silver and gold; go, break your covenant with King Baasa of Israel, and he will withdraw from me." ²⁰And Hader's son listened to King Asa and sent the commanders of his forces against the cities of Israel and smote Ain and Dan and Abelmaa and all Chezrath as far as all the land of Nephthali. ²¹And it came to pass, when Baasa heard, that he stopped building Rama and returned to Thersa. ²²And King Asa made a proclamation to all Ioudas up to Ainakim, and they carried away the stones of Rama and its timber which Baasa built, and with them King Asa built all the hill of Benjamin and the watchtower. ²³And the rest of the histories of Asa and all his power that he exercised, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Ioudas? Yet, in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet. ²⁴And Asa slept and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daudid, and his son Iosaphat reigned instead of him.

²⁵ And Nadab son of Ieroboam began to reign over Israel in the second year of King Asa of Ioudas, and he reigned over Israel two years. ²⁶And

he did what was evil before the Lord and went in the way of his father and in his sins with which he made Israel sin.

²⁷ And Baasa son of Achia, over the house of Belaan, laid siege against him and struck him down at Gabathon, which belonged to the allophytes, and Nadab and all Israel were laying siege to Gabathon. ²⁸And Baasa put him to death in the third year of Asa son of King Abiou of Ioudas, and he reigned. ²⁹And it happened, when he reigned, that he smote the house of Ieroboam and did not leave the house of Ieroboam any breath until he destroyed it according to the word of the Lord that he spoke by the hand of his slave Achia the Selonite ³⁰concerning the sins of Ieroboam as he made Israel sin and by his provocation with which he provoked the Lord God of Israel.

³³ And in the third year of King Asa of Ioudas, Baasa son of Achia began to reign over Israel at Thersa for twenty-four years. ³⁴And he did what was evil before the Lord and went in the way of Ieroboam son of Nebat and in his sins as he made Israel sin.

16 And a word of the Lord came by the hand of Iou son of Hanani against Baasa, ²"Since I raised you from the ground and gave you as a leader over my people Israel and you went in the way of Ieroboam and made my people Israel sin, provoking me to anger with their vain things, ³behold, I am rousing up after Baasa and after his house, and I will render your house like the house of Ieroboam son of Nabat; ⁴the dead person of Baasa in the city, him the dogs shall devour, and his dead person on the plain, him the birds of the air shall devour."

⁸ And Ela son of Baasa reigned over Israel two years in Thersa. ⁹And Zambri, commander of half his cavalry, conspired against him, and he was at Thersa drinking himself drunk in the house of Osa the steward at Thersa, ¹⁰and Zambri came in and struck him down and put him to death and reigned instead of him.

¹¹ And it happened, when he began to reign, when he sat on his throne, that he smote the whole house of Baasa ¹²according to the word which the Lord spoke against the house of Baasa to the prophet Iou ¹³concerning all the sins of Baasa and his son Ela as made Israel sin, provoking the Lord God of Israel to anger with their vain things. ¹⁴And the rest of the histories of Ela and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days of the Kings of Israel?

¹⁵ And Zambri reigned seven days in Thersa. And the camp of Israel was against Gabathon, which belonged to the allophytes, ¹⁶and the people in the camp heard, saying, "Zambri conspired and struck the king," and in Israel they made Ambri, the commander of the army, king over Israel on that day in the camp. ¹⁷And Ambri went up from Gabathon, and all Israel with him, and they laid siege to Thersa. ¹⁸And it happened, when Zambri saw that his city had been taken, that he went into the cave of the house of the king and burned down the house of the king over himself with fire, and he died ¹⁹because of his sins that he did, to do what was evil before the Lord, to go in the way of Ieroboam son of Nabat and in his sins as he made Israel sin. ²⁰And the rest of the histories of Zambri and the collusions in which he colluded, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days of the Kings of Israel?

²¹ Then the people of Israel were divided; half of the people were behind Thamni son of Gonath to make him king, and half of the people were behind Ambri. ²²The people who were behind Ambri overcame the people who were behind Thamni son of Gonath, and Thamni died, and Ioram his brother, at that time, and Ambri became king after Thamni. ²³In the thirty-first year of King Asa, Ambri began to reign over Israel for twelve years. He reigned six years in Thersa.

²⁵ Ambri did what was evil before the Lord and did more evil than all who were before him, ²⁶and he went in every way of Ieroboam son of Nabat and in his sins with which he made Israel sin, provoking the Lord God of Israel, to anger with their vain things. ²⁷And the rest of the words of Ambri and all that he did and his dominance, behold, are these not written in the Book of the Words of the Days of the Kings of Israel? ²⁸And Ambri slept with his fathers and was buried in Samaria, and his son Achaab reigned in his stead.

^{28a} And in the eleventh year of Ambri, (^{22.41})Iosaphat son of Asa began to reign, being (^{22.42})thirty-five years at his reign, and he reigned twenty-five years in Ierusalem, and his mother's name was Gazouba daughter of Selei. ^{28b}(^{22.43})And he went in the way of his father Asa, and he did not turn aside from it to do what was right before the Lord; except the high places they did not remove. They kept sacrificing and offering incense on the high places. ^{28c}And what Iosaphat agreed to (^{22.46})and all the dominance that he exercised and whom he fought, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days of the Kings of Ioudas?

^{28d}(^{22.46})And the rest of the combinations^a that they practiced in the days of his father Asa, he removed from the land. ^{28e}(^{22.47})And there was no king in Syria, a nasib^b. ^{28f}And King (^{22.48})Iosaphat made a ship for Tharsis, to go to Sophir for gold, and it did not go, for the ship was wrecked at Gasiongaber. ^{28g}(^{22.49})Then the king of Israel said to Iosaphat, "I will send forth your servants and my lads in the ship," and Iosaphat was not willing. ^{28h}(^{22.50})And Iosaphat slept with his fathers and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daud, and his son Ioram reigned in his stead.

²⁹ In the second year of Iosaphat, Achaab son of Ambri began to reign; he reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty-two years. ³⁰And Achaab did what was evil before the Lord, he was more wicked than all who were before him, ³¹and it was not enough for him to go in the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, and he took as his wife Iezebel daughter of King Iethebaal of the Sidonians and went and was subject to Baal and did obeisance to him. ³²And he set an altar for Baal in the house of his offences which he built in Samaria, ³³and Achaab made a grove, and Achaab added to do provocations to provoke to anger so that his life might be destroyed; he did more evil than all the kings of Israel who were before him. ³⁴In his days Achiel the Bethelite built Iericho; he laid its foundation with Abiron his firstborn and set up its doors with his younger son Segoub according to the word of the Lord, which he spoke by the hand of Iesous son of Naue.

17 And Eliou the prophet, the Thesbite from Thesbon of Galaad, said to Achaab, "The Lord lives, the God of hosts, the God of Israel before whom I stand, if there shall be dew and rain these years, except by the word of my mouth." ²And a word of the Lord came to Eliou, ³"Go from here eastward, and hide yourself by the wadi Chorrath which is before the Jordan. ⁴And it will be that you shall drink water from the wadi, and I will command the ravens to feed you there." ⁵And Eliou did according to the word of the Lord, and he settled by the wadi Chorrath before the Jordan. ⁶And the ravens would bring him bread in the morning and meat in the evening, and he drank water from the wadi. ⁷And it happened after days that the wadi dried up, because there was no rain in the land.

⁸ And a word of the Lord came to Eliou, ⁹"Arise, and go to Sarepta of Sidonia; behold, I have commanded a widow there to feed you." ¹⁰And he arose and went to Sarepta, to the gateway of the town, and behold a widow was there gathering sticks, and Eliou shouted after her and said, "Bring me now a little water in a vessel, and I will drink." ¹¹And she went to take it, and Eliou shouted after her and said to her, "Indeed take for me a morsel of bread in your hand." ¹²And the woman said, "The Lord your God lives, if I have a cake, but there is only a handful of meal in the jar and a little oil in the jug, and behold, I am now gathering two sticks, and I shall go in and make it for myself and my children, and we shall eat and die." ¹³And Eliou said to her, "Be of good courage; go in, and do according to your word, but first make me a little cake of it, and you shall bring it to me, but afterwards you shall make something for yourself and your children. ¹⁴For this is what the Lord says, 'The jar of meal will not fail, and the jug of oil will not diminish until the day that the Lord gives rain on the earth.'" ¹⁵And the woman went and did it, and she and he and her children ate. ¹⁶And the jar of meal did not fail, and the jug of oil did not diminish according to the word of the Lord that he spoke by the hand of Eliou.

¹⁷ And it happened after these things that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, became ill, and his illness was so severe until there was no breath left in him. ¹⁸And she said to Eliou, "What to me and to you, O man of God? You have come to me to bring my injustices to remembrance and to put to death my son!" ¹⁹And Eliou said to the woman, "Give me your son." And he took him from her bosom and carried him up into the upper chamber, there where he was lodging, and laid him on his bed. ²⁰And Eliou cried out and said, "Alas O Lord, the witness of the widow, her with whom I am staying, you have done evil by putting to death her son." ²¹And he breathed on the lad three times and called on the Lord and said, "O Lord my God, let this lad's life now come into him again." ²²And it happened thus, and the lad cried out. ²³And he brought him down from the upper chamber into the house and gave him to his mother, and Eliou said, "See, your son is alive." ²⁴And the woman said to Eliou, "Behold, I know that you are a divine man and that a word of the Lord in your mouth is true."

18 And it happened after many days that a word of the Lord came to Eliou in the third year, saying, "Go, and appear to Achaab, and I will give rain on the surface of the earth." ²And Eliou went to appear to Achaab. And the famine was severe in Samaria. ³And Achaab summoned Abdiou the steward. (And Abdiou was one who revered the Lord greatly, ⁴and it happened, when Iezabel smote the prophets of the Lord, that Abdiou took a hundred men, prophets, and hid them by fifty to a cave and kept providing them with bread and water.) ⁵And Achaab said to Abdiou, "Come, and let us pass through the land to springs of water and to wadis, if perhaps we may find grass and keep the horses and mules alive, and none of the animals will be destroyed." ⁶And they divided for themselves the way to pass through it; Achaab went in one direction alone, and Abdiou went in another direction alone.

⁷ And Abdiou was on the way alone, and Eliou came to meet him alone, and Abdiou hastened and fell on his face and said, "Are you he, my lord Eliou?" ⁸And Eliou said to him, "It is I; go, say to your lord, Behold, Eliou." ⁹And Abdiou said,

"What have I sinned, that you give your slave into the hand of Achaab, to put me to death? ¹⁰The Lord your God lives, if there is a nation or kingdom to which my lord has not sent to seek you, and they said, 'He is not here,' and he set fire to the kingdom and its regions, because it had not found you. ¹¹And now you say, 'Go, tell your lord, Behold, Eliou.' ¹²And it will be if I depart from you, that a spirit of the Lord will carry you into a land that I know not, and I will go in to tell Achaab, and he will kill me, and your slave is one who reveres the Lord from his youth. ¹³Has it not been told to you my lord what I have done when Iezabel killed the prophets of the Lord, that I hid some of the Lord's prophets, a hundred men, by fifty to a cave, and provided them with loaves and water? ¹⁴And now you say to me, 'Go, say to your lord, Behold Eliou,' and he will kill me." ¹⁵And Eliou said, "The Lord of hosts lives before whom I stand, for I will appear to him today." ¹⁶And Abdiou went to meet Achaab and told him, and Achaab ran forth and came to meet Eliou.

¹⁷ And it happened, when Achaab saw Eliou, that Achaab said to Eliou, "Are you he who perverts Israel?" ¹⁸And Eliou said, "I am not perverting Israel, but you and your father's house, when you forsook the Lord, your God, and went after the Baalim. ¹⁹And now send, assemble all Israel for me at Mount Carmel, and the four hundred fifty prophets of shame and the four hundred prophets of the groves, since they eat at Iezabel's table."

²⁰ And Achaab sent to all Israel and gathered all the prophets at Mount Carmel. ²¹And Eliou came near to all, and Eliou said to them, "How long will you go limping on both legs? If the Lord is God, go after him, but if Baal is he, go after him." And the people did not answer a word. ²²And Eliou said to the people, "I all alone am left over as prophet of the Lord, and Baal's prophets number four hundred fifty men, and the prophets of the grove, four hundred. ²³Let them give us two bulls, and let them choose the one for themselves and cut it in pieces and lay it on the wood, and let them put on no fire, and I will do the other bull and will put on no fire. ²⁴And shout in the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord, my God, and it will be, the god who answers by fire, he is God." And all the people answered and said, "The word which you spoke is good!" ²⁵And Eliou said to the prophets of shame, "Choose for yourselves the one bull calf, and do it first, for you are many, and call on the name of your god, and put on no fire." ²⁶And they took the bull calf and did it and were calling on the name of Baal from morning until noon and said, "Hear us, O Baal, hear us!" And there was no voice, and there was no hearing, and they ran about on the altar that they made. ²⁷And it happened at noon that Eliou the Thesbite mocked them and said, "Call in a loud voice! For he is a god, for prating^a occupies him, and at the same time he is perhaps giving an oracle, or perhaps he is asleep and will get up." ²⁸And they were calling in a loud voice and, as was their custom, they were cutting themselves with daggers and lances until the blood gushed out over them, ²⁹and they were acting the prophet until evening came. And it happened, as it was the time for the sacrifice to ascend and there was no voice, that Eliou the Thesbite spoke to the prophets of the offenses, saying, "Stand aside for the present, and I will do my whole burnt offering," and they stood aside and departed.

³⁰ And Eliou said to the people, "Come closer to me," and all the people came closer to him. ³¹And Eliou took twelve stones according to the number of the tribes of Israel, as the Lord had spoken to him, saying, "Israel shall be your name," ³²and he built the stones in the name of the Lord and repaired the altar that had been thrown down and made a thaala^a around the altar, holding two measures of seed. ³³And he piled up the firewood on the altar that he made and cut the whole burnt offering in pieces and laid it on the firewood and piled it on the altar. ³⁴And he said, "Take for me four jars of water, and pour it on the whole burnt offering and on the firewood," and they did so. And he said, "Do it a second time," and they did it a second time. And he said, "Do it a third time," and they did it a third time. ³⁵And the water ran all around the altar, and filled the thaala^a with water.

³⁶ And Eliou cried aloud to heaven and said, "O Lord, God of Abraam and Isaak and Israel, heed me, O Lord, heed me today with fire, and let all this people know that you are Lord, God of Israel, and I am your slave, and I have done these works on your account. ³⁷Heed me, O Lord, heed me with fire, and let this people know that you are Lord God and that you turned the heart of this people back." ³⁸And fire from the Lord fell from heaven and consumed the whole burnt offering and the firewood and the water that was in the thaala^a and the stones, and the fire licked up the dust. ³⁹And all the people fell on their face and said, "Truly the Lord is God; he is God." ⁴⁰And Eliou said to the people, "Seize the prophets of Baal; do not let one of them escape." And they seized them, and Eliou brought them down to the wadi Kison and slaughtered them there.

⁴¹ And Eliou said to Achaab, "Go up, and eat, and drink, for there is a sound of the feet of the rain." ⁴²And Achaab went up to eat and to drink, and Eliou went up on Carmel and bowed down upon the earth and put his face between his knees. ⁴³And he said to his lad, "Go up, and look the way of the sea." And the lad looked and said, "There is nothing." And Eliou said, "Now you—go again seven times." And the lad returned seven times. ⁴⁴And it happened at the seventh time, and behold, a little cloud—like the sole of a person's foot—bringing water. And he said, "Go up, and say to Achaab, 'Harness your chariot, and go down; do not let the rain overtake you.'" ⁴⁵And it happened ^buntil thus and thus^b, and the sky grew black with clouds and wind, and there was a heavy rain, and Achaab wept and went to Iezrael. ⁴⁶And the hand of the Lord was on Eliou, and he girded up his loins and ran in front of Achaab to Iezrael.

19 And Achaab told Iezabel his wife all that Eliou did and how he killed the prophets with a sword. ²And Iezabel sent to Eliou and said, "If you are Eliou and I am Iezabel, this is what God may do to me, and this is what he may add, because I will make your life like the life of one of them by this hour tomorrow." ³And Eliou was afraid and got up and went away for his life and came to Bersabee which belongs to Ioudas, and he left his lad there.

⁴ And he went a day's journey into the wilderness and came and sat down under one rathm^c and asked that his soul die and said "Let it be enough now; indeed, take away my life from me, Lord, for I am no better than my fathers." ⁵And he lay down there under a plant and fell asleep, and behold, someone touched him and said to him, "Get up, and eat." ⁶And Eliou looked, and behold, at his head was a wheat cake and a jar of water, and he arose and ate and drank. And turning away, he slept. ⁷And the angel of the Lord returned a second time and touched him and said to him, "Get up, eat, for the journey will be too much for you." ⁸And he got up and ate and drank, and he went in the strength of that food forty days and forty nights as far as Mount Choreb. ⁹And there he entered into a cave and lodged there.

And behold, a word of the Lord came to him and said, "Why are you here, Eliou?" ¹⁰And Eliou said, "Being zealous, I have been zealous for the Lord Almighty, for the sons of Israel forsook you; they threw down your altars and killed your prophets with a sword, and I alone am a remnant, and they are seeking my life, to take it."

¹¹ And he said, "You shall go out tomorrow and shall stand before the Lord on the mountain; behold, the Lord will pass by." And there was a great, strong wind splitting mountains and crushing rocks before the Lord, and the Lord was not in the wind, and after the wind a ^dseismic upheaval^d; the Lord was not in the ^dseismic upheaval^d, ¹²and after the ^dseismic upheaval^d a fire; the Lord was not in the fire, and after the fire the sound of a light breeze, and the Lord was there. ¹³And it happened, when Eliou heard it, that he wrapped his face in his hairy mantle and went out and stood by the cave, and behold, there came a voice to him, and it said, "Why are you here, Eliou?" ¹⁴And Eliou said, "Being zealous, I have been zealous for the Lord Almighty, for the sons of Israel forsook your covenant; they tore down your altars and killed your prophets with a sword, and I alone am a remnant, and they are seeking my life, to take it." ¹⁵And the Lord said to him, "Go, return on your way, and you will come to the way of the wilderness of Damascus, and you shall anoint Hazael as king of Syria, ¹⁶and you shall anoint Iou son of Namessi as king over Israel, and you shall anoint

Elisaie son of Saphat from Abelmaoula as prophet in your stead. ¹⁷And it will be that the one who escapes from the sword of Hazael Iou shall put to death, and the one who escapes from the sword of Iou Elisaie shall put to death. ¹⁸And you will leave seven thousand men in Israel, all the knees that did not bow a knee to Baal and every mouth that did not do obeisance to him."

19 And he set out from there and found Elisaie son of Saphat, and he was plowing with oxen—twelve yoke of oxen ahead of him, and he was with the twelve—and he came upon him and threw his hairy mantle over him. ²⁰And Elisaie left the oxen and ran after Eliou and said, "I will kiss my father and will follow after you," and Eliou said, "Go back, for I am done with you." ²¹And he returned from behind him and took the yoke of oxen and slaughtered and boiled them with the equipment from the oxen and gave it to the people, and they ate, and he arose and went after Eliou and ministered to him.

20(21) And Nabouthai the Iezraelite had one vineyard beside the threshing floor of King Achaab of Samaria. ²And Achaab spoke to Nabouthai, saying, "Give me your vineyard, and it will be to me for a garden of vegetables, because it is nearer my house, and I will give you another vineyard better than it, but if it seems pleasing before you, I will give you money in exchange for this your vineyard, and it will be to me for a garden of vegetables." ³And Nabouthai said to Achaab, "May it not be to me from my God to give you the inheritance of my fathers." ⁴And the spirit of Achaab became troubled, and he lay down on his bed and covered his face and did not eat bread.

5 And his wife Iezabel came in to him and spoke to him, "Why is your spirit troubled and you are not eating bread?" ⁶And he said to her, "Because I spoke to Nabouthai the Iezraelite, saying, 'Give me your vineyard for money, but if you prefer, I will give you another vineyard for it,' and he said, 'I will not give you the inheritance of my fathers.'" ⁷And his wife Iezabel said to him, "Do you now thus act the king over Israel? Get up, eat bread, and be yourself, I will give you the vineyard of Nabouthai the Iezraelite."

8 And she wrote a document in Achaab's name and sealed it with his seal and sent the document to the elders and the freemen who lived with Nabouthai. ⁹And it was written in the documents, saying, "Fast a fast, and seat Nabouthai at the head of the people, ¹⁰and seat two men, sons of transgressors, opposite him and have them testify against him, saying, 'You have blessed^a God and king,' and let them take him out and stone him, and let him die." ¹¹And the men of his city, the elders and the freemen who lived in his city, did as Iezabel sent to them, just as it was written in the documents that she sent to them. ¹²They called a fast and seated Nabouthai at the head of the people, ¹³and two men, sons of transgressors, came and sat opposite him and testified against him, saying, "You have blessed^a God and king," and they took him outside the city and stoned him with stones, and he died. ¹⁴And they sent to Iezabel, saying, "Nabouthai has been stoned and is dead."

15 And it happened, when Iezabel heard, that she said to Achaab, "Get up, take possession of the vineyard of Nabouthai the Iezraelite, which he refused to give you for money, for Nabouthai is not alive, for he is dead." ¹⁶And it happened, when Achaab heard that Nabouthai the Iezraelite was dead, that he tore his garments and put on sackcloth, and it happened after these things that Achaab arose and went down to the vineyard of Nabouthai the Iezraelite to possess it.

17 And the Lord said to Eliou the Thesbite, saying: ¹⁸Arise, and go down to meet King Achaab of Israel who is in Samaria; behold, he is in the vineyard of Nabouthai, for he has gone down there to possess it. ¹⁹And you shall speak to him, saying, "This is what the Lord says: Since you murdered and took possession," therefore, "this is what the Lord says: In every place where swine and dogs licked up the blood of Nabouthai, there dogs will lick up your blood, and the prostitutes will wash themselves in your blood."

20 And Achaab said to Eliou, "Have you found me, O my enemy?" And he said, "I have found you, because you have vainly sold yourself to do what is evil before the Lord, to provoke him to anger. ²¹This is what the Lord says, 'Behold I am bringing disaster on you, and I will burn after you and will cut off from Achaab every one who urinates against a wall^b, both shut up and one left in Israel, ²²and I will render your house like the house of Ieroboam son of Nabat and like the house of Baasa son of Achia concerning the provocations with which you provoked, and you made Israel sin.' ²³And to Iezabel the Lord spoke, saying, 'The dogs shall eat her by the fortification of Iezrael.' ²⁴The dead of Achaab in the city the dogs shall eat, and his dead on the plain the birds of the air shall eat."

25 (Yet, Achaab did act foolishly when he sold himself to do what was evil before the Lord, as his wife Iezabel led him astray, ²⁶and he acted most abominably in going after abominations, according to all that the Amorrites did, whom the Lord utterly destroyed from before the sons of Israel.)

27 And because of the word, when Achaab was smitten with remorse from before the Lord, he went weeping, and he tore his tunic and girded himself with sackcloth on his body and fasted and put on sackcloth in the day on which he smote Nabouthai the Iezraelite. ²⁸And a word of the Lord by the hand of his slave Eliou came concerning Achaab, and the Lord said, ²⁹"Have you seen how Achaab is smitten with remorse from before me? I will not bring the disaster in his days, but in his son's days I will bring the disaster."

21(20) And Hader's son gathered all his force together and went up and laid siege against Samaria, and thirty-two kings with him and every horse and chariot, and they went up and laid siege against Samaria and fought against it. ²And he sent into the city to King Achaab ³and said to him, "This is what Hader's son says: Your silver and your gold are mine, and your wives and your children are mine." ⁴And the king of Israel answered and said, "As you spoke, O lord, king, I am yours, and all that is mine." ⁵And the messengers came again and said, "This is what Hader's son says: I have sent to you, saying: You shall give me your silver and your gold and your wives and your children, ⁶for I will send my servants to you tomorrow at this time, and they shall search your house and the houses of your servants, and it will be the desirable objects of their eyes, on which they shall lay their hands, they will take."

⁷ And the king of Israel called all the elders, and said, "Indeed, know, and see that this man is seeking trouble, for he has sent to me concerning my wives and concerning my sons and concerning my daughters; my silver and my gold I did not keep back from him." ⁸And the elders and all the people said to him, "Do not listen, and do not consent." ⁹And he said to the messengers of Hader's son, "Say to your master: All things that you have sent to your slave about at first I will do, but this matter I cannot do." And the men left and returned word to him. ¹⁰And Hader's son sent back to him, saying, "This may the god do to me, and this may he add, if the dust of Samaria will suffice for foxes for all the people, for my footmen." ¹¹And the king of Israel answered and said, "Let it suffice; let not the hunchback boast as he who is straight." ¹²And it happened, when he answered him this word, he was drinking, he and all the kings with him, in the booths, and he said to his servants, "Build a palisade!" And they placed a palisade against the city.

¹³ And behold, one prophet came up to the king of Israel and said, "This is what the Lord says, Have you seen all this great multitude? Behold, I will give it into your hand today, and you shall know that I am the Lord." ¹⁴And Achaab said, "By whom?" and he said, "This is what the Lord says, By the lads who serve the district governors." And Achaab said, "Who shall begin the battle?" And he said, "You." ¹⁵And Achaab mustered the lads who served the district governors, and there were two hundred thirty, and after these things he mustered the people, every son of power, sixty thousand.

¹⁶ And he went out at noon, and Hader's son was drinking himself drunk in Sokchoth, he and the thirty-two kings allied with him. ¹⁷And the lads who served the district governors went out among the first. And they sent and reported to the king of Syria, saying, "Men have come out from Samaria." ¹⁸And he said to them, "If these have come out for peace, take them alive, and if they have come out for war, take them alive, ¹⁹and do not let the lads who serve the district governors come out of the city." And the force behind them ²⁰smote, each the one beside him, and he repeated, each the one beside him, and Syria fled, and Israel pursued them, and Hader's son, king of Syria, escaped on a horse of a horseman. ²¹And the king of Israel went out and took all the horses and the chariots and struck a great blow in Syria.

²² And the prophet approached the king of Israel and said, "Strengthen yourself, and consider, and see what you will do, for when the year turns, Hader's son, king of Syria, will come up against you."

²³ And the servants of the king of Syria said, "The God of Israel is a god of mountains and not a god of valleys, therefore he prevailed over us, but if we fight against them on level ground, then we shall prevail over them." ²⁴And do this: send away the kings, each to their place, and put satraps in place of them, ²⁵and we will exchange with you a form like the force that you have lost, both horse for horse and chariot for chariot, and we will fight against them on level ground, and we shall prevail over them." And he heeded their voice and did so.

²⁶ And it happened when the year turned that Hader's son mustered Syria and went up to Apheka for battle against Israel. ²⁷And the sons of Israel mustered and went out to meet them, and Israel encamped opposite them like two flocks of goats, and Syria filled the country. ²⁸And the man of God approached and said to the king of Israel, "This is what the Lord says, Because Syria said, 'The Lord the God of Israel is a god of mountains and not a god of the valleys,' I will give this great force into your hand, and you shall know that I am the Lord." ²⁹And they encamped opposite one another seven days, and it happened on the seventh day that the battle drew near, and Israel smote Syria, one hundred thousand foot soldiers in one day. ³⁰And the rest fled into the city of Apheka, and the wall fell on twenty-seven thousand of the men that were left.

And Hader's son fled and entered the house into the inner chamber of the bedroom. ³¹And he said to his servants, "I know that the kings of Israel are merciful kings; let us now put sackcloths around our waists and ropes on our heads and go out to the king of Israel, perhaps he will spare our lives." ³²And they tied sackcloths around their waists and put ropes on their heads and said to the king of Israel, "Your slave, Hader's son, says, 'Indeed, let my soul live.'" And he said, "Is he still alive? He is my brother." ³³And the men practiced ornithomancy, and they hastened and seized upon the word from his mouth and said, "Hader's son is your brother." And he said, "Go in, and bring him," and Hader's son came out to him, and they made him come up to him into the chariot. ³⁴And he said to him, "I will restore to you the towns that my father took from your father, and you shall establish streets for yourself in Damascus, as my father did in Samaria, and I will send you off with a covenant." So he made a covenant with him and sent him off.

³⁵ And by a word of the Lord one person of the sons of the prophets said to his neighbor, "Indeed, smite me!" And the person refused to smite him. ³⁶And he said to him, "Because you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord, behold, you will depart from me, and a lion will smite you." And he went out from him, and a lion found him and smote him. ³⁷And he found another person and said, "Now smite me!" And the person smote him, and he smote and smashed him. ³⁸And the prophet departed and waited for the king of Israel along the road and bound his eyes with a bandage. ³⁹And it happened, as the king was passing by, that he shouted to the king and said, "Your slave went out to the army for the battle, and behold, a man brought a man to me and said to me, 'Guard this man, but if escaping he escapes, then your life shall be for his life, or else you shall pay a talent of silver.' ⁴⁰And it happened: your slave looked around here and there, and he was not." And the king of Israel said to him, "Behold, you have also slain the ambushes on my side." ⁴¹And he hastened and removed the bandage away from his eyes, and the king of Israel recognized him that he was one of the prophets. ⁴²And he said to him, "This is what the Lord says, 'Because you carried off a man destined for destruction at your hand, your life shall also be for his life, and your people for his people.'" ⁴³And the king of Israel departed, troubled and faint, and came to Samaria.

22 And he stayed for three years, and there was no war between Syria and between Israel. ²And it happened in the third year that Iosaphat, king of Iouda, came down to the king of Israel. ³And the king of Israel said to his servants, "Do you know that Remmath Galaad belongs to us, and we are saying nothing to take it out of the hand of the king of Syria?" ⁴And the king of Israel said to Iosaphat, "Will you go up with us to Remmath Galaad to battle?" And Iosaphat said, "As I am, so also are you; as my people, are your people; as my horses, are your horses."

⁵ And Iosaphat, king of Iouda, said to the king of Israel, "Do inquire of the Lord today." ⁶And the king of Israel gathered all the prophets together, about four hundred men, and the king said to them, "Shall I go to battle against Remmath Galaad, or shall I refrain?" And they said, "Go up, and giving the Lord will give it into the hands of the king." ⁷And Iosaphat said to the king of Israel, "Is there not a prophet of the Lord here? And we will inquire of the Lord through him." ⁸And the king of Israel said to Iosaphat, "There is still one man to inquire of the Lord through him, but I hate him, for he does not speak anything good about me, but only evil, Michaias son of Iemla." And Iosaphat, king of Iouda, said, "Let the king not say so." ⁹And the king of Israel summoned one eunuch and said, "Quickly, Michaias son of Iemla." ¹⁰And the king of Israel and Iosaphat king of Iouda were sitting, a man upon his throne, armed in the gates of Samaria, and all the prophets were prophesying before them. ¹¹And Sedekias son of Chanana made for himself horns of iron, and he said, "This is what the Lord says: With these you shall gore Syria until it is finished." ¹²And all the prophets were prophesying the same way, saying, "Go up to Remmath Galaad, and you will succeed, and the Lord will give into your hands even the king of Syria."

¹³ And the messenger who had gone to summon Michaias spoke to him, saying, "Behold now, all the prophets are speaking with one mouth good things about the king; now you too, let your words be like the words of one of them, and speak good things." ¹⁴And Michaias said, "The Lord lives, for whatever the Lord says to me, that I will speak."

¹⁵ And he came to the king, and the king said to him, "Michaias, shall I go up to Remmath Galaad to battle, or shall I refrain?" And he said, "Go up, and you will succeed, and the Lord will give it into the hand of the king." ¹⁶And the king said to him, "How many times must I make you swear that you tell me the truth in the name of the Lord?" ¹⁷And Michaias said, "Not so—I have seen all Israel scattered on the mountains, like a flock that has no shepherd, and the Lord said, 'These have no master; let each one go home in peace.'" ¹⁸And the king of Israel said to Iosaphat, king of Iouda, "Did I not tell you that this one does not prophesy anything good to me, for on the contrary evil?"

¹⁹ And Michaias said, "Not so, not I—hear the word of the Lord—not so: I saw the Lord God of Israel, sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven stood near him on his right and on his left. ²⁰And the Lord said, 'Who will entice Achaab, king of Israel, and he will go up and fall at Remmath Galaad?' And one spoke one way, and another another way. ²¹And a spirit came forward and stood before the Lord and said, 'I will entice him.' And the Lord said to him, 'In what way?' ²²And he said, 'I will go out and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets.' And he said, 'You shall entice him, and indeed you shall prevail; go out, and do so.' ²³And now, behold, the Lord has put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these your prophets, and the Lord has spoken evil against you."

²⁴ And Sedekias^a son of Chanana came near and struck Michaias on the cheek and said, "What kind of a spirit of the Lord has spoken in you?" ²⁵And Michaias said, "Behold, you shall see in that day, when you go into a chamber of the chamber to hide." ²⁶And the king of Israel said, "Take Michaias, and return him to Emer the governor of the city, and tell Iosaphat son of the king ²⁷ to put this fellow in prison and to feed him bread of affliction and water of affliction until I return in peace." ²⁸And Michaias said, "If returning you return in peace, the Lord has not spoken by me."

²⁹ And the king of Israel and Iosaphat, king of Iouda, with him went up to Remmath Galaad. ³⁰And the king of Israel said to Iosaphat, king of Iouda, "I will disguise myself and enter into the battle, and you wear my clothing." And the king of

^aof Sedekias = Ra

Israel disguised himself and entered into the battle. ³¹And the king of Syria commanded the thirty-two commanders of his chariots, saying, "Fight not small or great, but only the king of Israel." ³²And it happened, as the commanders of the chariots saw Iosaphat, king of Iouda, that they said, "This appears to be the king of Israel." And they surrounded him to fight him, and Iosaphat cried out. ³³And it happened, as the commanders of the chariots saw that this was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from him. ³⁴And one drew his bow aiming well and struck the king of Israel between the lungs and between the breastplate. And he said to the driver of his chariot, "Turn your hands around, and carry me away out of the battle, for I am wounded." ³⁵And the battle turned into a rout in that day, and the king stood on his chariot facing Syria from morning until evening, and he shed blood from the wound into the hollow of the chariot, and he died in the evening, and blood ³⁶of the ^arout flowed out to the hollow of the chariot. ³⁶And the herald of the army stood at sunset, saying, "Every man to his own city and to his own country, ³⁷for the king is dead!"

And they came to Samaria and buried the king in Samaria. ³⁸And they washed off the chariot by the spring of Samaria, and the sows and the dogs licked up the blood, and the prostitutes washed themselves in the blood, according to the word of the Lord that he had spoken. ³⁹And the rest of the histories of Achaab and all that he did and the ivory house that he built and all the cities that he made, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days of the Kings of Israel? ⁴⁰And Achaab slept with his fathers, and Ochozias his son reigned in his stead.

41 And Iosaphat son of Asa reigned over Iouda. In the fourth year of Achaab, king of Israel, he became king. ⁴²Iosaphat was a son of thirty-five years when he became king, and he reigned twenty and five years in Ierusalem. And his mother's name was Azouba daughter of Selel. ⁴³And he went in all the way of Asa his father; he did not turn aside from it, doing what was right in the sight of the Lord; ⁴⁴(^{43b})yet he did not take away any of the high places; the people were still sacrificing and offering incense on the high places. ⁴⁵(⁴⁴)And Iosaphat made peace with the king of Israel.

46(45) And the rest of the histories of Iosaphat and his acts of dominance that he exercised, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days of the Kings of Ioudas? ⁵¹(⁵⁰)And Iosaphat slept with his fathers and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daud his father, and Ioram his son reigned in his stead.

52(51) And Ochozias son of Achaab reigned over Israel in Samaria in the seventeenth year of Iosaphat, king of Iouda, and he reigned in Israel two years. ⁵³(⁵²)And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord and walked in the way of Achaab his father and in the way of Iezabel his mother and in the sins of the house of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin. ⁵⁴(⁵³)And he was subject to the Baalim and did obeisance to them, and he provoked the Lord, God of Israel, to anger, according to all that had been done before him.

1 And Moab rebelled against Israel after Achaab died.

2 And Ochozias fell through the lattice in his upper chamber in Samaria and was sick, and he sent messengers and told them, "Go, and inquire by the goddess Baal, fly god of Akkaron, whether I shall recover from this my sickness." And they went to inquire through him. ³And an angel of the Lord spoke to Eliou the Thesbite, saying, "Get up, go to meet the messengers of Ochozias, king of Samaria, and you shall say to them, 'Is it because there is no god in Israel that you are going to inquire by the goddess Baal, fly god of Akkaron?' ⁴And not so, for this is what the Lord says, 'The bed upon which you went up there, you shall not come down from it, for there by death you shall die.'" And Eliou went and spoke to them.

5 And the messengers returned to him, and he said to them, "Why is it that you returned?" ⁶And they said to him, "A man came up to meet us and said to us, 'Go, return to the king who sent you, and you shall say to him: This is what the Lord says: Is it because there is no god in Israel that you are going to inquire by the goddess Baal, fly god of Akkaron? Not so; the bed upon which you went up there, you shall not come down from it, for by death you shall die.'" ⁷And he spoke to them, saying, "What was the judgment^a of the man who went up to meet you and told you these words?" ⁸And they said to him, "A hairy man, and wearing a leather belt around his waist." And he said, "This is Eliou the Thesbite."

9 And he sent to him a leader, an officer of fifty, and his fifty men. And he went up and came to him, and behold, Eliou was sitting on the top of the mountain. And the officer of fifty spoke to him and said, "O man of God, the king has summoned you, come down." ¹⁰And Eliou answered and said to the officer of fifty, "And if I am a man of God, fire will come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty." And fire came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty.

11 And the king proceeded and sent to him another officer of fifty and his fifty. And he went up, and the captain of fifty spoke to him and said, "O man of God, this is what the king says: Come down quickly!" ¹²And Eliou answered and spoke to him and said, "If I am a man of God, fire will come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty." And fire came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty.

13 And the king proceeded still to send a third leader, an officer of fifty, and his fifty. And the third officer of fifty went to him and knelt on his knees before Eliou and entreated him and spoke to him and said, "O man of God, do let my life and the life of these fifty slaves of yours be precious in your sight. ¹⁴Look, fire came down from heaven and consumed the two former officers of fifties and their fifties, but now do let the life of your slaves be precious in your sight." ¹⁵And an angel of the Lord spoke to Eliou and said, "Go down with him; do not be afraid from before them." And Eliou set out and went down with him to the king. ¹⁶And he spoke to him, and Eliou said, "This is what the Lord says: Why is it that you sent messengers to inquire by the goddess Baal, fly god of Akkaron? Not so; the bed upon which you went up there, you shall not come down from it, for by death you shall die."

17 And he died according to the word of the Lord that Eliou had spoken. ¹⁸And the rest of the histories of Ochozias, what he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel?

18a And Ioram son of Achaab reigns over Israel in Samaria twelve years in the eighteenth year of Iosaphat, king of Iouda. ^{18b}And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, yet not like his brothers nor like his mother. ^{18c}And he removed the stiles of Baal that his father had made and broke them in pieces. Yet, he clung to the sins of the house of Ieroboam who made Israel sin; he did not depart from them. ^{18d}And the Lord was inflamed with anger against the house of Achaab.

2 And it happened, when the Lord was about to take Eliou up by a whirlwind as into heaven, that Eliou and Elisaie went from Galgala. ²And Eliou said to Elisaie, "Do stay here, for the Lord has sent me as far as Baithel." And Elisaie said, "The Lord lives, and your soul lives, if I will leave you!" And they came to Baithel. ³And the sons of the prophets who were in Baithel came to Elisaie and said to him, "Did you know that today the Lord is taking your master from above your head?" And he said, "Yes, I know; keep silent."

4 And Eliou said to Elisaie, "Do stay here, for the Lord has sent me to Iericho." And Elisaie said, "The Lord lives, and your soul lives, if I will abandon you!" And they came to Jericho. ⁵And the sons of the prophets who were in Jericho drew near to Elisaie and said to him, "Did you know that today the Lord is taking your master from above your head?" And he said, "And indeed I know; be silent."

^aOr means of judging

⁶ And Eliou said to him, "Do stay here, for the Lord has sent me as far as the Jordan." And Elisaie said, "The Lord lives, and your soul lives, if I will abandon you!" And they both went on. ⁷And fifty men, sons of the prophets, also stood opposite at a distance, and they both stood by the Jordan. ⁸And Eliou took his sheepskin and rolled it up and struck the water, and the water was divided here and there, and they both crossed in ^aa wilderness^a.

⁹ And it happened, when they had crossed, that Eliou said to Elisaie, "Ask what I may do for you, before I am taken from you." And Elisaie said, "Do let twofold in your spirit be on me." ¹⁰And Eliou said, "You made hard to ask this for yourself; if you see me as I am being taken up from you, then it will be so for you, and if not, it will not be." ¹¹And it happened, as they walked, that they were walking and talking, and behold, a chariot of fire and horses of fire, and they separated between both, and Eliou was taken up in a whirlwind as into heaven. ¹²And Elisaie kept watching and crying out, "Father, Father! Chariot of Israel and its horseman!" And he saw him no longer, and he grasped his clothes and tore them into two tears.

¹³ And he picked up the sheepskin of Eliou that fell from upon Elisaie, and Elisaie went back and stood on the bank of the Jordan. ¹⁴And he took the sheepskin of Eliou that fell from upon him and struck the water, and it did not part, and he said, "Where is the God of Eliou—aphpho^b?" And he struck the waters, and they burst here and there, and Elisaie went over. ¹⁵And the sons of the prophets who were in Jericho saw him opposite and said, "The spirit of Eliou rests on Elisaie." And they came to meet him and did obeisance to him on the ground. ¹⁶And they said to him, "See now, with your servants there are fifty men, sons of power; as they go, do let them seek your master; it may be that a spirit of the Lord picked him up and threw him in the Jordan or on one of the mountains or on one of the hills." And Elisaie said, "You shall not send." ¹⁷And they urged him until he was ashamed, and he said, "Send." And they sent fifty men, and they searched for three days but did not find him. ¹⁸And they came back to him (and he had remained in Jericho), and Elisaie said, "Did I not say to you, Do not go?"

¹⁹ And the men of the city said to Elisaie, "Behold, the location of the city is good, as our lord sees, but the waters are bad, and the land is deprived of children." ²⁰And Elisaie said, "Bring me a new bowl, and put salt there." And they brought it to him. ²¹And Elisaie went out to the outlet of the waters and threw the salt there and said, "This is what the Lord says, I have healed these waters; no longer shall there be death nor a lack of children from there." ²²And the waters have been healed to this day, according to the word of Elisaie that he spoke.

²³ And he went up from there to Baithel, and while he was going up on the way, small children also came out of the city and jeered at him and said to him, "Go up, baldhead! Go up!" ²⁴And he turned aside after them and saw them and cursed them in the name of the Lord. And behold, two bears came out of the wood and tore open forty-two children of them. ²⁵And he went on from there to the Carmelite mountain and from there returned to Samaria.

3 And Ioram son of Achaab became king in Israel in the eighteenth year of Iosaphat, king of Iouda, and he reigned twelve years. ²And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, yet not like his father and not like his mother, and he removed the steles of Baal that his father had made. ³Yet, he clung to the sin of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin; he did not depart from it.

⁹ And the king of Israel set out, and the king of Iouda and the king of Edom, and they circled around a journey of seven days, and there was no water for the camp or for the animals that were at their feet. ¹⁰And the king of Israel said, "O, for the Lord has summoned the three kings passing by, to give them into the hand of Moab." ¹¹And Iosaphat said, "Is there no prophet of the Lord here? And let us inquire of the Lord through him." And one of the servants of the king of Israel answered and said, "Elisaie son of Saphat, who poured water on the hands of Eliou, is here." ¹²And Iosaphat said, "He has a word of the Lord." And the king of Israel and Iosaphat, king of Iouda, and the king of Edom went down to him.

¹³ And Elisaie said to the king of Israel, "What have I to do with you? Go to the prophets of your father." And the king of Israel said to him, "No, for the Lord has summoned the three kings to hand them over to the hands of Moab." ¹⁴And Elisaie said, "The Lord of hosts before whom I stand lives, unless I regard the person of Iosaphat, king of Iouda, if I had looked at you and seen you! ¹⁵But as it is, get me a harpist." And it happened, as the harpist was playing, that the hand of the Lord came upon him. ¹⁶And he said, "This is what the

 17For this is what the Lord says, 'You shall not see wind, and you shall not see rain, and this wadi shall be filled with water, and you shall drink, you and your possessions and your animals. 18And this^b is easy in the sight of the Lord, and I will hand over Moab in your hand. 19And you shall strike every strong city, and every good tree you shall fell, and all springs of water you shall stop up, and every good portion ^cof land^c you shall ruin with stones.' 20And it happened in the morning, when the offering was going up, and behold, waters were coming from the way of Edom, and the land was filled with water.

21 And all Moab heard that the kings had come up to fight them, and they called out, from everyone ^dwearing a belt^d and upward, and they stood at the frontier. 22And they rose early in the morning, and the sun rose over the waters, and Moab saw the waters opposite, red as blood. 23And they said, "This is blood of the sword; the kings had a fight, and they struck, a man his neighbor. And now, to the spoils, Moab!" 24And they entered into the camp of Israel, and Israel rose up, and they struck Moab, and they fled from before them, and they entered Moab, going in and beating. 25And the cities they overturned, and on every good portion ^cof land^c they threw, a man his stone, and they filled it, and every spring of water they stopped up, and every good tree they felled until they left the stones of the wall overturned, and the slingers surrounded and struck it^b. 26And the king of Moab saw that the battle prevailed over him, and he took with him seven hundred men who drew sword to break through to the king of Edom, but they could not. 27And he took his firstborn son who became king in his stead and offered him up as a whole burnt offering on the wall. And great regret came upon Israel, and they withdrew from him and returned to their land.

4 And one woman from the sons of the prophets cried to Elisaie, saying, "Your slave, my husband, died, and you knew that he was a slave who feared the Lord, and the creditor came to take my two sons for himself as slaves." 2And Elisaie said, "What shall I do for you? Tell me, what do you have in the house?" And she said, "Your slave has nothing in the house, but for oil with which I shall anoint myself." 3And he said to her, "Come on, ask for yourself vessels outside from all your neighbors, empty vessels; don't make them few. 4And you shall enter and shut the door upon you and upon your sons, and you shall pour out into these vessels, and that which has been filled, you shall remove." 5And she departed from him and did so and shut the door upon her and upon her sons; they kept coming near to her, and she kept pouring in ⁶until the vessels were filled. And she said to her sons, "Bring yet to me a vessel." And they said to her, "There is no longer a vessel." And the oil stopped. 7And she came and told the man of God, and Elisaie said, "Come on, and sell the oil, and you shall pay your interests, and you and your sons shall live by the remaining oil."

8 And a day came, and Elisaie passed through to Souman, and a great woman was there, and she prevailed on him to eat bread. And it happened after enough of his entrances that he turned aside to eat there. 9And the woman said to her husband, "Look, indeed I knew that this man was a holy man of God; he regularly passes through to us. 10Let us now make for him an upper chamber, a small place, and put for him there a bed and a table and a chair and a lampstand, and it shall be, when he enters to us, that he shall turn aside there."

11 And a day came, and he entered there and turned aside to the upper chamber and lay down there. 12And he said to Giezi, his lad, "Call to me this Somanite woman." And he called her, and she stood before him. 13And he said to him, "Do say to her, Behold, you amazed us with all this amazement; what must be done for you? Is it a word on your behalf to the king or to the commander of the force?" And she said, "I am—I live among my own people." 14And he said, "What must be done for her?" And Giezi, his lad, said, "Actually, she has no son, and her husband is old." 15And he called her, and she stood at the door. 16And Elisaie said to her, "At this season, as the time is ripe, you shall have embraced a son." But she said, "No, my lord, do not deceive your slave."

17 And the woman conceived and bore a son at this season, as the time was ripe, as Elisaie said to her.

18 And the child matured, and it happened, when the child went out to his father to the reapers, 19that he said to his father, "My head, my head!" And he said to his lad, "Carry him to his mother." 20And he carried him to his mother, and he lay down on her knees until noon, and he died. 21And she carried him up and laid him on the bed of the man of God and closed upon him and went out. 22And she called her husband and said, "Do send me one of the lads and one of the donkeys, and I shall go quickly to the man of God and come back." 23And he said, "Why is it that you go to him today? It is neither new moon nor sabbath." And she said, "Peace." 24And she saddled the donkey and said to her lad, "Lead, go; do not hold back for me to mount, for if I tell you . . . ! 25Come on, and you shall go and come to the man of God at the Carmelite mountain."

And it happened, as Elisaie saw her coming, that he said to Giezi, his lad, "Look, indeed there is that Somanite woman; 26now run to meet her, and you shall say, Do you have peace? Does your husband have peace? Does the child have peace?" And she said, "Peace." 27And she came to Elisaie at the mountain, and she caught hold of his feet. And Giezi approached to push her away. And Elisaie said, "Let her alone, for her soul is painful to her, and the Lord hid it from me and did not tell me." 28Then she said, "Did I ask for a son from my lord?"

Did I not say, You shall not go astray with me?"

²⁹And Elisaie said to Giezi, "Gird up your loins, and take my staff in your hand, and go, for if you meet a man, you shall not bless him, and if a man blesses you, you shall not answer him, and you shall lay my staff on the face of the child." ³⁰And the mother of the child said, "The Lord lives, and your soul lives, if I will abandon you!" And Elisaie rose up and went after her. ³¹And Giezi went on ahead of her and laid the staff on the face of the child, but there was no sound, and there was no hearing. And he went back to meet him and told him, saying, "The child was not awakened."

³² And Elisaie entered into the house, and behold, the child was lying dead on his bed. ³³And Elisaie entered into the house and closed the door upon the two of them and prayed to the Lord. ³⁴And he went up and lay upon the child, and he put his mouth upon his mouth and his eyes upon his eyes and his hands upon his hands, and he bent over him, and the flesh of the child was warmed. ³⁵And he turned around and walked to and fro in the house and went up and bent over the child until seven times, and the child opened his eyes. ³⁶And Elisaie cried out to Giezi and said, "Call this Somanite woman." And he called, and she came in to him. And Elisaie said, "Take your son." ³⁷And the woman came in and fell at his feet and did obeisance on the ground, and she took her son and went out.

³⁸ And Elisaie returned to Galgala, and the famine was in the land, and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him. And Elisaie said to his lad, "Put the large cauldron on, and boil boiled stuff for the sons of the prophets." ³⁹And one went out into the field to gather arioth^a, and he found a vine in the field and gathered from it a wild gourd, his garment full, and he threw it into the cauldron of boiled stuff, for they knew it not. ⁴⁰And he poured it in for the men to eat. And it happened, while they were eating from the boiled stuff, that behold, they cried out and said, "O man of God, there is death in the cauldron!" And they could not eat it. ⁴¹And he said, "Bring flour, and throw it into the cauldron." And Elisaie said to Giezi the lad, "Pour for the people, and let them eat." And there was no longer any harmful thing there in the cauldron.

⁴² And a man passed through from Baith-sarisa, and he brought to the man of God from the first products: twenty barley loaves and fruitcakes. And he said, "Give it to the people, and let them eat." ⁴³And his attendant said, "Why should I set this before a hundred men?" And he said, "Give it to the people, and let them eat, for this is what the Lord says, 'They shall eat and leave some behind.'" ⁴⁴And they ate and left some behind, according to the word of the Lord.

5 And Naiman, the commander of the force of Syria, was a great man before his master and was ^bmarveled at in face^b, because by him the Lord gave deliverance to Syria. And the man was powerful in strength—leprous. ²And as for Syria, they went out lightly armed and took captive from the land of Israel a little girl, and she was in the presence of the wife of Naiman. ³And she said to her mistress, "Would that my lord were in the presence of the prophet of God who is in Samaria! Then he will recover him from his leprosy." ⁴And she went in and told her own lord and said, "Thus and so said the girl from the land of Israel." ⁵And the king of Syria said to Naiman, "Come here, enter, and I will send out a document to the king of Israel."

And he went and took in his hand ten talents of silver and six thousand gold pieces and ten changes of robes. ⁶And he brought the document to the king of Israel, saying, "And now, as soon as this document comes to you, behold, I sent to you Naiman my slave, and you shall recover him from his leprosy." ⁷And it happened, as the king of Israel read the document, that he tore his clothes and said, "Am I a god, to put to death and to make alive, that this man sends to me to recover a man from his leprosy? For only know now, and see, that this man is setting me up as an excuse."

⁸ And it happened, as Elisaie heard that the king of Israel had torn his own clothes, that he sent to the king of Israel, saying, "Why did you tear your clothes? Do let Naiman come to me, and let him know that there is a prophet in Israel." ⁹And Naiman came in horse and chariot and stood at the door of the house of Elisaie. ¹⁰And Elisaie sent a messenger to him, saying, "Going, wash seven times in the Jordan, and your flesh shall return to you, and you shall be cleansed." ¹¹And Naiman became angry and went away and said, "Behold now, I kept saying that he will come out to me and stand and call out in the name of his god and lay his hand on the place and recover the leprosy! ¹²Are not Abana and Pharphar, rivers of Damascus, better than the Jordan and all the waters of Israel? Going, shall I not wash in them and be cleansed?" And he turned and went away in a rage. ¹³And his servants approached and said to him, "The prophet spoke a great word to you; shall you not do it?—even because he said to you, 'Wash, and be cleansed.'" ¹⁴And Naiman went down and immersed himself in the Jordan seven times, according to the word of Elisaie, and his flesh returned like the flesh of a small child, and he was cleansed.

¹⁵ And he returned to Elisaie, he and all his camp, and he came and stood and said, "Behold, indeed I know that there is no god in all the earth but only in Israel, and now accept the blessing from your slave." ¹⁶And Elisaie said, "The Lord lives, before whom I stand, if I will accept it!" And he urged him to accept, but he refused. ¹⁷And Naiman said, "And if not, do let there be given to your slave a load of a pair of mules, and you shall give me from the red earth, for your slave will no longer make whole burnt offering and sacrifice to other gods except to the Lord alone. ¹⁸And the Lord will have mercy on your slave when my master enters into Remman's house to do obeisance to him, and he will rest on my arm, and I will do obeisance in Remman's house, when he does obeisance in Remman's house, and then the Lord will have mercy on your slave in this matter." ¹⁹And Elisaie said to Naiman, "Go in peace." And he went away from him for debratha^a of the land.

²⁰And Giezi, the lad of Elisaie, said, "Behold, my master spared Naiman, this Syrian, by not accepting from his hand what he brought. The Lord lives, for I will surely run after him and get something from him." ²¹And Giezi hurried after Naiman. And Naiman saw him running after him, and he turned around from the chariot to meet him. ²²And he said, "Peace. My master sent me, saying, 'Behold now, there came to me two lads from Mount Ephraim from the sons of the prophets; do give them a talent of silver and two changes of robes.'" ²³And Naiman said, "Accept two talents of silver." And he accepted it in two bags, with two changes of robes, and put them on two of his lads, and they carried them in front of him. ²⁴And they came into the darkness^b, and he took from their hands and stored the things in a house, and he dismissed the men.

²⁵And he went in and stood near by his master, and Elisaie said to him, "Where have you come from, Giezi?" And Giezi said, "Your slave has not gone here or there." ²⁶And Elisaie said to him, "Did my heart not go with you when the man turned around from the chariot to meet you? Even now you accepted the silver; even now you accepted the clothing, and shall you receive by him gardens and olive orchards and vineyards and sheep and cattle and male servants and female servants? ²⁷And the leprosy of Naiman shall cling to you and to your offspring forever." And he went out of his presence leprous, as if snow.

6 And the sons of the prophets said to Elisaie, "See now, the place where we live in your presence is too narrow for us. ²Do let us go to the Jordan, and let us take from there, one man, one beam, and build for ourselves there to live there." And he said, "Go." ³And the one said, "Kindly come with your slaves." And he said, "I will go." ⁴And he went with them. And they came to the Jordan and cut down trees. ⁵And behold, the one was felling the beam, and the iron fell into the water, and he cried out, "O master! And it was borrowed!" ⁶And the man of God said, "Where did it fall?" And he showed him the place. And he cut off a stick and threw it there, and the iron floated. ⁷And he said, "Raise it for yourself." And he reached out his hand and took it.

⁸And the king of Syria was at war with Israel, and he took counsel with his servants, saying, "I will encamp at this certain place, Elmoni." ⁹And Elisaie sent to the king of Israel, saying, "Take care not to pass by this place, because Syria is hidden there." ¹⁰And the king of Israel sent to the place which Elisaie told him. And he avoided it not once or twice.

¹¹And the mind of the king of Syria was perturbed about this matter, and he called his servants and said to them, "Will you not tell me who is betraying me to the king of Israel?" ¹²And one of his servants said, "No one, my lord O king, for Elisaie the prophet in Israel tells the king of Israel all the words that you might speak in the chamber of your bedroom." ¹³And he said, "Go, see where this man is, and after I send, I will seize him." And they reported to him, saying, "Behold, he is in Dothaim." ¹⁴And he sent there horse and chariot and a heavy force, and they came by night and surrounded the city.

¹⁵And the attendant of Elisaie rose early in the morning and went out, and behold, a force was all around the city with horse and chariot. And the lad said to him, "O master! What shall we do?" ¹⁶And Elisaie said, "Do not be afraid, for those who are with us are more than those who are with them." ¹⁷And Elisaie prayed and said, "O Lord, open the eyes of the lad, and let him see." And the Lord opened his eyes, and he saw, and behold, the mountain was full of horses, and there was a chariot of fire all around Elisaie. ¹⁸And they came down against him. And Elisaie prayed to the Lord and said, "Do strike this nation with blindness." And he struck them with blindness according to the word of Elisaie. ¹⁹And Elisaie said to them, "This is not the city, and this is not the way; come after me, and I will lead you to the man whom you seek." And he led them to Samaria.

²⁰And it happened, as they entered into Samaria, that Elisaie said, "O Lord, do open their eyes, and let them see." And the Lord opened their eyes, and they saw, and behold, they were in the middle of Samaria. ²¹And the king of Israel said, when he saw them, "Father, striking shall I strike?" ²²And he said, "You shall not strike; if you did not capture them with your sword and your bow, would you strike them? Serve up food and water before them, and let them eat and drink, and let them go to their master." ²³And he served up before them a great serving, and they ate and drank, and he sent them, and they went to their master. And lightly armed men of Syria no longer continued to come into the land of Israel.

²⁴And it happened after this that the son of Hader, king of Syria, mustered all his camp and went up and besieged Samaria. ²⁵And there was a great famine in Samaria, and behold, they besieged it until a donkey's head was fifty shekels of silver, and the fourth of a kab^c of doves' dung was five shekels of silver. ²⁶And the king of Israel was passing by on the city wall, and a woman cried out to him, saying, "Save, O lord king!" ²⁷And he said to her, "No! May the Lord save you. How can I save you? Surely not from the threshing floor or from the wine press?" ²⁸And the king said to her, "What is it with you?" And she said, "This woman said to me, 'Give up your son, and we will eat him today, and my son, we will also eat him tomorrow.'" ²⁹And we boiled my son and ate him, and I said to her on the second day, 'Give up your son, and let us eat him.' But she hid her son." ³⁰And it happened, when the king of Israel heard the words of the woman, that he tore his clothes—and he was passing by on the city wall—and the people saw the sackcloth on his flesh underneath. ³¹And he said, "This is what God may do to me, and this is what he may add, if the head of Elisaie shall stand firm upon him today."

32 And Elisaie was sitting in his house, and the elders were sitting with him. And he^a sent a man before his presence. Before the messenger came to him, he also said to the elders, "Are you aware that this son of the murderer sent someone to take off my head? Look, when the messenger comes, shut the door, and detain him at the door. Is not the sound of his master's feet behind him?" ³³He was still speaking with them, and behold, a messenger came down to him and said, "Behold, this trouble is from the Lord! Why should I wait for the Lord any longer?"

7 And Elisaie said, "Hear a word of the Lord; this is what the Lord says, About this time tomorrow a measure of fine flour for a shekel and a double measure of barley for a shekel, in the gates of Samaria." ²And the number-three man, on whose hand the king rested on it, answered Elisaie and said, "Behold, the Lord will make cataracts in heaven; this thing will not be, will it?" And Elisaie said, "Behold, you shall see with your own eyes, but you shall not eat from there."

3 And there were four leprous men by the gate of the city, and a man said to his neighbor, "Why should we sit here until we die? ⁴If we say, 'Let us enter into the city,' and the famine is in the city, and we shall die there, and if we sit here, we shall also die. And now come, and let us fall into the camp of Syria; if they keep us alive, we shall also live, and if they put us to death, we shall also die." ⁵And they arose in the darkness, to enter into the camp of Syria, and they came into a part of the camp of Syria, and behold, there was no man there. ⁶And the Lord caused the camp of Syria to hear a sound of chariot and a sound of horse and a sound of a great force, and a man said to his brother, "Now the king of Israel has hired against us the kings of the Chettites and the kings of Egypt to come against us." ⁷And they arose and fled in the darkness and abandoned their tents and their horses and their donkeys in the camp as it was and fled for their own life. ⁸And these leprous men entered to a part of the camp, and they entered into one tent and ate and drank and carried away from there silver and gold and clothing and went, and they came back and entered into another tent and took from there and went and hid it.

9 And a man said to his neighbor, "Not in this manner we are acting. This day is a day of good news, and we are silent and waiting until the morning light, and we will find lawlessness, and now come, and let us enter and report in the house of the king." ¹⁰And they entered and called toward the gate of the city and reported to them, saying, "We entered into the camp of Syria, and behold, there is no man nor human voice there but only a tied horse and a donkey and their tents as they are." ¹¹And the gatekeepers called out and reported to the house of the king within. ¹²And the king got up at night and said to his servants, "I will now tell you what Syria did to us. They know that we are hungry, and they went out of the camp and hid in the field, saying, 'They will come out of the city, and we shall take them alive and enter into the city.'" ¹³And one of his servants answered and said, "Do let them take five of the remaining horses, which were left here; behold, it is for all the departed multitude of Israel, and we shall send there and look." ¹⁴And they took two mounted on horses, and the king of Israel sent them after the king of Syria, saying, "Go, and see." ¹⁵And they went after them as far as the Jordan, and behold, all the way was full of garments and vessels which Syria had thrown away in their alarm. And the messengers returned and told the king.

16 And the people went out and plundered the camp of Syria. And there was a measure of fine flour for a shekel and a double measure of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the Lord. ¹⁷And the king appointed the number-three man, on whose hand the king rested on it, over the gate, and the people trampled him in the gate, and he died, just as the man of God had spoken, who spoke when the messenger came down to him. ¹⁸And it happened just as Elisaie had spoken to the king, saying, "A double measure of barley for a shekel and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, and it will be about this time tomorrow in the gate of Samaria." ¹⁹And the number-three man answered Elisaie and said, "Behold, the Lord makes cataracts in heaven; this thing will not be, will it?" And Elisaie said, "Behold, you shall see with your own eyes, but you shall not eat from there." ²⁰And it happened thus, and the people trampled him in the gate, and he died.

8 And Elisaie spoke to the woman whose son he sparked to life, saying, "Get up, and go, you and your household, and sojourn wherever you may sojourn, for the Lord has called for a famine upon the land." And indeed it came upon the land for seven years. ²And the woman got up and did according to the word of Elisaie, and she went, she and her household, and sojourned in the land of the allophyles seven years. ³And it happened after the end of the seven years that the woman returned from the land of the allophyles into the city, and she came to cry out to the king for her own house and for her own fields. ⁴And the king was speaking to Giezi, the lad of Elisaie the man of God, saying, "Do tell me all the great things that Elisaie did." ⁵And it happened, while he was telling the king the fact that he sparked to life a dead son, that behold the woman whose son Eli-saie sparked to life was crying out to the king for her own house and for her own fields. And Giezi said, "O lord king, this is the woman, and this is her son whom Elisaie sparked to life." ⁶And the king inquired of the woman, and she told him. And the king appointed one eunuch for her, saying, "Return all that was hers and all the produce of her field from the day that she left the land until now."

⁷ And Elisaie went to Damascus, and Hader's son, king of Syria, was ill. And they reported to him, saying, "The man of God has come here." ⁸And the king said to Hazael, "Take manaa^a in your hand, and go to meet the man of God, and inquire of the Lord through him, saying, 'Shall I recover from this my illness?' " ⁹And Hazael went to meet him and took manaa^a in his hand and all the good things of Damascus, a load of forty camels. And he came and stood before him and said to Elisaie, "Your son, Hader's son, king of Syria, sent me to you, saying, 'Shall I recover from this my illness?' " ¹⁰And Elisaie said, "Go, say to him, 'By life you shall live, but the Lord showed me that by death you shall die.'" ¹¹And he stood before his face and fixed ^bhis gaze^b until shame, and the man of God wept. ¹²And Hazael said, "Why is it that my lord weeps?" And he said, "Because I know what evil you will do to the sons of Israel; you will dispatch their fortresses by fire and kill their choice men by sword and drive into their infants and rip open their pregnant women." ¹³And Hazael said, "What is your slave, the dead dog, that he shall do this thing?" And Elisaie said, "The Lord showed me you reigning over Syria." ¹⁴And he departed from Elisaie and went in to his master, and he said to him, "What did Elisaie say to you?" And he said, "He told me, 'By life you shall live.'" ¹⁵And it happened the next day that he took the machma^c and dipped it in the water and put it on his face, and he died. And Hazael reigned in his stead.

¹⁶ In the fifth year of Ioram son of Achaab, king of Israel, Ioram son of Iosaphat, king of Iouda, became king. ¹⁷He was a son of thirty-two years when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Ierousalem. ¹⁸And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house of Achaab, for a daughter of Achaab was his wife, and he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord. ¹⁹But the Lord did not want to destroy Iouda^d, for the sake of Daudid his slave, since he had said to give a lamp to him and to his sons all the days.

²⁰ In his days Edom revolted from under the hand of Iouda, and they made a king over themselves. ²¹And Ioram went up to Sior, and all the chariots with him, and it happened, when he arose, that he struck Edom, who had surrounded him, and the commanders of the chariots, and the people fled to their coverts. ²²And Edom revolted from under the hand of Iouda until this day. Then Lobena revolted at that time. ²³And the rest of the histories of Ioram and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ²⁴And Ioram slept with his fathers and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daudid his father, and Ochozias his son reigned in his stead.

²⁵ In the twelfth year of Ioram son of Achaab king of Israel, Ochozias son of Ioram became king. ²⁶Ochozias was a son of twenty-two years when he became king, and he reigned one year in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Gotholia, daughter of Ambri, king of Israel. ²⁷And he walked in the way of the house of Achaab and did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, as did the house of Achaab.

9 And the prophet Elisaie called one of the sons of the prophets and said to him, "Gird up your loins, and take the jug of this oil in your hand, and go to Remmoth Galaad. ²And you shall enter there and see there Iou son of Iosaphat son of Namesi, and you shall enter and stand him up from among his brothers and lead him into the chamber in the chamber. ³And you shall take the jug of oil and pour it on his head and say, 'This is what the Lord says: I have anointed you as king over Israel.' And you shall open the door and flee and not linger."

⁴ And the lad, the prophet, went to Remmoth Galaad. ⁵And he entered, and behold, the commanders of the force were sitting, and he said, "I have a message for you, commander." And Iou said, "For which one of all of us?" And he said, "For you, commander." ⁶And he got up and entered into the house, and he poured the oil on his head and said to him, "This is what the Lord God of Israel says: I have anointed you as king over the people of the Lord, over Israel. ⁷And you shall utterly destroy the house of Achaab, your master, from before me and avenge the blood of my slaves the prophets and the blood of all the slaves of the Lord from the hand of Iezabel ⁸and from the hand of the whole house of Achaab, and you shall utterly destroy from the house of Achaab ^eone urinating against a wall^e, both bond and left behind in Israel. ⁹And I will make the house of Achaab like the house of Ieroboam son of Nabat and like the house of Baasa son of Achia. ¹⁰And the dogs shall devour Iezabel in the portion of Iezrael, and there is no one to bury her." And he opened the door and fled.

¹¹ And Iou came out to the servants of his master, and they said to him, "Is it peace? Why is it that this epileptic entered to you?" And he said to them, "You know the man and his babble." ¹²And they said, "Wrong! Do tell us!" And Iou said to them,

^aHeb = a present ^bLacking in Gk ^cHeb = bed-cover ^dIoudas = Ra ^eI.e. every male

"Thus and so he spoke to me, saying, 'This is what the Lord says: I have anointed you as king over Israel.' " ¹³And when they heard this, they hurried, and they took each man his garment and put it under him on garem^a of the steps, and they trumpeted with a horn and said, "Iou has become king."

14 And Iou son of Iosaphat son of Namessi conspired against Ioram. And Ioram, he was guarding at Remmoth Galaad, he and all Israel, from before Hazael, king of Syria, ¹⁵and King Ioram returned to be healed in Iezrael of the wounds with which the Syrians struck him, when he fought with Hazael, king of Syria. And Iou said, "If your soul is with me, let no one go out of the city escaping to go and tell in Iezrael." ¹⁶And Iou rode and proceeded and went down to Iezrael, because Ioram, king of Israel, was being healed in Iezrael from the arrows with which the Aramin shot him down in Rammath in the battle with Hazael, king of Syria, for he was powerful and a man of power. And Ochozias, king of Iouda, went down to see Ioram.

17 And the lookout went up on the tower in Iezrael and saw the cloud of dust of Iou as he drew near and said, "I see a cloud of dust." And Ioram said, "Take a rider, and send him before them, and let him say, 'Is it peace?'" ¹⁸And a horse rider went to meet them, and he said, "This is what the king says, 'Is it peace?'" And Iou said, "What have you to do with peace? Fall in behind me." And the lookout reported, saying, "The messenger came to them, but he did not come back." ¹⁹And he sent a second horse rider, and he came to him and said, "This is what the king says, 'Is it peace?'" And Iou said, "What have you to do with peace? Fall in behind me." ²⁰And the lookout reported, saying, "He came to them, but he did not come back. And he that was bringing was bringing Iou son of Namesias, for it happened in perturbation."

21 And Ioram said, "Get ready." And he got a chariot ready. And Ioram, king of Israel, went out, and Ochozias, king of Iouda, a man in his chariot, and they went out to meet Iou, and they found him in the portion of Nabouthai the Iezraelite. ²²And it happened, when Ioram saw Iou, that he said, "Is it peace, Iou?" And Iou said, "What peace? The whoredoms of Iezabel your mother and her sorceries are still many." ²³And Ioram turned his hands to flee and said to Ochozias, "Treachery, Ochozias!" ²⁴And Iou filled his hand with his bow and struck Ioram between his arms, and the arrow came out through his heart, and he bent on his knees. ²⁵And Iou said to Badekar his number-three man, "Throw him in the portion of field of Nabouthai the Iezraelite, for I remember, when I and you were mounted on teams behind Achaab his father, and the Lord took this issue against him, saying, ²⁶'Surely with the blood of Nabouthai and the blood of his sons that I saw yesterday, says the Lord, I will also repay him in this portion, says the Lord.' And now, do lift him up, and throw him in the portion, in accordance with the word of the Lord."

27 And Ochozias, king of Iouda, saw and fled on Baithaggan road. And Iou pursued after him and said, "And indeed him!" And he struck him in the chariot at the ascent of Gai, which is Iebloom. And he fled to Mageddon and died there. ²⁸And his servants put him on the chariot and brought him to Ierusalem and buried him in his tomb in the city of Dauid.

29 And in the eleventh year of Ioram, king of Israel, Ochozias became king over Ioudab.

30 And Iou came to Iezrael, and Iezabel heard, and she painted her eyes black and adorned her head and peeked through the window. ³¹And Iou entered into the city, and she said, "Is it peace, Zambri, the murderer of his master?" ³²And he lifted up his face toward the window and saw her and said, "Who are you? Come down with me!" And two eunuchs peered down towards him. ³³And he said, "Roll her." And they rolled her, and some of her blood was spattered to the wall and to the horses, and they trampled on her. ³⁴And Iou went in and ate and drank, and he said, "Do see to this cursed woman, and bury her, for she is a king's daughter." ³⁵And they went to bury her, and they found nothing in connection with her other than the skull and the feet and the palms of her hands. ³⁶And they went back and told him, and he said, "The word of the Lord, which he spoke by the hand of his slave Eliou the Thesbite, saying, 'In the portion of Iezrael the dogs shall devour the flesh of Iezabel, ³⁷and the carcass of Iezabel shall be like dung on the surface of the field in the portion of Iezrael so that they shall not say, It is Iezabel!'"

10 And Achaab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Iou wrote a letter and sent it into Samaria, to the rulers of Samaria and to the elders and to the guardians of the sons of Achaab, saying, ²"And now, whenever this letter comes to you—with you are the sons of your master, and with you are the chariot and the horses and strong cities and the weapons—³and you shall notice the good and the upright one among the sons of your master, and you shall set him on the throne of his father and fight for the house of your master." ⁴And they were extremely afraid and said, "Look, the two kings did not stand before him, and how shall we stand?" ⁵And those over the house and those over the city and the elders and the guardians sent to Iou, saying, "We are your servants, and whatever you say to us, we will do. We will not make a man king; we will do what is good in your sight." ⁶And he wrote them a second letter, saying, "If you are for me and you listen to my voice, take the heads^c of the men of the sons of your master, and bring them to me around this time tomorrow in Iezrael." And the sons of the king were seventy men. These^d as prominent men of the city were ^ebringing them up. ⁷And it happened, when the letter came to them, that they took the sons of the king and slaughtered them, seventy men, and they put their heads in baskets and sent them to him in Iezrael.

⁸And the messenger came and reported, saying, "They brought the heads of the sons of the king." And he said, "Lay them in two heaps at the entrance of the gate until morning." ⁹And it happened in the morning that he went out and stood in the gateway of the city and said to all the people, "You are righteous. Behold, I am—I conspired against my master and killed him, but who struck all these? ¹⁰Know aphpho^a that there shall fall to the earth nothing from the word of the Lord, which the Lord spoke concerning the house of Achaab, and the Lord did what he said by the hand of his slave Eliou." ¹¹And Iou struck all who were left in the house of Achaab in Iezrael, and all his prominent men and his acquaintances and his priests, so as not to leave a remnant of him.

¹² And he set out and went to Samaria. He was in Baithakad of the shepherds, on the way, ¹³and Iou found the brothers of Ochozias, king of Iouda, and said, "Who are you?" And they said, "We are the brothers of Ochozias, and we came down for the peace of the sons of the king and the sons of the woman who holds power." ¹⁴And he said, "Take them alive." And they took them alive and slaughtered them at Baithakad, forty-two men; he left not a man of them.

¹⁵ And he went from there and found Ionadab son of Rechab on the way to meet him, and he blessed him. And Iou said to him, "Is your heart right with my heart as my heart is with your heart?" And Ionadab said, "It is." And Iou said, "And if it is, give me your hand." And he gave him his hand, and he brought him up to him on the chariot. ¹⁶And he said to him, "Come with me, and see while I am zealous for the Lord Sabaoth." And he sat him down in his chariot. ¹⁷And he entered into Samaria and struck all who were left to Achaab in Samaria until he wiped them out, according to the word of the Lord that he spoke to Eliou.

¹⁸ And Iou assembled all the people and said to them, "Achaab was subject to Baal a little, and indeed Iou will be subject to him much. ¹⁹And now, all you prophets of Baal summon to me all his slaves and his priests; let a man not be inspected, for I have a great sacrifice for Baal; every one who is not inspected shall not live." But Iou acted with trickery in order to destroy the slaves of Baal. ²⁰And Iou said, "Sanctify a solemn festival for Baal." And they proclaimed it. ²¹And Iou sent in all Israel, saying, "And now, all the slaves of Baal and all his priests and all his prophets, let not one remain, for I am making a great sacrifice; whoever remains shall not live." And all the slaves of Baal and all his priests and all his prophets came; not a man was left behind who did not come. And they entered into the house of Baal, and the house of Baal was filled ^bmouth-to-mouth^b. ²²And Iou said to the man over the house of mesthaal^c, "Bring out garments for all the slaves of Baal." And the keeper of the sacred robes brought them out for them. ²³And Iou and Ionadab son of Rechab entered into the house of Baal, and he said to the slaves of Baal, "Search, and see if there is among you any of the slaves of the Lord, but only the slaves of Baal all alone." ²⁴And he entered to make the sacrifices and the whole burnt offerings.

And Iou arranged for himself eighty men outside and said, "A man, whoever is rescued from the men whom I bring into your hands—his life in place of his life." ²⁵And it happened, as he finished making the whole burnt offering, that Iou said to the runners and to the number-three men, "As you enter, strike them; let not a man come out from them." And they struck them with an edge of a sword. And the runners and the number-three men threw them out, and they proceeded to a city of a house of Baal. ²⁶And they brought out the stele of Baal and burned it. ²⁷And they pulled down the steles of Baal and tore down the house of Baal and arranged it into latrines to this day.

²⁸ And Iou wiped out Baal from Israel. ²⁹Yet, from the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin, Iou did not depart from behind them—the golden heifers in Baithel and in Dan. ³⁰And the Lord said to Iou, "Because of what you did well in doing what is right in my sight, and all that was in my heart you did to the house of Achaab, fourth^d sons shall sit for you on the throne of Israel." ³¹But Iou did not take care to walk in the law of the Lord God of Israel with his whole heart; he did not depart from upon the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin.

³² In those days the Lord began to cut off parts^e in Israel. And Hazael struck them within every boundary of Israel: ³³from the Jordan to the rising of the sun, all the land of Galaad, of Gaddi and of Rouben and of Manasses from Aroer, which is by the bank of the wadi Arnon, and Galaad and Basan. ³⁴And the rest of the histories of Iou and all that he did and all his dominance and the collusions in which he colluded, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel? ³⁵And Iou slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria, and Ioachas his son reigned in his stead. ³⁶And the days that Iou reigned over Israel in Samaria were twenty-eight years.

11 And Gotholia, the mother of Ochozias, saw that her sons had died, she then destroyed all the ^fseed of the kingdom^f. ²And Iosabee daughter of King Ioram, sister of Ochozias, took Iouas son of her brother and stole him from among the sons of the king who were being put to death, him and his nurse—in the chamber of the beds—and she hid him from before Gotholia, and he was not put to death. ³And he was with her in the Lord's house, hidden for six years, and Gotholia was reigning over the land.

⁴ And in the seventh year Iodae the priest sent and took the commanders of hundreds, Chorri and Rasim, and brought them to him into the Lord's house. And he made a covenant of the Lord with them and made them swear in the sight of the Lord, and Iodae showed them the son of the king. ⁵And he commanded them, saying, "This is the thing that you shall do: let one-third of you enter on the sabbath, and you shall keep watch of the king's house in the gateway, ⁶and one-third in the gate of the roads, and one-third at the gate behind the runners, and you shall keep the watch of the house, ⁷and two hands^a are among you—every one who goes out on the sabbath—and they shall keep the watch of the Lord's house for the king, ⁸and you, surround the king all round, a man and his weapon in his hand. And he who enters into the saderoth^b shall die." And he^c was with the king in his going out and in his going in.

¹³ And Gotholia heard the noise of the running of the people, and she entered into the Lord's house to the people. ¹⁴And she looked, and behold, the king stood near the pillar, according to the judgment, and the singers and the trumpets by the king, and all the people of the land rejoicing and trumpeting with trumpets. And Gotholia tore her own clothes and shouted, "Collusion! Collusion!" ¹⁵And Iodae the priest commanded the officers of hundreds who watch over the force and said to them, "Bring her out from inside the saderoth^b, and he who goes in behind her, by death he shall be put to death by sword." For the priest said, "Indeed she should not die in the Lord's house." ¹⁶And they laid hands on her, and she entered by way of the horses' entrance of the king's house, and she died there.

¹⁷ And Iodae made a covenant between the Lord and between the king and between the people, that they should be the Lord's people, also between the king and between the people. ¹⁸And all the people of the land entered into a house of Baal and pulled it down, and his altars and his images they smashed well, and they killed Matthan, the priest of Baal, in front of the altars. And the priest appointed overseers for the house of the Lord. ¹⁹And he took the commanders of hundreds, both Chorri and Rasim, and all the people of the land, and they brought down the king from the Lord's house, and he entered by way of the runners' gate of the king's house, and they sat him on the throne of the kings. ²⁰And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet, and Gotholia they had put to death by sword in the king's house.

12 ^(11.21)Ioas was a son of seven years when he became king.

²(12.1) In the seventh year of Iou, Ioas became king, and he reigned forty years in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Abia of Bersabee. ³(2)And Ioas did what was right in the sight of the Lord all the days that Iodae the priest enlightened him. ⁴(3)Yet, some of the high places were not removed, and the people were still sacrificing there and making incense offerings on the high places.

⁵(4) And Ioas said to the priests, "All the money of the holy things that is brought into the house of the Lord, assessment money—when a man receives assessment money—all money, whatever arises in a man's heart to bring into the Lord's house, ⁶(5)let the priests take for themselves, a man from their sale, and they shall secure the bedek^f of the house in everything, there wherever a bedek^f is discovered." ⁷(6)And it happened in the twenty-third year of King Ioas that the priests had not strengthened the bedek^f of the house. ⁸(7)And Ioas the king summoned Iodae the priest and the priests and said to them, "Why is it that you were not strengthening the bedek^f of the house? And now, do not take money from your sales, because you shall donate it for the bedek^f of the house." ⁹(8)And the priests agreed not to take money from the people and not to strengthen the bedek^f of the house.

¹⁰(9) And Iodae the priest took one chest and bored a hole on its lid and set it beside iamibins in the house of a man of the Lord's house, and the priests who guard the threshold gave all the money that was found in the Lord's house. ¹¹(10)And it happened, when they saw that the money in the chest was much, that the secretary of the king went up, and the great priest and they bundled and counted the money that was found in the Lord's house. ¹²(11)And they gave the money that had been prepared into the hands of those doing the work of the overseers of the Lord's house, and they paid it out to the workers in wood and to the builders who were working in the Lord's house ¹³(12)and to the wall-builders and to the quarriers of stone to buy wood and quarried stone to restrain the bedek^f of the Lord's house, for all that was paid on the house to strengthen it. ¹⁴(13)Yet, there shall not be made for the Lord's house silver doors, nails, saucers and trumpets, any golden vessel and silver vessel, from the money that was brought into the Lord's house, ¹⁵(14)for they shall give it^h to those doing the work, and they strengthened the Lord's house with it. ¹⁶(15)And they were not computing the men into whose hands they were giving the money to give to those doing the work, for they dealt honestly. ¹⁷(16)Money for sin

18(17) Then Hazael, king of Syria, went up and fought against Geth and seized it in advance for himself. And Hazael fixed his face to go up against Ierousalem. 19(18) And Ioas, king of Iouda, took all the holy things that Iosaphat and Ioram and Ochozias, his fathers and kings of Iouda, had dedicated, and his own holy things and all the gold that was found in the treasuries of the Lord's house and of the king's house and sent these^a to Hazael, king of Syria, and he went up from Ierousalem.

20(19) And the rest of the histories of Ioas and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? 21(20) And his slaves arose and bound an entire bond^b and struck Ioas in Mallo's house in Gaalla. 22(21) And Iezichar son of Iemouath and Iezebouth, his son Somer, his slaves, struck him, and he died. And they buried him with his fathers in the city of Daud and Amessias his son reigned in his stead.

13 In a year, the twenty-third year of Ioas son of Ochozias, king of Iouda, Ioachas son of Iou became king in Samaria for seventeen years. 2 And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord and went after the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin; he did not depart from them. 3 And the Lord grew angry with rage in Israel and gave them into the hand of Hazael, king of Syria, and into the hand of Hader's son, son of Hazael, all the days. 4 And Ioachas entreated the face of the Lord, and the Lord heeded him, for he saw the oppression of Israel, that Syria's king oppressed them. 5 And the Lord gave Israel deliverance, and they went out from under the hand of Syria, and the sons of Israel sat in their covert^cs as yesterday and the day before. 6 Yet, they did not depart from the sins of the house of Ieroboam, who made Israel sin; they walked in them, and indeed the sacred grove stood in Samaria. 7 For there was not left to Ioachas a people^c, except fifty horsemen and ten chariots and ten thousand footmen, for Syria's king had destroyed them, and they made them like dust for trampling. 8 And the rest of the histories of Ioachas and all that he did and all his acts of dominance, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel? 9 And Ioachas slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in Samaria, and Ioas his son reigned in his stead.

10 In a year, the thirty-seventh year of Ioas, king of Iouda, Ioas son of Ioachas became king over Israel in Samaria for sixteen years. 11 And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did not depart from all the sin of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin; he walked in them. 12 And the rest of the histories of Ioas and all that he did and all his acts of dominance which he exercised with Amessias, king of Iouda, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel? 13 And Ioas slept with his fathers, and Ieroboam sat upon his throne in Samaria with the sons of Israel.

14 And Elisaie had become sick with his sickness by which he died. And Ioas, king of Israel, went down to him and wept on his face and said, "Father, Father! Chariot of Israel and its horse-man!" 15 And Elisaie said to him, "Take a bow and arrows," and he took to himself a bow and arrows. 16 And he said to the king, "Put your hand on the bow," and Ioas put his hand on the bow. And Elisaie laid his hands on the hands of the king. 17 And he said, "Open the window eastward," and he opened it. And Elisaie said, "Shoot," and he shot. And he said, "The Lord's arrow of deliverance, and arrow of deliverance in Syria! And you shall strike Syria in Aphek until completion." 18 And Elisaie said to him, "Take bows," and he took them. And he said to the king of Israel, "Strike the ground," and the king struck three times and stopped. 19 And the man of God was grieved at him and said, "If you had struck five times or six times, then you would have struck Syria until completion, but now you will strike Syria three times."

20 And Elisaie died, and they buried him. And lightly armed men of Moab came in the land^d when the year came^d. 21 And it happened, when they were burying the man, that behold, they saw the lightly armed man, and they threw the man in the grave of Elisaie, and he went and touched the bones of Elisaie, and he revived and stood up on his feet.

22 And Hazael oppressed Israel all the days of Ioachas. 23 But the Lord had mercy on them and had compassion on them and had regard for them, because of his covenant with Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, and the Lord did not want to destroy them, and he did not banish them from his face.

24 And Hazael, king of Syria, died, and Hader's son, his son, reigned in his stead. 25 And Ioas son of Ioachas returned and took from the hand of Hader's son, son of Hazael, the towns that he had taken from the hand of Ioachas his father in the war. Three times Ioas struck him and returned the towns of Israel.

14 In the second year of Ioas son of Ioachas, king of Israel, Amessias son of Ioas, king of Iouda, also became king. 2 He was a son of twenty-five years when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Ioadin of Ierousalem. 3 And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord, yet not like Daud his father; he did according to all things that Ioas his father had done. 4 Yet, he did not remove the high places; the people were still sacrificing and making incense offerings on the high places. 5 And it happened, when the royal power was firmly in his hand, that he struck his slaves who had struck his father. 6 And he did not put to death the sons of those who had struck, just as it is written in the book of the laws of Moyses, as the Lord commanded, saying, “Fathers shall not be put to death for sons, and sons shall not be put to death for fathers, but only each one shall be put to death by his own sins.”

7 He struck Edom in Gaimele—ten thousand—and seized the Rock in the battle, and he called its name Kathoel—until this day.

8 Then Amessias sent messengers to Ioas son of Ioachas son of Iou, king of Israel, saying, “Come, let us be seen by faces.”⁹ And Ioas, king of Israel, sent to Amessias, king of Iouda, saying, “The akan^a that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, ‘Give your daughter to my son for a wife,’ and the wild animals of the field that were in Lebanon passed through and trampled down the akana^a.¹⁰ Wounding you struck Idumea, and your heart lifted you up. Be glorified sitting in your house, and why do you strive in your wickedness? And you shall fall, you and Iouda^b with you.”

11 And Amessias did not listen. And the king of Israel went up, and he and Amessias, king of Iouda, were seen by faces in Baithsamys, which belongs to Iouda.¹² And Iouda^b fell from before Israel, and a man fled to his covert.¹³ And Ioas son of Ioachas, king of Israel, captured Amessias son of Ioas son of Ochozias, king of Iouda, in Baithsamys. And he came to Ierousalem and tore down in the wall of Ierousalem in the gate of Ephraim as far as a gate of the corner, four hundred cubits.¹⁴ And he took the gold and the silver and all the vessels that were found in the Lord’s house and in the treasuries of the king’s house, and the sons of the comminglings^c, and he returned to Samaria.

15 And the rest of the histories of Ioas, what he did in his dominance, which things he fought about with Amessias, king of Iouda, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel?¹⁶ And Ioas slept with his fathers and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel, and Ieroboam his son reigned in his stead.

17 And Amessias son of Ioas, king of Iouda, lived fifteen years after Ioas son of Ioachas, king of Israel, died.¹⁸ And the rest of the histories of Amessias and all that he did, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda?¹⁹ And they conspired a conspiracy against him in Ierousalem, and he fled to Lachis. And they sent after him to Lachis and put him to death there.²⁰ And they took him up on horses, and he was buried in Ierousalem with his fathers in the city of Dauid.²¹ And all the people of Iouda took Azarias—and he was a son of sixteen years—and made him king instead of his father Amessias.²² He built Ailoth and returned it to Iouda, after the king slept with his fathers.

23 In the fifteenth year of Amessias son of Ioas, king of Iouda, Ieroboam son of Ioas became king over Israel in Samaria, forty and one year.²⁴ And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did not depart from any of the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin.²⁵ He removed the border of Israel from the entrance of Haimath as far as the Sea of the Araba, according to the word of the Lord, God of Israel, which he spoke by the hand of his slave Ionas son of Amathi, the prophet who was from Gethchober.²⁶ For the Lord saw that the humiliation of Israel was very bitter and that they were few, bound and in want and abandoned, and there was no one to help Israel.²⁷ And the Lord had not said that he would wipe out the seed of Israel from under heaven, and he saved them by the hand of Ieroboam son of Ioas.

28 And the rest of the histories of Ieroboam and all that he did and all his acts of dominance, what he fought about and how he turned against Damascus and Haimath belonging to Iouda in Israel, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel?²⁹ And Ieroboam slept with his fathers, with the kings of Israel, and Azarias son of Amessias reigned in his father’s stead.

15 In the twenty-seventh year of Ieroboam, king of Israel, Azarias son of Amessias, king of Iouda, became king.² He was a son of sixteen years when he became king, and he reigned fifty-two years in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Chalia of Ierousalem.³ And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all things that Amessias his father had done.⁴ Yet, he did not remove any of the high places; the people were still sacrificing and making incense offerings on the high places.⁵ And the Lord touched the king, and he was leprous to the day of his death, and he reigned in a house aphhousoth^d. And Ioatham, the king’s son, was in charge of the house, judging the people of the land.⁶ And the rest of the histories of Azarias and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda?⁷ And Azarias slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the city of Dauid, and Ioatham his son reigned in his stead.

8 In the thirty-eighth year of Azarias, king of Iouda, Zacharias son of Ieroboam became king over Israel in Samaria for six months.⁹ And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, just as his fathers had done. He did not depart from the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin.¹⁰ And Selloum son of Iabis and Keblaam conspired against him, and they struck him and put him to death, and Selloum reigned in his stead.¹¹ And the rest of the histories of Zacharias, behold, they are written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel.¹² The word of the Lord it was, that he spoke to Iou, saying, “Fourth^e sons shall sit for you on the throne of Israel.” And so it happened.

13 And Selloum son of Iabis became king, and in the thirty-ninth year of Azarias, king of Iouda, Selloum reigned a month of days in Samaria.¹⁴ And Manaem son of Gaddi went up from Tharsila and came to Samaria, and he struck Selloum son of Iabis in Samaria and put him to death.

¹⁵And the rest of the histories of Selloum and his conspiracy that he conspired, behold, they are written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel. ¹⁶Then Manaem struck Thersa and all that was in it and its territory from Thersa on, because they did not open it to him, and he struck it and ripped open the pregnant women.

¹⁷In the thirty-ninth year of Azarias, king of Iouda, Manaem son of Gaddi also became king over Israel for ten years in Samaria. ¹⁸And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did not depart from any of the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin. ¹⁹In his days Phoul, king of the Assyrians, went up against the land, and Manaem gave Phoul a thousand talents of silver for his hand to be with him. ²⁰And Manaem brought out the money against^a Israel, against^a every powerful man with strength, to give to the king of the Assyrians, fifty shekels for one man. And the Assyrians' king turned back and did not stay there in the land. ²¹And the rest of the histories of Manaem and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel? ²²And Manaem slept with his fathers, and Phakeias his son reigned in his stead.

²³In the fiftieth year of Azarias, king of Iouda, Phakeias son of Manaem became king over Israel in Samaria for two years. ²⁴And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did not depart from the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin. ²⁵And Phakee son of Romelias, his number-three man, conspired against him and struck him in Samaria in front of the king's house with Argob and with Aria, and with him were fifty men from the four hundred, and he put him to death and reigned in his stead. ²⁶And the rest of the histories of Phakeias and all that he did, behold, they are written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel.

²⁷In the fifty-second year of Azarias, king of Iouda, Phakee son of Romelias became king over Israel in Samaria for twenty years. ²⁸And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did not depart from any of the sins of Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin.

²⁹In the days of Phakee, king of Israel, Thaglathphelassar, king of the Assyrians, came and took Ain and Abelbaitamaacha and Ianoch and Kenez and Hasor and Galaad and Galilee, all the land of Nephthali, and he exiled them to the Assyrians. ³⁰And Hosee son of Ela conspired a conspiracy against Phakee son of Romelias and struck him and put him to death, and he reigned in his stead in the twentieth year of Ioatham son of Azarias. ³¹And the rest of the histories of Phakee and all that he did, behold, they are written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Israel.

³²In the second year of Phakee son of Romelias, king of Israel, Ioatham son of Azarias, king of Iouda, became king. ³³He was a son of twenty-five years when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Ierusalem. And his mother's name was Ierousa daughter of Zadok. ³⁴And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Azarias^b his father had done. ³⁵Yet, he did not remove the high places; the people were still sacrificing and making incense offerings on the high places. He built the upper gate of the Lord's house. ³⁶And the rest of the histories of Ioatham and all that he did, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ³⁷In those days the Lord began to send out in Iouda Raasson, king of Syria, and Phakee son of Romelias. ³⁸And Ioatham slept with his fathers and was buried with his fathers in the city of Daudid his father and Achaz his son reigned in his stead.

16 In the seventeenth year of Phakee son of Romelias, Achaz son of Ioatham, king of Iouda, became king. ²Achaz was a son of twenty years when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Ierusalem. And he did not faithfully do what was right in the sight of the Lord, his God, as Daudid his father did, ³but he walked in the way of Ieroboam son of Nabat, king of Israel. And indeed he conducted his son into fire, according to the abominations of the nations whom the Lord drove out from before the sons of Israel. ⁴And he was sacrificing and making incense offerings on the high places and on the hills and under every woodland tree.

⁵Then Raasson, king of Syria, went up, and Phakee son of Romelias, king of Israel, against Ierusalem to war, and they were laying siege against Achaz but could not wage war. ⁶At that time Raasson, king of Syria, returned Ailath to Syria and drove out the Judeans from Ailath, and the Idumeans came to Ailath and lived there to this day. ⁷And Achaz sent messengers to Thaglathphelassar, king of the Assyrians, saying, "I am your slave and your son. Come up, and rescue me from the hand of the king of Syria and from the hand of the king of Israel, who are rising up against me." ⁸And Achaz took the silver and the gold that was found in the treasuries of the Lord's house and the king's house and sent presents to the king. ⁹And the Assyrians' king listened to him, and the Assyrians' king went up against Damascus and captured it and exiled it^c, and he put Raasson to death.

¹⁰And King Achaz went to meet Thaglathphelassar, king of the Assyrians, in Damascus and saw the altar in Damascus. And King Achaz sent to Ourias the priest the likeness of the altar and its pattern for its entire construction. ¹¹And Ourias the priest built the altar in accordance with all that King Achaz had sent from Damascus. ¹²And the king saw the altar and went up on it ¹³and burnt for smoke his whole burnt offering and his sacrifice and his libation and poured the blood of his peace items on the altar. ¹⁴And the bronze altar that was before the Lord he also brought forward from the front of the house of the Lord, from the one between the altar and from the one between the house of the Lord, and put it near the thigh of the altar on the north. ¹⁵And King Achaz commanded Ourias the priest, saying, "Upon the great altar offer the morning whole burnt offering and the evening sacrifice and the whole burnt offering of the king and his sacrifice and the whole burnt offering of all the people and their sacrifice and their libation, and you shall pour on it all blood of whole burnt offering and all blood of sacrifice, and the bronze altar shall be for me in the morning." ¹⁶And Ourias the priest did according to everything that King Achaz commanded him.

¹⁷ And King Achaz cut off the borders of the mechonoth^a and removed the washbasin from them, and he took down the sea from the bronze oxen that were under it and put it on a stone pediment. ¹⁸And he built the foundation of the seat in the Lord's house, and he turned the outer entrance of the king in the Lord's house from before the Assyrians' king. ¹⁹And the rest of the histories of Achaz, what he did, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ²⁰And Achaz slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of Dauid, and Hezekias his son reigned in his stead.

17 In the twelfth year of Achaz, king of Iouda, Hosee son of Ela became king in Samaria over Israel for nine years. ²And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, yet not like the kings of Israel who were before him. ³Salamanasar, king of the Assyrians, went up against him, and Hosee became his slave and returned to him manaa^b. ⁴And the Assyrians' king found injustice in Hosee, for he had sent messengers to Segor, king of Egypt, and brought no manaa^b to the king of the Assyrians in that year, and the king of the Assyrians besieged him and bound him in a prison house.

⁵ And the king of the Assyrians went up in all the land and went up against Samaria and laid siege against it for three years. ⁶In the ninth year of Hosee the Assyrians' king captured Samaria, and he exiled Israel to the Assyrians and made them dwell cⁱⁿ Halae and in Habor, at rivers^c of Gozan and Ore^d of Medes.

⁷ And it happened, because the sons of Israel had sinned against the Lord, their God, who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt from under the hand of Pharao, king of Egypt. And they feared other gods ⁸and walked in the statutes of the nations whom the Lord drove out from before the sons of Israel, both the kings of Israel, as many as did it, ⁹and the sons of Israel, as many as clothed themselves with words, not just against the Lord, their God. And they built for themselves high places in all their towns, from tower for watchers to strong city. ¹⁰And they erected for themselves steles and sacred groves on every high hill and under every woodland tree, ¹¹and there they made incense offerings on all high places, just as the nations whom the Lord exiled from before them. And they made partners and engraved^e to provoke the Lord to anger, ¹²and they served the idols of which the Lord had said to them, "You shall not do this thing to the Lord." ¹³And the Lord testified in Israel and in Iouda by the hand of all his prophets, every seer, saying, "Turn away from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes and all the law that I commanded your fathers, which I sent to you by the hand of my slaves the prophets." ¹⁴But they did not listen, but hardened their back more than the back of their fathers. ¹⁵And his testimonies that he testified to them they did not keep but went after the worthless things and were rendered worthless and after the nations that were around them of whom he had commanded them not to do in accordance with these. ¹⁶They forsook the commandments of the Lord, their God, and made for themselves something cast, two heifers, and made sacred groves and did obeisance to all the host of heaven and served Baal. ¹⁷And they conducted their sons and their daughters into fire, and they were divining and practicing ornithomancy, and they were sold to do what was evil in the sight of the Lord to provoke him to anger. ¹⁸And the Lord became very angry with Israel and removed them from his face, and none was left except Iouda's tribe alone.

¹⁹ And indeed Iouda^f did not keep the commandments of the Lord, their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel, which they practiced, ²⁰and they^g rejected the Lord among all the offspring of Israel, and he shook them and gave them into the hand of those who plundered them until he had banished them from his presence, ²¹for only Israel was ^hfrom upon^h Dauid's house. And they made Ieroboam son of Nabat king. And Ieroboam drove out Israel from behind the Lord and made them sin great sin. ²²And the sons of Israel walked in all the sin of Ieroboam that he committed; they did not depart from it ²³until the Lord removed Israel from his sight, just as the Lord had spoken by the hand of all his slaves the prophets. And Israel was exiled from upon its own land to the Assyrians until this day.

²⁴ And the Assyrians' king brought from Babylon the peopleⁱ from Chountha and from Aia and from Haimath and Seppharouain, and they were made to dwell in the cities of Samaria instead of the sons of Israel, and they took possession of Samaria and dwelt in its cities. ²⁵And it happened, at the beginning of their sitting^j, that they did not fear the Lord, and the Lord sent lions among them, and they were killing among them. ²⁶And they told the king of the Assyrians, saying, "The nations that you exiled and placed instead in the cities of Samaria did not know the judgment of the god of the land, and he sent lions against them, and behold, they are putting them to death, because they do not know the judgment of the god of the land." ²⁷And the king of the Assyrians commanded, saying, "Bring from yonder, and let them go and dwell

there, and they shall enlighten them about the judgment of the god of the land.”²⁸ And they brought one of the priests whom they had exiled from Samaria, and he stayed in Baithel, and he was enlightening them how they should fear the Lord.

29 And nations by nations were making their own gods, and they put them in the house of the high places that the Samaritans had made, nations in their cities, them in which they dwelt,³⁰ and the men of Babylon made Sokchothbainith, and the men of Chouth made Nerigel, and the men of Haimath made Asimath,³¹ and the Euites made Eblazer and Tharthak, and the Seppharouain burned up their sons in fire to Adramelech and Anemelech, gods of Seppharouain.³² And they were fearing the Lord, and they caused their abominations to dwell in the houses of the high places that they had made in Samaria, nation by nation in a city, that in which they dwelt, and they were fearing the Lord, and they made for themselves priests of the high places, and they acted for them in the house of the high places.³³ They were fearing the Lord and serving their own gods according to the judgment of the nations, there where he had exiled them.

34 To this day they were acting according to their judgment. They fear, and they act according to their statutes and according to their judgment and according to the law and according to the commandment that the Lord commanded the sons of Iakob, him whose name he made Israel.³⁵ And the Lord had made a covenant with them and commanded them, saying, “You shall not fear other gods, and you shall not do obeisance to them, and you shall not serve them, and you shall not sacrifice to them,³⁶ but only to the Lord, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great strength and with a high arm, him you shall fear, and to him you shall do obeisance, and to him you shall sacrifice.³⁷ And the statutes and the judgments and the law and the commandments that he wrote for you, be careful to observe them all the days. And you shall not fear other gods,³⁸ and the covenant that he made with you, you shall not forget. And you shall not fear other gods,³⁹ but only the Lord, your God, you shall fear, and he will deliver you from all your enemies.⁴⁰ And you shall not listen to their judgment that they practice.”

41 But these nations were fearing the Lord, and they were subject to their carved images, and indeed the sons and the sons of their sons do to this day as their fathers did.

18 And it happened in the third year of Hosee son of Ela, king of Israel, that Hezekias son of Achaz, king of Iouda, became king.² He was a son of twenty-five years when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Abou daughter of Zacharias.³ And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord according to all that Dauid his father had done.⁴ He removed the high places and smashed all the steles and utterly destroyed the sacred groves and the bronze snake that Moyses had made, for until those days the sons of Israel had been making incense offerings to it, and he called it Neesthan.⁵ He hoped in the Lord God of Israel, and there was no one like him among the kings of Iouda after him or among those who were before him.⁶ And he clung to the Lord; he did not depart from behind him but kept his commandments that he had commanded Moyses.⁷ And the Lord was with him; in all that he was doing he understood. And he rebelled against the king of the Assyrians and was not subject to him.⁸ He struck the allophytes as far as Gaza and as far as its territory, from a tower of watchers even to a strong city.

9 And it happened in the fourth year of King Hezekias (it was the seventh year of Hosee son of Ela, king of Israel) that Salamanassar, king of the Assyrians, went up against Samaria and was laying siege against it,¹⁰ and he seized it at the end of three years, in the sixth year of Hezekias (it was the ninth year of Hosee, king of Israel), and Samaria was captured.¹¹ And the Assyrians' king exiled Samaria to the Assyrians and put them^a in Halae and in Habor, at a river^a of Gozan and Ore^b of Medes,¹² because they did not obey the voice of the Lord, their God, but transgressed his covenant—all that Moyses the slave of the Lord had commanded, and they did not listen and did not act.

13 And in the fourteenth year of King Hezekias, Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians, went up against the strong cities of Iouda and captured them.¹⁴ And Hezekias, king of Iouda, sent messengers to the Assyrians' king to Lachis, saying, “I have done wrong; turn away from me; whatever you impose on me I will bear.” And the king of the Assyrians imposed on Hezekias, king of Iouda, three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold.¹⁵ And Hezekias gave him all the silver that was found in the Lord's house and in the treasures of the king's house.¹⁶ At that time Hezekias cut off the doors of the Lord's shrine and the doorposts that Hezekias, king of Iouda, had gilded and gave them to the Assyrians' king.¹⁷ And the Assyrians' king sent Tharthan and Rapsakes from Lachis to King Hezekias with a heavy force against Ierousalem. And they went up and came to Ierousalem and stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is by the way of the fuller's field.¹⁸ And they shouted to Hezekias, and there came out to him Eliakim son of Chelkias, the household manager, and Somnas, the secretary, and Ioas son of Asaph, the recorder.

19 And Rapsakes said to them, “Do say to Hezekias: This is what the king, the great king of the Assyrians, says: What is this confidence on which you rely?²⁰ You said, ‘Mere words of lips are strategy and power for war. Now then, on whom do you rely, that you rebelled against me?’²¹ Now behold, you have entrusted yourself to this broken reed rod, to Egypt; whatever man is supported on it, it will also enter into his hand and pierce it. Thus is Pharaoh, king of Egypt, to all who rely on him. ²²And since you said to me, ‘We rely on the Lord God,’ is not he this one whose high places and altars Hezekias removed, and he said to Iouda and to Ierusalem, ‘You shall do obeisance before this altar in Ierusalem?’ ²³And now, do be joined with my master, king of the Assyrians, and I will give you two thousand horses, if you will be able on your part to put riders on them. ²⁴And how will you turn away the face of a single toparch of the least of the slaves of my master? And you hoped for yourself on Egypt for chariots and horsemen. ²⁵And now, is it without the Lord that we came up against this place to destroy it? The Lord said to me, ‘Go up against this land, and destroy it.’”

²⁶ And Eliakim son of Chelkias, and Somnas and Ioas, said to Rapsakes, “Do speak to your servants in the Syrian language, for we understand it, but you shall not speak with us in Judean, and why do you speak within the hearing of the people who are on the wall?” ²⁷And Rapsakes said to them, “Did my master send me to speak these words to your master and to you, not to the men sitting on the wall, to eat their own dung and to drink their own urine together with you?”

²⁸ And Rapsakes stood and called out in a loud voice in Judean and spoke and said, “Hear the words of the great king of the Assyrians! ²⁹This is what the king says: ‘Do not let Hezekias stir you up with words, for he shall not be able to deliver you out of my hand. ³⁰And do not let Hezekias buoy you up with hope in the Lord by saying: Delivering the Lord will deliver us; this city shall not be given in the hand of the Assyrians’ king.’ ³¹Do not listen to Hezekias, for this is what the king of the Assyrians says: ‘Make a blessing with me, and come out to me, and a man shall drink his own vine, and a man shall eat his own fig tree and drink water from his own cistern ³²until I come and take you to a land like your own land, a land of grain and wine and bread and vineyards, a land of olive oil and honey, and you shall live and not die. And do not listen to Hezekias, for he misleads you by saying, The Lord will deliver us. ³³Did the gods of the nations, each by delivering, deliver his own land out of the hand of the Assyrians’ king? ³⁴Where is the god of Haimath and Arphad? Where is the god of Seppharouain? And is it that they delivered Samaria out of my hand? ³⁵Who is there among all the gods of the lands who delivered their lands out of my hand, that the Lord shall deliver Ierusalem out of my hand?’”

³⁶ And they were silent and answered him not a word, for there was the king’s command, saying, “You shall not answer him.” ³⁷And Eliakim son of Chelkias, the household manager, and Somnas, the secretary, and Ioas son of Asaph, the recorder, entered to Hezekias with their clothes torn and reported to him the words of Rapsakes.

19 And it happened, when King Hezekias heard it, that he tore his own clothes and put on sackcloth and entered into the Lord’s house. ²And he sent Eliakim, the household manager, and Somnas, the secretary, and the elders of the priests, clothed in sackcloth, to Esaias the prophet son of Amos. ³And they said to him, “This is what Hezekias says, This day is a day of distress and of rebuke and of provocation, for sons came to the point of birth pains, but she who gives birth has no strength. ⁴If somehow the Lord, your God, will hear all the words of Rapsakes, whom his master, king of the Assyrians, sent to mock a living god and to blaspheme with words that the Lord, your God, heard, you shall also undertake prayer for the remnant that is found.” ⁵And the servants of King Hezekias came to Esaias, ⁶and Esaias said to them, “This is what you shall say to your master, ‘This is what the Lord says: Do not be afraid because of the words that you heard, with which the lads of the Assyrians’ king blasphemed. ⁷Behold, I myself am putting a spirit in him, and he shall hear a message and return to his own land, and I will strike him down by a sword in his own land.’”

⁸ And Rapsakes returned and found the king of the Assyrians fighting against Lomna, for he had heard that he had departed from Lachis. ⁹And he heard concerning Tharaka, king of the Ethiopians, saying, “Behold, he went out to fight with you.” And he returned and sent messengers to Hezekias, saying, ¹⁰“Do not let your God, him on whom you rely upon, stir you up by saying, Ierusalem shall not be given into the hands of the Assyrians’ king. ¹¹Behold, you heard everything that the Assyrians’ kings did to all the lands to anathematize them. And shall you be rescued? ¹²Did the gods of the nations that my fathers destroyed deliver them: both Gozan and Charran and Raphes and Edem’s sons, who were in Thaeستن? ¹³Where is the king of Haimath and the king of Arphad, and where is Seppharouain, Hana and Aua?”

¹⁴ And Hezekias took the documents from the hand of the messengers and read them, and he went up to the Lord’s house, and Hezekias unrolled them before the Lord. ¹⁵And he said: “O Lord God of Israel, who sits on the cheroubin, you alone are God in all the kingdoms of the earth; you made heaven and earth. ¹⁶Incline your ear, O Lord, and hear; open your eyes, O Lord, and see, and hear the words of Sennacherim, which he sent to mock a living god. ¹⁷For truly, O Lord, the Assyrians’ kings laid waste the nations ¹⁸and gave their gods into the fire, for they were no gods but works of human hands—wood and stone—and they destroyed them. ¹⁹And now, O Lord, our God, save us from his hand, and all the kingdoms of the earth shall know that you are the Lord, God alone.”

²⁰ And Esaias son of Amos sent to Hezekias, saying, “This is what the Lord, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, says: I heard what you prayed to me about Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians. ²¹This is the word that the Lord spoke against him: Virgin daughter Sion made nothing of you and sneered at you;

daughter Ierusalem shook her head at you.

22 Whom did you mock and revile?
And against whom did you raise your voice and lift your eyes on high?

Against the Holy One of Israel!
23 By the hand of your messengers you mocked the Lord and said, "With the multitude of my chariots

I shall ascend to a height of mountains, thighs of Lebanon,
and I felled the greatness of its cedar,
the choicest of its cypresses, and I came to a melon^a of its end,

24 I sought the cool air and drank foreign waters, and I made desolate with the sole of my foot all the streams of enclosure.

25 I shaped it;
now I brought it,
and it^c turned into risings of warlike colonies, strong cities.

26 And the inhabitants in them were weak with the hand;
they cowered and were put to shame;
they became fodder of the field,
or green pasture,
grass on the housetops, and trodden opposite him who stands.[']

27 And I knew your sitting and your exiting and your entering and your rage against me.

28 Because you grew angry against me and your wantonness came up in my ears, and I will put my hooks in your nostrils and a bit in your lips;
I will turn you back in the way,
in that by which you came.

29 "And this shall be the sign for you: You shall eat this year what grows of itself, and in the second year what springs up, and in the third year, sowing and reaping and planting of vineyards, and you shall eat their fruit. ³⁰And the saved remainder of Iouda's house shall add root downward and bear fruit upward; ³¹for from Ierusalem a remnant shall go out, and from Mount Zion he who is being returned safe. The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.

32 "Not so! This is what the Lord says to the Assyrians' king: He shall not enter into this city, and he shall not shoot an arrow there, and a shield shall not anticipate it, and he shall not pour out a mound against it! ³³By the way that he came, by it he shall return, and he shall not enter into this city, says the Lord. ³⁴And I will hold a shield over this city, for my own sake and for the sake of Daudid my slave."

35 And it happened, while it was night, that an angel of the Lord went out and struck one hundred eighty-five thousands in the camp of the Assyrians, and they rose early in the morning, and behold, all were dead bodies. ³⁶And Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians, left and went and returned and lived in Nineue. ³⁷And it happened, as he was doing obeisance in the house of Nesarach his god, that his sons Adramelech and Sarasar struck him with a dagger, and they escaped into the land of Ararat. And Asordan his son reigned in his stead.

20 In those days Hezekias became sick unto death. And Esaias son of Amos, the prophet, entered to him and said to him, "This is what the Lord says: Order your house, for you are dying; you shall not live." ²And Hezekias turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord, saying: ³"Do, O Lord, do remember how I walked before you in truth and with a full heart and did what is good in your sight." And Hezekias wept with a great weeping. ⁴And Esaias was in the middle court, and a word of the Lord came to him, saying: ⁵"Turn back, and you shall say to Hezekias, the leader of my people, This is what the Lord, the God of Daudid your father says: I heard your prayer; I saw your tears; behold, I will heal you; on the third day you shall go up to the Lord's house. ⁶And I will add to your days fifteen years. And I will save you and this city out of the hand of the Assyrians' king, and I will hold a shield over this city, for my own sake and for the sake of Daudid my slave." ⁷And he said, "Let them take a cake of figs and apply it on the festering sore, and it shall cure him^d."

8 And Hezekias said to Esaias, "What shall be the sign that the Lord will heal me, and I shall go up to the Lord's house on the third day?" ⁹And Esaias said, "This is the sign from the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing that he spoke: Shall the shadow advance ten steps, if it turns ten steps?" ¹⁰And Hezekias said, "It is easy for the shadow to lengthen ten steps; no, but let the shadow return ten steps backwards." ¹¹And Esaias the prophet cried to the Lord, and the shadow on the stairs returned backwards ten steps.

12 At that time Marodachbaladan son of Bala-dan, king of Babylon, sent documents and manae to Hezekias, for he had heard that Hezekias was sick. ¹³And Hezekias rejoiced over them, and he showed them the whole house of the nechothaf, the silver and the gold, the spices and the precious oil and the house of the vessels and as much as was found in his storehouses; there was nothing that Hezekias did not show them in his house and in all his realm. ¹⁴And Esaias the prophet entered to King Hezekias and said to him, "What did these men say? And from where did they come to you?" And Hezekias said, "They have come to me from a far country, from Babylon." ¹⁵And he said, "What did they see in your house?" And he said, "They saw all that is in my house; there was nothing in my house that I did not show them, but also what is in my storehouses."

16 And Esaias said to Hezekias, “Hear a word of the Lord: ¹⁷Behold, days are coming, and all that is in your house and as much as your fathers stored up until this day shall be taken to Babylon, and no word which the Lord said shall fail. ¹⁸And your own sons, who will come out of you, whom you will father, shall be taken, and they shall be eunuchs in the house of the king of Babylon.” ¹⁹And Hezekias said to Esaias, “The word of the Lord that he spoke is good; let there be peace in my days.”

20 And the rest of the histories of Hezekias and all his dominance and what he made: the fountain and the conduit and brought water into the city, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ²¹And Hezekias slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of Dauid, and Manasses his son reigned in his stead.

21 Manasses was a son of twelve years when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Hopsiba. ²And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to the abominations of the nations whom the Lord drove out from before the sons of Israel. ³And he turned back and built the high places that Hezekias his father had pulled down, and he erected an altar to the goddess Baal and made sacred groves, just as Achaab, king of Israel, had done, and did obeisance to all the host of heaven and was subject to them. ⁴And he built an altar in the Lord’s house, as he had said, “In Ierousalem I will put my name.” ⁵And he built an altar to all the host of heaven in the two courts of the Lord’s house. ⁶And he conducted his sons into fire, and he was acting as diviner and practicing orinthomancy, and he made one who wills and people that know. And he multiplied to do what is evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger. ⁷And he put the carved image of the sacred grove in the house of which the Lord had said to Dauid and to Salomon his son, “In this house and in Ierousalem, which I chose out of all the tribes of Israel, I will also put my name there forever. ⁸And I will not add to shake the foot of Israel from the land that I gave to their fathers—whoever will observe everything that I commanded, according to every commandment that my slave Moyses commanded them.” ⁹And they did not listen, and Manasses misled them to do what was evil in the sight of the Lord, more than the nations that the Lord had annihilated from before the sons of Israel.

10 And the Lord spoke by the hand of his slaves the prophets, saying, ¹¹“Forasmuch as Manasses, the king of Iouda, committed these abominations, evil things from^a all that the erstwhile Amorrite did, and indeed made Iouda sin with their idols. ¹²Not so! This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says, Behold, I am bringing evil upon Ierousalem and upon Iouda so that both his ears, of everyone who hears, will echo. ¹³And I will stretch out over Ierousalem the measuring line of Samaria and the plummet of Achaab’s house, and I will wipe Ierousalem as the alabaster jar is wiped, when it is wiped, and it is turned over on its face. ¹⁴And I will cast off the remnant of my heritage and give them into the hands of their enemies, and they shall become rapine and plunder to all their enemies, ¹⁵forasmuch as they did what is evil in my sight and were provoking me to anger, from the day that I brought their fathers out of Egypt, even to this day.”

16 And indeed Manasses shed very much innocent blood until he had filled Ierousalem ^bmouth to mouth^b, besides some of his sins that he made Iouda^c sin so that they did what was evil in the sight of the Lord.

17 And the rest of the histories of Manasses and all that he did and his sin that he sinned, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ¹⁸And Manasses slept with his fathers and was buried in the garden of his house, in the garden of Oza. And Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 Amon was a son of twenty-two years when he became king, and he reigned two years in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Mesollam daughter of Harous from Ieteba. ²⁰And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, just as Manasses his father had done. ²¹And he walked in all the way in which his father walked and served the idols that his father served and did obeisance to them, ²²and he abandoned the Lord, God of his fathers, and did not walk in the way of the Lord. ²³And the servants of Amon conspired against him and put the king to death in his house. ²⁴And all the people of the land struck all those who had conspired against King Amon, and the people of the land made Iosias his son king in his stead. ²⁵And the rest of the histories of Amon, what he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ²⁶And they buried him in his tomb in the garden of Oza, and Iosias his son reigned in his stead.

22 Iosias was a son of eight years when he became king, and he reigned thirty and one year in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Iedida daughter of Edeia from Basouroth. ²And he did what was right in the sight of the Lord and walked in all the way of Dauid his father; he did not depart to the right or to the left.

3 And it happened in the eighteenth year of King Iosias, in the eighth month, that the king sent Saphphan son of Eselias son of Mesollam, the secretary of the Lord’s house, saying, ⁴“Go up to Chelkias the great priest, and seal the money that was brought into the Lord’s house, which those who guard the threshold collected from the people, ⁵and let them give it into the hand of those doing the work of those in charge in the Lord’s house.” And he gave it to those doing the work who were in the Lord’s house, to strengthen the bedek^a of the house, ⁶to the craftsmen and to the builders and to the wall-builders, and to buy wood and quarried stone to strengthen the bedek^a of the house. ⁷Yet, they were not computing for them the money that was given to them, for they dealt honestly.

⁸ And Chelkias the great priest said to Saphphan the secretary, “I found a book of the law in the Lord’s house.” And Chelkias gave the book to Saphphan, and he read it. ⁹And he brought it in to King Iosias and returned word to the king and said, “Your slaves ^bmelted down^b the silver that was found in the Lord’s house and gave it into the hand of those doing the work of those in charge in the Lord’s house.” ¹⁰And Saphphan the secretary spoke to the king, saying, “Chelkias the priest gave me a book.” And Saphphan read it aloud in the presence of the king.

¹¹ And it happened, when the king heard the words of the book of the law, that he tore his own clothes. ¹²And the king commanded Chelkias the priest and Achikam son of Saphphan, and Achobor son of Michaias and Saphphan the secretary and Asaias the king’s slave, saying, ¹³“Go, seek out the Lord for me and for all of the people and for all of Iouda, concerning the words of this book that was found, for great is the wrath of the Lord that is blazed out against us, because our fathers did not obey the words of this book, to do according to all that is written against us.”

¹⁴ And Chelkias the priest and Achikam and Achobor and Saphphan and Asaias went to Holda the prophetess, wife of Sellem son of Thekoue son of Haraas, keeper of the wardrobe, and she was residing in Ierousalem in the masena^c, and they spoke to her. ¹⁵And she said to them, “This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: Tell the man who sent you to me, ¹⁶This is what the Lord says, Behold, I am bringing evil on this place and on those who dwell in it—all the words of the book that the king of Iouda read, ¹⁷because they abandoned me and were making incense offerings to other gods so that they provoked me to anger with the works of their hands, and my wrath will be blazed out against this place, and it will not be quenched. ¹⁸And to the king of Iouda, who sent you to seek after the Lord, this is what you shall say to him, This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: As for the words that you heard—¹⁹because your heart was softened and you felt shame from before the Lord, when you heard how I spoke against this place and against those who dwell in it, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and you tore your clothes and wept before me, and indeed I heard, says the Lord. ²⁰Not so! Behold, I am adding you to your fathers, and you shall be gathered to your grave in peace, and there shall not be seen by your eyes among all the evils that I am—I am bringing on this place.” And they returned the message to the king.

²And the king went up to the Lord’s house, and every man of Iouda and all those who dwelt in Ierousalem with him, and the priests and the prophets and all the people from small and to great, and he read in their hearing all the words of the book of the covenant that had been found in the Lord’s house. ³And the king stood by the pillar and made a covenant before the Lord, to walk behind the Lord and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes with all his heart and with all his soul, to uphold the words of this covenant that were written in this book. And all the people stood firm in the covenant.

⁴ And the king commanded Chelkias the great priest and the priests of the second order and those who guard the threshold to bring out of the Lord’s shrine all the vessels made for Baal and for the sacred grove and for all the host of heaven, and he burned them outside Ierousalem in sademoth^d of Kedron and took their dust to Baithel. ⁵And he put an end to the chomarim^e whom kings of Iouda had appointed—and they were making incense offerings in the high places and in the cities of Iouda and those around Ierousalem—and those who made incense offerings to Baal and to the sun and to the moon and to the mazouroth^f and to all the host of heaven. ⁶And he brought out the sacred grove from the Lord’s house, outside Ierousalem, to the Wadi Kedron, and burned it in the wadi and pulverized it into dust and threw the dust of it into the grave of the sons of the people. ⁷And he tore down the house of the kadesim^g that were in the house of the Lord, there where the women were weaving chettiin^h for the sacred grove. ⁸And he brought up all the priests out of the towns of Iouda and defiled the high places, there where the priests had made incense offerings from Gabaa and as far as Bersabee, and he tore down the house of the gates that was at the entrance of the gate of Iesous, governor of the city, which were from a man’s left in the gate of the city. ⁹Yet the priests of the high places did not go up to the altar of the Lord in Ierousalem but only ate unleavened bread in the midst of their brothers. ¹⁰And he defiled Tapheth, which is in the ravine of Son of Hennom, which was for a man to conduct his son and a man to conduct his daughter to Moloch in fire. ¹¹And he put an end to the horses that the kings of Iouda had dedicated to the sun, in the entrance of the Lord’s house, by the treasury of Nathan, the king’s eunuch, in pharourimⁱ, and he burned the chariot of the sun with fire. ¹²And the altars on the roof of the upper chamber of Achaz, which the kings of Iouda had made, and the altars that Manasses had made in the two courts of the Lord’s house the king also tore down and pulled down from there and threw their dust into the Wadi Kedron. ¹³And the king defiled the house that was in front of Ierousalem, on the right^j of the Mount of Mosoath^k, which Salomon, king of Israel, had built for As-tarte, offense of the Sidonians, and for Chamos, offense of Moab, and for Molchol, abomination of the sons of Ammon. ¹⁴And he smashed the steles and utterly destroyed the sacred groves and filled their sites with human bones.

¹⁵And indeed the altar in Baithel, the high place that Ieroboam son of Nabat made, who made Israel sin—and indeed that altar and the high place he pulled down. And he smashed its stones and pulverized them into dust and burned the sacred grove. ¹⁶And Iosias turned aside and saw the tombs that were there in the city, and he sent and took the bones out of the tombs and burned them on the altar and defiled it, according to the word of the Lord that the man of God spoke, when Ieroboam stood in the feast by the altar. And turning, he lifted his eyes on the tomb of the man of God who had spoken these words. ¹⁷And he said, “What is that mound that I see?” And the men of the city said to him, “It is the man of God who came out from Iouda and invoked these words that you invoked against the altar of Baithel.” ¹⁸And he said, “Leave it; let no man move his bones.” And they preserved his bones with the bones of the prophet who came out of Samaria. ¹⁹And indeed regarding all the houses of the high places that were in the towns of Samaria, which kings of Israel had made to provoke the Lord to anger—Iosias removed them and did among them^a all the works that he had done in Baithel. ²⁰And he sacrificed all the priests of the high places who were there on the altars and burned the bones of human beings on them. And he returned to Ierousalem.

²¹And the king commanded all the people, saying, “Keep the pascha^b to the Lord, our God, just as it is written in the book of this covenant.” ²²For this pascha^b had not taken place since the days of the judges who were judging Israel and all the days of the kings of Israel and of the kings of Iouda, ²³but only in the eighteenth year of King Iosias the pascha^b to the Lord took place in Ierousalem.

²⁴And indeed King Iosias removed those that want and those that know and the theraphin^c and the idols and all the offences that were made in the land of Iouda and in Ierousalem so that he established the words of the law that were written in the book that Chelkias the priest had found in the Lord’s house. ²⁵Before him there was no king like him, who turned to the Lord with his whole heart and with his whole soul and with his whole strength, according to all the law of Moyses, and after him none arose like him.

²⁶Yet the Lord did not turn away from the fierceness of his great wrath, by which his anger was kindled against Iouda, because of the provocations with which Manasses had provoked him. ²⁷And the Lord said, “And indeed I will remove Iouda^d from my sight, just as I removed Israel, and I will reject this city that I chose, Ierousalem, and the house of which I said, My name shall be there.”

²⁸And the rest of the histories of Iosias and all that he did, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ²⁹But in his days Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, went up against the Assyrians’ king to the river Euphrates. And Iosias went to meet him, but Nechao put him to death in Mageddo when he saw him. ³⁰And his servants made him ride dead from Mageddo and brought him to Ierousalem and buried him in his own tomb in the city of Daud. And the people of the land took Ioachas son of Iosias and anointed him and made him king instead of his father.

³¹Ioachas was a son of twenty-three years when he became king, and he reigned three months in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Hamital daughter of Ieremias from Lemna. ³²And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his fathers had done. ³³And Pharao Nechao removed him into Deblatha in the land of Hemath, so that he might not reign in Ierousalem, and imposed a penalty on the land, one hundred talents of silver and one hundred talents of gold. ³⁴And Pharao Nechao made Eliakim son of Iosias, king of Iouda, king over them instead of Iosias his father, and he turned his name into Ioakim. And he took Ioachas and brought him into Egypt, and he died there. ³⁵And Ioakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharao; yet he taxed the land in order to give the money at the mouth^e of Pharao. They gave the silver and the gold, a man according to his assessment together with the people of the land, to give to Pharao Nechao.

³⁶Ioakim was a son of twenty-five years when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Ierousalem. And his mother’s name was Ieldaph daughter of Pedeia from Rouma. ³⁷And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his fathers had done.

24 In his days Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, went up, and Ioakim became his slave for three years, and he turned and rebelled against him. ²And he sent against him the lightly armed men of the Chaldeans and the lightly armed men of Syria and the lightly armed men of Moab and the lightly armed men of the sons of Ammon, and he sent them out against the land of Iouda to prevail, according to the word of the Lord that he spoke by the hand of his slaves the prophets. ³Only it was because of the Lord’s wrath against Iouda, to remove him from his sight, because of the sins of Manasses, according to all that he had committed, ⁴and indeed he shed innocent blood and filled Ierousalem with innocent blood, and the Lord did not want to be conciliated. ⁵And the rest of the histories of Ioakim and all that he did, behold, are these things not written in a book of Histories of the Days for the Kings of Iouda? ⁶And Ioakim slept with his fathers, and Ioakim his son reigned in his stead. ⁷And the king of Egypt did not continue further to come out of his land, for the king of Babylon had taken all that belonged to the king of Egypt from the Wadi of Egypt to the River Euphrates.

^ai.e. the houses ^bHeb = passover ^cHeb = images or household gods ^dIoudas = Ra ^ei.e. command

8 Ioakim was a son of eighteen years when he became king, and he reigned three months in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Nestha daughter of Ellanathan from Ierousalem. ⁹And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father had done.

10 At that time Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, went up to Ierousalem, and the city came under enclosure. ¹¹And Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, entered into the city, and his servants were besieging it. ¹²And Ioakim, king of Iouda, came out against the king of Babylon, he and his servants and his mother and his commanders and his eunuchs, and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

13 And he carried out from there all the treasures of the Lord's house and the treasures of the king's house, and he cut up all the golden vessels that Salomon, king of Israel, had made in the shrine of the Lord, according to the word of the Lord. ¹⁴And he exiled Ierousalem and all the commanders and those mighty in power, taking captive ten thousand captives, and every craftsman and ^ahe that encloses^a, and no one remained, except the poor of the land. ¹⁵And he exiled Ioakim to Babylon, and the mother of the king and the wives of the king and his eunuchs. And the strong men of the land he led away as a colony from Ierousalem to Babylon, ¹⁶and all the men of power, seven thousand, and the craftsman and ^ahe that encloses^a, one thousand. As for all mighty ones fit for war, the king of Babylon also led them away as a migration to Babylon. ¹⁷And the king of Babylon made Maththanias his son king in his stead and changed his name to Sedekias.

18 Sedekias was a son of twenty-one years when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Hamital daughter of Ieremias. ¹⁹And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Ioakim had done, ²⁰for it was on account of the anger of the Lord against Ierousalem and in Iouda until he drove them away from his presence.

And Sedekias rebelled against the king of Babylon.

25 And it happened in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, that Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his force came against Ierousalem and encamped against it and built a surrounding wall against it all around. ²And the city came under enclosure until the eleventh year of King Sedekias. ³On the ninth of the month the famine also grew strong in the city, and there was no food for the people of the land. ⁴And the city was breached, and all the men of war went out by night by way of the gate between the walls; this is the one of the garden of the king, and the Chaldeans were at the city all around. And he^b went by way of the Araba. ⁵And the force of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and they overtook him in Araboth Iericho, and all his force was scattered from about him. ⁶And they captured the king and brought him to the king of Babylon in Deblatha, and he spoke judgment with him. ⁷And he slaughtered the sons of Sedekias before his eyes and made blind the eyes of Sedekias and bound him in fetters and led him to Babylon.

8 And in the fifth month, on the seventh of the month—that is the nineteenth year of Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon—Nabouzardan, the chief cook, since he stood before the king of Babylon, came to Ierousalem. ^{9–10}And he burned the house of the Lord and the house of the king and all the houses of Ierousalem, and every house the chief cook burned. ¹¹And Nabouzardan, the chief cook, removed the residue of the people who were left in the city and the fallen men who had ^cfallen in with^c the king of Babylon and the rest of the support. ¹²But the chief cook left some of the poor of the land to be vinedressers and gabin^d.

13 And the bronze pillars that were in the Lord's house and the mechonoth^e and the bronze sea that was in the Lord's house the Chaldeans smashed and carried their bronze to Babylon. ¹⁴And the cauldrons and the iamin^f and the saucers and the censers and all the bronze utensils, with which they would minister with them, he took; ¹⁵and the chief cook took the fire-pans and the gold and silver saucers, ¹⁶two pillars, the one sea and the mechonoth^e, which Salomon had made for the Lord's house—there was no weight of the bronze of all the utensils. ¹⁷The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and on it was the bronze chothars, and the height of the chothars was three cubits; sabacha^h and pomegranates, all of bronze, were on the chothars all around. And the second pillar had the same on the sabacha^h.

18 And the chief cook took Saraia^s the first priest and Sophonias son of the second order and the three who guard the threshold, ¹⁹and from the city he took one eunuch who had been overseer over the warrior men and five men of ⁱthose who see the face of the kingⁱ who were found in the city, and the secretary of the commander of the force, who draws out in battle-order the people of the land, and sixty men of the people of the land who were found in the city. ²⁰And Nabouzardan, the chief cook, took them and led them away to the king of Babylon in Deblatha. ²¹And the king of Babylon struck them and put them to death in Deblatha in the land of Haimath. And Iouda^j was exiled from upon its own land.

22 And as for the people who were left behind in the land of Iouda, whom Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, had left behind—he also appointed over them Godolias son of Achikam son of Saphan. ²³And all the commanders of the force, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Godolias, and they came to Godolias in Massepath, they and their men: both Ismael son of Nathanias and Ioanan son of Karee and Saraias son of Thanemath the Netophathite and Iezonias son of the Machathi. ²⁴And Godolias swore to them and to their men and said to them, "Fear not a passing^a of the Chaldeans; stay in the land, and be subject to the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you." ²⁵And it happened in the seventh month that Ismael son of Nathaniah son of Elisama of the offspring of the kings came, and ten men with him, and he struck Godolias, and he died, and the Judeans and the Chaldeans who were with him, in Massephath. ²⁶And all the people, from small even to great, and the commanders of the forces set out and entered into Egypt, for they were afraid from before the Chaldeans.

²⁷ And it happened in the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Ioakim, king of Iouda, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-seventh of the month, that Euilmarodach, king of Babylon, in the year of his reign, lifted up the head of Ioakim, king of Iouda, and brought him out from his prison house, ²⁸and he spoke with him good things and put his throne above the thrones of the kings who were with him in Babylon. ²⁹And he changed his prison clothes and would eat food continually before him all the days of his life. ³⁰And his allowance, an allowance continually, was given to him from the king's house, ^bby reckoning of a day in its day^b, all the days of his life.

1 AND 2 SUPPLEMENTS TO THE READER

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of 1 and 2 Supplements (a translation of the Greek Paraleipomena, the LXX title for the Hebrew books of 1 and 2 Chronicles) is based on Alfred Rahlfs, Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graecae iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935) 752–811. Although this is not a fully-fledged critical edition since its collation base comprises mainly the readings of only three early manuscripts, nevertheless it provides a better running text of the work for translation than does the diplomatic edition of the book in the Cambridge series, which prints the text of one manuscript, noting variants in the critical apparatus.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

General Character

The Greek text of this book has been relatively well preserved and derives from a type of Hebrew text fairly close to that represented by the MT. Moreover, the translation technique adopted by the Greek translator was rather literal with the result that its overall profile is to offer a word-for-word representation of the syntactical and morphological structure of the underlying Hebrew for readers of Greek.

As a result, variations in genre of the component parts of the Hebrew text are well reflected in the translation, e.g., speeches, prayers, prophecies, psalms (1 Suppl 16.8–36 and 2 Suppl 6.41–42), etc. Similarly, long sections of 1 Supplements are given over to lists of various sorts (genealogies, city lists, census lists, officials, clerical orders, warriors, etc.) occupying 1 Supplements 1–9 and 23–27 in particular. Here, too, the Greek parallels the very staccato structure of the Hebrew, as in the following example from 6.46, where the verb of giving expressed in vv. 40 and 42 has been omitted in the interests of brevity.

MT: ולבני קהת . . . ערים עשר

LXX: καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς Κααθ . . . πόλεις δέκα.

NETS: And to the rest of Kaath's sons . . . ten cities.

NRSV (= 6.61): To the rest of the Kohathites were given . . . ten towns

Some less literal renderings suggest that the type of Hebrew with which the translators were most familiar was that of their own time. As a result, on occasion they reflect the later semantic range of a term rather than its earlier sense. Thus, the term יד (hand) in the prepositional phrase על יד, which in the past had frequently borne the metaphorical nuance of control and direction, is here mainly construed in terms of physical proximity, as in 1 Suppl 25.6:

MT: על ידי המלך

LXX: ἐχόμενα τοῦ βασιλέως

NETS: near the king

NRSV: under the order of the king

Another facet of the literalness of the Greek rendering is the incorporation of certain Hebrew lexemes as loanwords, often as technical terms, relating, for example, to the temple in Jerusalem (2 Suppl 3.4 ailam "porch," v. 16 sesereth "chains," dabir "inner chamber," "holy of holies"), as well as some of the musical instruments employed there liturgically (1 Suppl 13.8 kinnor "lyre" and nabla "harp"). Other examples involve genealogy. Thus, although the Greek renders the term מצרַיִם as Αἴγυπτος (Egypt) in strictly geographical contexts, at 1 Suppl 1.8, when the same form is applied to the eponymous ancestor of that people, the name is simply transliterated as Μεστραῖμ (NETS "Mestraim," NRSV "Egypt"). Occasionally, however, the opposite phenomenon is found, as in 1 Suppl 4.12, where the Greek translates the first portion of the compound name עִיר נַחַשׁ to render πόλεως Ναας (NETS "the city of Naas"; NRSV "Ir-nahash").

The translators' literal translation technique is also reflected in their divergence from the accepted norms of Greek syntax in order to render characteristics of the Hebrew phraseology more distinctly, as in 1 Suppl 11.18:

MT: וְלֹא אָבָה דָּוִד לְשָׁתוֹתָם
 LXX: οὐκ ἠθέλησεν Δαυιδ τοῦ πίνειν αὐτό
 NETS: David did not want it, in order to drink it.
 NRSV: David would not drink of it.

Whereas normally the articulated infinitive is used to express the goal of motion, here it is employed un-idiomatically to denote the object of Davaid's desire, which would generally be conveyed by the infinitive alone in order to parallel the use of the preposition -ל in Hebrew.

A more widespread form of the above tendency is the use of calques, i.e., the stereotyping of translation equivalents semantically appropriate in only part of their range and extending their usage to contexts where their equivalency standard is much less acceptable, as a means of foregrounding the Hebrew construction. A good example of this is the calquing of the Greek preposition ἐν ("in") on its Hebrew counterpart -ב, as in 1 Suppl 13.8, where the simple use of the dative case would be more idiomatic:

MT: וּבשִׁירִים וּבכִנּוּרוֹת
 LXX: ἐν ψαλτωδοῖς καὶ ἐν κινύραϊς
 NETS: with harp-singers and with cinyras
 NRSV: with song and lyres

Hebrew idiom, unlike Greek and English, tends to repeat the prepositional phrase in compound expressions. Here, too, our translators represented this phenomenon faithfully in their text, as at 1 Suppl 20.8:

MT: בֵּיד דָּוִד וּבֵיד עֲבָדָיו
 LXX: ἐν χειρὶ Δαυιδ καὶ ἐν χειρὶ παιδῶν αὐτοῦ
 NETS: by the hand of Davaid and by the hand of his servants
 NRSV: by the hand of David and his servants

Fidelity to the morphology of the Hebrew sometimes led the translators to avoid idiomatic technical terms in favor of periphrases closer to the precise formulation in their Vorlage, as at 1 Suppl 10.4, where an exchange between Saoul (Saul) and his armor-bearer takes place. The accepted Greek term for the latter office is σκευοφόρος; however, as the Hebrew form is made up of a compound expression formed by a present participle and accompanying noun, they adopted the same construction in Greek, as follows:

MT: אֶל־נֶשֶׂא כִלָּיו
 LXX: τῷ αἰῖροντι τὰ σκεύη αὐτοῦ
 NETS: to the one bearing his arms
 NRSV: to his armor-bearer

Nevertheless, the translation of Supplements is by no means slavish: there are several instances where the translators have opted for terms that both offer a reasonable representation of the Hebrew and also conform to the canons of Greek idiom. A number of these relate to technical contexts of various sorts.

At 1 Suppl 10.13 Saoul (Saul) is condemned for consulting a medium, referring to the episode of the witch of Endor (1 Rgns 28.8–25). The Greek equivalent ἐγγαστριμύθος of the Hebrew term אִוָּב is a culturally appropriate form, as it too mostly connotes a woman who delivered oracles by means of ventriloquism. Similarly, at 20.6 the Greek employs the term ἀπόγονος to render the Hebrew נִלְד ("descendant"), although in v. 4 the narrower term υἱός ("son") is found in a parallel context. The setting at 5.24 is one of genealogical tables of leaders of the various tribes and the Hebrew term שֹׁרֵט has connotations both of primordiality and primacy. This dual semantic ground is well expressed by the equivalent ἀρχηγός the translators selected. However, when the same elastic Hebrew term appears at 11.6 with reference to bearing office and in parallel with military command, the translators realized the need for nuance and chose to render it by the form ἀρχων ("ruler," "commander"). The same judgment applies to another reflex of that Hebrew root, שֹׁרֵט, at 18.17, referring to officials in the king's immediate vicinity, which is rendered by the technical term διάδοχος, as, in addition to the widespread sense of "successor," it also bears the meaning of “substitute,” “deputy.” Another very felicitous lexical choice is the employment of the classical compound adjective φιλογέωργος (“devoted to agriculture”) at 2 Suppl 26.10 to render the Hebrew phrase אֲדָמָה אֲהָבָה. Encountered in the works of such Attic authors as Xenophon and Aristophanes, this place is its only occurrence in the Greek Bible. The term is extremely apposite in context, as the setting is not one of rugged natural beauty but of human endeavor in working the soil.

Where appropriate, one notes that the translators sought to express nuances implicit in the formulation of a Hebrew phrase. A good example of this trend is the clarification of the dispute between the commander Joab and Daudid regarding the conduct of a census of Israel. At 1 Suppl 21.3 Joab remonstrates against his sovereign’s command. Yet in the following verse he is constrained to submit to the latter’s authority. This reversal, somewhat masked in Hebrew by the use of the simple copula, is idiomatically drawn out by the Greek particle δέ, marking a contrast from the preceding. Similarly, at 1 Suppl 20.3 the translators found an elegant solution to render the Hebrew phrasal construction of definition with וְשֵׁנָה, which obviates the need for a verbal clause by utilizing the parallel Greek articular construction, as follows: LXX: τὸν λαὸν τὸν ἐν αὐτῇ; NETS: “the people who were in it”; NRSV: “the people who were in it.”

Despite its close affinities with the Hebrew, there are a number of cases where the Greek text diverges from its standard for various reasons. On occasion this relates to the context and connotations of a term, as at 1 Suppl 10.13, where the Hebrew text fundamentally indicts Saoul (Saul) for infidelity, being unfaithful in his relation to God in disobeying his commands. However, the framework in Greek is one of jurisprudence and the charge of breaking the divine law.

MT: וימת שאול במעליו אשר מעל ביהוה

LXX: ἀπέθανεν Σαουλ ἐν ταῖς ἀνομίαις αὐτοῦ, αἷς ἠνόμησεν τῷ κυρίῳ

NETS: Saoul died in his acts of lawlessness, which he had done lawlessly against the Lord

NRSV: Saul died for his unfaithfulness; he was unfaithful to the LORD

Other instances involve contextual exegesis and the impact of parallel passages in earlier biblical books, whose matter is being reviewed by the Chronicler. Hence, the Greek description of Nimrod at 1 Suppl 1.10, with its addition of his prowess at hunting, has been assimilated to the account in the Pentateuch.

MT: גבור

LXX: γίγας κυνηγός cf. Genesis 10.9 MT and LXX

NETS: a giant hunter

NRSV: a mighty one

In a small number of cases it appears that both MT and LXX in their current form may be corrupt. In one of these at 2 Suppl 14.14(15) the Greek witnesses a plus referring presumably to a final tribe or people in the list of conquests achieved by Asa’s forces.¹ The term in question, “Amazons,” is not to be associated with the female warriors of Greek mythology (the preceding article identifying them as male), but it seems connected with a by-form, Ἀλιμαζονεῖς, occurring at 22.1.

MT: וגם אהלי מקנה הכו

LXX: καὶ γε σκηνάς κτήσεων, τοὺς Ἀμαζονεῖς, ἐξέκοψαν

NETS: Indeed tents of possessions, the Amazons, they eradicated

NRSV: They also attacked the tents of those who had livestock

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF SUPPLEMENTS

General Approach

The key principle guiding this translation has been to avoid overly interpreting the Greek, but to provide a close English rendering of the Greek’s representation of the original Hebrew. In consequence, it has sought not to smooth over problems, but to allow aporias to show through rather than trying to solve them by offering one particular sense, which would naturally exclude other possibilities.

In accordance with general NETS policy, I have attempted to maintain the vocabulary of the NRSV version, where the latter is compatible with the MT and the LXX does not diverge from that standard. Although well preserved, the Hebrew text of these books is not completely intact, and hence scholarly editors have proposed a variety of emendations to improve on what are regarded as its secondary readings.

NRSV, in turn, has adopted some of these suggestions, and therefore rejects the MT reading at such points. A good example is afforded by the textual variation at 1 Suppl 20.3 in relating Daud's policy toward the Ammonite captive population. MT followed by LXX indicates that he exacted severe physical reprisals against them; however, the parallel passage at 2 Rgns 12.31 states that he set them to work with saws as hard labor, which seems more standard practice in such cases.

MT: וישר במגרה

LXX: διέπρισεν πρίοσις

NETS: he sawed (them, i.e., the people) with saws

NRSV: (He) set them to work with saws

On rare occasions it appears that the NRSV translation does not do full duty to the MT reading. Thus at 1 Suppl 14.15 both the Hebrew and Greek terms relate more narrowly to a camp or encampment, while the NRSV version interprets this more broadly as referring to the army.

MT: להכות את מחנה פלשתים

LXX: τοῦ πατάξει τὴν παρεμβολὴν τῶν ἀλλοφύλων

NETS: to strike down the camp of the allophytes

NRSV: to strike down the army of the Philistines

At other junctures the NRSV rendering has recourse to explanatory additions to clarify particulars, which may not have been fully unpacked in the Hebrew. Thus at 1 Suppl 20.1 the reference is to the passing of winter and the opening up of communications in spring, creating conditions conducive to initiating the campaigning season, a regular phenomenon for ancient societies but not a given for the modern reader. Hence, NRSV spells out the passage's implicit significance.

MT: ויהי לעת תשובת השנה לעת צאת המלכים

LXX: καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ ἐπιόντι ἔτει ἐν τῇ ἐξόδῳ τῶν βασιλέων

NETS: And it happened in the following year, at the marching out of the kings

NRSV: In the spring of the year, the time when kings go out to battle

(interpretative addition/clarification)

Similarly, at 1 Suppl 21.1 the issue is one of instituting a national census, and so the term "Israel" relates to the population, not to the actual land, a point explicitly made by NRSV to remove any misunderstanding.

MT: למנות את ישראל

LXX: τοῦ ἀριθμησαὶ τὸν Ἰσραηλ

NETS: to count Israel

NRSV: to count the people of Israel

Joab, as noted above, is to carry out the census and report back to the king on its completion. However, the form of the Hebrew here faithfully followed by the Greek is somewhat elliptical regarding what precisely Joab is to bring, and so NRSV specifies this.

MT: והביאו אלי

LXX: καὶ ἐνέγκατε πρὸς με

NETS: and bring to me

NRSV: and bring me a report

On occasion, NRSV evinces the opposite tendency of condensing the formulation where MT may be guilty of tautology, as in the following example from 1 Suppl 20.1 where "force" and "army" refer to the same collective.

MT: ונהג יואב את־חיל הצבא

LXX: καὶ ἤγαγεν Ἰωαβ πᾶσαν τὴν δύναμιν τῆς στρατιᾶς

NETS: and Joab led out the entire force of the army

NRSV: Joab led out the army

Selected words and phrases

The Hebrew term בְּנֵי closely followed by the Greek (υἱοί, τέκνα), which literally refers to sons, is frequently translated as “descendants” by NSRV (e.g., 1 Suppl 1.5, 6, 7, 8, 9) with regard to more generic clan genealogy.

Problems of Grammar

In Hebrew syntax the norm is to construct narrative paratactically, linking all the events in a continuum by the simple copula rather than highlighting the particular relation between the actions by, for example, assigning those semantically less significant to subordinate clauses or directing the reader’s attention to important spatial, temporal or other features linking the stages in the evolving story. However, this procedure is highly unidiomatic in English usage, and hence the NRSV translators frequently vary their rendering both for stylistic variety and to render the above clausal relations more explicit. In contrast, NETS seeks to reflect for the English reader the full degree of the literalness of the Greek version.

In the protracted lists where the presence of the copula becomes highly repetitive, NRSV will periodically omit the connective to ease the flow in English, as in 1 Suppl 1.10

MT: וְכוּשׁ יָלַד אֶת־נִמְרוֹד

LXX: καὶ Χους ἐγέννησεν τὸν Νεβρωδ

NETS: And Chous became the father of Nebrod

NRSV: Cush became the father of Nimrod

NRSV also punctuates the ongoing discourse by signaling a new episode, the introduction of a new theme, etc. through a more colorful term, as at 1 Suppl 10.1, which marks the transition from the genealogical lists of temple personnel to the opening of the historical narrative.

MT: וּפְלִשְׁתִּים נִלְחָמוּ בִישְׂרָאֵל

LXX: καὶ ἀλλόφυλοι ἐπολέμησαν πρὸς Ἰσραὴλ

NETS: And allophyles fought against Israel

NRSV: Now the Philistines fought against Israel

Similarly, important temporal relationships between actions are underscored by appropriate language as at v. 4, where the severe conditions of battle prompt Saul’s exchange with his armor-bearer.

MT: וְאָמַר שָׁאוּל אֶל נֹשֵׂא כְלָיו

LXX: καὶ εἶπεν Σαουλ τῷ αἴροντι τὰ σκεύη αὐτοῦ

NETS: And Saoul said to the one bearing his arms

NRSV: Then Saul said to his armor-bearer

On other occasions the narrative focus requires a counterpoint between the reactions of two persons or groups, as at v. 11, where the Israelite response to the defeat at Mount Gilboa is contrasted with that of the jubilant Philistines:

MT: וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ כָל יְבִישׁ גִּלְעָד

LXX: καὶ ἤκουσαν πάντες οἱ κατοικοῦντες Γαλααδ

NETS: And all those living in Galaad heard

NRSV: But when all Jabesh-gilead heard

Result is another key narrative link whereby an action is marked as the consequence of the preceding, as at v. 6 depicting Saul’s death from his wounds:

MT: וַיָּמָת שָׁאוּל

LXX: καὶ ἀπέθανεν Σαουλ

NETS: And Saoul . . . died

NRSV: Thus Saul died

Purpose also forms a bond between actions, underlining how one is undertaken in order to facilitate another, as at 1 Suppl 21.2 regarding the rationale for conducting the census.

MT: וַאֲדַעָה אֶת מִסְפָּרָם

LXX: καὶ γνώσομαι τὸν ἀριθμὸν αὐτῶν

NETS: and I shall know their number

NRSV: so that I may know their number

The NRSV translators also permit themselves a certain freedom in focusing their rendering on the semantic field rather than being constrained by issues of quantitative representation, as at 1 Suppl 10.4, where MT followed by LXX expresses terror by means of a simple verb of fearing modified by an adverb of intensity.

MT: וְיָאֵס מְאֹד

LXX: ἐφοβείτο σφόδρα

NETS: he was very afraid

NRSV: he was terrified

Often this leads to employing a more technical term appropriate to context rather than to MT's more general phraseology, as at 1 Suppl 10.10, where the religious context is explicated by reference to a temple:

MT: בֵּית אֱלֹהִים

LXX: ἐν οἴκῳ θεοῦ αὐτῶν

NETS: in the house of their god

NRSV: in the temple of their gods

Similarly, at v. 13 the reference to Saul's infringing divine regulations leads the translators to select the more specific term "command" over the broader Hebrew lexeme דְּבַר "word."

MT: עַל דְּבַר יְהוָה

LXX: (κατὰ) τὸν λόγον τοῦ κυρίου

NETS: (according to) the Lord's word

NRSV: the command of the Lord

Likewise, in describing the prodigious attributes of a gigantic Philistine warrior at 1 Suppl 20.6, the translators expand on the rather laconic Hebrew version literally represented in Greek, differentiating extremities of the hands and feet according to the idiom of the target language as "fingers" and "toes."

MT: וַאֲצַבְעֵתַיִן שֵׁשׁ וְשֵׁשׁ

LXX: καὶ δάκτυλοι αὐτοῦ ἕξ καὶ ἕξ

NETS: and his digits were six and six

NRSV: six fingers on each hand, and six toes on each foot

Frequently, idiomatic expressions of time are employed more expansively than their literal sense would suggest, as, for example, in the phrase "yesterday and the third day" encountered at 1 Suppl 11.2, which clearly envisages a period of some years during which Dauid led the Israelite army under Saoul's reign, a point that the NRSV translators duly highlight.

MT: גַּם תְּמוּל גַּם־שְׁלֹשׁוֹם

LXX: ἔχθες καὶ τρίτην

NETS: yesterday and the third day

NRSV: for some time now

Very rarely do matters of theological exegesis loom large in a work like 1 and 2 Supplements. One of the few instances occurs at 1 Suppl 21.1, which, not surprisingly, is styled by Sara Japhet as "one of the most discussed and interpreted verses in Chronicles."² The question at issue is the precise identification of the one who instigated David to conduct the census, Satan or some undefined slanderer. In the counterpart to this passage at 2 Rgns 24.1 the perpetrator is God himself in his wrath. This the Chronicler has mitigated according to his normal practice by refocusing the intervention. At the same time, there is no indication that the author believed in a self-existing principle of evil. Moreover, when the Hebrew term שׂטן denotes a proper noun, it is normally found with the article, whereas here it is unarticulated. Consequently, in sum, it appears that a human instigator is intended.

MT: ויעמד שטן על ישראל

LXX: καὶ ἔστη διάβολος ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ

NETS: and a slanderer stood in Israel

NRSV: Satan stood up against Israel
